A certain Prince Del Crillo, an impoverished Italian nobleman, has started in business in High Holborn as a restaurant-keeper under the "style" of "Fourchette and Company." He is married to a young English girl named Isabella, from whom he has concealed the source of his income. Unluckily, his wife and her brother, a soldier just returned from South Africa, call at the restaurant for refreshment; and the Count endeavours, by assuming various disguises, to fill the places of proprietor, manager, and waiter, some amusement being created by his efforts to palm off stale food and bad wine on his patrons. His wife sees through the trick; and, in order to excite her husband's jealousy, gets her brother to pretend to make love to her. Eventually, matters are satisfactorily explained and settled, the Prince sells his business to a rival restaurateur, and all ends happily. Mr Brandon Thomas gave a truly military tone to his performance as Sergeant-Major Robert Fletcher; Miss Ruth Suffield was quite acceptable as Isabella; and Mr Henry Adnys worked actively, cleverly, and well as Prince Del Crillo.

THE ROYALTY.

On Monday, Dec. 5, Revival of the Play, by Beaumont and Fletcher, entitled
"THE MAID'S TRAGEDY."

The King	Mr FRANK LASCELLES
Lysippus	Mr DENNIS W. CLEUGH
Amintor	Mr H. TRIPP EDGAR
Melantius	Mr W. H. KEMBLE
Diphilus	Mr KING FORDHAM
Cleon	Mr J. A. GRANT
Strato	Mr E. C. BUFFUM
First Gentleman	Mr CYRIL CATTLEY
Second Gentleman	Mr RICHARD NEVILLE
Evadne	Miss DORA HOLE
Aspatia	Miss ADA POTTER
Antiphila	Miss PEARLA GARDNER
Olympias	Miss GERTRUDE TEMPLETON
Dula	Miss META PELHAM
First Lady	Miss VIOLET FALCKE
Second Lady	Miss EDITH FENTON

The Maid's Tragedy, revived by the Mermaid Society on Monday evening, at the Royalty, is interesting as a specimen of the kind of play which found favour with theatre-goers of a former age. It was first staged early in the seventeenth century, and more than three-fourths of the text is ascribed to Beaumont. There is evidence that the tragedy enjoyed considerable popularity till the period when at the instance of the Puritan majority the theatres were closed. It was, however, according to Fentor, performed at the Theatre Royal in the latter part of the reign of King Charles II. In 1666 or early in 1667 Pepys saw the tragedy played at the King's House, and we have it on record that on the second occasion he was much distracted by overhearing the conversation of Sir Charles Sedley, even when it consisted of "very pretty exceptions against both words and pronouncing." Sheridan Knowles was responsible for an adaptation of the play, and this, under the title of The Bridal, was produced by Macready in 1837. He acted the part of Melantius, and this character was accordingly "written up" for the occasion. The adaptation, however, was severely criticised in certain quarters, though it has been occasionally performed at more recent dates. Mr A. W. Ward remarks—"Opinions have differed widely among both earlier and later critics as to the merits of this tragedy, but I have no hesitation in following those who assign to it a very high, if not the highest, rank among the tragic efforts of its authors." Put very briefly, the plot turns upon the infatuation of the King for a young girl he meets at Court, Evadne, and whom he makes his mistress. Amintor, ignorant of the real relations existing between the King and Evadne, marries the girl, the monarch favouring the union with the object of avoiding a court scandal. When Amintor learns the truth he becomes the prey to conflicting feelings, and his friend Melantius, Evadne's brother, after a good deal of trouble, extracts from him a confession as to the cause of his grief and despair. Melantius has a stormy interview with his sister, whom he compels to take a solemn oath that she will kill the author of her shame. She stabs the King to death as he is lying in his bed; and in the last act both she and Amintor commit suicide. The tragedy has been considerably cut, and one character, Calianax, a talkative old man, who bears in some respects a likeness to Polonius, has been omitted altogether from the cast. The gloom which surrounds this tragic story of misplaced ambition, lust and murder, is in the version now submitted unrelieved by any comedy scenes; and the marriage masque which formed a part of the original work has also disappeared. Mr H. Tripp Edgar had an arduous part in Amintor, and succeeded very well in depicting the varying emotions of that ill-used courtier, delivering his lines with intensity and power. Mr W. H. Kemble was well-placed as the blunt, outspoken soldier Melantius; his acting was effective throughout, but more particularly in the strong scenes with Amintor and Evadne. Mr Frank Lascelles was a stately King, whose brother Lysippus had a capital exponent in Mr Dennis W. Cleugh. Miss Dora Hole pluckily contended with the difficulties of such a rôle as that of Evadne, and, considering her youth and comparative inexperience in tragedy, came out of the severe ordeal much better than could reasonably have been expected. An older actress might have displayed more passion and power in certain passages, but she would not have looked so well the character of the young girl who sins through ambition. Miss Ada Potter as Aspatia, at one time betrothed to Amintor, gave an excellent embodiment of the part, and the lady's attendants, Antiphila and Olympias, were carefully represented by Miss Pearla Gardner and Miss Gertrude Templeton. Satisfactory work was done by Mr King Fordham as Diphilus, brother to Evadne; and parts of minor importance were entrusted to Messrs J. A. Grant, E. C. Buffum, Cyril Cattley, Richard Neville, and Misses Meta Pelham, Violet Falcke, and Edith Fenton.

THE GRAND.

On Monday, Dec. 5, the Drama, in Five Acts, by W. G. Wills, entitled
"A ROYAL DIVORCE."

Mr Davey made a wise selection in securing this favourite play to give an impetus to the interest in the closing weeks of the dramatic season here. Certainly the appearance of the house on Monday testified to the fact that in A Royal Divorce Mr W. W. Kelly has secured an everlasting success. The packed audience on Monday followed the course of this drama with all the old excitement and tears, the reception throughout the evening being of the most cordial reception—an enviable tribute alike to the skill of the author and the excellence of the performers. Miss Edith Cole is again appearing in the part with which she has been so long associated—that of Josephine, and for her performance we can only tender her our congratulations. She was accorded an enthusiastic reception. Miss Ethyle Murray as Marie Louise was most commendable; Miss Helen Richmond as Stephanie portrayed that somewhat unconventional young lady with verve and humour; and Miss Maggie Cardiff as the young King of Rome was intelligent and commendable. Mr Frederick Victor as Napoleon gave a good performance, speaking his lines with intelligence and discrimination; Mr Claude Agnew as Talleyrand submitted one of the best studies of the evening, his depiction of the unscrupulous Minister of State being excellently conceived and portrayed; Mr Trevor Lowe as the Marquis De Beaumont played a thankless part with skill and judgment; and Mr Dennis Bryan as Grimaud supplied a humorous character study with great success. Mr G. Kirman as Lord Keith was dignified and impressive.

THE STANDARD.

On Monday, Dec. 5, the Drama, in Four Acts, by F. Scudamore, entitled
'DANGEROUS WOMEN."

Like other dramas from the pen of the late Mr F. A. Scudamore Dangerous Women has its full share of exciting incidents and dramatic situations, and is not altogether free from the mysterious and impossible. The company responsible for the production give an interpretation worthy of warm praise, and the scenery is elaborate and effective. Mr Stanley Bedwell plays with life and vigour as the hero, Ronald Courtney, being earnest and impressive throughout. Mr Bellenden Clarke brings dignity to bear upon the part of Colonel Rothwell; Mr Fredk. Sandy powerfully depicts the fallen and unfortunate gambler and drunkard, Mark Raby; and Mr Chas. Fairton is well placed as Mr Dysart. A somewhat difficult rôle to properly portray is that of Dr. Paul Dysart, who has the fire of madness running in his blood and is constantly seized with fits of lunacy. The part is cleverly undertaken by Mr Leyton Cancellor. Mr Fred De Vere submits a capable performance of Sir Reggie Hopwood, and Mr William Kenworthy is a satisfactory Father Raymond. Mr Henry St. Leger is exceptionally good as the burglar, Dick Pudsey. Mr Tubby Edlin, a comedian of high merit, creates much amusement by his drollery in the character of Elijah Smudge, being ably assisted by Miss Nellie Jackson, a bright and captivating Bessie Basket. Miss Olive Weller supplies a decidedly impressive reading of the part of Sylvia Rothwell, playing with much charm and intensity. Joe Perkins has an efficient exponent in Miss Hulo Hodgson, and Miss Kate Carter sweetly portrays Pollie Perkins. Miss Nellie Hatford gives a capable presentment of Lola Lascelles, and Miss Marie M'Aulay shows considerable ability in her delineation of Cora Fay.

THE PAVILION.

On Monday, Dec 5, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Henry Arthur Jones and Wilson Barrett, entitled
"HOODMAN BLIND."

A capital reproduction of the favourite drama, Hoodman Blind, is the attraction at the Pavilion this week, and an enthusiastic audience on Monday evening applauded to the echo the various exciting scenes and incidents of this popular play. As Jack Yeulett Mr Ashley Page acts with genial frankness and sincerity and gives a manly, natural, and consistent performance throughout. Mr James C. Aubrey succeeds in evoking a perfect storm of execration as a satisfactory testimony of the able and faithful manner in which he portrays Mark Lezzard. Mr Harry Barford must be congratulated on his excellent study of Ben Chibbles. Mr Alfred Ibberson scores a decided hit as Tom Lattiker, and Mr Harry Bristow is efficient as Noah Quodling. A finished and clever portraiture of Joe Swirrup is submitted by Mr Fred Boustead, and Mr Lloyd Merton is well suited as Inspector Jermin. Miss Marion Denvil has a difficult task in the dual parts of the sisters, but acquits herself admirably, the delineation of Nance being marked by much earnestness and sympathetic feeling, while the erring Jess is vividly enacted with true artistic finish. Miss Denvil is especially good at the close of the third act, and well deserves the vociferous applause she receives. Miss Sara Besant displays considerable aptitude as Kit, and Miss Cissie Besant gives a capital rendition of the cripple, Tom Tit. Miss Tina Mavro is seen to advantage as Polly Chibbles, and a word of praise is due to Miss Kitty Cardigan for her presentment of Liz. Mr Henry Roberts does well as Mr Lendon; Mr Arthur Wilson is satisfactory as Jim Dadge; and Mr Fred Withers is a capable Ephraim Beevor; while creditable work is done by Mr E. Godfrey as Mad Willy, Mr Roland Ryley as Abe Chawner, and Miss Eva Wellstead as Mrs Beevor. The stage-management is good, the mounting tasteful and artistic, and the scenery of more than average excellence, the set, the Silent Highway, being very fine and worthy of special mention.

THE BRITANNIA.

On Monday, Dec. 12, the Drama, in a Prologue and Four Acts, entitled
"A WOMAN OF PLEASURE."

The Hoxton Britons are among the staunchest lovers of the drama to be found anywhere; and the pieces so happily chosen by Mr J. M. East, the manager, are interesting enough to attract crowded houses. The great theatre, indeed, on the night of our visit presented quite its old aspect, and the manifestations of hearty enthusiasm over the struggle between victorious virtue and vanquished vice were quite in the spirit of the Britain's palmiest days. A Woman of Pleasure, which was staged on Monday, has not only a provincial reputation but has been favourably received in several London theatres. Its story enchains our attention from the outset by the romantic marriage of the village schoolteacher, Alice Dane, to the Earl of Carlingforth, a peer of the realm. Unfortunately for the peer the marriage does not secure for him unalloyed happiness, and the domestic hearth is darkened by the villainous shadow of Major Burrows, who is possessed of an unholy passion for the Countess. It is true she repents of her foolish infatuation, and learns to appreciate the love and devotion of a good man; but fate is unkind, and the letter she writes to the villain to say good-bye is used against her, serving only to complete the estrangement between husband and wife. The Earl finds consolation in action, and placing his services at the disposal of his sovereign takes up his position as a commander of yeomanry in the Boer war. The action quickens in interest with the transference of the principal characters to South Africa, and after many moving accidents and hairbreadth escapes, the husband and wife become reconciled on the "holy eve of Christmas," the period of charity and good will. The part of the high-minded and patriotic Earl of Carlingforth is assigned to Mr W. S. Hartford, who is no stranger to the Hoxtonians. Mr Hartford since his last engagement at the theatre has been globe-trotting, but that he has not been forgotten by the faithful toilers of the east is evident from the hearty welcome he receives nightly. He acts with a restraint and philosophic dignity that are very telling, and at the end of the second act, in the noble determination of Carlingforth to endeavour to forget the stain on his escutcheon by fighting for the honour of England, he sounds the right note of manly resolve. Mr Charles A. East as Commandant Dench of the Boer forces bears a striking resemblance to the late lamented Oom Paul, but he is well received nevertheless, and his delineation of the strenuous characteristics of a hard-headed Africander leader makes of him quite favourite. Mr Frank Harding, who has pursued a long course of stage villainy in another place, does not handle the part of Major Burrows with kid gloves, but takes care to give a strong shading of malevolence to that renegade's unholy plottings and schemings—a proceeding that excites both gods and pit nightly. Mr Arthur Burne makes a manly parson of the Rev. Luke Goddard, who not only practises what he preaches, but has a straight left for those who presume too much upon his peaceful inclinations. When the Rev. Luke knocks the villain down a rousing cheer goes up, a fact which serves to show that the heart of the audience is sound. Lady Carlingforth is not one of the strongest of heroine parts; but Miss Rose Ralph emphasises the repentant moods of her ladyship, and wins considerable sympathy. Mr Charles Groves as Bobby Bumpwell, a tourist from Chicago and afterwards a newspaper representative, makes the most of the comic scene where Bobby loses his nether garments; and the comic relief has also excellent help from Miss Ruby Hallier as Mrs Josiah Bumpwell and Miss Marie Wright as Dolly Dimple. Mr Charles Langley is a typical Michael Issit; Mr H. H. Barrington as Captain Zassatoff is earnest in his defence of the foreign legion; and other parts are efficiently handled by Mr Fred Groves, Mr Tom Wallis, Mr H. Rogers, Mr P. Thompson, and Miss Carrie Thompson. To the concluding variety entertainment Mr Harry Martell, comedian and speciality dancer; Miss Agnes Hanson, serio and dancer; and Mr Charles Jerome, coon comedian and dancer, contribute. Mrs Madeline Barber is a very popular figure as manageress, and Mr Sydney Hyman, with his lieutenant, Mr Ernest Abbott, is a vigilant and courteous supervisor.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, Dec. 5 the Drama, in Four Acts, by Walter Melville, entitled
"THE WORST WOMAN IN LONDON."

Once again has The Worst Woman in London wended her way to Mr William Bailey's historic Marylebone playhouse, and though naturally her reception was of necessity a somewhat mixed one, nevertheless her popularity proved to be as great as ever. This company of Mr Walter Melville's is one of exceptional ability and all-round excellence, and in Miss Constance Medwyn, who enacted the title-rôle, Mr Melville showed the West Londoners an actress of much power and versatility. Throughout the four trying acts she never wavered or faltered, but relentlessly portrayed the repulsive Frances Vere in all too realistic colours. Mr Edwin J. Collins as Jack Felton was well placed, soon winning the hearts of his audience; whilst Mr Paul Barry Lewers as Vincent Lyle was equally successful in another way. Mr Roy Byford, who is Mr Melville's general manager, brought his ripe experience to bear on the part of James Milford; Mr Fred Smith was persevering as Fred Thornborough; Mr John Jackson was the right man in the right place as George Wilton; and Mr Joe Bracewell gave a skilful study of the part of Hugh Drayton. The Philip Armstrong of Mr Bernard Mervyn was a sound, genuine piece of work, and laughter loud and long was caused at frequent intervals by Mr Geo. H. Asquin as the kindly showman, Bob Goldfinch. As Matilda Parker Miss Helena Rigby played with an energy and will much to be commended; Miss Lillian Ross was decidedly charming as Ruth Milford; Miss Flora Leighton was quite at home as Florence Walkington; and Miss Mamie Rendle scores as Jane Nogood. Other parts well handled were the Sweep of Mr C. Thomas, the Bertie Heslop of Mr George Cranby, the Detective Curzon of Mr B. Elton, and the Billy of Mr F. Livingstone. The play was staged and mounted in a luxurious manner, and went with a swing from start to finish.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, Dec. 5, the Comedy, by A. W. Pinero, entitled
"LETTY."

Mr Charles Frohman's London company, including Miss Irene Vanbrugh and Mr H. B. Irving, is appearing here in Pinero's clever and interesting play Letty. Little that is new remains to be said of this exciting, emotional play, with its disillusioning epilogue. First impressions remain, and, willy nilly, we cannot help our sympathies going out to the wrong people, nor can we help the wish that matrimonial respectability had not entailed such a falling from grace in manner and appearance in the help-meet chosen for Letty. We may even have our doubts if such a supersensitive, nervous, emotional temperament as Letty's could settle down to hum-drum happiness and mediocre contentment. Nevertheless, Mr A. W. Pinero puts his view of the matter so clearly, cleverly, and forcibly that we are convinced even against our will. Mr H. B. Irving has, perhaps, never shown to greater advantage than he does as the cynical yet kind-hearted roué, Nevill Letchmere, whose wickedness grows by destiny rather than desire. He is earnest and intense without ever ranting or lapsing into mere melodrama; indeed, Mr H. B. Irving is a splendid exponent of "reserve force" as it should be practised. Miss Irene Vanbrugh as the nervous, highly-strung Letty Shell acts with all the art and emotional ability so ready to her command. She exactly pictures the poor girl, refined, well-educated, and pleasure-loving, beset with temptations not only in private but in her business capacity, and genuinely in love with the fascinating but "impossible" Letchmere. Miss Beatrice Forbes-Robertson contrives to make a deep impression as Letty's fidus Achates, Marion Allardyce, imbuing the part with genuine feeling and pathos. Miss Eleanor Souray scores all along the line as the pretty, greedy, good-natured, selfish cockney dressmaker's assistant, Hilda Gunning, who is always "magasin" whatever happens! Mr Scott Craven does not spare himself in the portrayal of the loud, vulgar, foolish, "bucket-shop" keeper, Bernard Mandeville; and Mr Charles Troode as the commercial traveller and Mr Tom Hezlewood as the insurance agent give excellent character sketches. Mr Leslie Victor as the photographic nonentity, Richard Perry, is well in the picture. Mr Vernon Steel as Coppinger Drake and Mr Clayton Green as Letchmere's servant are eminently satisfactory, and Miss May Blayney gives a very taking portrait of the pretty, frivolous "Tiny," alias Mrs Ivor Crosbie. Messrs T. S. M'Causland Stewart, Litchfield Owen, R. Haigh, and W. Hack complete the cast. Mr M'Intyre Wickstead is the stage-manager, while Mr W. A. Seymour assists Mr Edward Lytton at the front of the house.

THE KING'S, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Dec. 5, the Musical Comedy, by J. T. Tanner and Lionel Monckton, entitled
"THE CINGALEE."

Mr George Edwardes has presented to the patrons of the King's his latest Daly's Theatre success, and the house has been crowded nightly with delighted audiences. The freshness of the acting, the capable singing, and the brilliancy of the mounting are all factors of the success; and the scenes in Ceylon give every excuse for a feast of form and colour. The honours of the evening fall to Mr Frank Danby, whose impersonation of Chambhuddy Ram is crammed with quaint humour, the result being that roars of laughter are heard when he is on the stage. Mr Leedham Bantock as Boobhamba is excellently stolid, and wins warm approval. The Sir Peter Loftus of Mr W. J. Manning is a brisk and bustling performance which is greatly enjoyed, and Mr Jack Cannot as Bobbie Warren deserves hearty praise. Mr Harold Thorley makes many friends by his manly and easy rendering of Harry Vereker. Mr Willie Warde, jun., is a capable Myamgah. Miss Kathleen Severn is a fascinating Nanoya, her sweet singing and delicate acting meeting with much success. Lady Patricia Vane is charmingly depicted by Miss Anna Hickisch, who has a nice voice. An irresistible Peggy Sabine is Miss Eva Sandford, who is a great favourite. Miss Claire Marsden is particularly bright as Naitoomi, and Miss Claire Pridelle, Miss Maudie Davis, and Miss Doris Lester complete a quartet of adorable tea-girls. The members of the chorus sing effectively, and the dances, arranged by Mr Willie Warde, are picturesque. The scenery, by Mr Hawes Craven, is superb, and the dresses and appointments are in fine taste. Mr Harold Vicars ably conducts the largely augmented orchestra.

EALING THEATRE.

On Monday, Dec. 5, the Musical Play, entitled
"A COUNTRY GIRL."

Mr Fred S. Jennings caters well for Ealing playgoers, and the excellent company of Mr George Dance with A Country Girl is on a return visit. Mr Francis Ludlow as Geoffrey Chaloner created a most favourable impression, being encored for his singing, and Mr H. C. Morton as Sir Joseph Verity was good as the parvenu. The dignified Mr Raikes, Rajah of Bong, was ably undertaken by Mr Fred W. Pattrick. Mr Harry Buss displayed remarkable versatility and scored heavily all round in the rôle of Barry. Miss Kathryn Comber played and sang admirably as Marjory Joy, and Miss Nina Carlton, who has an excellent voice, which she uses with effect, acted Princess Melaneh well. The dainty little Madame Sophie was charmingly rendered by Miss Rose Begarnie, who has a sweet voice, and the pretty Lady Anchester was fascinatingly portrayed by Miss Beatrice Glyn. Miss Madge Christopher and Miss Norah Desterre were all that could be desired as Miss Carruthers and Mrs Egerton respectively. Miss Nellie Cozens acquitted herself with gratifying success as Nan; Mr Willie Harthill in his small part of Douglas Verity and Mr Arthur Hayter as Granfer Mummery were good; Miss Rosa Roby was a delightful Mrs St Quinton; and a word of praise is due to Miss Nora Weston as Nurse. Numerous other young and pretty ladies were in the chorus, which did well, and the considerably augmented orchestra, under the able direction of Mr Otto Manns, played some excellent selections. The dresses were exceedingly effective, and the scenery was good.

SHAKESPEARE, CLAPHAM-JUNCTION.

On Monday, Dec. 5, the Drama, in Five Acts, by Henry Arthur Jones, entitled
"THE SILVER KING."

This famous melodrama has held audiences this week at the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham-junction, spellbound. The attendance has been large, and keen enthusiasm has been manifested. Mr Austin Melford undertakes the part of William Denver with conspicuous success, playing with force, character, and conviction. Miss Emelie Polini as Nellie Denver proves herself a fine emotional actress and entirely enlists the sympathies of the audience; Mr Charles Levey gives a finished rendering of the part of Captain Herbert Skinner; Mr Arthur H. Rooke as Eliah Coombs is decidedly good; and Mr C. P. Amalia as Cripps and Mr James L. Power as Henry Corkett give invaluable help. Mr C. C. Grattan as Daniel Jaikes is remarkably capable, and is deserving of praise for his rendering of the part. Mr Warriss Lindon as Samuel Baxter, the detective, is entrusted with an important part, and proves worthy of it. Mr Arnold E. Palmer as Geoffrey Ware, Mr Phil Redmayne as Frank Selwyn, Mr Eric Store as the humorous Mr Parkyn, and Mr H. Laundy as a tipsy passenger were all excellent in their respective rôles. In minor characters Messrs Bingham, Hathway, Norton, Emery, Mackie, Singer, Shoesmith, Williams and Grant, and Misses Amy Manfree, Phyllis Dailly, Amy Wood, Margaret Rooke, and Dolly Norton gave unstinted support.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, Dec. 5, the Comedy, by Thomas Raceward, entitled
"SUNDAY."

This delightful piece well deserved the flattering reception accorded by a large, and evidently well pleased, audience on Monday. In the title-rôle Miss Julia Neilson charmed the patrons of this well-managed theatre by her most natural impersonation of a cleverly drawn character. Miss Neilson was most ably supported by Mr Fred Terry, whose clever embodiment of Colonel Brinthorpe gained the greatest eulogy. As Arthur Brinthorpe Mr Malcolm Cherry was very good. The accomplished actress Miss Bella Pateman made a great success of the part of Mrs Naresby. Miss Kathleen Doyle proved herself a capable exponent of the Nun. Tom Oxley was capitally depicted by Mr J. D. Beveridge. Mr Horace Hodges could scarcely be improved upon in the portrayal of the kind-hearted and well-meaning Lively. Mr Rothbury Evans as Towser displayed talent as a character actor. Similar praise is due to Mr J. Carter-Edwards for his efforts in the representation of Davy. Mr Alfred Kendrick worked hard to render Jacky efficiently, and did not labour in vain. In the character of Abbot, a man-servant, Mr Ernest E. Imeson proved equal to the demands upon his skill as an actor. The play was well staged, and the whole production was most successful.

TERRISS THEATRE.

On Monday, Dec. 5, the Drama, in Four Acts, entitled
"THE SCALES OF JUSTICE."

This popular naval drama is once again occupying the boards at the Rotherhithe theatre, and is sufficiently attractive to counteract the usual slackness which habitually precedes the Christmas festival. For the production a very good all-round company is engaged. Chief among them is undoubtedly Mr Julian Cross, whose fine interpretation of Antonio Cordova is all that can be desired. An exceedingly meritorous performance of Harry Maxwell is given by Mr William Dexter. Miss Marie Robson, who doubles the parts of Mary and Jenny Maxwell, wins everyone's sympathy by her admirable embodiments; Mr Newman Maurice displays a keen sense of humour in his impersonation of Tony Wilkins; and the lighter vein has also another capable exponent in Miss Kate Carter, who appears as Polly. Mr John H. Firman satisfactorily discharges his duties as Captain Duncan; Mr Chas. H. Stephenson is seen to advantage as Lieut. Tom Duncan; Jack Breeze is capitally played by Mr R. S. Gresham; Mr E. Notefield finds ample scope as Don Juan Mendoza; and Miss Gwendolen Burney is to be complimented on her fine rendition of Inez Cordova. The scenic effects are good.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

"THE ORCHID."

Mr George Edwardes's company, in The Orchid, was very cordially received on Monday night at the Borough Theatre, where this highly successful musical composition is paying a return visit. The attractions of the production are considerably enhanced by the introduction of additional numbers, while fresh verses to existing songs have been advantageously introduced. Miss Coralie Blythe makes a very dainty and demure Lady Violet, and her songs are received with enthusiasm. Miss Gertrude Gilliam is an extremely pretty and vivacious Josephine Zaccary, and sings delightfully. Miss Irene Verona is exceedingly well suited in the broad comedy part of Caroline Vokins, and quickly becomes popular with the audience. Miss Luna Love makes a prepossessing Thisbe, and her "Pyjama" song is an item much in favour. Miss Ethel Griffies makes the most of her opportunities in the part of Zelie Rumbert, and Miss Katie Leechman is excellent as Countess Anstruther. Mr George Gregory is very droll and amusing as Meakin, and to his untiring efforts much of the success of the piece is due. Mr Lawrence Grossmith as the beaulsh Guy Scrymgeour is remarkably successful, and his songs are vociferously applauded. Mr Donald Hall is a highly commendable Dr. Ronald Fausset, and Mr Ellis Ogilvie makes up well and acts appropriately as Mr Aubrey Chesterton. Mr Sidney Vincent deserves every praise for a fine performance as Zaccary, and the idiosyncrasies of Comte Raoul De Cassignat are happily hit off by Mr Sam Walsh. The piece is sumptuously mounted and dressed, and the large and well-trained chorus and augmented orchestra, under the bâton of Mr Ernée Woodville, conduce much to the brilliant tout ensemble produced.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

On Monday, Dec. 5, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Fred Moule, entitled
"THE LIFE THAT KILLS."

The return visit of this popular melodrama well filled the cheaper parts of the Stratford Theatre Royal on Monday night and gave unbounded satisfaction to those present. Messrs Fred Moule and E. D. Nicholls' company capably interprets the piece, and the staging and mounting is exceedingly good. Mr Herbert Sidney very successfully undertakes the rôle of the unscrupulous Kendal Croat, whose derisive laughter at his own misdeeds becomes very galling to the "gods." Mr E. D. Nicholls acts with distinction as Lord Kilmarch; the vacillating, weak-kneed Valentine Telford is portrayed in a sufficiently unflattering light by Mr Morris Maud; and Mr Hugh Metcalfe contributes a vigorous and buoyant embodiment of Hector Rodney. Mr Robert Lord plays convincingly as Capt. Montague; Mr Harry Howe is always amusing as Jack Jolliffe; and Mr Wilton Drury does well as Samuel Flatfoot. Miss Cathleen Cavanagh contributes a powerful delineation of the heartless Brenda Croat; and Miss Alice Rocheforte plays with sympathy and much emotion as Laura Linden. Miss Mabel Kessler makes a bright and spirited Johanna Dicks, also undertaking the part of Tom Dicks with ability, and, in addition, contributes some very favourably received solos on the cornet, post-horn, and bugle.

GRAND, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, Dec. 5, the Comic Opera, "LA POUPÉE."

The fact that the theatre-going public is essentially conservative and is always ready to welcome an old favourite was further evidenced by the cordial reception accorded to Mr C. P. Levilly's company, which has been appearing here this week in La Poupée. Mr Arthur Reynolds was exceedingly amusing as Hilarius; he is a genuine comedian, and gets every ounce of fun out of his lines without having to resort to that grotesque over-exaggeration which it is so easy to fall into in portraying characters of this nature. Mr T. A. Shale played Lancelot in a straightforward and manly fashion, admirably contrasting the novitiate's original child-like innocence with his subsequent interest in the ways of the world and his gradually awakening love for Alesia. The last named character was delightfully rendered by Miss Midge Clark, who sang nicely, and whose graceful movements and air of demure roguishness were charmingly in keeping with the part. Mr Eliot Skinner made an imposing Father Maxime, and sang the favourite "Jovial Monk" song with great effect. Mr Fred Walsh was a dignified and gallant Baron Chanterelle, and Mr Charles M'Lagan was responsible, as Loremois, for a clever portrayal of senile folly and vanity. Miss Lillie Leigh played with a good deal of humour and some force as Madame Hilarius, and Miss Florence Shaw was a bright and sprightly Henri.

GREENWICH THEATRE.

On Monday, Dec. 5, the Drama, entitled
"GIPSY JACK."

This theatre opened on Monday night for the first time on the two-houses-a-night system, and seems to have entered on a successful season. The attraction was the reappearance of Mr Henry Bedford as Gipsy Jack in the drama of that name. Mr Bedford was as successful as ever in this rôle. Mr Robert Seymour was good in the part of Sir John Dexter; the same remark applies to Mr J. Arthur Plummer as Mr Skioner; Mr Cuthbert Nobes was a very popular Rev. Francis Harvey, Mr Sid Bedford was an amusing Joe Banks, and Mr Joe Damer was good as Charley Bates. Miss Gertrude Gilbert was a pleasing Dorothy Baxter, Miss Ada Antley a clever Hagar, Miss Enid French a picturesque Gipsy Nan, Miss Jennie Risley a bright and taking Jennie Higgins, Mrs Jeffreys a competent Mother Hunt, and Miss Bessie Bedford an earnest and attractive May Harvey. The drama was well staged, and appeared to give general satisfaction.

PRINCE OF WALES'S, RICHMOND.

On Tuesday, Dec. 5, the Opera, by Ambroise Thomas, entitled
"MIGNON."

The Moody-Manners opera company are paying a welcome and much-appreciated return visit to this theatre, and on Tuesday presented Ambroise Thomas's four-act opera Mignon. Madame Fanny Moody herself played—or, rather, sang—the title-rôle, and charmed her audience by her finished singing and acting. The poor waif's terror of her brutal guardian on her first entrance was especially well portrayed by Madame Moody. Miss Grace Nicoll was the Felina, and possesses a pure light soprano which she uses with judgment and effect. Miss Teify Davies played the part of Frederick, a gallant in love with Felina, and although the part is comparatively a small one, Miss Davies sang and acted with such effect that the character assumed quite an important place. Mr Charles Carter was Wilhelm, a young student, and his well-cultivated voice and artistic method soon installed himself in popular favour. Lotharia, Mignon's father, was excellently played by Mr Charles Tilbury, the possessor of a really fine bass voice, whose song as he watched over the sleeping Mignon gained a rapturous encore. Laertes, an actor, found a very humorous exponent in Mr F. Brookes. Mr S. Langdale was an effective Giarno, and Mr G. King was equally good as Antonio. The orchestra was specially augmented for this company's visit by the company's own musicians, and under the able bâton of Mr Harrison Frewin acquitted itself with great distinction. The opera was well dressed, and the mounting was adequate.

MRS H. BEERBOHM TREE has consented to act as hostess to one of the tables at the Home of Recovery dinner at Prince's on Feb. 22.

FAREWELL TO EDWARD TERRY.

On the eve of his departure for America, Mr Edward Terry was the honoured guest at a farewell dinner, which took place at the Savoy Hotel on Sunday evening. The Duke of ABERCORN presided, and those present included the Earl of Lathom, Sir Eyre Massey Shaw, Sir Alfred Cooper, Sir Squire Bancroft, Sir Joseph Dimsdale, M.P., Sir Bruce Seton, Sir Edward Letchworth, Sir Francis Burnand, Mr W. R. M'Connell, K.C., Colonel Clifford Probyn, Mr Louis N. Parker, Mr Bourchier Hawkesley, Mr Agg-Gardner, M.P., Mr J. D. Langton, Mr R. D. Muir, Mr J. H. Leigh, Mr Thomas Catling, Major Henry Wright, Dr. Clement Godson, Mr Cyril Maude, Mr George Alexander, Mr Beerbohm Tree, Mr Carl Hentschel, Mr Marshall Hall, K.C., Mr Charles Mathews, Mr J. Bannister Howard, and Mr E. B. Norman and Mr Charles J. Davies (hon. secretaries).

The DUKE OF ABERCORN, in giving the loyal toasts, which were enthusiastically honoured, remarked that no greater patron of the dramatic art of the United Kingdom lived than the King, who ever since he was a boy had been devoted to that art, and had become a great critic, and was well able to discern a good from a bad play, as some London theatres had reason to know. Besides patronising the theatres, his Majesty never forgot the dramatist or the actor or actress in time of trouble.

The CHAIRMAN then announced that the committee had received many letters and telegrams of regret for non-attendance. Lord Glenesk wrote regretting that through indisposition he could not be present to honour their guest; Mr J. L. Toole said he was with them in thought, and sent all good wishes; Mr and Mrs Kendal did the same. Sir Henry Irving telegraphed from Liverpool: "Dear Duke of Abercorn, please convey to my old friend, Edward Terry, my regret that I cannot be present to-night to help in doing him honour. I wish him all prosperity in his Western enterprise, favouring breezes, and the cordial welcome that I know awaits him at the hands of our American brothers." Mr Pinero wrote:—"To my great regret an engagement of long standing obliges me to be in the country to-morrow night, and I am therefore prevented from having the honour of supporting your chairmanship and of offering personally my good wishes to my old friend Edward Terry. May I beg you to give him those good wishes on my behalf? Mr Terry is an actor who has enabled me to depart from my rule not to witness performances of my own plays, for on those occasions when he appeared in a piece of my writing I have felt sure that his skill, inventiveness, and genuine humour would help me to forget the imperfections of my work, and in this I have never been disappointed. I trust Mr Terry will have a prosperous season in America. He will at last find there the keenest and most intelligent audience in the world."

In proposing the health of Mr Edward Terry, the DUKE OF ABERCORN said:—I can truly say that Mr Terry is versatile; in tragedy, comedy, or burlesque he gratifies and pleases his audiences. In this country or in Australia, South Africa, or in the future in America, his talent in representing all classes of society will never be forgotten. With regard to his antecedents, he is versatile not only in his profession but out of it. He is one of those who out of his own profession tries to do good to his fellow-creatures. He is a great Freemason. He is Past Grand Treasurer of Grand Lodge, and one of the governors of the girls' school. He turns his attention to other things than Freemasonry. He has delivered an address at a Church congress—on popular amusements in relation to Christian life. He was one of the few theatrical representatives to receive an invitation to attend the celebrations at Westminster Abbey at the Diamond Jubilee of 1897. He is a founder of the Strand Theatrical Provident and Benevolent Fund, and a trustee of the Dramatic Sick Fund. In his private capacity when he is able to spare time to reside at his little property—I hope it is a big property—at Barnes, he is trustee of the Barnes Charity, a member for twelve years of the board of guardians, and an active member of the Barnes Working Mens' Institute. His activities have not been limited to the upper and middle classes, but he takes the same interest in the poorer classes of his district. He is a governor of the Foundling Hospital. About a year ago I had the good fortune to attend a service at the Foundling, and Mr Terry held a plate at the entrance. He looked as good as gold, and gazed mournfully at the plate where the gold ought to be. I think that with one exception Mr Terry may be described as the doyen of the profession. His theatrical life began in 1862, and he went through the many trials of the profession. He began life as a staid, prosaic commercial clerk, and private theatricals were his doom. He joined a company in Christchurch, Hampshire. His ambitions were unlimited, and he began with Shakespeare, I believe, in Hamlet or Macbeth. The company consisted of three gentlemen and two ladies. They would remember the cast was a heavy one, and he appeared in no less than half a dozen parts. In Macbeth one actor doubled Macduff with Banquo's Ghost. Mr Terry appeared as one courtier, and a lady in a greatcoat was another, and they made as many of themselves as they could by standing at each wing. After a fortnight the manager of the company disappeared, having forgotten to pay the salaries before his departure. Mr Terry was disillusioned as to what an actor could earn. He said in a letter to a friend that he would only believe in the existence of a manager if he could get three consecutive weeks of salary. That time was to come. At the old Gaiety, which many of you will remember, he was engaged with Kate Vaughan, E. W. Royce, and Nellie Farren. He played Mephistopheles, in Little Dr. Faust, and in Robbing Roy some of you may remember Mr Terry appearing in a very short kilt. He was a man, but the kilt was made for a boy, and I have a distinct recollection of Mr Terry's endeavours to wear his kilt gracefully. The author of the play, Sir Francis Burnand, is here to-night, but he was not the author of the kilt. Then Mr Terry opened his own theatre in 1888. His great success, Mr Pinero's Sweet Lavender, in which he has played his part of Dick Phenyl not less than 4,000 times in all parts of the world, will be fresh in your minds. As I think the secret of Mr Terry's success is the fact that he has never offended anyone's susceptibilities, and his plays are nearly all domestic. That is the secret of the perennial popularity of Sweet Lavender. He has written many plays and he has played at his theatre Love in Idleness—I don't know what that means—My Pretty Maid—I know what that means—The Passport, You Never Know, Bardell v Pickwick, and The House of Burnside, with which he will open in New York. He has been a great traveller. In South Africa he was present at Kate Vaughan's last moments, which he endeavoured to soothe. That is the nature of the man On Saturday next he leaves this country with his company, and will be accompanied by Mrs Terry. We wish him every possible success in his enterprise, and I am sure his many thousands of admirers will follow his tour in America with the keenest interest.

The toast was received with great enthusiasm, and an additional cheer was given for Mrs Terry.

Mr EDWARD TERRY, who was received with prolonged cheers, said in reply—I have just returned from Ireland, where our Chairman comes from. In Limerick, which I visited, I found that the names of the streets were being put up in Gaelic, and not in our ordinary language. That was rather confusing. I went to buy a vocabulary, and asked the bookseller whether this local action was not a mistake. "Believe me," he replied, "them as put it up can't read it themselves." I am told that in Irish there are only eighteen letters, and that may be one of the causes of the differences between our country and Ireland. From what has been said of me I cannot help feeling that I must be "beastly good." I ought not to be here as an actor, I ought to be put in a window with a halo round my head, to adorn one of the places I occasionally visit. What I do outside my profession is a labour of love. From what has been said of me I must be a great man, and great men sometimes jump to opposite decisions. Mr Gladstone felled trees; I plant them. There is at Barnes a walk condemned to bear my name because I planted the trees bordering it. So far has this permeated the mind of the people of Barnes that I recently had an anonymous letter asking me to remonstrate with the local board because they were cutting down the elms round the old pound. I feel myself in a tight corner this night. I have been in tight corners before in many parts of the world. I don't know whether it could be called a tight corner to be dangling from the end of a rope over a crevasse in the Alps, but I feel I did on that occasion. I have been picked up with sunstroke on the deserts of Morocco, I have been nearly wrecked off the Seychelles, I have been taken across the veldt by a motorist who confessed that it was his first attempt at driving a car; but this is perhaps the worst fix I have been in. I feel I cannot adequately reply to the kind words of the chairman. Someone has said that speech is given to man to conceal his thoughts; you must excuse my speech, because my thoughts and feelings are too great to give adequate utterance to them. I have been on the stage forty-one years, and I hope I have done my level best to keep up the dignity of our art. I am now going to pay a visit to our American cousins. I have not been to America before. For what reason I do not know, except it is that that country is so near, and I have always been fond of a long sea voyage. I am sure I shall meet many old friends and I hope make many new ones. At any rate, I know I have your God-speed, and that will be an incentive to me to do my very best. I sometimes wonder who will be the first man to meet me in America. The first man I met in South Africa twelve years ago was at the Customs House. He said "Mr Terry, how do you do?" I said, "Do you know me?" He replied, "Know you!"—here he became unpleasantly reminiscent—"I used to see you act twenty-five years ago. How many packages have you?" and he chalked them all. In Johannesburg a man with a somewhat vitreous eye came and put a moist hand in mine and said, "Eh, mon, I used to shave you in Sauchiehall-street in Glasgie." Once when I was roped to a man on Mont Blanc, I wondered whether the insurance company would pay my widow if I were killed, and expressed my doubts to the other man, who asked which company it was, and on being told he replied, "Certainly; I am the agent." These are things that show an old traveller as I am how small the world is. I have travelled a good deal and believe in it, for it broadens the mind and teaches us the vastness of our Empire, a matter I am keen about and proud of. I am sure from some remarks made to me by my old friend Joe Jefferson, whose Rip Van Winkle will never be forgotten, that there is a fraternal feeling in America for the Britisher, and I believe I shall receive there as kind a greeting as I have in so many of our colonies. I only regret that I shall not see that dear old lady, the grand old woman of the American stage, Mrs Gilbert. I do not know I can say any more. My heart is quite too full to express adequately what I feel. The deeper one's feelings the less one is able to express them. Believe me I appreciate very much this kindly send-off I appreciate the kindness of the Duke of Abercorn in taking the chair this evening, and in conclusion I beg to thank you all from the bottom of my heart.

Mr BEERBOHM TREE proposed "The Health of the Chairman." If, he said, it was wrong to abuse a man behind his back it was tasteless to flatter him to his face, but it was no flattery to say that the committee had thought they would best honour their dear friend Terry by asking the Duke of Abercorn to preside. All would wish Mr Terry a warm welcome on the other side, but he hoped it would not be so warm as he himself had on his first visit to America. Scarcely had they got to the hotel then it was burned out. That incident proved to him the great force of two institutions in America—the press and the police. A member of his company lost some jewellery in the fire, and, in fact, it was rumoured that thieves had caused the conflagration. He was asked to go to the chief of the police about it. He drove in a closed fly and saw this gentleman, who was most affable. The jewellery was restored mysteriously the same day, so that the power of the police over the criminal classes was most extraordinary, and it was shown that the power of the police as the connecting link between the law and criminality was great. When he had rested a little on return to his hotel he was waited on by seven reporters, who asked why he had been to the head of the police. "That is my business," he replied. "Oh, no," they said, "you must be strangely ignorant of the institutions of this continent; it is our business. You had better make a clean breast of it, as nasty rumours get about." So he diffidently told them that he went to the police to ask them to deal gently with the crowds which were assembling outside the theatre where he was to appear, and above all to see that there was no loss of life. The evening papers—of course published in the morning—were full of this, with the consequence that a crowd began to assemble and they were full that night. That showed the power of the Press. He hoped Mr Terry was going out properly provided with secretaries for all purposes, a journalistic secretary above all things. A friend of his own told him he took two secretaries—one for autographs and the other for locks of hair. After six months the one died of writer's-cramp and the other was bald. Mr Terry, like most of them, could not give away too many locks of hair, and that was all the more right because he was only recently married. But a truce to stories. They could not have chosen a more propitious Chairman, and they, while thanking him for his services, joined him most heartily in good wishes for the success of their guest.

The Duke of ABERCORN briefly replied, and the proceedings terminated.

"CHARLEY'S AUNT" has paid her first visit to the Marlborough Theatre this week, and has received good treatment from Mr Brandon Thomas's well-selected company. Mr George Desmond seems quite in his element as Lord Fancourt Babberly, giving a very humorous impersonation. He is well supported by Messrs A. Soames and Wylie Thompson as Jack Chesney and Charley Wykeham. Brassett, the college scout, has a good exponent in Mr H. Brahame, and Colonel Chesney is very ably represented by Mr Lumsden Hare. The amorous old solicitor, Stephen Spettigue, is suitably interpreted by Mr Guy Lane; the Misses Frances Routledge and Violet Cooper make the most of their opportunities as Kitty Verdun and Amy Spettigue; and Miss M. Fitzgerald plays the part of Ela Delahay in a modest and charming way. The rôle of Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez is rendered in an efficient manner by Mrs Leslie Boswell. The play is suitably staged. The new play by Brandon Thomas, Fourchette and Co., in which the author himself impersonates Serjeant Fletcher, Miss Ruth Suffild plays Isabella, and Mr Henry Adnes is seen in the part of Prince Del Crillo, is the curtain-raiser. The piece is dealt with in our notice of the revival of Charley's Aunt at the Comedy Theatre.

"THE ACTORS' BENEVOLENT FUND."
"HOW TO HELP IT."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I absolutely approve of Cecil Raleigh's scheme, and am willing to support it in every way. "Once a Year Actors' Day" is an excellent idea. Those who are fortunate enough to be in an engagement would never mind giving their services free for a matinée, and it would not be taking the money out of the pockets of those unfortunate ones who are out of work; and I am sure we have no right to appeal to those who support us—namely, the public.

Yours faithfully, WEEDON GROSSMITH.

Sir,—I think Mr Cecil Raleigh's scheme of the federation of the theatrical charities an exceedingly good one, and I cordially give it my support.

Sir,—Referring to the correspondence in your last issue re actors' charities, I approve of Mr Cecil Raleigh's scheme, and am willing to support it.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I have read with a great deal of interest the discussion in your columns on helping the above fund, and I most heartily approve of Mr Cecil Raleigh's scheme as set forth in your columns of Dec. 3. If a committee is appointed, and appointed shortly, I believe this scheme could be easily worked. As regards Messrs Willard and Mouillot's suggestion of deducting one night's salary, I also believe this could be worked, but only when the engagement held by the artist is for a lengthy period, as it would be somewhat hard to deduct a night's salary from an artist who may have been out of an engagement for a long time, and then obtains one which lasts say for only three or four weeks.

Yours faithfully, NORMAN V. NORMAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Mr Charles Boult evidently knows little or nothing about the front of the house, otherwise he would know that in a few theatres the holders of bill-orders contribute by means of a box to a local charity, and in some the purchase of a programme is made compulsory, which almost amounts to a tax, proving the practicability of my suggestion. But the best idea up to now is, in my opinion, the penny tax a-week from all professionals, to be collected by the acting-manager of the company.

Yours faithfully, FRANK LISTON.
Queen's Theatre, Leeds.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I am afraid the suggestions of Messrs Willard and Mouillot in their article on "How to Help the Actors' Benevolent Fund" cannot be carried out. I have made several inquiries re same, and find the drawbacks, in most cases, are the resident management and staff.

They argue they receive no benefits from the above Fund, therefore should not be asked to contribute or forfeit a night's salary through same. Granted their argument is right; but what would the resident management or staff do on many occasions without the aid of the artists? I quite agree that every artist visiting a theatre, and obtaining free seats, should be asked to contribute a trifle in a box kept for the purpose in every theatre in aid of the above.

Also that every touring manager should collect from every member of his company a penny or twopence each week, which surely no one would refuse, and which should be entered in a book supplied for the purpose, the said book to be forwarded to the Association at the end of the tour, or at a certain date or dates each year, arranged by the Benevolent Fund. The amounts collected from each company to be acknowledged in The Era.

Yours faithfully, WILL WHITE, F.O.S.
Swan Hotel, Chesterfield, Dec. 8.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—On careful consideration of Mr Raleigh's letter in your last issue, it appears to me that his proposal is in all ways the most equitable. There seems to exist a pretty general impression that Mr Willard's scheme would press hardly upon the poorer members of the profession; whilst Mr Mouillot's suggestion is open to a similar objection from the managers' point of view. Mr Raleigh provides an opportunity for everybody concerned to give exactly the same amount of assistance to the Fund—namely, their work; invidious distinctions of salary, prestige, and even talent, being for the nonce set aside. The financial gain to the Fund would only be surpassed by the moral gain to the profession. It is only right, also, that the general public should be expected to help us; we are constantly helping them. Even the Church might do something as a quid pro quo for many favours received.

May I again urge a universal ballot on the question? If my former suggestion seems too formidable on the score of clerical work, might not each actor personally send his vote on a postcard, the same to be properly signed (name and address), and further attested, if that be thought necessary, by the signature of his manager. Or again, The Era might print a page of proper voting forms in its columns; these to be cut out by some energetic person in each company, and distributed among his fellows. His energy might also urge him to collect them again, and forward to headquarters. I append the following as a suggestion for the voting forms:—

CHARITY SCHEME.

Mr Willard's Scheme .....
Mr Mouillot's Scheme .....
Mr Raleigh's Scheme.....X.....

I approve of the scheme against which I set my mark.
Name .....
Address .....
Company (last, if out of engagement).....

I must apologise for the length of my letter, but a portion of it is my voting paper, which you will observe I have marked (somewhat "previously") "X," as above.

Yours faithfully,
EDITH WYNNE MATTHISON.

THE O.P. Club's children's New Year dance and entertainment, which was such a success last year, will take place in the Grand and Victoria Halls at the Criterion on Saturday, Jan. 7.

Mr F. W. PURCELL'S Stoke Newington theatre has this week been occupied by Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr Mark Blow's company, who have presented Edwin Elsner's dramatisation of Ouida's celebrated novel "Under Two Flags. As the vivandière, Cigarette, Miss Laura Walker scores an emphatic success, and her performance is one that does her infinite credit. As Bertie Royellieu, Mr Mark Blow has a part which affords him many opportunities of which he takes advantage. A very clever sketch of Ezra Boroni, the money-lender, comes from Mr Albert Rogers, and a smart and alert exponent of the groom Rake is found in Mr Will Hook. Messrs Reginald Harley West and C. Douglas Carlisle do well as Berkile Royellieu and Lord Rockingham respectively, and a notable performance is the Colonel Chateauroy of Mr Charles D. Pitt. Mr Charles Brooke appears as Lord Royellieu; and Misses May Pardoe, Joan Steam, and Bertha Kingston capably sustain the parts allotted to them. The longer play is preceded by Russell Vaun and Alban Atwood's farce Aunt Rebecca, the parts in which are filled by Messrs Will Hook, C. Douglas Carlisle, R. Harley West, and Miss Lesley Wynne.

"THE HOUSEKEEPER."

A Farce, in Three Acts,
by Metcalfe Wood and Beatrice Heron-Maxwell,
Produced at the Camden Theatre on Monday, Dec. 5.

Colonel Lionel Trent .... Mr KENDAL
Lord Runswick..... Mr BASSETT ROE
William Hickson ..... Mr ERNEST HENDRIE
Robert C. Sledmere..... Mr B. SHELDRICK
Pennington Greene ..... Mr LEONARD HUBERT
Chippenham Berkeley .. Mr METCALFE WOOD
Crane ..... Mr W. M. RUTHERFORD
Lady Robertson ..... Mrs A. B. TAPPING
Mrs Billington ..... Miss ELISE CLARENS
Cicely Blake ..... Miss MARY JERROLD
Mrs Pennington Greene.. Miss LOLA DUNCAN
Mary..... Miss EDITH BOTTOMLEY
Lady Audrey Whitby .... Mrs KENDAL

Mr and Mrs Kendal produced the above three-act farce to a Birmingham audience last week, and the approval gained in the capital of the Midlands by the bright dialogue and amusing situations due to the invention and sense of humour belonging to Metcalfe Wood and Beatrice Heron-Maxwell has been confirmed and strengthened by North-west London audiences at the Camden. With the rough edges rubbed off by the Brum performances, the piece now stands out as a cleverly conceived and agreeable trifle. Instead of The Housekeeper, it might have been called "The Misogynist in Love," for it is patent to the hardened theatre-goer that the unconventional Colonel Trent, with his scorn of womankind and his inflexible opposition to the marriage of officers in his regiment, will capitulate unconditionally to Cupid as soon as he learns something of the winning charm and graciousness of Lady Audrey Whitby, who not only finds a town house and manages it for her brother, Lord Runswick, but writes his political speeches. Of course, there are other love affairs in the piece, and the irony of the situation is great when the martinet and woman-hater plays the eavesdropper in order to learn from the youngest subaltern in his regiment how to make a declaration of attachment, taking down the actual words on a scrap of paper. This is sent to a flirting widow, who mistakes it for a proposal; and another misunderstanding is caused by the colonel practising the art of "proposing" on a deaf old lady. But, of course, all these tangles are smoothed out in a way that was sufficiently described last week in our Birmingham correspondent's account of the piece, which runs to a continual accompaniment of laughter. The authors have fitted both Mr and Mrs Kendal with excellent parts. As Colonel Trent, who mistakes Lady Audrey Whitby for his friend Lord Runswick's housekeeper, Mr Kendal on his first entrance is the unyielding martinet, the inflexible and pertinacious disciplinarian. He makes us easily understand the reasonableness of the Spartan-like simplicity that he thinks necessary to the military man ambitious of rising in his profession, and we have a shrewd notion that author and authoress have drawn the portrait from real life. At any rate, the sketch of the smart soldier—at home in barracks, but not in boudoir—is very real and life-like in Mr Kendal's hands. The brusqueness of the first act is in admirable contrast to the doubt, hesitancy, and softened speech of the second act, in which the actor shows a fine sense of the mental perturbation caused by an "affection of the heart." The love scene in the last act is most admirably written, and as admirably acted, and though the piece is labelled farce, this particular portion of it belongs to the higher realms of comedy. It is conceived with great tact, and is played with rare finesse, charm, and vivacity both by Mr and Mrs Kendal. The popular actress is beautifully gowned, and she delights the house by the incomparable sweetness of her smile and the perfect naturalness of her acting as Lady Audrey, who does not fail to let us know by her clever by-play and her expressive gesture that the colonel's attachment is quite mutual. Mr Ernest Hendrie presents a capitally drawn portrait of the parvenu, Lionel Hickson; Mr Bassett Roe's impersonation of Lord Runswick is charged with geniality and well-bred distinction; Mr B. Sheldrick as the young subaltern Robert C. Sledmere is amusing in his love scenes and tiffs with Cicely Blake, a part played with engaging simplicity by Miss Mary Jerrold; Mr Leonard Hubert makes the most of his slender opportunities as Pennington Greene; and Mr Metcalfe Wood gives a humorous touch to the vacuous and non-marrying Chippenham Berkeley. Mr W. M. Rutherford may be unreservedly complimented on his embodiment of Crane, the man-servant with his unconcealed contempt for the lower orders. He catches exactly the tone and style of the disciplined footman who imitates so amusingly the hauteur of the upper "suckler." Mrs A. B. Tapping as the deaf Lady Robertson has a capital scene with Mr Kendal, which she plays excellently; Miss Elise Clarens cleverly depicts the frivolity and worldliness of Mrs Billington; Miss Lola Duncan is quite satisfactory as Mrs Pennington Greene; and Miss Edith Bottomley is a smart Mary.

DEATH OF MR. GEORGE F. BLACK.

Mr George F. Black, the actor, died on Sunday at North Shields. He had been playing a leading part with a touring company in Home, Sweet Home, his final appearance being on Nov. 29. A year or two ago he was seized with severe illness whilst acting at Great Yarmouth, and was incapacitated for several weeks. He never fully recovered his former vigour, but recouped sufficiently to be able to resume the active pursuit of his profession. The recent extremely severe weather was too much for him, and, pneumonic symptoms setting in, he succumbed as stated. His family and professional friends did not regard his position as serious until the 2nd, when the manager of the company telegraphed to his father that grave complications had arisen, and one of his brothers went at once to be with him.

Mr Black, who was only thirty-nine, first of all gained considerable prominence as an amateur actor, and was strongly encouraged to take to the stage as a profession. He soon became popular and made many friends. For six or seven years he was a member of Mr F. R. Benson's Shakespearian répertoire company, and gained an experience and a proficiency which attracted the attention of Sir Henry Irving, whose company he joined, playing with him at the Lyceum and on one of his famous American tours. Since then he had a more varied experience, became a member of Miss Fortescue's company, and established a company of his own with which he toured the country, his répertoire being Hamlet, Othello, in which he played alternately the Moor and Iago, Macbeth, The Lady of Lyons, &c. He also appeared with his wife (Miss Edith Blair Staples) in Shakespearean revivals in Manchester. Two or three years ago he went to Australia to fulfil an engagement, but, unfortunately, the theatre in which the tour commenced was burnt down after one or two performances. His wardrobe was destroyed, and he returned home a considerable loser by the adventure. Mr Black had a fine voice, a good presence, and a vigorous style of acting, and he played many parts as only a thoroughly capable actor could play them.

"SPICY FOREIGN PLAYS."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I have read your leading article dealing with "Spicy Foreign Plays," and feel that I must rectify your statement that the play Das Thal des Lebens is prohibited in Germany. The play has been produced all over Germany with the exception of Berlin, where it has been prohibited not on moral but on personal grounds.

Yours faithfully, ERNEST MAYER.

AT the Royalty Theatre on Monday, Dec. 5, a copyright performance was given of a comedietta by Frederick Fenr, entitled The Age of Innocence.

"THE FASCINATING MISS KEMP."

Light Comedy, in Three Acts, by Gordon Holmes, Played for the First Time in London at the Crouch-end Opera House, on Monday, Dec. 5.

Colonel Trevannion..... Mr CHARLES GARRY
Gerald ..... Mr HUGH ARDALE
Lionel ..... Mr HAROLD WADELEY
John Meredith ..... Mr DRELINCOURT ODLUM
Rev. Matthew Hind..... Mr SEBASTIAN SMITH
Wells ..... Mr C. W. HALLE
Mrs Trevannion..... Miss DORA HERITAGE
Elise ..... Miss CELESTINE BERTRAM
Kate ..... Miss BEATRICE BELL
Muriel Cavanagh ..... Miss ROSE PORTMAN

The Fascinating Miss Kemp, which we fully noticed after its production at the Grand Theatre, Margate, on Nov. 7 last, is a bright, pleasant, merry comedy of domestic life, written in an easy, natural strain, the author not disdaining details such as a game of blindman's buff, with a formalist clergyman taking hold of a prim elderly lady by mistake, and the agony of unsuspecting persons who seat themselves unwittingly upon inverted drawing pins. The theme is that of the heiress who, wishing to form an opinion of her intended husband, presents herself to his family under a false identity. Gerald Trevannion, the son of Colonel and Mrs Trevannion, is destined to wed Muriel Cavanagh, who has £100,000. They have never met; and Miss Cavanagh conceives the idea of engaging herself as "holiday help" to Mrs Trevannion at the latter lady's home in Guernsey. She carries out her intention; and Gerald falls in love with her in her assumed character of "Miss Kemp" and insists on marrying her in spite of his parents' objections. Mrs Trevannion, who is already jealous of the too-fascinating "Miss Kemp," dismisses her haughtily, whereupon Muriel reveals herself as the heiress, and all ends well. Miss Rose Portman plays Miss Muriel Cavanagh very prettily, and makes herself a warm favourite. Mr Drelincourt Odlum supplies a sound and firm embodiment of an easy-going solicitor; and Mr Charles Garry is amusingly irritable, brusque, and overbearing as Colonel Trevannion. Mr Hugh Ardale, whose style and appearance are excellent, gives a polished and effective impersonation of Gerald Trevannion; and Miss Dora Heritage is agreeably refined as Mrs Trevannion. A quaint sketch of an affected parson is supplied by Mr Sebastian Smith; Miss Celestine Bertram makes a bright and effusive Elise, and a simple-minded servant-maid is well portrayed by Miss Beatrice Bell. The Fascinating Miss Kemp is preceded by a one-act piece by Mr Henry Lewis Bedford, entitled

"WAS SHE TO BLAME"

Mr Devonport ..... Mr JAMES ENGLISH
Mrs Devonport ..... Miss GEORGINA HAMILTON
Edgar Beresford ..... Mr ORLANDO DALY
Pritchard..... Mr F. A. K. LANCY

Mrs Devonport is the wife of a gentleman who has married her in ignorance—as she thinks—of the fact that her father, in circumstances of great temptation, committed a crime of which he was convicted, being sentenced to a long term of imprisonment. Her husband, however, is aware of this, but has been silent on the point in order to spare his wife's feelings. Mr Devonport's secretary, Edgar Beresford, is also cognisant of the fact; and, being hard pressed for money, "blackmails" Mrs Devonport to the extent of £50, which the poor woman sends to him in a letter. This is opened by her husband, who conceals himself during an interview between his wife and his secretary, and overhears enough to explain to him the situation. He comes forward, and dismisses Beresford with scorn. The piece is neatly written, the dialogue being sharp and to the point; and the action, slight as it is, is well knit and progressive. Miss Georgina Hamilton acts with spirit and delicacy as Mrs Devonport; Mr James English is sober, earnest, and sincere as the husband; and Mr Orlando Daly makes the most of the unthankful rôle of the secretary. Mr F. A. K. Lancy as Pritchard contributing some amusing touches of comedy.

MR. E. E. NORRIS'S BENEFIT.

The ever-popular Mr Ernest E. Norris, general manager of the Elephant and Castle, took his first "annual" benefit at that establishment on the 2nd inst., and had an excellent house. Matrimonial Bliss, an item of the long programme, was smartly rendered by Mr Edwin Bennett as Major Hathaway, and Mr Paige Lawrence and Miss Agnes Paulton as Lieutenant Royce and Clara. Mr Herbert Linwood sang "The Death of Nelson" with spirit; a musical scena was performed by Mr Dudley Hayes; and Miss Kitty Tims cleverly treated a vocal waltz. Whimsical Walker was both comic and pathetic in a well-written little sketch; and there was also presented, for the first time on any stage, an anonymous skit, in one act, called

"MEREDITH MARRIAGES."

Mr Masterman ..... Mr HARRY PAULTON
Mr Delannay ..... Mr PHILIP WILLIAMS
Mrs Delannay ..... Miss GRACE MASSEY
Mrs Masterman..... Miss KATE CONNAUGHT

In this Mr George Meredith's recent proposal of "ten-year" marriages is amusingly ridiculed. There are two husbands, whose matrimonial unions are on the point of being dissolved on April 1, 1916, the date of the play. Mr and Mrs Masterman and Mr and Mrs Delannay have been looking forward to "changing partners;" but when the time comes they find that, on the whole, they prefer to remain as they are. The dialogue is very humorous, and the piece was neatly performed at the benefit by Mr Harry Paulton, Miss Kate Connaught, Miss Grace Massey, and Mr Philip Williams, all of whom did good service. Then followed, for the first time on any stage, a new romantic play, in four acts, by Ernest E. Norris and Fewlass Llewellyn, entitled

"A GENTLEMAN OF ENGLAND."

Geoffrey Pontifex } Mr ERNEST E. NORRIS
Captain Paul Ferdinand }
Michael I. ..... Mr FEWLASS LLEWELLYN
General Holseg ..... Mr HOWARD TEMPLETON
Major Roche ..... Mr ERNEST PERCY
Kurt..... Mr HARRY PAULTON, jun.
Maesteg ..... Mr JO MONKHOUSE
Officer ..... Mr EDWIN BENNETT
Petrovski ..... Mr PAIGE LAWRENCE
Sentry ..... Mr GERALD JORDAN
Railway Porter..... Mr PRIOR
Claudia ..... Miss KATE CONNAUGHT
Zenia ..... Mrs BENNETT

The hero of this piece is Geoffrey Pontifex, a young English gentleman, who, travelling in a European state called "Ivanland," is mistaken, on account of a remarkable personal resemblance, for a cowardly and unprincipled Captain Paul Ferdinand. In this character Pontifex is made love to by the wife of a military governor, falls in love with the absent Ferdinand's sister, Zenia, wins her affection by saving her from a bully, and fights a duel with the latter, in which, of course, Pontifex is victorious. He also frustrates a scheme on the part of the 'Ivanian" nobles to seize the Emperor and force him to abdicate. The dual-part of Pontifex and Ferdinand was sustained in the most gallant and "devil-may-care" manner by Mr Ernest E. Norris, who was equally good in the lighter and in the more serious passages; Mrs Bennett made a charming Zenia, winning all hearts by her grace and sweetness; Miss Kate Connaught put plenty of energy into her performance as Claudia; and Mr Howard Templeton's General Holseg was duly bluff and tyrannical. Mr Ernest Percy gave a graphic representation of Major Roche, and Mr Fewlass Llewellyn acted ably as the Emperor. A droll and quaint presentment of Kurt was supplied by Mr Harry Paulton, jun., and Mr Jo Monkhouse made a picturesque and impressive Maesteg. Some appropriate incidental music was supplied by Mr Joseph Nurnberger, the conductor at the Elephant and Castle. A Gentleman of England, with its stirring situations and active motion, was favourably received, and the authors may be congratulated both on their work and its interpretation. Mr Edwin Bennett, the stage-manager of the entertainment, did his duty admirably.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

SIR EDWARD CLARKE, K.C., in his eloquent speech at the Actors' Benevolent Fund dinner on Wednesday, remarked that there was no profession in the world which, while subject to much uncertainty and many anxieties, did so much to relieve the necessities of its own members as the dramatic profession did. They had only to look at The Era from week to week to see this. He was delighted, Sir Edward said, to see Mr Edward Ledger among them again in good health, for under his management The Era had been the means of bringing immediate help to members of the profession who were in difficulties. It is indeed pleasant to find our efforts to help the profession appreciated and acknowledged by so respected and famous a counsel as Sir Edward Clarke.

THE last nights of A Wife Without a Smile are announced at Wyndham's Theatre, and the piece will be withdrawn next Saturday, after about seventy performances. It is satisfactory to observe that, in spite of the "sensation" evoked by its audacity, Mr Pinero's regrettable expedient to attract the public by a doll has not proved particularly successful.

MRS KENDAL, who has been appearing at the Camden Theatre this week in The Housekeeper, recently told an amusing story at Cheetham, a town in the Manchester district. She was opening an exhibition, and the rector of the parish, in introducing Mrs Kendal, remarked that the exhibits ranged from cushions to mantraps. Mrs Kendal thereupon advised the young ladies present to bid for the mantrap. The difficulty in the first place, she said, would be to catch the man, and, in the second place, an even greater difficulty might be to keep him. When she was married, she remembered her old nurse saying, "Well, Miss Madge, you have got a husband at last, and your difficulty now will be to keep him."

SIR HENRY IRVING recently offered a valuable challenge cup for competition amongst the Dublin bands. The present holders, the Barrack-street band, deposited the cup for safe custody with Mr Flanagan, Strand-street, Dublin, who placed it in his shop. It has now been stolen by some person or persons unknown.

AMONGST the audience on the first night of Pagliacci at the Savoy Theatre, on Tuesday, were the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, Prince Francis of Teck, Lady Blanche Conyngham, Ellen Lady Inchiquin, Lady Minto, Lord and Lady Kinnoull, and Lord Kintore.

THE appeal which we made for Mr Henry Crisp has been liberally responded to, and the contributions so generously made to the fund for the blind actor by the profession amounts to over £286. The fund is now closed.

MR CYRIL MAUDE is to have a theatre of his own in London. Mr W. S. Gilbert, who built the Garrick for Mr John Hare fifteen years since, will perform a similar kind office for Mr Maude, and by Christmas, 1905, the new theatre will be ready for opening. It is to be called "The Playhouse." Pending his occupancy of the new building with his wife, Miss Winifred Emery, Mr Maude will go on tour, Miss Emery remaining in London.

MISS NORA KERIN, who plays "the perfect and peerless" Miranda at His Majesty's, has been a Shakespearian actress for nearly the whole of her five years on the stage. Although she is a cousin of Miss Lily Hanbury and Miss Hilda Jacobson, it was not the contemplation of their success which induced Miss Kerin to enter the profession, but a chance meeting with a manager, followed by "walking on." When The Royal Family was in rehearsal she happened to go to the Court Theatre to see a friend; the friend introduced her to Mr Dion Boucicault, and he, hearing that she wanted to act, kindly gave her a "thinking part" in Capt. Marshall's delightful comedy. Her second engagement was under Mr George Alexander's management, and after a year with his répertoire company she played her first Shakespearian part—Titania, in A Midsummer Night's Dream—at Manchester.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE, where Miss Kerin was educated, has been the Alma Mater of many successful actresses, including Miss Dorothy Grimstone, Mr and Mrs Kendal's daughter, and Miss Winifred Arthur-Jones and her sister. In earlier days Miss Maude Holt, long before she became Mrs Beerbohm Tree, graduated with honours from the same college. Miss Kerin will be remembered as Esther, in Ben Hur. After her engagement at Drury-lane she joined Mr George Musgrove's Shakespearian company, and played in Australia and New Zealand for over a year. The audiences "down under" are famous for their generosity in giving flowers; and Miss Kerin was presented with so many bouquets on her last night that they were lifted over the footlights on to the stage in a deck-chair. She is fond of reading, cycling, and walking, and learned to swim when she was a small child. Her one pet is a thoroughbred mongrel puppy, who is said to have devoured a fur mat and the best part of a railway-rug!

THE remains of Miss Isadore Rush, the American actress, who was recently drowned at San Diego, America, have been taken to the Eastern States by train. The deceased was "laid out" in the handsome costume that she wore as Lady Holyrood in Florodora, and many friends came to see the body before it was removed.

IN the new Haymarket Theatre, which will be opened on Jan. 2 with Beauty and the Barge, transferred from the New Theatre, the restored pit will be capable of containing nearly 200 persons. The old house could seat 988 persons, but the future limit will be 900. There are five safety exits on the stall floor, and the ventilating system is elaborate and scientific. Instead of being a three-tier house, as it has been since 1820, the new Haymarket will have only two tiers—a dress circle and a family circle, with a shilling gallery. The auditorium is decorated in gold and red, and instead of twelve boxes there will be four, adorned with golden columns. Everything used in the reconstruction will be fireproof.

THE new Waldorf Theatre, which is being built from Mr W. G. R. Sprague's plans, and under his superintendence, is now making very rapid progress, and the building has already reached the level of the family circle. The decorations and furnishings of this house will be in the Louis Quatorze period.

THE production at the Théâtre Antoine, Paris, on Monday, of the translation by MM. Pierre Loti and Emile Vedel of Shakespeare's King Lear, reminds us of the memorable revival of the piece given by Sir Henry Irving at the Lyceum Theatre on Nov. 10, 1892. In this there were sixteen changes of scene and twenty-two characters, and elaborate incidental music was furnished by Mr Hamilton Clarke. Messrs Craven and Harker specially distinguished themselves in the scenery, the Dover sets and the storm effects being extremely elaborate.

MR TREE will give three special matinées of The Tempest—which reaches its 100th performance to-day—on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, Dec. 19, 20, and 21. There will be no evening performances that week, and after the matinée on Wednesday the theatre will be closed till Boxing night, on and after which night The Tempest will be played until the evening of Saturday, Jan. 14.

SIR HENRY IRVING brings a phenomenally successful tour to a close this week at Manchester. Everywhere he has played to "record" and intensely enthusiastic audiences, the advance bookings being unprecedented. Sir Henry will make his final appearances in other provincial towns from the end of January onwards, coming to Drury-lane for a short season after Easter.

MR AND MRS EDMUND GWENN are expected to arrive in London from Australia on the 19th of this month. Mrs Gwenn is better known by her maiden name of Minnie Terry. She is a daughter of Mr Charles Terry, and will be remembered as a clever child actress, Bootles' Baby having been the principal part she played in London. When she was at the pinafore age a friend reproached her for not paying attention to what she was saying on the stage. "Oh, but my aunt Ellen and I are very unequal actresses!" was the child's calm reply.

MR EDWARD TERRY sails for America to-day, in the American liner, St. Paul, and will open his season on Christmas Eve, when he will make his first appearance in the United States in The House of Burnside at the Princess's Theatre, New York, under the management of Messrs Shubert Bros. Mr Terry will be accompanied by Mrs Terry, and will take his own company with him, including Miss Cynthia Brook, Miss Beatrice Terry, Miss Nelly Mortyne. Miss Olive Wilton, Miss Clara Earle, Mr W. H. Day, Mr William H. Denny, Mr W. F. Lovell, Mr A. Hylton Allen, Mr Arthur Cornell, Mr George Howard, Master Lorraine, with Mr Gaston Mayer as business-manager. Mrs Langtry will commence her London season at Terry's Theatre on Jan. 16, in Mrs Dering's Divorce.

MISS GERTRUDE ELLIOTT has sent the secretary of the Actors' Benevolent Fund £4 3s. 6d., which she has recently collected by selling her autographs.

MR ARTHUR BOURCHIER AND MR ALFRED SUTRO, owing to the success of The Walls of Jericho at the Garrick Theatre, have had numerous offers for the colonial and American rights. Mr James K. Hackett has secured these, and will sustain Mr Bourchier's part of Jack Frobisher. Mrs Hackett (Miss Mary Mainwaring) will play Lady Alethea. Mr Hackett joined the late Mr Augustin Daly's company when Mr Bourchier was appearing in leading rôles with Miss Ada Rehan, and he subsequently also embodied Rudolph Rassendyl, in The Prisoner of Zenda. Mr Sutro sails for New York to-day to superintend the rehearsals, which will commence immediately, with a view to the production of the play early in the New Year. Mr Robert Brough has obtained the Australian rights.

MR HAYDEN COFFIN desires us to correct a paragraph which appeared in our issue of Nov. 19 stating that he would not appear at the Apollo Theatre. This was not correct, as Mr Coffin always intended to appear at the Apollo, and will do so very shortly.

THERE are several actors in London who were educated at Neuenheim College, Heidelberg, an institution now celebrating the sixtieth year of its foundation. The Hon. William F. Coventry, a son of the Earl of Coventry, will preside at the next annual dinner of the old boys, which will be held on Jan. 7 at the Criterion, and the vice-chairmen include Mr John Hassall, R.I., the famous artist, and Mr B. Egerton, who distinguished himself as a bowler in the London Actors' cricket match last July.

"CHARLEY'S AUNT," which is being revived with so much spirit at the Comedy Theatre, has been translated into French, German, Russian, and modern Greek. It was twice played by Imperial command at the Court Theatre, Berlin, and the Kaiser laughed heartily at its drolleries. In India, in the French colony of Hainan, in Hong Kong, in Japan, and in the backwoods of America Charley's Aunt has been performed, and it has created merriment in California, Klondyke, and Louisiana. Mr Brandon Thomas, the author, was employed in a timber merchant's office in Hull, when his exploits in connection with a local amateur entertainment attracted the attention of Mrs Kendal, who happened to be present. The introduction led to his ultimate engagement to appear at the St. James's Theatre in The Ironmaster. Charley's Aunt was offered to several managers, who declined it unanimously. Then a City financier, who became Mr Thomas's backer, put down £1,000, which has since been returned to him nearly forty-fold. Mr Thomas is an enthusiastic volunteer officer, and is widely known as a generous and thoroughly good "fellow."

MR G. M. POLINI, the well-known and popular manager, will take a répertoire company to Egypt in the early spring, giving a cycle of dramatic performances at Cairo and Alexandra, and calling at Malta and Gibraltar on the way back. Mr Polini was for many years general manager for the late Mr Wilson Barrett, with whom he was on exceedingly friendly terms, and has done much with his partner, Mr Austin Melford, to popularise Mr Barrett's plays in both London and the provinces.

IN the cast of Mr Berte Thomas's comedy The Little Brown Branch, at the Court Theatre on Wednesday afternoon, will be found Mr Grahame Browne, Mr Berte Thomas, Mr Slaine Mills, Mr Charles Allan, Mr William Farren, jun., Miss Agnes Thomas, Miss Bessie Page, Miss Kate Mills, Miss Winifred Fraser, and Miss Frances Ivor.

THE Playgoers' Club has for the past three years given an entertainment annually to raise funds to send a number of poor children to the pantomimes. Last Sunday evening it gave its usual concert with that object at His Majesty's Theatre, which was kindly lent by Mr Beerbohm Tree. The Playgoers' Club Pantomime Fund for Poor Children will doubtless benefit liberally by the generous exertions of the executive committee and of the artists who so kindly gave their services to the entertainment. The vocalists were Miss Marie Brema, Madame Alice Esty, Madame Lillian Blauvelt, Miss Florence and Miss Bertha Salter, Mr Frangçon Davies, Mr Lloyd Chandos, and Mr Charles Copland. The instrumental music was supplied by the London Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Sir Alexander Mackenzie, assisted by Mr Arthur Payne. Mr William Green was announced to appear, but was unfortunately prevented from doing so by a cold; and Miss Ada Crossley was unable for certain reasons to contribute to the programme.

THE band played seven selections in fine style; and Sir Alexander Mackenzie conducted his own overture, "Cricket on the Hearth," Mr E. German his Henry VIII. dances, and Mr Arthur Hervey his overture, "Youth." Madame Alice Esty was warmly applauded for her singing of "Ah fors è lui," and gave Tosti's "Good-bye" in answer to urgent demands for an encore. Madame Blauvelt supplied a delightful rendering of Liza Lehmann's "Spinning Song," and Miss Marie Brema sang "Sweet Isle" and a "Battle Hymn," both by Dr. Stanford, most artistically, the last item exciting intense enthusiasm. Mr Lloyd Chandos and Mr Davies contributed most valuably. The programmes were adorned by some excellent sketches by Mr Frank Chesworth. A number of professional ladies sold these pretty programmes, and reaped quite a little harvest for the Fund. It will be remembered that last December £728 was obtained for the Fund by the Playgoers' Club, and over 12,000 youngsters were taken to the pantomime and provided with a hearty meal.

MR BEERBOHM TREE will produce Mrs Humphry Ward and Mr Louis N. Parker's play, Agatha, at His Majesty's Theatre in February, with Miss Viola Tree in the principal part.

MR W. S. PENLEY was nominated for election as grand treasurer at the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge of Mark Masons of England, which was held last Tuesday night at Mark Masons' Hall, with the Earl of Euston, pro-Grand Master, in the chair.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE has, by arrangement with Mr Frank Curzon, been taken by Mr Charles E. Hamilton for a period of five weeks for the new play Peggy Machree, by Mr Patrick Bidwell, which will have its first London production on or about Boxing Day. Peggy Machree is a play with music, and the scene is laid in Ireland in the middle of the eighteenth century. The company is headed by Mr Denis O'Sullivan, who is supported by Miss Marie Dainton. The incidental music has been arranged by Signor Michele Esposito.

MR MARTIN HARVEY, in response to the continued applause and recalls of a large and enthusiastic audience at the close of the last performance of The Breed of the Treshams on Saturday night last at the Theatre Royal, Belfast, said—"Ladies and gentlemen, I should like to thank you, before our very brief visit to you comes to an end, for the very great pleasure it has been to my fellow-workers and myself to have had an opportunity of appearing before you again. It was our regret and our loss, ladies and gentlemen, that it was not possible to renew our visit to your city long before, and we can only sincerely hope that it may not be so long before we have another opportunity (A voice—"You are welcome"). It was our great regret, too, ladies and gentlemen, that we were unable to present to you the last work we produced, namely, Hamlet, but it was found impossible at a very late hour to so adapt our scenery as to make it possible to put it on in your theatre. It was our privilege to receive approval of that work, and we can only hope that it may be our privilege to have an opportunity of submitting it to you. I hope that sometimes you will remember that other play which it was our privilege to put before you some four or five years ago, The Only Way. I am glad to see it still holds some place in your remembrance. With these few words I bid you all good night, and beg to assure you we shall all look forward to an early return."

THE building of Mr Seymour Hicks's new theatre in Aldwych is now proceeding apace, and Mr W. G. R. Sprague, the architect, is using every effort to have the theatre completed at the earliest possible date. The theatre will certainly be one of the most beautiful and well-equipped playhouses in London, and will be replete with all that modern science and experience can supply.

MR ARTHUR CARLTON recently made application to the Birmingham magistrates to withdraw the restriction imposed with respect to the Carlton Theatre, Saltley, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drink. In asking for the removal of the restriction, he said he thought he was a truer advocate of temperance than the members of the deputation. He could not see that the cause of temperance was served by driving people out of the theatre into the neighbouring public-houses.

THE children's fancy dress ball in aid of the League of Mercy (Strand district) which will be held at the Hotel Cecil on the 29th inst., has been arranged by the youngest lady vice-presidents of the league, Miss Irene Hentschel, daughter of Mr Carl Hentschel, and Miss Doris Joel, daughter of Mr S. B. Joel, and will be under the patronage of the Countess Grosvenor, Dora Countess of Chesterfield, Lady Evelyn Ewart, and the Dowager Lady Lamington.

MISS EDNA MAY has brought a second action for divorce in New York against her husband, Mr Fred Titus, naming Miss Mona Desmond as co-respondent. It will be remembered that the first action for divorce brought by Miss May two years ago did not come on for trial.

MR GEORGE MOZART, who will play the leading part in the pantomime, The Babes in the Wood, at the Grand Theatre, Islington, was at one time in the army as a bandsman. He remained with the Colours until he was promoted sergeant, and was always termed the "Dan Leno" of the British Army.

THE Gaiety company arrived home last Saturday from South Africa, after a most successful tour there extending over eighteen months. The following are members of the company:—Messrs V. Gourlet, A. Grover, M. Clifton, E. Colman, H. Cropton, M. Graham, Lloyd, M'Ewan; Misses N. Brocklebank, M. Marsland, G. Lester, N. Palmer, Pollard, F. Haydon, V. Moors, N. Osborne, D. Campbell, F. Cullen, E. Risby, and K. Hamlyn. Mr George H. Smith, associate manager to Messrs B. and F. Wheeler, will return to London to-day.

MISS ADELA VERNE, who gave a grand orchestral concert at St. James's Hall on Thursday evening, is the youngest of a particularly clever trio of sisters. Of English birth, but German descent, they are all accomplished musicians. Miss Marie Wurm—as the name was originally spelt—is one of the few women who have had the honour of winning the Mendelssohn Scholarship. Miss Mathilde was a favourite pupil of the late Madame Schumann, with whom she studied for several years in Leipsic, making her début as a pianiste about fifteen years ago. Miss Adela has perhaps achieved the greatest success, having travelled extensively, and given many pianoforte recitals in London.

MR PHILIP CARR will put on Vanbrugh's Confederacy at the Royalty Theatre for an extra week beginning on Monday, with matinées on Wednesday and Saturday. Mr Carr will also revive The Knight of the Burning Pestle, with Mrs Theodore Wright as the Citizen's Wife, every evening from Boxing Day onwards. On the afternoon of Christmas Eve and daily during the holidays there will be performed Snowdrop and the Seven Little Men, written by Mr Carr and composed by Mr C. W. Smith.

REV. FORBES PHILLIPS, vicar of Gorlestone and playwright, will read a paper on "Church and Stage" to the members of the Playgoers' Club at the Hotel Cecil to-morrow.

MR IVAN BERLYN, who has been playing Parker and stage-managing Mrs Dering's Divorce, with Mrs Langtry, has been unable to accept that lady's kind offer to accompany her to Terry's Theatre, owing to a prior engagement with Mr George Dance for the rôle of Louslot, in Véronique.—Mr W. V. Garrod has kindly been released by Messrs Polini and Melford from the last week of their Silver King tour, to enable him to conduct the rehearsals of The Sledge-Hammer, which is to be revived at the West London Theatre on the 19th inst. Mr Garrod has played the Spider in The Silver King for twenty-one weeks.—Mr Cecil A. Melton, who has for some time been playing lead in Her Second Time on Earth, has been retained by Mr Walter Melville for A Girl's Cross Roads.—Mr Henry Crocker, who is playing in Richard Lovelace, also stage-managing for Mr Laurence Irving, has again been engaged by Mr Edward Compton to play his old parts of Sir Peter Teazle and Sir Anthony Absolute.

A HALF-YEARLY general meeting of the Touring Managers' Association will be held at the Tavistock Hotel, Covent-garden, on Friday next, Dec. 16, at half-past twelve p.m.

MR FORBES-ROBERTSON, who leaves England on the 24th inst., will produce on Jan. 9 at Toronto Mr H. V. Esmond's new modern play, in five acts, entitled Love and the Man. Mr Robertson will include in his company Miss Kate Rorke, Miss Madge M'Intosh, and Mr Frank Gillmore. Mr Forbes-Robertson will also visit New York, returning to London shortly after Easter.

MR KYRLE BELLEW will appear in London next autumn, under the direction of Mr Charles Frohman, in a play called Ruffles, based on Mr F. W. Hornung's novel, "The Amateur Cracksman."

MR WILFRED DRAYCOTT, who is now touring Australia in The Marriage of Kitty, under the management of Mr J. C. Williamson, has been giving some reminiscences to the colonial interviewers. He was sent to Oxford to study for the Church, but the attractions of the stage proved irresistible. He has had many years' experience of the ups and downs of the profession in England, and has played everything from pantomime to tragedy. He has been much struck in Australia by the rarity of clergymen at theatrical performances. In England they are now often seen amongst the audience. The former prejudice against the stage in the old country had practically died out. Mr Draycott is an enthusiastic botanist, and Australia is affording him ample fields of fresh study and experience in that science.

PADEREWSKI was closing his triumphant tour of Australia and New Zealand at latest mail advices. Not only has he added considerably to his private banking account, but is also bringing home a substantial contribution to the Chopin memorial in Warsaw, through the sale of his autographs at half-a-crown to a host of admiring Antipodeans. As a piece of farewell advice to young Australian musicians, the famous Polish pianist remarked: "Let your young students place the search for and the cult of the beautiful before all else. Unless they have the sense of this they will never be true musicians. Technique and execution alone never did make an artist. Be conscientious, too. Without that you will never do any good. Study, hard and unceasing, is the only way to success."

MR LEWIS WALLER will close the Imperial Theatre after this evening, but will reopen the house on Boxing Day with His Majesty's Servant, which will be followed by an elaborate revival of Henry V., which Mr Waller produced at the Lyceum about four years since. Mr Waller will, of course, repeat his fine and spirited impersonation of the leading character.

AT the Gymnase Theatre at Liege recently, as a performance was coming to an end, smoke was seen to issue from one of the boxes, an occupant of which had slipped a lighted cigar into his pocket. His clothing took fire, and the sight of the smoke caused a panic in the audience. The smoker put out the fire himself, burning his hands badly in the act.

MISS JULIA KENT, who will appear in the forthcoming pantomime, The Babes in the Wood, at the Grand Theatre, Islington, acted as leading lady in all the plays produced by the Marquess of Anglesea. On one occasion the noble Earl had a particular desire to see what his part seemed like from the front of the house, and called upon Miss Kent at two hours' notice to play it, and sing five or six special songs. This she did most successfully, and was presented by him at the conclusion of the evening with a magnificent diamond bracelet.

MISS TOTS DAVIS, who is appearing in a leading character, Maid Marion, in the forthcoming pantomime The Babes in the Wood at the Grand Theatre, Islington, commenced her stage career at the age of four. At the age of seven she occupied the principal character in the pantomime at the Crown Theatre, Peckham, and at once jumped right into popular favour, gaining for herself the title of the "Pride of Peckham." This year is her first as an adult actress, as she has hitherto played child's parts in pantomimes.

THE King and Queen of Portugal and suite visited the Gaiety Theatre on the 2nd inst., and witnessed the performance of The Orchid.—The Duke and Duchess of Connaught and suite were present at the performances of The Decree Nisi and Lady Windermere's Fan at the St. James's Theatre on Monday evening.

MR T. EDWARD WARD'S social drama, Her Fatal Past, by Nita Rae, concludes to-night its first autumn tour of nineteen weeks at the Clarence Theatre, Pontypridd. Financially the tour has been a successful one, as, out of the nineteen weeks' run, no less than twelve return dates have been arranged at increased percentages. Mr and Mrs Ward will, after a short holiday, resume their tour for the spring, commencing Boxing Night at Luton. The bookings for the play extend as far ahead as March 6, 1906, when it is due to appear at the Theatre Royal, Coatbridge.

MR AUGUSTE VAN BIENE and company will leave England early in January for an Australian tour, under the direction of Mr George Musgrove.

MR G. H. SMITH, who is an executor of the late Wilson Barrett's estate, also the associate manager of Messrs B. and F. Wheeler, the well-known South African entrepreneurs, will arrive this morning from Cape Town by the ss. Walmer Castle. The Lyric Theatre will be Mr Smith's headquarters while in London.

MR W. G. R. SPRAGUE has been appointed by the officers in command at Woolwich to rebuild the Royal Artillery Theatre, destroyed by fire some time ago. The theatre will be reconstructed on the latest up-to-date lines, and will be built of fire-resisting materials, and without columns. The theatre will be handsomely decorated and furnished throughout, and will be installed with the electric light. Arrangements have been made to convert the whole of the pit level and stage into a ballroom for special occasions. Mr Sprague's plans are now completed, and the work of clearing the site was commenced last week.

AN old Melbourne playgoer, writing over the signature of "Autolycus," is contributing an interesting series of articles to the Melbourne Argus on the theatrical life of that city in the sixties. A curious episode of that time was the strenuous Shakespearian rivalry between Charles Kean and Barry Sullivan, who were playing simultaneously in that city. When Kean produced one of the Bard's works at the Haymarket Sullivan promptly presented the same play at the Royal. Excitement ran high, and Melbourne's playgoing population was divided into two factions akin to the Montagues and the Capulets—the Keanites and the Sullivanites. Of course, each faction claimed supremacy for its own idol, and if the higher interests of the drama were not appreciably promoted by the competition between the two stars, the treasury of both theatres had no reason to complain of the boom.

"AUTOLYCUS"—who, by-the-way, is said to be the veteran Australian critic, Dr. J. E. Neild, now in his eighty-first year—makes no secret of his belief that Sullivan was the superior. He says, "Charles Kean was not a great actor. It was the 'glamour of his illustrious father's achievements that secured him a passport to public favour.' He was small in stature, delicate in physique, and 'lacked the fiery ardour which stage historians record as the distinctive attributes of his father.' But," he adds, "Charles Kean was a gentleman endowed with the most amiable social qualities, and Mrs Kean was acknowledged on all hands as 'one of the great actresses of the period.'"

MR LAURENCE IRVING, who is cast for Don John, in the revival of Much Ado About Nothing, at His Majesty's, made his first appearance before an audience in comic opera. It was in the days of his earliest youth, at an amateur performance of H.M.S. Pinafore. His brother Harry played Captain Corcoran, and the two seamen were Master Max Beerbohm and Master Laurence Irving. The younger son of Sir Henry Irving celebrates his birthday on the 21st of this month. He is the author of several plays, and married to Miss Mabel Hackney.

MR DENIS O'SULLIVAN, who will be seen at Wyndham's after Christmas, in Peggy Machree, is a good boxer, and belonged, before he left San Francisco, to the Olympic, one of the most noted athletic clubs in America. His unusual strength served him in good stead on a certain occasion when he was travelling in Massachusetts. One night, in a small hotel, the door of his room was forced open and a man staggered in. Mr O'Sullivan, of course, ordered him to go at once. The stranger refused, and a short and sharp struggle ensued, in which the singer, although considerably knocked about, was ultimately the victor. He discovered the following morning that his opponent was the champion middle-weight of New England.

MR MARTIN HARVEY will conclude his autumn tour, previous to his taking a Christmas vacation, with a week at the Coronet Theatre, where he will open on Monday. During his visit he will play only The Breed of the Treshams, which has met with so much success throughout histour.

MR WILLARD'S opening date at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York, has been changed from Jan. 30 to Jan. 23, and the engagement is now for five weeks instead of four.

MR WILL SPRAY, who plays Fontinbras, in The Orchid, at the Gaiety Theatre, and understudies Mr Edmund Payne, will be at the Grand Theatre Fulham, for pantomime, his second season with Mr Robert Arthur.—Mr Sydney Stirling has been engaged by Miss Julia Neilson and Mr Fred Terry for the forthcoming production at the New Theatre in January.—Mr Campbell Bishop has just finished a most successful fifteen months' engagement as Admiral Lord Belton, in Mr Tom B. Davis's The Medal and the Maid company, and is engaged by Mr Frank Curzon to play Mr Crank, the magistrate, in his Sergeant Brue company on tour.

MR STANLEY COOKE, who made his reappearance in Charley's Aunt at the Comedy Theatre on Monday, registered his 1,475th performance of the part of Lord Fancourt Babberley. A period of just seven years has elapsed since Mr Cooke last played it. In the interval he has made successes in a variety of characters both in London and the provinces. At Wyndham's Theatre, under Sir Charles Wyndham's management, he played Lieutenant Darby, in Mr Pinero's Dandy Dick, and followed this with seasons at the Criterion and Court Theatres. After this he fulfilled starring engagements in the principal towns with Mr George Edwardes's original Toreador company, in Miss Francis of Yale, Facing the Music, and The Lady of Ostend. He produced The Wild Rabbit at the Criterion Theatre, playing the principal comedy character; and did The Lady Doctor, a duologue, at the London Pavilion. Until a few weeks ago he has been touring The New Clown, in conjunction with Mr Herbert Greville, playing Lord Cyril Garston.

COLONEL MAPLESON has left Paris to complete the arrangements for the establishment of a permanent French theatre in London to be open all the year round. The French supporters desire to provide the artists, plays, and costumes, Col. Mapleson finding the London theatre, the scenery, and the local expenses.

MR ROBERT ARTHUR'S first Coronet Christmas pantomime, to be produced on Christmas Eve, will be on the subject of "Little Red Riding Hood," and the cast will include Messrs Johnny Schofield, J. J. Dallas, Hy. Phydora, Maitland Marler, A. Chapman, and Misses Madge Vincent, Valli Valli, Dora and Ada Fraser It is to be produced on a lavish scale of magnificence.

MR ERNEST DOTTRIDGE will produce at the Queen's Theatre, Manchester, on Monday, his pantomime of The Forty Thieves.

MESSRS BENNETT AND BENNETT have arranged for a sixth annual benefit in aid of the Bolingbroke Hospital at the Shakespeare on Monday, Dec. 19. This is an event the patrons of the Shakespeare Theatre look forward to annually, and it will be this year under distinguished patronage. The following artistes have kindly consented to appear:—Miss Mabel Love, Mr Lionel Brough, Chirgwin, Miss May Alstree, Mr Harry Phydora, Miss Kate Chard, Mr H. O. Clarey, Miss Italia Conti, Mr Frank Cooper, Les Four Papillons, Mr Ben Albert, Miss Gwennie Harcourt, Mr Rudolph Kloss, Mr Henri Cazman, and Mr Pat Doherty.

THE management of the German Theatre will produce at the Gt. Queen-street Theatre on Monday, for the first time in this country, Otto Erich Hartleben's cycle of three one-act plays, collectively called Die Befreiten, the best known of which is that delightful satire on pedantry, Die Geschichte vom Abgerissenen Knopfe, and that grim little tragedy, Der Abschied vom Regiment. This will be followed by that delightful military comedy, Militarfromm. On Wednesday Einsame Menschen will be given for one performance, and on Thursday Die Goldene Spinne, a farce in four acts, by F. V. Schonthan, will be played for the first time.

MR W. R. ROBINS, now in his eighty-second year, a colleague of Phelps, Charles Kean, and Webster, celebrates an unusual event, viz., his diamond wedding, on the 22nd inst.

MISS MARY F. SANDARS, in her recently published book on Balzac, gives an amusing description of the first performance of the novelist's drama, Vautrin. "All the seats," she writes, "were sold beforehand. Many of them were parted with at a profit, and in the end a large proportion of the spectators were avowedly hostile to Balzac. He was nervous beforehand, and told Goslan that he was afraid there would be a terrible disaster. The theatre was crowded for the performance, and the three first acts, though received coldly, went off without interruption. At the fourth act the storm burst, as Frédérick Le Maître, who evidently felt qualms about the success of his part, had determined to make it comic, and appeared in the stage costume of a Mexican General, with a hat trimmed with white feathers, surmounted by a bird of paradise! Worse still, when he took off this hat he showed a coiffure which was the special prerogative of Louis Philippe. It was difficult to finish the performance, so loud were the shouts, hisses, threats.

"GOSLAN went to see Balzac the day after the performance, and found him outwardly calm. He did not mention the scene of the night before, but talked eagerly of a plan to start a large dairy and to provide Paris and Versailles with rich milk. The Director of the Beaux-Arts was sent to offer Balzac money to make up for his loss. He says, 'They came to offer me an indemnity, and began by proposing five thousand francs. I answered that I did not accept charity, that for three months I had done nothing but rehearse Vautrin, and that during those three months I should otherwise have gained twenty-five thousand francs.' "This," said the Director of the Beaux-Arts, "is the first time that I have been refused." "So much the worse," I answered.'"

HENRY IRVING AT MANCHESTER.

SIR HENRY IRVING, at a luncheon at which he was entertained on Friday at the Town Hall, Manchester, by the Lord Mayor of that city, said:—I would it were in my power to express my appreciation of the honour you pay me to-day. The playgoers of Manchester were among my earliest friends—among the first to stimulate my ambition by their generous encouragement, and the first when success came to crown it by inspiriting and ungrudging recognition—and that recognition you have generously and graciously given to-day as Chief Magistrate of this great city. As I look back, the Manchester that I first knew in 1860 was not the Manchester it is now. This magnificent block of municipal buildings did not exist. There was no pure stream in adequate, or, perhaps, almost adequate, degree for the needs of the people from distant Thirlmere. There were no electric lights, no tramways—there was no municipal trading, and let me say in almost a whisper on this sacred spot—there was no Lord Mayor. My presence here to-day indicates considerable change in the civic point of view concerning actors. It is your business, my Lord Mayor, to exercise the functions of local government; and perhaps I may say, without any personal inflation, that the great honour you have done this afternoon to a strolling player is one of those functions, and not the least memorable. But there was a time when members of my calling, if they had been asked what they understood by local government, would not have said that it was an invitation to lunch with the Mayor. They would have said it was much more likely to be an order to put them in the stocks. Don't let us speak ill of the stocks. They afforded time for repose and meditation to many eminent men. Charles Lamb, who loved actors, and wrote glorious notices of their acting—he was once put in the stocks on a Sunday morning; I don't exactly know what for—but it was some slight to the principles of local government. But Lamb, I fancy, would be rather astonished if he could turn up now and find an actor discoursing on public affairs in this municipal chamber, with no minions of the law awaiting to pounce on him. You may recollect that when Garrick ventured to remonstrate with Junius, that amiable censor of manners retorted, "Fool, stick to your pantomimes!" And I suppose that if the ghost of Junius were lurking hereabouts, he would be strongly of opinion that the stocks were much too good for me.

And now, my Lord Mayor, you know what is coming.

I hinted it a few nights ago to a joyous company of Manchester men, and they bore it quite cheerfully. Does not Manchester pride itself, and with justice, on its interest in the arts? And if a theatre were organised as a branch of local government, you would organise theatrical taste—not all, but the best of it, on a high plane. So vast has been the progress of the last forty years, I will venture to say, that in a lesser time you will have in this great city a municipal theatre built and endowed for the common good—for the enlightenment and cultivation of the people, for the formation and preserving of a standard of taste to encourage thought and respect for conscious and organised effort for the cultivation of imagination. You would maintain a body of actors who would have a real and continuous opportunity of learning their profession. Some despairing people complain that the stage now gets the wrong kind of recruits. I don't think there is so much the matter with the recruits as with the training that is given to them. I know that when I was a young recruit in Manchester I had more chance of learning my business in a single season than most young men and women have of learning now on the stage in the course of years. In those days the apprentice did not become an actor as soon as his or her photograph had appeared in the illustrated papers. When your local government, my Lord Mayor, has flowered in the theatre, it may be well to make a regulation that no member of the company shall have a portrait in the illustrated papers without a certificate of merit and experience from the manager.

There are philosophers, I know, who still hold that an actor can never be any good unless he remain in the wild Bohemian state; and I dare say they will warn you that as a local government official he will lose that fine, careless rapture which makes his charm for the decorous citizens when they go to the play. Well, I have a friend, a comedian, who has performed the duties of Poor-law guardian, I believe, with the highest credit, and without cheating the playgoing public out of a single honest laugh. We know that when you have made the theatre a civic institution in Manchester the principal actor will not be elected some day by acclamation as Lord Mayor, on account of his mastery of local affairs and his real administrative gift? You may say that it might be a disadvantage to him to belong to a political party in order to qualify for office. But do not tell me that his political opponents, who had voted against his election, would revenge themselves by flocking to the theatre to groan at his Hamlet. I have too much faith in the artistic sense of Manchester to fear that!

The whirligig of time would bring in his revenges, indeed, my Lord Mayor, when an actor sat in your chair instead of in the stocks. I do not expect to live long enough to see it. But I have had abundant opportunity these many years to appreciate the stimulus which Manchester gives to the artistes, and to-day I know that the number of my friends in this city is even greater than I had dreamed. Sir, I am deeply grateful for the kindly and eloquent things you have said about my work. It has at least enabled me to reap such a harvest of friendship and goodwill as should content the most ambitious; and that, believe me, to the actor whose labours are drawing to an end, is the most precious of all the rewards that life can give.

This has been to me a memorable and delightful occasion, my Lord Mayor, to have the opportunity of meeting this distinguished company, and I thank you with all my heart, and for my friends and comrades whom you have honoured with invitations, for the gracious hospitality you have so bountifully extended to us.

ACTORS' BENEVOLENT FUND.

The fourth annual dinner of the Actors' Benevolent Fund was held at the Hotel Metropole on Wednesday night. Sir Edward Clarke, K.C., occupied the chair, and those present included Mr George Alexander, Mr John Hare, Mr Eldon Bankes, K.C., Mr Comyns Carr, Mr R. Hammond Chambers, K.C., Sir Homewood Crawford, Mr Ben Davies, Mr B. F. Hawksley, Mr Sidney Lee, Colonel Clifford Probyn, Mr Edward Ledger, Mr James Welch, Mr Morris Abrahams, Mr H. W. Mote, Mr Herbert Swears, Mr Chas. Cruikshanks, Mr Horace Marriott, Mr C. T. Hemsley, Mr Henry Evill, Mr W. Hann, Mr C. A. Hanson, Mr E. C. Silverthorne, Mr A. B. Tapping, Mr C. Cooper, Mr C. J. Davies, Dr. Middlemist, Mr G. Boydell Houghton, Mr J. C. Parkinson, and Mr C. I. Coltson (secretary).

The CHAIRMAN, in proposing the toast of "The King," which was enthusiastically honoured, said his Majesty was a generous patron of the drama and of the Actors' Benevolent Fund.

The toast, as well as that of "The Queen and the Prince and Princess of Wales," was loyally honoured.

The CHAIRMAN, in proposing "The Actors' Benevolent Fund," mentioned that he had received a telegram from New York from Miss Mary Moore, stating that she was posting ten guineas for the fund, and a letter from Mr Beerbohm Tree, who explained as the reason for his absence that he was celebrating the birthday of one of his daughters, enclosing a cheque for £20.

The CHAIRMAN, in proposing the toast of "The Actors' Benevolent Fund," said that one did not like to strike a note of sadness on an occasion such as this, but there were two names he should like to mention—two good friends lost to them—to whom a tribute of regard and gratitude was due. One was Mr Wilson Barrett, for many years a generous contributor to the Fund, and who left a legacy that was of substantial advantage to it. Mr Barrett had been his friend for many years. He was a courageous, upright, and generous man, an actor of great ability, for no one who ever saw him play in The Manxman, or, in earlier days, The Silver King, would question his right to be ranked as a great actor. He passed through some heavy trials, but he believed that no man had departed leaving behind him amongst his fellows a more kindly feeling of regard and admiration than was associated with the memory of Wilson Barrett. Although not so well known as an actor, Mr F. A. Scudamore, who died a short time ago, was for many years a diligent worker in the administration of the charities of the Fund. He was always regular in his attendance at the committee meetings, and always anxious to carry out in the true spirit of charity the objects of the Fund. He intended to make a very practical speech, for he held it was an occasion for a practical speech. It would, of course, be possible for him to indulge himself in observations in regard to the present condition of the drama, the dramatic art, and the like; but although they were that night in a peaceful harbour there were submarine mines about, and an unconscious word on his part might produce an explosion. The question whether the plays were too good for the actors or the actors too good for the plays was one which could be discussed anywhere, but perhaps the discussion would not contribute to the harmony of the evening. At a later period, after the subscription-forms had been filled up, other speakers might venture to be less discreet, and, indeed, he should like to listen to a vivacious discussion on the subject. His duty was to get every shilling he could for the Fund. He did not address himself so much to the company before him as to the public through the Press, which on the morrow would bring some of the generous help which was so sorely needed at this time of the year. They had to congratulate themselves that in Royalty they had a generous benefactor, and that the stage was in such a condition that its exponents were accepted upon their merits as the representatives of a great profession, and entitled to take their share with other professions in the regard and honour which belonged to all who did their work well in life. The stage had become somewhat the fashion. Society had taken upon itself to accept the stage and its representatives as they should be accepted. That was not without its disadvantages. The stage considered as a working profession had not been greatly advantaged by the popularity and prestige it had obtained. The well-endowed amateur had made his way to the ranks of the profession, and those who were its hard-worked members might be somewhat embarrassed by his competition. The dramatic art was very tempting. The rewards of success were flattering, and the tribute paid to success was one that came constantly again and again. Success, too, often came early before a man had got tired of his work, and was able to enjoy the success when it came. There was another side to the picture. He did not know how the profession to which he belonged would like an invasion of its ranks by young, well-endowed men, who were able to give fees to the solicitor for allowing them to appear, and by dint of those fees and an occasional tip to the solicitor's managing clerk were able to get good opportunities of distinction in the courts. He did not think that would raise the art of advocacy, and he was sure it would interfere with the ordinary hard-working barrister who was striving to make his living in a very respectable, if not equally remunerative, calling. It was the same with the stage, and he could not doubt that the proper trade of the dramatic art was interfered with by these bounty-fed goods—good, bad, and indifferent—who came into competition with them. Another drawback was that these exponents of the dramatic art were expected to take a somewhat undue share in the charitable movements of the world. Whenever there was a great fête or bazaar hard-working actors and actresses were appealed to to sacrifice their time and energies, and were rarely appealed to in vain. A very great deal of support was given to charitable institutions in this way, but it was a severe burden upon the profession, which was after all one of singular uncertainty and trial. Apart from those who had attained the highest sphere of work the position of the actor or actress was a very anxious one. Engagements had to be made a considerable time in advance, and one never knew how long the run of a play might last. A noisy gallery on a first night or something else might put an end to hopes of a success, and the actors might be out of an engagement for months. The mystery of why plays succeeded or failed would never be cleared up; and he was afraid too, that the country theatre had been in a very unsatisfactory state during the past season. Tours in the provinces were arranged, but audiences did not come and no money was forthcoming; and the players found themselves suddenly cast adrift, having in most cases to wait many anxious weeks before getting another engagement. This was one of the difficulties of the profession which could not be avoided. Its success, as a whole, depended very much on the prosperity of the community. We were passing through a time of depression, and those who suffered first were those who ministered to the desires and enjoyments of the people which could most easily be dispensed with. The theatre suffered more perhaps than anything else, and at the present time there was a great deal of pressure upon the Fund. There were some actors who were opposed to making an appeal to the public on behalf of the profession. He honoured the feeling, but he did not sympathise with it. It was the public who enjoyed the pleasure given by the dramatic art, and it was ridiculous to say that they should not contribute to the needs of the profession. There was no profession in the world which, while subject to much uncertainty and many anxieties, did so much to relieve the necessities of its own members. They had only to look at The Era from week to week. He was delighted to see Mr Edward Ledger among them again in good health, for under his management The Era was often the means of bringing immediate aid to members of their profession who were in difficulties. With regard to the Fund, help was given in a friendly spirit. He would make a practicable proposal. He did not see why they should not make their appeal for subscriptions to society ladies as well as to wealthy men, and he proposed an application should be sent to each of those ladies who during the year appealed for and obtained the help of the profession for their bazaars. The Fund was at this moment in special need. Between seventy and eighty old actors and actresses received weekly allowances so long as the Fund was able to afford them, and every week brought to the secretary twenty or thirty applications from those in immediate want. It was a great work, and it was done in the best way. It was done sympathetically and secretly, no names being mentioned publicly. Help was given as a friend would help a friend; and it would be a lamentable thing if the Fund had to suspend its grants for want of money. Depression in the dramatic world had the result of increasing the claims made upon the charity, but limited the capacity of the profession in supporting its requirements. He trusted that the dinner would result in the raising of a liberal sum for the benefit of the Fund.

Mr SIDNEY LEE, in proposing the toast of "The Drama," said that, though the fame of England owed a good deal to its Army, Navy, and commerce, it owed most of all to its drama. To whatever part of the world they might like to go, they would find that people were always ready to acknowledge that one English dramatist had achieved the high water mark of dramatic perfection. It was a great satisfaction to know that in London two plays of Shakespeare were running on the stage with great success in every possible way. Even the Germans had only one complaint to make against Shakespeare—that he had the bad taste to be born an Englishman. A few weeks ago the Russian Ambassador sent to him a translation of Hamlet by a Grand Duke, a cousin of the Czar, to be presented to the trustees of the poet's birthplace at Stratford-on-Avon. Shakespeare was but one of the great galaxy of dramatists of the Elizabethan era, and a very promising experiment was being made by the production of old plays in London under the direction of Mr Philip Carr, whose father would respond to the toast. He recognised that they must have a living drama, and that they could not depend on their past only. It was a source of satisfaction to see with what glorious energy Sir Henry Irving was still maintaining the great traditions of the English stage. He certainly believed in the genius of Mr John Hare and Mr George Alexander, and he did did not think the repute of the English drama need fear much while two such plays as Lady Windermere's Fan and Mr Bernard Shaw's Candida were running.

Mr COMYNS CARR, in responding, said he did not hesitate to say that if there was a failure in the theatre it was due to the actors and not to the play. He had written plays, and, on those rare occasions when they had not been successful, he had never hesitated to come to the conclusion that the fault was due to the actors and not to him. There were many signs at this present time that others thought as he did. He had lately perused in The Times a controversy which seemed to be raging between Mr Tree and Mr Henry Arthur Jones as to whether actors were bad or plays were bad. It seemed to him that Mr Jones had never captured the right answer to Mr Tree, who, by founding an Academy of Dramatic Art, had acknowledged that the fault lay not with the author. He desired to point out that he had been betrayed by the secretary. He first heard that this toast would be proposed by Mr Mathews, one of the most accomplished and polished speakers at the bar. Then a rumour reached him that Mr Mathews would not propose the toast, and the speech he had prepared in anticipation of Mr Mathews's remarks was quite useless. Next he heard it was to be proposed by Lord Rosebery, and he was prepared for that. Then came the report that Mr Chamberlain would submit the toast and introduce his Fiscal policy, and he was prepared for that. But he was not prepared for a speech from Mr Sidney Lee or to return thanks for the drama as represented by Shakespeare. Neither was he prepared to admit that the drama of to-day was either decadent or despairing. Men had made the mistake of supposing that the arts advanced, like the sciences, step by step; but there might come again such a glorious epoch of the drama as that which had been referred to by Mr Sidney Lee in submitting the toast.

Mr C. CRUIKSHANKS, in responding for the Fund, related an anecdote showing the generous nature of the late Wilson Barrett. On one occasion he declined to appear at a benefit performance, but promised £50 should it not take place, as seemed probable. However, the benefit did come off, and Mr Barrett handed over the cheque all the same. Mr Cruikshanks also told a capital story at the expense of Mr James Welch, who sat next him at the table. During his recent stay at Kingston, said Mr Cruikshank, Mr Welch had cause to go to the barber's, and to fall into conversation during the progress of a shave. "I hear you've got a part in the Drury-lane pantomime," said the barber. In his modesty, Mr Welch disclaimed the honour. "No," said he, "that's not me. That's a cousin of mine of the same name." "Ah," replied the barber, "I thought that must be so. You see, me and my missis, we've seen you act!" Referring to the controversy going on in the pages of The Era with regard to the Fund and how it was to be made self-supporting, he said he felt a certain amount of shame in responding to the toast, because they had to appeal to the generous public for support. They had been told that the profession numbered some twenty or thirty thousand people, and yet, according to the secretary, no more than eight or nine hundred supported the Benevolent Fund. He considered that that was disgraceful. As to relief granted in deserving cases, it really ought to be five times the amount. A writer in The Era had suggested that there should be an amalgamation of the funds, and that they should one day in the year take off their coats and work for the lot. Well, his reply was that the committee were working all the year round, and not one day only. In conclusion, Mr Cruikshanks announced that a sum of nearly £900 had been subscribed that evening.

Mr GEORGE ALEXANDER, in proposing the health of the chairman, said that, as an actor out of work that night, he found himself cast for a sympathetic rôle in the evening's entertainment. He only wished that the toast had been placed in the hands of his dear old friend and former manager Mr John Hare, to whom the stage owed so much, and for whom he had the greatest regard and affection. It was not his intention to talk about the drama. He had only to propose the health of the chairman, and as recently a banquet had been given in his honour at which so many things had been said in his praise, it was difficult to give adequate expression to the feeling of regard in which Sir Edward Clarke was held, not only by the playgoing public, but by Society, spelt with a large S. His connection with the theatrical world might be said to have dated from the time when he attended the same school, and later became the friend of Sir Henry Irving. That would in itself endear him to every actor, but in addition to this he had always been a supporter of the drama and a true friend of the actor both on and off the stage, in success or in failure. Their chairman was not like the learned judge who, at a recent trial, remarked that he did not often see the actors on their own boards, but that he considered their opinions on real life were better than anything on the stage. He (Mr Alexander) wished that this learned judge could attend the theatre oftener; but he was possibly an Ibsenite, and his favourite play The Master Builder. He attributed the large sum which had been announced as the result of the esteem in which the chairman was held, not only by the profession, but by the public. This money would go far to brighten the lives of many poor players, and he only wished he could coin a word to express their sense of gratitude for Sir Edward Clarke's presence. He asked them all to drink to his health and continued prosperity.

The toast was received with musical honours.

The CHAIRMAN, in responding, referred to the fact that Mr George Alexander was chairman on the occasion when the dinner produced a record subscription list. He (the chairman) had made many friendships in the dramatic world, the eminent actors including Sir Henry Irving and Sir Charles Wyndham, and, having always enjoyed the dramatic art, he thought it incumbent upon him to make some little return. In conclusion, he proposed a vote of thanks to the musical artistes who had given their valuable services.

In the musical programme Miss Ellen Beach-Yaw sang the scena from Lucia de Lammermoor, and was recalled. Mr Ben Davies gave "Songs of Araby" and "Good-night, beloved," and was much applauded. Mdlle. Giulia Ravogli scored with the Habañera from Carmen and "Comin' thro' the rye." Mr Chas. Copland sang "The Little Irish Girl" and "Sincerity" in admirable style, and Mr Albert Fransella played a flute solo with charming effect.

A NEW SHYLOCK.

On Tuesday Afternoon, Dec. 6, Revival of Shakespeare's Play,
"THE MERCHANT OF VENICE."

Duke of Venice	Mr J. S. HAMILTON
Prince of Morocco	Mr GEORGE FITZGERALD
Antonio	Mr CHARLES THURSBY
Bassanio	Mr MATHESON LANG
Gratiano	Mr E. HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Salarino	Mr EUSTACE LE GRAND
Solanio	Mr HALLIWELL HOBBES
Lorenzo	Mr T. A. SHANNON
Shylock	Mr NORMAN FORBES
Tubal	Mr CHARLES WHITTLE
Launcelot	Mr JOHN WILLES
Old Gobbo	Mr LEONARD CRASKE
Balthazar	Mr PAUL BURNAND
Stephano	Mr PENDEREL FRICE
Nerissa	Miss AUDREY CAMPBELL
Jessica	Miss HUTIN BRITON
Portia	Miss ELLEN TERRY

Mr Norman Forbes was responsible for a most interesting matinée at the Lyric on Tuesday, when, with the gracious help and warm encouragement of Miss Ellen Terry, he presented The Merchant of Venice, with himself in the character of Shylock and his brilliant and amiable Lyceum comrade as Portia. Hitherto Mr Forbes has been regarded as an excellent comedian—he may still be so regarded; and in essaying Shylock—a rôle to which Sir Henry Irving, his honoured chief, gave the touch of genius — he invited the inevitable comparison. We may say at once that he came out of the ordeal triumphantly, and received generous encouragement from a house crowded with celebrities in the literary and theatrical world. In a recent commentary on the play we are told that though Antonio and Shylock are scarcely tragic persons, the contrasted pictures of the friend and enemy had in them elements akin to tragic feeling. We pity the Jew most when he deplores the desertion of Jessica and the loss of the turquoise ring given to him undoubtedly as a token of affection by Leah in his bachelor days, and we feel that there is much to justify the passion of ruthless malignity towards the merchant. Mr Forbes's Shylock did not fail to strike the note of pathos in the celebrated colloquy with Tubal, and the reading of the character also clearly showed us the deep gratification that the Jew feels in his scheme of revenge. The lodged hate that Shylock bears Antonio was explained with equal force and eloquence. In the trial scene the celebrated passage commencing "To bait fish withal" was delivered with a concentrated and impressive intensity rather than with the savage malignity that the words seem to warrant. It must be remembered, however, that Shylock advances arguments that are unanswerable, and the certainty of the verdict being given in his favour is likely to temper the passion of his utterance. Mr Forbes emphasises the Jew's sense of wrong quite as much as his desire for revenge, and that way lies sympathy, which was certainly evinced on Tuesday for the bent figure of the thwarted and defeated plaintiff in the cause célèbre, Shylock versus Antonio. His elocution was always admirable, and his delineation held the attention of the house from first to last. By his latest impersonation Mr Forbes takes higher ground as an actor; but we may express the hope that we are not to lose his many delightful comic creations in the plays of the bard. Miss Ellen Terry scored another great triumph as Portia, which is one of the most delightful studies that the modern stage has given us. It has lost none of its sweet graciousness, womanly devotion, or dignity, and it lacked none of those exquisite little touches of comedy which Miss Terry, always delightful, knows so well how to give. Mr Charles Thursby's Antonio was shaded with dignity and manly sorrow; Mr Matheson Lang's Bassanio had warmth and impressiveness; Mr Harcourt Williams gave excellent point to the biting speeches of Gratiano; Mr J. S. Hamilton's Duke of Venice was creditable; Mr John Willes and Mr Leonard Craske followed tradition as Launcelot Gobbo and Old Gobbo; and Mr Halliwell Hobbes as Solanio distinguished himself by his excellent elocution. Miss Audrey Campbell was a satisfactory Nerissa; and Miss Hutin Briton a charming Jessica. The incidental music, composed by Mr Christopher Wilson, was appropriate, the charming setting of "Tell Me Where is Fancy Bred?" catching quite the spirit of early English music.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Dec. 5, the Drama, by Walter Melville, entitled
"A GIRL'S CROSS ROADS."

Mr Melville's play gives Miss Beatrice Homer a fine opportunity of depicting the character of a dipsomanic, drug taking-woman with a vividness which is grim in realism and strength. She holds the audience spellbound from start to finish, especially in act three, where without speaking a word her acting commands a perfect silence till the end, when the audience give vent to their pent-up feelings in thunders of applause which she thoroughly deserves. Mr Wingold Lawrence gives a manly impersonation of the wronged husband, Jack Livingstone; John Meadows has a capable representative in Mr E. J. Wilde; Miss Kate Hallam plays very sympathetically as Constance Cornell, the schoolmistress, who is in love with Jack; Cuthbert Lumley, rightly named "a queer card," is well played by Mr Lionel Gadsden, who is assisted in his villainies by Miss Helen Haye, in the character of Nellie Meadows; and Mr John Brooks does well as Luke Ramsden. Dr. Weston, Jack's friend, is safe in the hands of Mr Charles Terry. The comic relief is ably looked after by Miss Emily Custance as Tilley, the maid, and Mr J. Hitchins as Toby Turvey, and these two artists cause many a hearty laugh during the evening. The minor characters are effectively played by Mr David Barone as Joe Coyle, a stableman, Mr George Wilson as Fred Hickley, Mr Harold Vernon as Harry Butler, Mr Richard Zarr as a Policeman, Mr Charles Dowe as Crofts, a pickpocket, Miss Nellie Butts and Miss Emily Crossley as Farm Girls, and Miss Gibbons and Miss Nellie Noble as Two Girls up West, who all work hard to make the play a success. The costumes and scenery are most effective.

MR BERT COOTE desires us to state that he will not be playing at the Avenue Theatre on Monday next in the production of Ladyland.

"PAGLIACCI."

A Dramatic Version, by Charles Brookfield, of Leoncavallo's Opera, Produced at the Savoy Theatre on Tuesday, Dec. 6.

Canio	Mr CHARLES WARNER
Tonio	Mr GILBERT HARE
Silvio Agnietti	Mr JERROLD ROBERTSHAW
Beppe	Mr J. L. MACKAY
Tito	Mr CECIL BROOKING
Gastone	Mr ERIC LESLIE
Ottaria	Mr MORLAND
Villagers	Mr HERBERT GRENVILLE, Mr VICTOR BRIDGES, Mr HERBERT COURT
Marietta	Miss ELSIE CHESTER
Rosa	Miss SARA DE GROOT
Teresa	Miss CLARA HUBBARD
Villager	Miss THALMA ARCHER
Angelica	Miss LILY DODD
Nedda	Mrs BROWN-POTTER

One of the reasons of the "heaviness" of native English grand opera is the poorness of its librettos. The composer, apparently, considers his genius all-sufficient, for the preparation of the "book" is usually entrusted either to a private friend of the musicians, or to someone from whom advantage may be obtained by the literary "job." What a capital subject was that of Sir Walter Scott's "Ivanhoe;" and what might have been made of it by a clever French or Italian librettist like those who supplied the "books" of Carmen and Pagliacci! The libretto of the latter and that of Cavalleria Rusticana are plays in themselves, not mere pegs to hang tunes upon, and the result of the experiment tried by Mr Gilbert Hare and Mrs Brown Potter at the Savoy Theatre, on Tuesday last, in turning Pagliacci into a drama in two acts was completely successful. Mr Charles Brookfield has treated his original with an admirable mixture of tact and boldness. Leoncavallo's music becomes merely "incidental," and some minor incidents which are added, and certain adroit alterations—such as the development of Silvio's character in the direction of fatuity, and his not sharing the fate of Nedda at the close—are decided improvements from an English audience point of view. The adaptation is thoroughly intelligent and workmanlike, and does Mr Brookfield great credit, the simple neatness of the rhymed verse in the "play within a play" in the second act being quite effective. The piece was mounted most artistically, the production by Mr Gilbert Hare being in every way excellent. To these advantages were added an allround performance of real merit. We have never seen Mrs Brown Potter in a part which suited her so well as that of Nedda. The impish femininity of the woman was cleverly indicated, and Mrs Potter's performance of the part was more free from mannerisms than any of hers which we have seen of late. She was particularly good in the little play to which we have already alluded. Mr Charles Warner's depiction of agonised jealousy was intensely thrilling, and raised the feelings of the audience to a pitch of almost painful intensity. This, towards the end of the performance, was very strong; and when the curtain at last fell on the terrible and pathetic tableau, the sympathetic stress of the house found relief in the most tumultuously enthusiastic applause. Mr Gilbert Hare was finely firm and bitterly grotesque as Tonio, and spoke the Prologue splendidly; and Mr Jerrold Robertshaw hit off the character of Sylvio Agrietti excellently well. As Beppe, Tito, Gastone, and Ottaria Messrs J. L. Mackay, Cecil Brooking, Eric Leslie, and Morland gave impersonations clearly differentiated and nicely finished; and Miss Elsie Chester, Miss Sara de Groot, and Miss Clara Hubbard were quite efficient as the principal female peasants. The Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Mr Raymond Roze, played the "incidental music" in very good style; and the whole production was full of energy, alertness, and artistic appreciation. The curtain was raised again and again at the close of the performance, and the principals in the cast were called on the stage and loudly applauded. Cavalleria Rusticana, which now forms the first part of the entertainment at the Savoy, is received with the same favour as on the first night of its presentation to Mr Hare and Mrs Brown Potter's patrons.

MR. JONES PROTESTS.

Mr H. A. Jones has addressed the following letter to Mr Beerbohm Tree:—

"My dear Tree,—You are elusive. I think I may fairly take exception to your account both of my actual words, and of my entire attitude. By little omissions and alterations here and there; by little sneers and insinuations; by quotations of my sentences without their context and qualifications, you have represented me as an ill-natured person, festering with personal grievances which I am impatient to lay at the doors of my actors and of the public. That is an unfair, and an untrue, picture of my feelings, of my words, of my whole bent. You will forgive my trying to correct it.

"I regret that you thought fit to introduce into a lecture upon Hamlet a personal attack upon myself. I think it was unwise; I think it was discourteous; I think it was quite foreign to the matter and to the occasion. I am sure you would not wish your dealings with the Dramatic Academy to wear any aspect but that of benevolent superintendence, and that you would not deliberately use it as a vehicle for personal detraction and reprisal. Throughout my discussion of this subject I have always tried to keep free from personal imputations; I have always tried to avoid giving personal offence. If my charges are mere vague assertions, they will soon fall to the ground. Let them fall.

"In any case I am sure you will agree that it is undesirable and useless to import any further personal feeling into a discussion that should be kept remote from the ambitions and jealousies and petty rancours of all of us. Yes, let me bring in a personal note, and pay a very sincere tribute to the splendid efforts you are making on behalf of the English stage, to your courage and zeal and resource, and to your fine artistic gifts. With that I hope you will allow the personal question to disappear. A far greater question remains behind. A newspaper argument is not, perhaps, the best means for threshing it out. We will leave it for the moment. We may meet 'in another place.'"

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, Dec. 5, the Musical Play in Three Acts, by Paul Rubens, entitled "THREE LITTLE MAIDS."

A return visit to Kingston of this bright, tuneful production was made on Monday, when the cosy little theatre was comfortably filled with an audience who gave the Three Little Maids a hearty welcome. Mr Charles Macdona's company was a thoroughly capable one all round. The vicar's three charming daughters were portrayed by the Misses Vera Vallis, Gertrude Melville, and Nora Guy, and each sang and danced charmingly, their efforts being received with marked favour. The part of the vicar was ably filled by Mr Charles Leverton, under whose direction the play was produced. Mr Arthur Longley made a capital Lord Cheyne, his assumption of the mannerisms of the West-end dandy being a most successful piece of character acting. Mr Alic Chentrens acquitted himself well as the French attaché, M. De L'Orme; and Mr Haddon Cave gave a satisfactory impersonation of the part of Brian Molyneux. Miss Kate Forster made a satisfactory Lady St. Mallory, Mr Gus Ogley did well as Cupid, and Miss Laura Wright as Gretchen added much to the fun of the production. There was a numerous and well-trained chorus, which, with an augmented orchestra, was ably directed by Mr Julian Rutt.

Master Lorraine has appeared in the following characters:—Little Gulliver, Avenue; the Royal Page, Merrie England, Savoy; Little Hans Anderson, Adelphi; Little Ib, Terry's; Little Dicky; also in The House of Burnside, Terry's; and with Messrs Murray King and Clark's company.

THERE performances of The Comedy of Errors will be given at Terry's Theatre by the Elizabethan Stage Society on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday to allow of teachers and schools being present. The performance, being continuous, will be over shortly before six o'clock.

SHOWMEN OF TO-DAY.

THOMAS HARTSHORN
(Secretary of the Amalgamation).
By the Rev. T. HORNE.

The Showman World possesses within its borders many men of marked ability. Such a man is the subject of our sketch—alert and absolutely up-to-date (generally a day before it), highly trained, with a message of hope to his brethren. His mere presence even seems to say (without the spoken word), "Here, take my hand, brother; it's all right. Stick to me, and I'll pull you through." A born leader of men, although he is but thirty-six years of age. Not born a showman's child, but born to be a showman.

When at length in early life he found his vocation on the road he threw himself heart and soul into the stress and strain, the joy and pulse of it—a strong-willed man.

He is a stall-holder, and like his great prototype in leadership—James Dean of blessed memory—a confectioner, "a crack 'em and try 'em before you buy 'em Barcelona nut man, a Grantham brandy snap man," a keeper of a Pannum stall.

It takes all sorts and conditions of men to make this sad-eye'd old world of ours a merry world, and the fair ground is a microcosm of the world. The vaunting lessee has found out to his serious cost that his big concern alone cannot make a fair. That essentially a fair must be a combine of various interests, and a kaleidoscopic illustration of novelty. So the roundabout cannot do without the show, and these in their turn cannot do without the swings and shooters. "The small fry," as the big men say, the cokershie sheet, the dolly frame, the variety stall, and the ginger-bread stalls all must be there to make the fair.

It was during the commencement of the Stall-holders Trade Organisation in the north that Mr Hartshorn made his presence felt—a fluent speaker, with the pen of a ready writer, not unknown to our readers in the "Showman World" columns. Hartshorn was chosen by his fellows (democratic suffrage it was) to be their second vice-president, and then at the end of his year of office instead of passing into the presidential chair he volunteered for the more onerous and exacting work of general organising secretary, which office he fulfils with credit and distinction.

His sound business sense led him to press forward to a successful issue the question of registration, so that the trade status of the Northern Society might be beyond either cavil or reproach.

He is also a member and most enthusiastic supporter of the Showmen's Guild, bringing its claim for general support well before his fellow-travellers. He works fearlessly for the interests of his society, and it is no exaggeration to say that great and far-reaching improvement materially, socially, and morally has marked his work, and that of the executive committee of the society he so earnestly and ably represents.

The right man for the work is the grateful verdict of the rank and file. A just and clever man, say one and all. Whether lessee or tenant his trade motto is, "Be just and fear not." We look forward with every confidence to Mr Hartshorn's future career.

THE annual conference of the Incorporated Society of Musicians will be held at Manchester from Jan. 2 to 7. Among the lecturers will be Sir Frederick Bridge, on "A Weak Point in our Musical Education;" Mr W. A. C. Cruickshank, on "The Progress of Music during the Nineteenth Century;" Mr James Dawber, on "The Advisability of still further Safeguarding the Entrance to the Musical Profession;" Mr T. Henderson, on Some Blots upon English Music;" and Mr S. Midgley, on "Municipalities and Music."

OWING to the sudden indisposition of Mr Harry Elliston on the 1st inst., the part of Timothy Tuttutt, in Her Forbidden Marriage, was successfully undertaken at less than half an hour's notice by Mr Edgar L. Hocking.—Mr Cecil Du Gué, who completes to-day his tour as heavy lead with Hardie and Von Leer's Path of Thorns company, opens on Monday with Mr W. W. Kelly for his ninth engagement in A Royal Divorce.—Mr G. Aubrey Hall, who has just completed an eighteen months' engagement with Miss Ellen Terry, has been engaged as general manager for Miss Ina Rozant's company in The Designers, a new and original farcical comedy, by Fritz Zorm, author of Bunce, the Bobby, and the Broads, which will be produced at the Brixton Theatre on Feb. 13 next.

THE plans for the new theatre which will be erected in Park-place, Cardiff, next year, for Mr Robert Redford, lessee of the Theatre Royal in that town, have been prepared by Messrs Ernest Runtz and Ford. The building will be constructed of red brick, with terra-cotta mouldings. The auditorium will accommodate about 2,000. The stage will be 70ft. wide by 45ft. deep, and there will be twenty dressing-rooms. The estimated cost of the building is about £25,000, and it is hoped that it will be opened at Christmas, 1905.

MR CHAS. HOWARD having terminated his autumn engagement with Miss Madge Girdlestone's City of Millions company on tour, has been engaged by Mr Elphinstone as acting-manager for the Theatre Royal, Hanley, and commenced his duties there on Monday.—Mr Henry Belding has been engaged by Mr Richard Flanagan to play Friar Laurence in his forthcoming revival of Romeo and Juliet at the Queen's Theatre, Manchester.

MISS BEATRICE DAY returns to England to-day for a short time prior to touring Australia and New Zealand, having accepted a lengthy engagement to play lead.—Mr Charles Vane having concluded a thirty weeks' tour under under Mr Leonard Rayne's management, has been engaged by Messrs B. and F. Wheeler for their répertoire company.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

(SPECIAL TO THE ERA.)

THE Dublin Theatrical and Music Hall Employees' Club has made such progress that new premises have been secured in Fishamble-street, where much better accommodation will be provided.

MR E. MILLS, who has been electrician at the Tivoli for the past twelve months or so, is going to India.

AT a meeting of the committee of the Heads of Departments' Association, held on Thursday, arrangements for the third annual dinner were considered. It was decided that it was inadvisable to organise next March a concert similar to the one recently given at the Royal Opera House, as had been suggested by the Musicians' Society. A proposal to organise a smoking concert on Good Friday will be considered later.

THE Financial statement of the joint concert at the Royal Opera House on Nov. 20 has now been issued. The particulars are as follows:—

RECEIPTS.

By Sale of Tickets	118	14	6
Takings at Door	27	16	0

Hire of Music, Porterage, Van Hire, and sundry items	9	5	0
Postage, Telegrams, Bill Distributing, and general Expenses	17	4	6
Honorarium to Secretaries, Auditors, and others	7	5	0
	£105	2	9
Total	£169	2	9

CHEQUES have already been issued to distribute the balance to the benevolent funds of the societies taking part in the concert arrangements.

A COMPARISON of the above receipts with the receipts of the concert given at the Alhambra show that the takings at the door and the sale of programmes were this year about £60 less. The difference may be attributed to the support assured by the Sunday League audience. The previous concert was given during the League series of concerts at the Alhambra. More tickets were sold this year before the day, and had the takings at the door been equal to last year's concert a very substantial sum would have been available for these benevolent funds.

A MEETING of the Society of Theatrical Carpenters will be held on Sunday evening at the Salisbury Hotel, in St. Martin's-lane, commencing at 8 0 o'clock.

MR W. SHELDON, jun., has returned to take charge of the stage at the Prince of Wales's Theatre. Mr H. Powell has also been transferred from the Apollo to act as property master at the Prince of Wales's Theatre; and other members of the staff during Mr George Edwardes's last season at that house will resume their old positions.

THE General Theatrical Operatives' Sick and Benevolent Society will hold a meeting on Sunday evening in the Freemasons' Tavern, Long-acre. Business of importance will be submitted for consideration.

THE workers in every department of stage work are now for the most part fully employed, as the pressure of the Christmas productions is beginning to be felt.

AT the recent close of the San Carlo opera season at the Opera House, Comm. R. De Sanna and Mr Henry Russell present Mr Robert Affleck, the master carpenter, with a very handsome set of gold studs and links. Mr William Crawshaw, the electrician, received a silver cigarette-case, and Mr Moore, the assistant stage-manager, also received a present. From all accounts the managers of the San Carlo company's season were highly pleased with the work of the stage staff.

MR A. E. WOOD is in charge as master carpenter at the Avenue Theatre.

MR AND MRS ARTHUR PITT arrived from South Africa on Dec. 3 for a short trip. Mr Pitt has been many years chief mechanist to Mr Leonard Rayne, and has voyaged to Africa ten times.

MR HARRY COUZENS, chief mechanist for many years with Messrs George Rignold, Holloway, Anderson, and John F. Sheridan, after twenty years' absence in Australasia and South Africa, arrived in England last Saturday for a visit, and hopes to have the opportunity while here of seeing the latest up-to-date stage appliances.

NOTICES and reports of meetings, &c., are invited from the various societies with which stage employees are connected.

A NOVELTY in pantomime ideas was introduced at the Grand, Glasgow, this year, a special invitation matinée rehearsal being given to about 800 Glasgow ladies on the day before the public production.

MR ERNEST E. NORRIS, the very popular general manager of the Elephant and Castle Theatre, may be congratulated on his enterprise in producing, at his benefit at that house on the 2d inst., two new pieces, in the writing of one of which he had a share; and he also sustained the principal rôle—a dual one. Occasions such as these may well be taken advantage of to introduce fresh dramatic work to the public; but it is not every general manager who, like Mr Norris, can be part-author of a new drama and principal actor in its cast.

A DIVORCE has been granted in New York to Mrs Adele Lederer, wife of Mr George W. Lederer, the well-known theatrical manager, with alimony of $150 a-month. Mr Lederer's name is familiar to London playgoers for his connection with various imported musical plays.

THE Bath pantomime this year is founded upon the story "Goody Two Shoes," the initial performance being announced for Boxing Day. The principal boy will be Miss Nell Richardson, and the chief comedian is to be Mr Harry Buss, who won his way into the hearts of local playgoers in a similar position some seasons ago. The whole production is in the experienced hands of Mr Peter Davey, of Kingston-on-Thames, who intends after a short run in Bath to take the pantomime on tour.

MESSRS H. AND M. RAYNE, the well-known theatrical shoemakers and hosiers, have opened a branch establishment at Charing-cross-road. Mr Arthur Collins writes them:—"Dear Sirs,—I have much pleasure in stating that the shoes and tights you have supplied for the Drury-lane pantomimes have given me complete satisfaction."

THE friends of Mr Harcourt M. Beryl, assistant manager to his father, Mr H. Cecil Beryl, lessee and manager of the Theatre Royal, Brighton, will be interested to learn that his wedding will take place on Feb. 28 next.

CHAT WITH FRANK WEATHERSBY.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr Frank Weathersby, the subject of our interview, was met by our representative shortly after his arrival at Southampton by the Union Castle Liner Norman. He has been round the world since leaving London, five and a-half years ago, and during that period has traversed nearly 80,000 miles. Five years were spent in Australasia, and the last six months in South Africa. He speaks in glowing terms of his principal, John F. Sheridan, with whom a twelve months' contract originally ended in being extended to six years. Australia was visited in every part, including New South Wales, Victoria, South and West Australia, Queensland, Tasmania, also New Zealand (two visits). He remarked:—"Our répertoire of plays consisted of Fun on the Bristol, A Trip to Chicago, Naughty Nancy, The Lady Slavey, Little Christopher Columbus, Mrs Dooley's Little Joke, The New Barmaid, A Game of Nap, The Girl from Venus, When the Lamps are Lighted, The Shaughraun, Uncle Tom's Cabin, The New East Lynne, pantomime of Cinderella, &c. Taken all through, a most successful time has been passed. We shipped from Albany, West Australia, last June, and after a dreary sixteen days on the water we arrived at Durban Sunday, July 10, and, with a company of about thirty and 200 tons of scenery and effects, opened in Pietermaritzburg, a hundred miles up country, on Monday, July 11. The railway arrangements in Africa are deplorable. If you have a long journey you must send your stuff for the opening at least a week ahead.

"Yes, I must admit in a small way I have had several experiences. I was in Sydney when the plague was at its height; likewise in Queensland. Boats were not allowed to connect with the shore even by a rope until passed by the medical officer. The ropes were then tarred, and a tin funnel hung on then to prevent rats from crossing the rope. We played at Townsville, Queensland, just after the terrific cyclone, when a great part of the town was blown down. The hotel where I stayed was having the roof put on when I arrived. On another occasion, while on the Adelaide express, I had to make a hasty retreat, owing to the carriage being on fire, to another vehicle, caused through the over-heating of an axle. I have passed through dozens of bush fires at full speed on a train, and nearly blinded and choked by the dense volumes of smoke. Earthquakes have varied the monotony of travel in New Zealand, particularly in the Auckland, Napier, and Christchurch districts.

"My first visit to Johannesburg was just after the Jameson raid and the dynamite explosion, when a large portion of the town was blown up. I was in Brooklyn, New York, when the great tram strike was in progress. Each car running had an armed military escort each end of the car. I have been 3,500ft. down a Bendigo gold mine, also down diamond, coal, and silver mines. I left Durban three weeks ago at 95 in the shade, and here I am in London at the other end of the glass.

MR. FRANK WEATHERSBY.

We have played matinées with burlesque and pantomime in Sydney and Melbourne up to 107 deg. in the shade. It was nothing unusual at the Royal, Melbourne, to find occupants of the front rows of dress-circle and stalls minus their coats, ties, and collars, while in New Zealand we have played to many of our audience enveloped in furs. In Coolgardie Theatre lighted fires have been placed down the centre of the auditorium. At the old Royal, at Johannesburg, when a shower of rain came on it was quite the custom to see a number of umbrellas put up. At West Maitland, N.S.W., under the town hall, we found a number of boats fully equipped; on inquiring the reason we were consoled by the information that they were always kept ready in the event of a sudden rising of the river. As we travelled nearly thirty people, and many towns boasted of but two hotels, we encountered many difficulties in the shape of accommodation. My bed at times has been in waiting-rooms, guards' brakes in goods and milk trains, dressing-rooms, property couch on stage, and recently in Africa for several nights when playing small towns our carriage was shunted on to a siding and served as the 'Sheridan Hotel,' sleeping and eating in the vehicle. While in a Transvaal compound a faction fight between natives took place, and I ran for about a mile before I felt safe from the scene of hostilities. On my first visit to the goldfields of West Australia it was always necessary to have two armed policemen to escort me from theatre to hotel with the night's takings. Happily, this is a thing of the past. I have had three escapes from fire. The last time the automatic sprinklers did great service, and I think no theatre should be without them. In Australia comfortable hotels can be got from £1 weekly, including supper, and in New Zealand they range from £1 5s. per week, whilst in Africa good hotels can be had from £2 upwards in the big towns. Of course, single rooms are a trifle more weekly. I have been actor, stage-manager, business-manager, and advance agent, have played pantaloon and wolf in pantomime, appeared in Shakespearian répertoire, and acted as poster-writer, ticket-seller and taker. I joined Mrs Langtry in 1889, was with her some years, accompanied her to America in 1894, and played twenty-four towns in the first month. I have been three tours with Miss Fortescue, was some years with the late Miss Kate Vaughan, also Miss Wallis, J. L. Toole, Arthur Bourchier, and George and Weedon Grossmith. My first visit to Africa was in 1894, with Flemming and Searelle. I was manager for two years with C. St. John Denton's theatrical agency. I recently visited the battlefields in Africa, and saw many grim tokens of the recent war. The block-houses, trenches, and barbed wire fences are still in existence, while here and there on the veldt are to be seen the graves of the fallen."

Mr Weathersby for some years has devoted most of his time to managing, and is seen very rarely now on the other side of the footlights.

ACTORS AND THEIR TEETH.

One of the most frequently commented upon subjects in connection with the stage, which among the great majority of the public is so popular a topic of conversation, is the beauty of the teeth of the men and women who have adopted that branch of artistic endeavour. Indeed, it might almost seem at first sight as if the first essential to employment on the stage were fine teeth. In a general way, every form of beauty is, of course, an advantage on the stage, but fine teeth are especially so. The reason is not far to seek. The adventitious aids of the toilet can, by skilful employment, convert a plain face into one of striking beauty, give brilliancy to the complexion, lustre to the eye, and charm to the mouth. Nothing of the sort, however, can be done to the teeth, which must for the most part remain as Nature made them. For the most part, however, but not entirely—for so long as they are regular the persistent use of a proper dentifrice will make even yellow teeth white, brilliant and bright, until what had been a blemish, or at best not a striking defect, can be transformed into positive beauty. The means for doing this have now happily been brought to the hand of everyone by the invention of Odol, which is not only the finest preparation for cleaning the teeth, but the most perfect mouthwash of our day, destroying as it does not only the germs which live in the mouth, but, by preventing their growth, keeping the teeth free from possibility of decay, the gums from getting spongy and from receding from the teeth, while at the same time imparting a sense of freshness to the user, whose breath becomes delicately perfumed and pleasant. On the members of the theatrical profession, however, the use of Odol confers great advantages. Whatever may be the other requisites of an actor and they are numerous, the first, beyond all question of doubt, is speech. Speech, as every one knows, depends in no inconsiderable degree on the teeth, whose presence regulates the perfection with which certain sounds are uttered. If, through any of the many varied causes which lead to the destruction of the delicate, yet hard structures which form them, the teeth are lost, an appreciable difference in articulation is the result, for even in these days of splendid mechanical dentistry artificial teeth, however good as a makeshift, are by no means perfect substitutes for the real things. Besides, since the teeth primarily prepare the food for digestion, tearing apart the fibres of meat and vegetables and converting them and the other food substances into a fine pulp, which can be easily acted upon by the animal juices, and so become transformed into the principles of life, it is a self-evident proposition that for them to do their work in the best possible way they must themselves be in the best possible condition. Decayed teeth are no more capable of doing their full work than a decayed muscular system will enable one to undergo the same amount of exertion as before, or to lift the same weights which one was in the habit of doing. The demands made by a stage career are largely on the nervous system, which lives on the digestive organs, so that the whole nervous organisation is primarily dependent for its welfare on the teeth. But there is another aspect which makes the care of the mouth imperative to all who follow the stage. The theatre is primarily a place crowded with human beings. From them there go forth, with every breath, untold myriads of microbes, which are breathed by actors, as well as by other members of the audience. The actors, who are constantly opening their mouths, take these germs, many of which carry disease with them, into their mouth. Were great care not taken in cleansing the mouth, and so getting rid of these low forms of life, no little disaster might result. This fact has been universally recognised by the players of the day, with the result that they stand out prominently as practisers of the principles of the up-to-date hygiene of the mouth. Learning either from their dentists or from their friends that Odol is particularly advantageous in destroying germs in the mouth, they have not only become confirmed users of this ideal preparation, they are among its enthusiastic advocates. Among Odol's most enthusiastic advocates are Mrs Brown Potter, Miss Marie Studholme, Miss Julia Neilson, Miss Constance Collier, Miss Lena Ashwell, Miss Marie Tempest, Miss Violet Vanbrugh, Miss Ethel Irving, and Miss Mabel Love, and it has received warm encomiums from Sir Henry Irving, Sir Charles Wyndham, Mr George Alexander, Mr Cyril Maude, Mr Lewis Waller, and Mr Seymour Hicks. Sir Henry Irving says:—"I find Odol excellent;" and Sir Charles Wyndham writes:—"It affords me very great pleasure to add my testimony to the many encomiums which have been passed on the merits of Odol. Its general characteristics must by now be thoroughly well known to the public, and so must the advantages to be derived from the use of a preparation which is at once so beneficial, so stimulating, and so pleasant. Miss Marie Studholme's opinion is:—"Odol is the best dentifrice I have ever used. I shall have great pleasure in recommending it to my friends." Miss Lena Ashwell says:—"I have used Odol, and find it delightfully refreshing, and shall not again be without it."

PRESENTATION.—On Saturday, at the Athenæum, Lancaster, Mr Chas. A. Chandler, proprietor of The Bells of Haslemere company, presented his acting-manager, Mr Powell James, on behalf of his company, with a gold-mounted walking-stick. Mr James, by the bye, has been engaged by Mr Geo. Davey for the Grand, Islington, pantomime.

ON Friday, Dec. 2, at the Opera House, Northampton, was produced an original dramatic episode, by Louis H. Carlton, entitled The Wrong Bottle; or, a Jealous Wife's Revenge and its Sequel.

A GOOD company has drawn excellent houses this week at the Empire, Wrexham. Joe Hastings delights everyone with his fine jumping; Bob Stephenson, the Irish comedian and dancer, is pleasing; the Two Gems (Flo and Cissie) make a welcome return; Giacomo, an eccentric chapeaugraphist, is good; Prof. Wallace, expert novelty ventriloquist, gives an entertaining show; and the Esdale Brothers, comedians, do well.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.
Published at "The Era" Offices,
49, Wellington-street, Strand. W.C.

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer, by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as "the Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman, July 31st, 1901

Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr Albert A. Strong's new work entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his text-book on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases, what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full interest.—Referee, July 28th, 1901

MR. H. A. JONES AGAIN.

In a novel by STEVENSON, which created a great sensation at the time at which it was published, and which is still well remembered, the dramatic effect of a "double life" is graphically described. By some "cantrip sleight," a physician discovers the secret of creating a dual personality. As Dr. Jekyll he is all that is elevated, superior, and serene; as Mr. Hyde he revels in the most absolute freedom from all restrictions. Mr HENRY ARTHUR JONES, the author of so many clever and amusing plays, has, for years past, adopted a somewhat similar practice. As the Jekyll-lecturer, writer of essays, and deliverer of after-dinner and other orations, he advocates, with a certain secure vagueness, the most aërial views of dramatic art; as the Hyde-playwright he cares for none of these things; and to this he owes much of his success. Let us not be misunderstood. We do not mean to infer for a moment that high-class plays cannot pay. Really high-class work in all departments always does pay in the end. There are few artists, for instance, whose paintings have been more constantly photographed and reproduced than those of Mr WATTS, and the copyrights of them should be very valuable; and SHAKESPEARE is a standing example of the lasting popularity of great genius. What does not pay is the effort to rise above one's natural powers. We do not find fault with Mr JONES for having written plays according to his inspirations. No man by taking thought can add a cubit to his stature. What we object to is his long-continued practice—we exposed it as far back as 1892—of representing himself, by inference, as an artistic martyr capable of doing very high-class work, and always prevented by some "bitter disposition of the time" from doing himself justice.

The weakness of Mr JONES'S art may be summed up in a word—it is, comparatively, superficial. We cannot remember a single modern play of his which touches us as Mr PINERO'S Iris and Letty touched us, in spite of possible technical defects. Whether he is writing essays or dramas Mr JONES always seems to us to be aiming, chiefly, at effect. What he does is always clever; he is an admirable inventor of plots and incidents, and a most adroit playwright. Indeed, he is "too clever by half" to be a great artist. The act-drop in his pieces always comes down in the right place, the principal part for the leading actor or actress is always—or nearly always—just what is required; the audience is generally excited and amused; yet at bottom—when the wine has "stood" a little—one realises that the play is no more than an excellent "entertainment of the stage." We are not writing this in a grudging spirit; no one has praised Mr JONES'S work, taking it for what it is, as warmly as we have; and we admit that to the general rules we have stated there are exceptions. There is room in this world for all kinds of art, from MICHEL ANGELO'S to MAX BEERBOHM'S; and it is polite in the presence of artists of different capacities to avoid the question of degree. But when, so to speak a commoner rises and by inference and insinuation claims the rank of a duke, we are either irritated or amused, according to the state of our digestions.

We do not, however, much complain of Mr JONES for giving himself a good character, either in print or in public. Nowadays, if a man does not blow his own trumpet there are very few people who will blow it for him; and such an excellent opportunity as the annual dinner of the Sheffield Press Club on Saturday last was a temptation, we admit, hardly to be resisted. Nor does it trouble us that most of Mr JONES'S statements are incorrect as to fact. The theatres are not "empty," as anyone who has tried within the last week or so to book seats at His Majesty's, the St. James's, or any of the high-class houses can prove. If high art is so unremunerative, how is it that Sir HENRY IRVING, Mr GEORGE ALEXANDER, and Mr BEERBOHM TREE have not been bankrupts long ago? We leave it to others with more leisure at their command to riddle out Mr JONES'S Sheffield statements in detail; what we resent is the implication that he has been prevented from writing "severe and serious" plays by the consciousness that there were no artists obtainable of sufficient talent to play the principal parts in them. "Great plays," said Mr JONES, "need great interpreters"—the inference being that if he could only get the actors and actresses he—Mr JONES—would give us the great plays quickly enough. The absurdity of this suggestion may be easily proved by a survey of Mr JONES'S past productions. We fail to recal a single instance in which we have said to ourselves, after enjoying the performance of one of Mr JONES'S plays, that there was more in it than the artists brought out in performance. On the contrary, we have always felt that the success of Mr. JONES as a popular dramatist has been greatly owing to the very valuable support which he has obtained from the popular actors and actresses for whom he has worked. We can forgive him, however, for a certain bitterness; for his most "severe and serious" play, a courageous attempt to treat a large subject in an intellectual spirit, came to grief partly by misadventure. The Crusaders, produced at the Avenue Theatre in 1891, had for its subject the important one of the effect of fashionable Charity on Poverty. The satire was deep and keen; but the impression created on the unlucky first night was weakened by the mere accident that much of the dialogue, owing to certain miscalculations in connection with the acoustic properties of the house, was inaudible to the occupants of the gallery. Mr JONES can hardly complain, however, of the talents of his cast in this case, for it included such admirable artists as the late ARTHUR CECIL, Mr LEWIS WALLER, Mr WEEDON GROSSMITH, Mr HENRY KEMBLE, Mr ALLAN AYNESWORTH, Miss WINIFRED EMERY, and Miss OLGA BRANDON. It certainly could not be said that the above actors and actresses and the rest of the company failed to do Mr JONES'S ambitious effort the very fullest justice.

Mr H. A. JONES has, however, in his power an easy and effectual method of proving our estimate of him to be erroneous. Let him follow Mr STEPHEN PHILLIPS'S example, and publish the "great plays" of his composition which are above the capacities of any actors and actresses now available. We promise him, in that case, an appreciative and, we need hardly say, an absolutely impartial review.

A BLIND ACTOR.

MR WALTER HANN presided at the thirteenth meeting of the committee of the Scenic Artists' Association at 5, Robert-street, Adelphi, at 8 o'clock on Monday last. Messrs Edmund G. Banks, J. J. Markwell-Davis, Richard Douglass, Wm. Harker, W. T. Hemsley, Herbert Hinton, H. W. Owen, and Harry Potts and Mr H. Lawrence Harris (secretary) were present. Letters were read from Messrs Joseph Harker, W. Raphael, and Geo. Tweddell explaining absence. The secretary read letters from Mr Forbes Robertson accepting the office of honorary member of the association, and from Mr W. F. Bostock, of Manchester, conveying suggestions for the intending exhibition. Mr Geo. M. Bridges, scenic artist, of King's Lynn, was duly elected a member of the association. The secretary reported that since the last committee meeting, a week ago, he had received promises of upwards of £13 to the Exhibition Guarantee Fund. Mr Richard Douglass and Mr Harry Potts undertook to inspect certain galleries and halls in the West-end offered for the 1905 exhibition, and report on their suitability at the meeting next Monday evening, the 12th inst. The chairman, Mr Walter Hann, read a letter from Sir Philip Burne-Jones, Bart., stating that the President of the Royal Academy, Sir E. J Poynter, Bart., had kindly consented to act as Chairman of the Hanging Committee of the exhibition.

"THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," by Mr G. Carlton Wallace, is doing excellent business, as the crowded state of the theatres wherever it is played abundantly testifies. Messrs Dothridge, Longden, and Livesey are to be warmly congratulated. It is not often that a young author with his first play, nor a young manager on his first essay, scores such an unqualified triumph; yet such has been the good fortune of Mr Wallace, the author, and Mr Samuel Livesey, who plays the Blacksmith so powerfully. The wrestling scene in the last act between the blacksmith and Captain Leo is nightly received with great enthusiasm, especially in the North, the home of wrestling. Every point is followed with breathless excitement, occasionally broken by cheers and loudly shouted, well-meant advice Indeed, so real does the match appear, that challenges are repeatedly being sent by local champions who wish to try a fall.

"ALADDIN" is the subject of the Brixton Theatre pantomime, which will be produced on Boxing Day. Among the artists engaged are Miss Emmeline Orford, Mr Edwin Brett, Mr Ed. Young, Mr H. O. Clarey, and Messrs Walton and Lester. The scenery is by Messrs Walter Hann and E. L. Schmitz, and the dresses by Clarkson. The processions and ballets will be arranged by Miss Eva Bayhurst, and the entire production will be under the direction of Mr Stanley Rogers, who is the author of the book.

Under the title of The Serpent's Tooth this sensational drama was produced at the Royal County Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames, on April 25 last. It has also been known as A Modern Judas, and the title is now changed for the third time. The violent contrasts between good and evil, virtue and villainy are well brought out in this play, and the interest of the story is well maintained until the end, when the hero and heroine emerge triumphantly from all their difficulties. Jack Vavasour, the adopted son of James Rivers, a wealthy old English gentleman, falls in love with the latter's pretty daughter Claire. As she is heiress to her father's property she becomes an interesting personage to an unscrupulous fortune-hunter and gentleman-burglar named Captain Melbourne, otherwise known as "Slippery Jim." He learns that old Rivers keeps in his safe in the library a quantity of diamonds, and he resolves to gain possession of them. He has a confederate in one Bennett, who has obtained an engagement as butler at the house. These two partners in crime break open the safe, but are interrupted by the entrance of the owner, whom Melbourne does not hesitate to murder. The deed, however, has been witnessed by Elsie, Jim's ill-used wife, who has tracked her husband to the house and, mounting a ladder, peers through the window of the library. Thus she sees the crime committed, and falls to the ground with a shriek. She is found and taken to the Cottage Hospital; and while she is recovering there the villain pursues his evil course, after the usual manner of such gentry in melodrama. He brings against Jack Vavasour a charge of murdering James Rivers, and continues to persecute Claire with his unwelcome attentions. Other incidents of an exciting and sensational character follow in quick succession. One of the most thrilling is the encounter of Melbourne and his wife, who threatens to denounce him. He thereupon lowers her into a well with the evident intention of drowning the unhappy woman; but there happens to be no water in it, and she is rescued by Vavasour, who is hiding in the neighbourhood. He learns from her the truth concerning the death of his benefactor. Discovering at the same time that his betrothed has been entrapped and carried off to an old hut on the cliffs, he hurries thither, but is overpowered and bound to a post. Then Melbourne conceives the fiendish idea of burning out Vavasour's eyes with a red-hot poker in the presence of his promised bride, and is preparing to carry this diabolical plan into execution when rescue comes in the form of Tom Hopkins, old Rivers' groom, who fires at Melbourne and wounds him. Vavasour is again taken to prison, and Melbourne goes to the library to get possession of the diamonds he has secreted there; but ultimately Vavasour is acquitted of the charge of murder and the real culprit arrested. Mr Frank Beresford as Jack Vavasour gives a manly and spirited embodiment of the character, and Mr Percy Rhodes deserves every credit for his excellent impersonation of Captain Melbourne, whose methods resemble very closely those of "the Spider," in The Silver King. Mr Trueman Towers supplies a vivid and telling portrait of the scoundrel Bennett. Miss Violet King shows womanly feeling in the part of Claire Rivers, and meets with deserved success. Mr Harry Browne is well placed as James Rivers. Mr Willie Scott is exceedingly comical as Tom Hopkins, never missing a fair opportunity of getting a laugh, though he has his serious moments, as, for instance, when Tom faces the principal villain with a revolver. Mr John Denton also scores by his humorous representation of Elkanah Pierce, a gentleman of a nervous temperament. He receives able support from Miss Ada Palmer as a spinster of uncertain age, who is anxious to find a partner for life. Mr Fred Bell does good work as Moucher, a thief, and Mr H. Higgins as Silas Grumble and Mr Louis Hector as Inspector Goodheart, Mr Worsfold as a police constable and Mr R. Ripon as Gaffer Smiley are also well placed. Miss Dolly Harcourt is pert and lively as Polly Hopkins, Miss Kate Walbran is good as Elise, and Miss Estelle Despa as Mrs Tibbs also merits mention.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL J. A. WINSTANLEY, the proprietor of the Royal Opera House, and sole lessee of the Theatre Royal, Leicester, whose sympathies for any deserving cause are so well-known and appreciated in Leicester, which town is now suffering keenly from the prevalent distress, in order to swell the funds of the Citizens' Aid Society, on Sunday evening last gave a grand sacred concert at the Royal Opera House, the gallant Colonel defraying every penny of the expense. There was a large audience, who thoroughly enjoyed the rich musical treat provided. Lieutenant Colonel Winstanley and Mrs Winstanley, Sir Thomas Wright, Alderman Collins, Mr and Mrs S. Faire, including a goodly number of other leading townspeople, were present. Mr C. D. Leigh, the courteous acting-manager, worked "like a Trojan," and had the invaluable assistance of the Opera House staff.

THE chief item in the programme was the performance of The Mass of St. Dominic composed by Herr J. Theo Kler, the gifted musical director of the Royal Opera House, who conducted. We have nothing but the highest praise to bestow on the work of Mr Kler, which received a splendid interpretation from the combined choirs of Holy Cross, St. Patrick's, and Sacred Heart, numbering over seventy voices. The leading sopranos were Mrs T. R. Russell and Miss Robinson; contraltos, Mrs P. T. Clarke and Miss Belton; tenors, Mr Alfred Page and Mr J. T. Day; and bass, Mr George Evans. Mr H. P. Vann presided at the organ, and Mr Winterbalder was the choirmaster. Another noteworthy item was the rendering of the march, "The Silver Trumpet," by the combined bands of the Royal Opera House and Theatre Royal. It is rare that Mr Henry Nicholson, so well known throughout the musical world, appears on a public platform at his advanced age, but the flute duet, "Themes from Traviata," which he specially arranged, and which he played in conjunction with Mr Geary, a member of the Opera House Band, proved vastly enjoyable. Mr J. H. Taylor gave an interlude on the pianola, Miss Florence Robinson sang "Angels guard thee," and Mr Alfred Page and Mrs Russell gave the duet, "Love Divine."

MR AUSTIN MELFORD concludes to-night at the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham, the most successful tour of The Silver King has experienced. For the spring he has re engaged Mr Herbert Ford to play Wilfrid Denver, not wishing to leave town himself.

PRESENTATION.—Mr Sydney Milles, late of Lord George Sanger and Messrs Bostock and Wombwell, and now representing Messrs John Dewar and Sons, Ltd., Perth, was recently the recipient of a very handsome umbrella with carved ivory lion's head and mounted in 15-carat gold, the gift of Mr Bert Burnell, of the Four Burnells, and inscribed thus:—"From Bert Burnell to his old friend, Sydney Milles, 20 10-'04."

DEATH OF MRS G. H. GILBERT.

We regret to record the death of Mrs G. H. Gilbert, popularly known as "the Grand Old Woman of America." The veteran actress, who died at Chicago on the 2nd inst. while on tour, had only recently entered upon her eighty-fourth year. When Miss Rehan was a fresh young girl of twenty she and Mrs Gilbert appeared together in Augustin Daly's comedy of Needles and Pins. The former was the ingenuous and irresistibly comely young creature she always looked and acted so charmingly, while Mrs Gilbert, her maiden aunt of fifty in the play, was quite as giddy, twice as gushing, and in manner and appearance not half so old. The Daly company, when it came to Toole's Theatre a little over twenty years ago, included both Ada Rehan and Mrs Gilbert. Altogether different in appearance and manner from the ordinary stage old lady, Mrs Gilbert quickly became a favourite with English audiences, and playgoers retain pleasant memories of the actress who has just died at Chicago. Ann Hartley was an Englishwoman, having been born at Rochdale in October, 1821. She entered upon her long and successful professional career at Bury St. Edmunds, and afterwards she went to the Haymarket in London, and on the "Norwich circuit," where her future husband, Mr G. H. Gilbert, was, like herself, a dancer. She was married in 1846, and it is fifty-three years ago that her début was made in America. Curiously enough her start there took place at Chicago, but she did not blossom forth as an actress until she went to Cleveland in the spring of 1857. Rapidly she developed a taste for "old women," and on the eve of the terrible Civil War she was playing in Cincinnati in a theatre run by Mr John Wood. She played many parts, from that of the wife in the farce The Toodles to Lady Macbeth and Mrs Hardcastle. In John Brougham's Pocahontas she made a decided hit, and her fame spread so that she was engaged for the part of the Baroness in a comedy named Finesse, written by the Countess of Giffard, and produced by Mrs John Wood at the Olympic Theatre of New York in 1864, when that fine old American actor Mr J. H. Stoddart was a member of the company. From that date she was continuously before the American public, and was in the original production of Caste at the Broadway in 1867, its first performance in the States. She joined the Daly company at the Fifth Avenue in 1869, and she remained with her old manager until his death in 1899. The number of characters she created is far too numerous to give in detail. Burton, the actor, on one occasion, speaking of his own professional association with Mrs Gilbert, said: "I have been her father, her son, her uncle, her first husband, her second husband, her third husband, her friend, and her disconsolate widower, and I have liked her better in each relation!" New York audiences for two generations had known Mrs Gilbert as mother and as mother-in-law, as daughter and as step-daughter, as first and last wife, as sister, as cousin, as aunt, and as best of good friends, loving her always, no matter what the relationship might be. Amongst the most popular plays in which Mrs Gilbert appeared were The Savage and the Maiden, The Big Bonanza, The Dark City. In this country she was seen in Dollars and Sense, A Night Off, Nancy and Co., and The Railroad of Love. She played Curtis when Mr Daly revived The Taming of the Shrew, with Ada Rehan and John Drew, at the theatre in Cranbourne-street bearing his name. Amongst her best-remembered characters when she appeared at the Olympic, New York, was Mrs Wilfer, in a dramatic version of "Our Mutual Friend." A well-known critic thus describes her in this rôle:—She was much given to tying up her head in a pocket-handkerchief, knotted under the chin, which, in conjunction with a pair of gloves worn within doors, she seemed to consider at once as a kind of armour against misfortune, invariably assuming it when in low spirits—her chronic condition—and as a species of full-dress; this, added to the 'condescending stitch in her side, which was her co-manner,' made her the exasperating, aggravating, identical Mrs Wilfer of Dickens himself—one of the happiest and most perfect representations of a creation of the master of English fiction ever put upon the stage." Mrs Gilbert has recently appeared in America in such modern plays as Miss Hobbs, Captain Marshall's A Royal Family, and Mrs Ryley's Miss and Mrs. Increasing age, however, began to tell even upon her fine constitution, and accordingly at the end of last October Mr Charles Frohman—under whose management she has been during the last five years—started her upon a farewell tour of the American cities, commencing at the Lyceum, New York. Mr Clyde Fitch wrote a four-act play named Granny especially for her, and in this the aged actress developed the part of a cross and suspicious old woman, finally becoming a kindly one. Mrs Gilbert had a most enthusiastic reception. It was hoped that she might survive the tour and enjoy a period of retirement, but an attack of apoplexy brought about the end very suddenly.

The funeral of Mrs Gilbert took place at New York, on Tuesday. There was a large attendance of prominent actors and actresses, among the pall-bearers being Sir Charles Wyndham.

ROYAL COLLEGE PATRON'S FUND.

The second concert of the Patron's Fund, founded by Mr Ernest Palmer for the encouragement of young British musicians—a fund which may lead to great things in the future—was given on Tuesday evening at the Æolian Hall. It opened with a Quartet for pianoforte and strings in E minor, by Mr W. T. Hurlstone, being played by the composer and Messrs Frank Bridge, Tom Morris, and Purcell Jones. The quartet was skilfully written, the second movement having some very attractive passages, the entire work showing that Mr Hurlstone has considerable claims as a composer. Perhaps we may set down the Four Preludes for the pianoforte, by Mr Paul Corder, as the best pieces that gifted young gentleman has yet produced, and they were played to perfection by Mr York Bower. The second and third prelude in particular were greeted with enthusiasm. A concert piece for viola and pianoforte, by A. E. Trevor Bax, was performed by the composer and Mr Lionel Tertis, and made a good impression. A poem by Mr Hall Caine, set to music by John F. M'Ewen, was recited by Mrs Tobias Matthay. It was a Manx version of an old Celtic legend, somewhat similar to Burger's "Lenore" and Dvorák's "Spectre's Bride." The idea of this sombre poem is that a dead lover comes from the grave to carry off his betrothed, and while Mrs Matthay is reciting the gruesome story the musical accompaniments are played by Messrs Morris, Kleze, Bridge, Purcell Jones, Dunhill, and Mrs Hedwig M'Ewen, and prove appropriate, also revealing considerable gloomy imagination. Mrs Tobias Matthay displayed her customary skill as a reciter. Three Fantasies for strings, by Percy H. Miles, had merit, and were cleverly interpreted by Miss Vera Warwick Evans, Mr Morris, Mr Frank Bridge, and Mr Purcell Jones. Several songs were included in the programme. Three by Frank Bridge were sung by Mr F. Aubrey Millward, one of the most impressive being 'Night lies on the silent highways," which might almost be taken for a song by Robert Franz. Two songs by F. C. S. Carey were sung with much taste by Miss Beatrice Dunn. The most attractive was the one entitled "When you are old," which had an expressive tone. The concert concluded with a spirited piece in C major, by George Dyson, for piano, flute, clarionet, bassoon, and horn, the performers being Mr Harold Samuel, Mr Gilbert Barton, Mr Charles Draper, Mr Thornton, and Mr Smith. Mr F. A. Sewell was the accompanist, and the concert as a whole gave a good idea of the results likely to be secured by the Patron's Fund.

MUSIC HALL GOSSIP.

The report has gained currency in the profession that Mrs Dan Leno has received a large sum of money from Madame Tussaud's as a consideration for the placing of the figure of the late comedian in their exhibition. This has caused Mrs Leno much distress of mind, as the exhibition of the portrait model was entirely contrary to her wish. On finding, however, that she could not prevent it by law she suggested to the management of Tussaud's that they should send a small cheque to the Belgrave Hospital for Children, for which institution Mr Dan Leno worked so hard for so many years. Messrs Tussaud met the suggestion at once by forwarding a donation of ten guineas to the secretary of the hospital.

"Butterflies in Fairyland," the invention of Mr Frank Parker, which will form the Christmas entertainment at the London Hippodrome, promises to be the most weird and beautiful production ever seen in this country. Friday, Dec. 23, has been fixed for the first performance. Mr H. E. Moss promises his patrons an astonishing novelty, "a luminous spectacle." The true definition of the term would be most difficult to explain. The theme, as the title denotes, is a butterfly romance in the land of fairies. There is a tangible story but no actors; magnificent scenery to please the eye, but no paint and canvas; beautiful rippling water, scintillating with a thousand hues; and a triumphant apotheosis. The whole production occurs in "seven events."

The spectators will scarcely realise the gigantic and difficult mechanical contrivances which have been installed for the purpose of demonstrating the multitudinous illusions and scenic effects which take place. The stage rises and falls—by hydraulic power—a distance of 8ft. at ordinary times; it has now the added mechanism which makes it telescopic. At the touch of a lever the stage falls to the low level, flush with the arena, and a subsidiary stage projects and travels out into the arena, thus giving 100 per cent more stage room. When it is considered that the tearing out of the old staging, consisting of 180 tons of teak wood, relaying it with the same—the wood, by the way, is so hard that it takes three men to drive one nail in, and over 8,000 nails were used—the erection of eight powerful motors, the bolting and rivetting of 100 tons of steel girder work, and the whole completed in splendid working order, took place in one single night, it must truly be described as the greatest mechanical achievement of modern times. A locomotive was once erected in twenty-four hours, but Mr Frank Parker's efforts have surely eclipsed this record.

The charity of the profession is proverbial. Only a few days ago at a luncheon table in the West-end Mr Arthur Collins, hearing of the good work accomplished by the Model Soup Kitchen in the Euston-road, volunteered a handsome donation, and Mr George Robey then took the hat round to the other people who were enjoying their midday meal. The result of this impromptu collection was that the committee of this institution was able to give food to over 300 starving men and women.

Mr Robey was again working in a charitable cause on Monday, when he took a team to Tottenham to play the "Spurs" in a match organised for the benefit of the widow and family of the late "Jack" Jones. The event attracted between seven and eight thousand spectators, and a keen game resulted. The popular music hall comedian had chosen a powerful side, but the redoubtable Spurs won by two goals to one. Mr Robey scored the only goal for his side ten minutes after play commenced. The crowd would not take Mr Robey seriously, and spectators on the field seemed to expect to see him in a battered hat, with grease-painted face, and a tattered umbrella. But Robey loves athletics, and he finds that his laborious afternoons as a "rocker" are an excellent preparation for his work o' nights. The match resulted in a "gate" of £175.

Mr Harry Randall's part in the Drury-lane pantomime is that of the principal dame, who in this instance is an ancient fairy. Her trouble is that, like her more earthly sisters, she has lost some of her magic power with advancing age, and when she wishes to summon spirits from the vasty deep or in other ways to work wonders she discovers that her will is not obeyed. The idea is an amusing one, and the situations arising from it are ludicrous enough to afford the comedian every opportunity of exploiting a rare fund of eccentricity. Indeed, Mr Randall's elderly frolicsome females—widows or spinsters—are always as gushingly ridiculous as they can be. He is having a special number written for him by Mr J. Bernard Dickson, and its patter will be associated with women's wrongs.

Fragson, the latest acquisition of Mr Arthur Collins, for Drury-lane Theatre, is now playing no fewer than three characters in the revue now running at the Parisiana. They are a bourgeois, a coachman, and a female concierge, wherein he displays the virtues of a good distinct voice and irresistible facial drollery. He is also an excellent dancer. When he does a turn by himself he always appears in evening dress, and whether it is a sentimental or a humorous song, he accompanies himself, and soon has the audience beating time to the lively music of the refrain. One of his recent successes "L'Amour Boiteux" ("Lame Love,") sold over a million copies.

Jugglers from China and Japan are no great novelties, but a Chinaman who is a Chinaman and not an American imitation, who has an entertainment entirely distinct from any of his predecessors, is the great Ching Ling Foo, who some months ago was engaged at an enormous salary by the directors of the Empire. He is just finishing a long tour round the world, and will appear for the first time in England on Monday, Jan. 2, at the variety theatre in Leicester-square, accompanied by his clever company of ten other Celestials.

There was a lengthy programme at the St. Bartholomew's matinée at the Alhambra on Thursday. Mr Charles Warner read a rhymed "Appeal" by Mr B. Fletcher Robinson in his usual expressive way, and other artists who appeared were Mr Hayden Coffin, Mr Gus Elen, Mr George Robey, Mr Harry Tate, and Mdlle. B. Saverny. A pretty souvenir programme was sold by hospital nurses and other ladies, and there should be a handsome sum realised by the performance for the rebuilding fund of "Bart's."

Mr Alfred Butt, the manager of the Palace, is now staying in Berlin, where he has put up at the Central Hotel. He went on to the German capital from Hamburg, where at this time of the year there is an immense fair, at which all kinds of Continental artistes assist.

The Palace Theatre anniversary, which is confessedly one of the most attractive of the year, will be celebrated on Tuesday next. In addition to the attractions mentioned in our columns last week, the bill includes Mr R. H. Douglass, Miss Camille Clifford, De Gracia's Baby Elephants, Morris Harvey, Nelson Jackson, Miss Ruth Lincoln, Miss Nina Martino, the Ameen-Abou-Hamed Troupe of acrobatic Arabs, Yamamoto and Kayoshi, and the A-Ba-Be picture postcards. The performance will commence at 7·15.

Mr Ernest Shand is the happy father of a baby girl, who was born on Monday. There is much rejoicing at the Heathers, Poynders road, Clapham, and papa has received many hearty congratulations.

Mr Alfred Selwyn, of the Hippodrome, Glasgow, we are given to understand, has been selected by Mr Tom Barrasford as the manager of the new Lyceum Theatre of Varieties, which is rapidly approaching completion.

Mr S. King Alexander has succeeded Mr Barney Armstrong as manager of the Queen's and Tivoli, Glasgow.

Mr Barney Armstrong wishes to sincerely thank his brother and sister professionals, also other friends, for their good wishes on his benefit night at the Tivoli, Glasgow, which proved to be a record. Mr Armstrong is by way of returning to the boards, opening on Monday, Dec. 19, at the Pavilion, Glasgow.

Mr Arthur Langstaffe, late conductor of the orchestra at the Royal Theatre of Varieties, Oldham, passed away Nov. 29, and was interred at Chadderton Cemetery on Saturday. Mr Dottridge and Mr Knowles sent two magnificent floral wreaths, and others came from numerous friends. The deceased gentleman has left a widow and child to mourn his loss.

Dr. Walford Bodie has just finished a phenomenally successful run of four months in Scotland, playing everywhere to overflowing houses and breaking all his previous records despite the fact of its being his sixteenth visit to his native land. He opened on Monday at the Metropole Theatre, Gateshead-on-Tyne, with his own company, and has been playing to his usual record business, the large theatre being packed to the doors twice nightly. The Doctor has made a great hit with "Mystic Marie, the Real Trilby," the Glasgow and Newcastle Press being unanimous in declaring it to be the most sensational and wonderful act of its kind. Already Dr. Bodie has had many offers for this new act. Miss Marie will give her séance next week at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Richmond.

Mr Albert Bushell, of the Birmingham Gaiety, was to the fore on Friday week last in the cause of the local unemployed, when the proceeds of both houses, amounting to upwards of £80, were handed over to the chairman of the Watch Committee, who attended and testified to the generosity of the Gaiety directors and Mr Bushell in particular.

Mr Wm. Henry Broadhead, Kensington Promenade, Blackpool, applied at Preston Police court on Wednesday, before Mr W. P. Park and other justices, for a theatrical licence for the Royal Hippodrome, now in course of erection in Friargate, Preston. There was a strong array in opposition. Mr Parker resisted the application on behalf of the Prince's Theatre, Mr Blackhurst represented the Theatre Royal, Mr Turner opposed for owners in Swarbrick-court, but afterwards withdrew, and Mr P. H. Edelston also opposed. Mr Broadhead explained that every possible precaution had been taken to safeguard against fire, and the whole place had been erected on the best principle. He was cross-examined by Mr Edelston and Mr Blackhurst as to the suggested insufficiency of the exits, but he insisted there was ample provision. The justices appointed a committee to visit the premises, and adjourned the application for a week.

Mr Frank Macnaghten, with his usual kindness and liberality, granted the free use of the Palace Theatre, Bath, on Tuesday to the Bath Cycling Club for their annual appeal to provide a dinner for 200 of the aged poor, and also to benefit the funds of the Bath General Hospital. Several local amateur ladies and gentlemen gave "turns," in addition to the week's company. The house was crowded at greatly increased prices, and a good surplus is assured. During the evening the Mayor of Bath (Mr B. John), who was accompanied by the Mayoress, addressed the audience, and acknowledged their indebtedness to Mr Macnaghten, coupling the popular acting-manager's name in the vote of thanks. Mr Trussell, in the absence of his chief, briefly replied.

It has been decided to play a pantomime at Christmas at the Walthamstow Palace, now endowed with a theatrical licence. The subject is to be Cinderilla, of which story a shortened version will be written, as it will have to be played twice nightly. The direction will be in the capable hands of Mr Espinosa. Mr Barclay will give three matinées weekly.

On the morning of Dec. 6 the Mayor of Portsmouth publicly thanked a well-known and zealous official of the Musical Copyright Association—Mr W. F. Maffey—for an act of the greatest bravery, and presented him with the certificate on vellum of the Royal Humane Society, for saving, on Aug. 10, the lives of two boys named Martin, who were in imminent danger of drowning off the Hot Walls at Southsea, the most dangerous bathing place in the locality. Mr Maffey, who is a London ex-police-constable, had to dive in 18ft. of water after the two lads, and the younger of the pair, who had sunk for the third time, had to be lifted from the sea bottom. Artificial respiration was successfully resorted to. The gallant officer has previously saved two lives from fire, for which he received a certificate and £2.

Mr Edward Conybeare Foster, the manager of the Bordesley Palace, the latest addition to Birmingham's permanent places of amusement, is a son of Major Foster, R.M.A., and was born in Cork. Educated in London and abroad, where he became proficient in the French and Italian languages, he joined the banking business, entering the National Provincial Bank of England, Birmingham, in Bennett's Hill. After several years' experience in England, he entered the Bank of Bengal, in Calcutta, relinquishing his position to go on the stage. He travelled with musical comedy, drama, and comedy for two years all round the Far East, and then became connected with the management staff of Moss' Empires, Limited, at the Holloway Empire, which he left for a similar appointment at Stratford, E., whence he was promoted to Bordesley. He is fond of sport, but fonder still of his business, and, with him at the helm, the Bordesley Palace should become a property even more valuable than it is at present, for Mr Forster is evidently determined to retain and add to his already marked success by means which must command the confidence and admiration of all who rejoice to see a handsome hall discreetly and energetically conducted.

Mr Wyndham's enormously successful Glasgow pantomime, produced on Thursday, the 1st, was incidentally also a triumph for Messrs Francis, Day, and Hunter, the following numbers published by them being cheered to the echo:—"Navaho," "Angelina Hank," "Twenty Girls—Thirty Girls," "The Troubadour," "If I were king," and "Come and be a Soldier."

Mr Harry Hayton, comedian, was married on Nov. 30 at the Parish Church of St. Thomas, Liverpool, to Miss Elizabeth Coultherd. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr Peters, and the wedding party went from the church to the house of the bride's father, where the numerously attended reception was followed by a dance. The presents were costly, and numerous letters and telegrams of congratulations were received by the happy couple.

The latest additions just added by Mr John Smith, Messrs Francis and Day's manager, to the now famous series of "Sixpenny Pops" are "The Angel of my Dreams," "There Goes my Soldier Boy," and "You can't Stop the Sun from Shining." The catalogue now comprises 132 numbers.

Members of the Junior Institution of Engineers, who visited the Coliseum Theatre on Saturday afternoon had an opportunity of inspecting the great revolving stage. Subsequently they listened to an explanation by Mr Wingfield Bowles of the manner in which Mr Oswald Stoll's novel stage has been constructed and the effects which are possible by its use.

The programmes for the opening performances of the Coliseum, which opens at noon on Monday, Dec. 19, are now complete. The chief attractions of the performances given between twelve and two and six and eight will be a grand musical spectacle, entitled Port Arthur, and an idyllic scene, entitled The Last Load. Mr J. C. Piddock, Miss Violet Grazia, and Miss Sylvia Sablanc will be seen in this, and in The Up-River Girl, an attraction of the second and fourth performances, Mr J. C. Piddock will be supporting Miss Bertha Palliser. Miss Madge Lessing will also sing a military song, "Good-bye, little girl," supported by the pipers and drummers of the Caledonian Boys' Band and a detachment of Highland soldiers, to be followed by a song scena Witches, in which Miss Lessing is to be assisted by a picked double octet of Coliseum dancers. Another great attraction of the second and fourth performances is a scene at Epsom, entitled "The Derby."

The Coliseum company also includes Miss Millie Hylton with a special song "Dairy Mary," supported by a bevy of dairy-maids, to be followed by "The Belles' Parade," words by Oswald Stoll and music by Walter Slaughter; Mr Eugene Stratton, Mr R. A. Roberts, the Boissets, Cooke and Rothert, Mdlle. Clementa and her dogs, the Three Bounding Pattersons, Miss Decima Moore, the Reiff Brothers, Mdlle. Bonita, May Edouin and Fred Edwards, and the Debreans.

For his numerous scenas, interludes, and spectacles, Mr Stoll has engaged a chorus of eighty and an orchestra of forty-two, under the direction of Mr Walter Slaughter and Mr Maurice Jacobi. The stage producer is Mr Marshall Moore, from Drury-lane; Mr John Leonard is the acting-manager; and Mr Will Bishop the ballet master.

We may congratulate Mr W. S. Wheeler, secretary and treasurer of the Paragon, on his approaching marriage to Miss Godden, fixed for Saturday next, Dec. 17. The bride is well-known and popular among the frequenters of the popular East-end Palace, where she held a position in the refreshment department.

Mr Barrasford has made elaborate arrangements for the comfort of the performers at the new Lyceum, and the stay behind the scenes, which causes such a sense of weariness, is to be made not only tolerable but enjoyable. Professionals of the sterner sex will have the attractions of a billiard room in which to pass some of the hours of waiting, and for the ladies there will be a reception room, furnished with magazines and newspapers. As many of the artistes will be engaged exclusively, one can understand what a boon and blessing such arrangements will be to the men and women of the profession.

The size of the new Lyceum may be gauged from the fact that it is 100ft. from the back of the audito the proscenium, the opening of which is 42ft. The stage has a depth of 58ft. Much of the internal decoration is already finished, though the sliding roof has yet to be fixed in position.

Mr John Grun Malx, who supports a roundabout on his chest, and does other legitimate feats of strength, has been specially engaged for the third time for twenty weeks by Mr Tom Barrasford, also by Mr Tom Macnaghton, Mr G. A. Payne, and Mr J. L. Graydon. He has no vacant dates for 1905. Next week he is to astonish audiences at Sadler's Wells by his wonderful feats.

Yesterday (Friday) was the third anniversary of the opening of the Hackney Empire, and during the day and evening Mr Christie, the manager, and Mr Johnson, the second in command, received the felicitations of influential residents in the vicinity and of many notables of the variety world, comprising proprietors, managers, and artists. The following lines, written for the occasion, were spoken at a little informal meeting of the staff by Mr Wiltshire, a respected member thereof:—

Three years ago!—three years this very day—
Since Hackney's Empire came this way to stay,
And all the Mare-street folk (and few are silly)
Are proud the mare had such a splendid filly!
The neighbourhood will never be "off song"
While Christie's minstrel's help the boat along.
So ere we get up steam for next year's trip,
Let's toast our vessel anchored near "The Ship"—
And don't forget the man who found the coal,
So here's long life and health to Oswald Stoll!
From manager down to the boy so small
Prosperity and happiness to all.
And when three years more have gone their round,
May each of us be here, still safe and sound!
"A plague on both your houses!" Shakespeare said,
But these "two houses" find the boys in bread.
So let us hope we'll never see the day
When "'Ackney has the 'ouses took away!"

We regret to announce the death of Mr W. W. Hodgson, husband of Miss Florrie Chester, of the Three Sisters Chester. The sad event happened on Nov. 25 on board the Maori, of which vessel the deceased gentleman was second engineer. Mrs Hodgson has received many messages of sympathy in her bereavement.

Miss Fanny Wentworth, who will appear at the Oxford immediately after her present engagement at Wyndham's terminates, narrowly escaped entertaining her audience, some weeks ago, with an unrehearsed effect. There was a handsome new music-stool at the piano, and, catching sight of it half a minute before the curtain went up, she ran on to the stage to see whether it was the right height. "It will do very well," she said, without rising, to the stage manager over her shoulder. He gave the preliminary signal to ring up, but as he did so the handsome new stool collapsed. Then there was half a minute of wild excitement. The curtain went up, and discovered Miss Wentworth, calm and smiling, but with the old stool in its accustomed place.

Mr David Day had perforce to spend a portion of last Thursday, his birthday, at the Royal Courts of Justice, where, in Room Four of the King Bench Division, Mr Justice Kennedy granted a perpetual injunction, with a nominal fine and costs, against a Mr E. Matthews, of Hoxton, for infringement of certain of the firm's copyrights, including "I've made up my mind to sail away" and "Pansy Faces."

A very amusing show is that provided at the Palace just now by De Gracia's elephants. The three animals engage in a cricket match. One labelled Fyldesley takes the bat, another as Hirst handles the ball, and the third, wearing the colours of Warner, fields. When the pachyderm bowler sends up a curly one by means of his trunk, it is promptly hit to the on and smartly fielded by the good-natured quadruped standing at mid-wicket. The attempts at scoring made by this animal are exceedingly ludicrous.

The warm welcome given by the music hall public to anything new and original should incite artists to give time and thought to new business, and to depart from the old stereotyped entertainment. There is no more striking proof of this than the great success of Miss Rachel Lowe since her advent as a single turn. With her originality has meant largely increased salaries and a full date book. The Plymouth papers of the current week have evinced their appreciation of the little lady's novel songs, and the public have given every evidence of their enjoyment.

Mr David Day celebrated his birthday on Thursday last, and, as usual, was the recipient of innumerable congratulations by post, cable, wire, and telephone. During Mr Day's recent stay in New York with his wife and son, the pleasure of the party was greatly enhanced by the hospitality of Mrs Leo Feist, of that city.

Mr Walter Gibbons, well-known as one of the pioneers of the great Cinématograph industry, is a man of up-to-date ideas. He is ubiquitous. At one time he will be standing in the dress-circle of the Empire, Islington, and ten minutes later expressing his satisfaction with the aspect of the Royal interior. A few minutes afterwards he will be seen leaning over the back of the dress-circle at the Grand, Clapham—one of the finest in London—exchanging friendly greetings with his popular manager, Mr Harry Bawn. His final call will be at the magnificent Duchess Palace, Balham. How does he manage it? Why, in his 1,200 guinea 25 h.p. motor, which is in reality a luxurious brougham. The passengers sit in heavy upholstered easy chairs, which make the travelling very comfortable and without the slightest jar or vibration.

Mr Sidney Hyman and Miss Madeline Barber intend reviving the glories of pantomime at the Britannia, and the Hoxton folk, who have always shown a great fondness for this form of entertainment, will be regaled on Boxing Night with a version of Sinbad.

Miss Lily King-Lloyd (of the Arthur Lloyd Trio and daughter of the late Arthur Lloyd), was married quietly on Thursday, at All Saints' Church, New-park-road, Balham, to Mr Sven O. Olsson, a gentleman in business in the City. The happy couple were the recipients of many handsome presents and letters of congratulation. After the ceremony, Mr and Mrs Olsson entertained a few friends at their residence, 11, Fieldhouse-road, Balham. They then started for the honeymoon at Brighton, amid many expressions of goodwill. The Arthur Lloyd Trio resume business on Monday at the Ardwick Empire, after which they return to town.

Mr E. E. Giles, as may be gathered from our "Gossip" columns last week, is resigning his position as general manager of the Battersea Empire. He has been tendered by his directors a farewell benefit, to take place there on Wednesday evening, Jan. 11, 1905. For this occasion he has been promised the support of the most prominent artistes of the variety stage.

Mr Peter Conroy, late conductor of the Canterbury orchestra, is now installed as musical director of the Lambert Phonograph Company, at the great workshops in Euston-buildings, hard by Gower-street Station. Mr Conroy was selected from over a score of capable musicians who applied for the post, and a band of no fewer than fifty instrumentalists still follow his beat. The instruments manufactured by the company are marvels of ingenuity and simplicity, and the records turned out—a patented invention of Mr F. Matthews, of Chicago, the London manager of this flourishing concern—can be subjected to the roughest usuage without injury.

Miss Lil Hawthorne has just finished a highly successful starring tour, and will now devote two weeks to rehearsing the part of the Prince, in the pantomime of The Sleeping Beauty, at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol. The part of the prince has been specially written for Miss Hawthorne by J. Hickory Wood. She is making her song "Tessie" a big feature for the pantomime, and is introducing into it much original business.

Miss Nellie Wallace was re-engaged by Mr Oscar Barrett for three years further during the second week of last year's pantomime at the Prince's Theatre, Manchester, and she was only released in June on giving two doctors' certificates. The popular comedienne was also released by Mr Hyman from South Africa after an examination by his own doctor.

The ending of Miss Carrie Daniels, who was well known on our theatre and music hall stage, was very sad. For some years she was very popular as a soubrette, and her dancing and banjo-playing were highly appreciated. We remember her as a bright, clever artiste in a pantomime at the Pavilion, Mile-end. She was born in America.

Miss Ethel Arden and Mr George Abel, who have been appearing at the Hippodrome, Norwich, in their highly successful sketch Three of a Kind, were called on the stage on Saturday evening at the end of their performance in the first house by Mr Councillor F. W. Fitt, the part-proprietor of the hall, who, in a few well-chosen words, referred to the enormous success of Three of a Kind. He then asked Mrs Abel's acceptance of a magnificent bouquet and a massive silver mirror handsomely chased and engraved. To Mr Abel he handed a silver-mounted photo frame with a souvenir of the Hippodrome. In making these presentations Councillor Fitt remarked that he would look forward with pleasure to the return visit of Mr and Mrs Abel with their sketch. Miss Ethel Arden replied on behalf of herself and her husband, and the audience cheered vociferously.

Mr F. Warden-Reed has written and composed a new song for Mr George D'Albert entitled "I've clicked," which will be produced shortly. After another six months' successful tour with his duologue, Married or Photographed, Mr Warden-Reed returns to London for Christmas, opening again in the provinces at the Empire, Nottingham, on Dec. 26.

At the complimentary dinner given to Mr David Day on Saturday Mr J. Bernard Dickson remarked upon the record voyage that Mr Day and his wife and son had made from New York. "They were only three days crossing the Atlantic," he said. Mr Hannen Swaffer referred to the guest as a man who turned bars of music into bars of gold, and notes struck upon the piano into notes with which one could buy things.

Messrs J. W. Cragg, Joe Elvin, and R. G. Knowles have been elected as trustees of the Music Hall Artistes' Railway Association.

All members of the M.H.A.R.A. are requested to furnish the secretary with their permanent addresses.

Ahrensmeyer, the Cowboy hypnotist, concludes to-night a London season of sixteen weeks, and commences a provincial tour at the Palace, Sunderland, on Monday. Mr George Harrington has charge of Ahrenameyer's business affairs, and, therefore, success in the country is assured.

"What is a serio-comic?" asked the judge at the Coventry County Court on Tuesday during the hearing of an action by Miss Dorothy Wyatt, a music hall artist, against the Hippodrome Company for £16, under an alleged agreement to appear a week in Coventry and a week in Ipswich. The assistant stage-manager answered the question. A serio-comic, he said, was a lady who came on the stage, sang serio-comic songs, jumped about a bit, and perhaps kicked her legs. The plaintiff said that after the second night of her engagement the manager told her she was too refined for Coventry, and offered her £3 for the week. The jury gave the plaintiff a verdict for £8 for the Coventry engagement, finding that she was a competent artiste.

We are asked by Mr J. J. Fruin, the secretary, to state that the Music Hall Home Fund Committee will meet every Thursday until further notice at the Camberwell Palace.

The Croydon Palace anniversary is to be celebrated on Thursday, Dec. 22, when Mr Eustace Jay will present a special programme of great attractiveness.

The anniversary of the Euston has been fixed by Mr G. A. Payne for Friday, Dec. 23. Mr Fred M'Avoy is preparing a programme of festival proportions, and there will be a crowd of well-wishers to congratulate the directorate on the success of this fine palace of varieties.

Mr Henri Gros and his co-directors will celebrate, on Thursday next, the seventh anniversary of the Metropolitan, one of the most successful of the ever-increasing circle of variety palaces. Though several of the stars will have departed for pantomime rehearsals by that time, we may nevertheless expect a programme of rare excellence, and Mr Jack Edgar has already a strong list of entertainers for this much-appreciated celebration.

Mr Lennox Barry, who is now filling the position of manager at the Battersea Empire, vacated last week by Mr E. F. Giles, has been associated chiefly with musical comedy, having been engaged both in Mr George Edwardes and Mr George Dance's companies. He is, however, not quite a stranger to the variety boards, having appeared thereon both in London and the provinces.

It is understood that the Theatrical Managers' Association has determined to withdraw the offer not to prosecute in the case of the performance at music halls of sketches which do not exceed thirty minutes in duration, and contain only five or six performers. Since the offer was not accepted the association considers itself at liberty to take action anywhere.

Mr J. L. Graydon desires to heartily thank all those artistes who appeared and who were present to appear at the Middlesex and Brighton Alhambra anniversaries. He is pleased to state that with their valuable co-operation both events were extremely successful.

Mr Frank Macnaghten's experiment of giving special Monday matinées to women and children, which has been so successful in the provinces and the east of London, was tried at the Surrey on Monday, and although the excellence of the programme may have influenced the attendance, there is little doubt that the innovation has caught on.

The 384th meeting of the executive committee of the M.H.A.R.A was held on Tuesday afternoon, Mr Harry Mountford presiding. The secretary reported that forty-three new members had joined during the past week, making a total number enrolled since the commencement of 10,894. The names were submitted and confirmed by the committee. It was decided to appoint a sub-committee to arrange the annual dinner and dance of the Association.

On the 5th inst. the commodious new premises of F. F. W. Oldfield and Co., the well-known theatrical printers, were occupied permanently by the firm's staff, and from henceforth all business will be conducted there. The huge office, replete with every modern improvement, is situate in Dugdale-street, S.E., adjacent to Kennington-park. The Ludgate-square and Camden-town premises are still retained for the receipt of orders, and Mr Alan Macey, who represents this historic house, has been having a busy time.

Miss Marie Dainton has two exceptionally good numbers in "Honeymoon Hall" and "By the Old Oak Tree." Both songs suit Miss Dainton's chic style, and the provincial press have been very laudatory regarding them. As the delightful musical comedy Peggy Machree, in which they are introduced, will shortly be seen at Wyndham's Theatre, Londoners will be able to pass judgment upon them.

Miss Arabella Allen appeared at the Winter Gardens, Bournemouth, last Tuesday, and made quite a hit with her clever impersonation of Dickens characters. She commenced with Uriah Heep and ended with Quilp. Constant practice has greatly increased the thoroughness of her make-up, and, as she is always accompanied by her mother, she does not have to depend on "local talent" for the quickness of her changes of costume behind the scenes. Mr Dan Godfrey was so delighted with Miss Allen's turn that he promptly re-engaged her for a week.

Mr Ernest Montefiore — whose charming, dramatic, and musical scena, The Little Colonel, will be one of the features of Mr Coe's programme at the Hammersmith Palace next week—had rather a unique experience the other evening. While Captain Barton, V.C., is alone on the stage, the electric light suddenly went out. Mr Montefiore, although in the dark, went on with the dialogue quite unconcernedly until the point was getting perilously near where he casually picks up a paper and reads therein the announcement of his wife's sudden death. Fortunately the electric light "obliged" in the nick of time, and so averted what would otherwise have been a most ludicrous situation.

A concert will be given on Sunday evening at the Chelsea Palace in aid of Sir William Treloar's fund for Little Cripples under the auspices of the National Sunday League. The Cadogan Grand Orchestra, under the able direction of Mr Angelo Asher, will be a principal feature of the entertainment. The Mayor of Chelsea and members of the Borough Council will be present.

Miss Reba Kaufman, who appears as a middy and dances a bright little solo in Entente Cordiale, at the Alhambra, was one of the first of the many variety artistes to make a hit in America with the popular song called "Sammy." She sang it in the manner adopted by Miss Louie Pounds in The Earl and the Girl and Miss Blanche Ring at the Tivoli, picking out a man in one of the boxes to represent Sammy. The audiences on "the other side" seem to have appreciated the joke very highly, but on one occasion the laugh was smartly turned against the pretty little singer. After a couple of lines the supposed Sammy, instead of betraying the usual embarrassment on finding the eyes of the whole house turned upon him, calmly opened a large umbrella, and did not emerge from behind it until the song was over. On the following night Miss Kaufman divided her attention between the boxes on opposite sides of the stage. The first Sammy smiled and bowed his acknowledgments, but the other man leaned forward and requested her, in a gruff voice, to "Please go back to the other fellow." She remembered the umbrella, and took his advice.

At Westminster Police-court, on Tuesday, John Sapsford, twenty-three, bookmaker's clerk, of 49, Lambeth-road, surrendered to recognisances on remand, charged with violently assaulting Mr Wm. Johnson, music hall artist. The prosecutor, whose face was swollen and partially covered with bandages, deposed that at 12·30 on the morning of the 2nd inst. he was proceeding homeward through Lambeth-road with his sister-in-law and young daughter—the ladies having been to a concert—when he was suddenly knocked down by the prisoner, who jostled against him. While on the ground the prisoner most brutally kicked him in the face, closing one of his eyes, cutting his lips, and loosening his teeth. His disfigurement was such that for weeks he would be precluded from fulfilling a professional engagement. He never saw the prisoner before the assault. Mr Horace Smith fined the prisoner £3, or one month.

THE LONDON MUSIC HALLS.

THE GRANVILLE.

At the pretty home of variety Walham-green way there is no falling-off in the provision of thoroughly good, strong bills-of-fare, and as caterers for the public appetite for entertainment Mr Jesse Sparrow and his able acting-manager, Mr Ernest Bridgen, are second to none in their indefatigable endeavour to please their patrons. Every week some special "star" scintillates, in addition to a number of excellent "turns" by less well-known and sought-after artistes. Last week Miss Marguerite Broadfoote, among others, scored heavily with her latest fol-de-rol song on the subject of "nursery rhymes," very much modernised. On Monday George Robey, Gus Elen, and Ada Cerito were billed. George Robey being unable to appear, an excellent deputy was provided in the person of Ernest Shand, who rattled through his whimsical ditty, "More trouble for someone," and then gave his burlesque song and patter travestying the recent "Keiro" prosecution entitled "Professor Beiro, the palmist and clairvoyant," in which he introduces many novel features and laughable satires on the gentle art of reading the fortune by the hand. Gus Elen is as immensely popular as ever, and his latest ditty concerning the cabman, "When I'm seated on my box," goes in no uncertain fashion, but hits the bull's-eye of success immediately. His carol about his little pal the mouse, which enables him to proudly state that "I'm the king of the castle," and subjugate his wife by the well-known terror to femininity caused by a mouse, provoked such a determined encore that he was fain to oblige with the ever-popular ballad, "The new pyjama hat." Miss Ada Cerito's "If you're looking for a husband," in which she offers to supply all and sundry with a mate at prices ranging from 15s. to 2s. 6d. (but she cannot guarantee the half-a-crown ones), goes as well as ever, and so does her "slavey" song, "'Arf-a-crown, 'arf-a-crown a-week!" in which her fantastic garb causes peals of laughter to break continually from the audience. Wal Pink gives his well-known and humorous monologue, "Cheap Jack," and varies it with a capital semi-pathetic recitation, "In the Mansion Over the Way." Lawrence Barclay is certainly a most eccentric comedian, and his songs, "Yes, verily, yea," in which he appears as a "gentleman of the cloth," and his excellent parody, "Good-bye, little yellow bird," take the fancy of the audience immensely. Miss Carrie Lawrie's juveniles in their novel Kindergarten sketch are extremely popular, and these clever and precocious youngsters are repeatedly encored. Miss Cassie Walmer, the dusky princess, is received with acclamation in both her songs and the sand dance which follows, and proves herself nimble of wit as well as deft of foot. Miss Dolly Harmer in her "Visit to a Music Hall" shows her ability and agility in various songs and dances, and gives quite a dramatic little sketch à la Father Gaspard in Les Cloches. Some first-rate animated pictures are shown on the Edisonograph, including "Revenge," "Three little maids from school," "Japs marching to the front," "The fatal wig," "The upper and lower falls of Trochay (Perth)," "A club raid," &c. Alf Passmore is funny in "She told me the old, old story;" Miss Florence Yaymen is a dexterous dancer and dainty eccentrique; the Olive Trio contribute a couple of capital duets in "Fishing" and "The uses of man." Will Farrell, express comedian; Miss Hettie Lee, comedienne and dancer; Charles Fanning, humorous patterer; Charles Pastor, laughing comedian; Cullane and Conroy, vaudeville artists; and Charles Deane, who sings "Not with the milk in the morning" and "Left, right, that's how we go" complete a long and strong programme. Mr W. S. Bassett, as usual, presides over the capital Granville orchestra.

QUEEN'S, POPLAR.

The problem play is not familiar to the patrons of the Queen's, who have this week gazed with some perplexity on the "picture in three panels" of Sapho prepared by Mr Monte Bayley. Daudet's powerful story has suffered much by compression, and though some situations of dramatic intensity have been preserved, the dialogue lacks strength, and the humour supplied is thin and not always above reproach. The most exciting incidents of the story have been pieced together, the interest beginning with the interview of the seductive Sapho with the infatuated Jean Gaussin, under whose protection she places herself when her former lover, Flamant, has been imprisoned for forgery. Jean finds out by the photograph of Sapho's child that she has been the mistress of Flamant, and determines to leave her in spite of her earnest pleadings. Jean discovers that his affection for Sapho is too strong, and returns to her, but she meditates suicide, and allows him to go away with the impression that she is about to return to Flamant. She is in the act of taking poison when Flamant reappears, having been released from prison, and offers Sapho marriage, which she joyfully accepts. Miss Diana Hope had the difficult task of enlisting for Sapho the sympathy of an audience accustomed to the strongest melodrama, but she acted with infinite resource and with no little pathos and grace. Mr Frank Stone realised the part of Jean Gaussin in appearance, and gave a vigorous and impulsive portrayal, and Mr A. Fellows Bassett was earnest and well-spoken as Flamant. Mr Charles Darrell and Miss Amy Tempest shared the comedy rôles of Césaire and Divonne, and the author, Mr Monte Bayley, appeared as Paul Déchélette. Constant care is exercised by Mr Joe Haynes, the popular manager, in his efforts to obtain a varied and interesting programme. A most acceptable interlude is supplied by Belrose and De Velin, who render the airs of "Alice, where art thou?" and "Come back to Erin," as duets. Both artists sing with taste and expression, and appreciation is shown in the shape of a hearty recall. The Brothers Redmond have all kinds of ingenious methods for obtaining laughter, a mission in which they are particularly successful, some clever juggling and high-kicking forming an agreeable variant. Neatness and skill distinguish the somersaults and handsprings of the Three Dagmars, one of whom performs numerous funny pranks as a black page boy which are highly relished. Mr Alf Chester secures a hearty welcome from his admirers in a song in which he suggests by many artistic touches the cheery humour that may exist within a suit of blue, and the realisation secures an abundance of approval. Nadji, the Hindoo marvel, is a lithe and agile dancer, and by her contortionist and balancing feats well maintains her right to the title of "Queen of Equipoise." A strong voice and pleasing style enable Miss Madge Daly to win her way into the best regards of the audience with "Fine feathers make fine birds" and in "Molly, I love you," the latter selection being especially enjoyed. Miss Nellie Navette fascinates by her singing and dancing, her grace and elegance being particularly noticeable in the pas seul with which she concludes, and which is the subject of hearty applause. Mr J. H. Jennings, Houpla and Hec'a, and Victor's dogs contribute valuably to the programme, which is brought to an exciting conclusion by the dramatic episode entitled A Daughter of Pleasure, in which Miss Zerlina Harrington, Mr J. G. Grahame, jun., and Mr A. Bradshaw figure effectively.

SHEPHERD'S-BUSH EMPIRE.

The palatial and luxuriously appointed Empire opposite Shepherd's-bush-green and close to the Tube terminus supplies a long-felt want in the thickly populated neighbourhood in which it is situated, and an admirable service of electric cars also brings close to its doors nightly a large number of variety lovers who dwell in the rapidly-growing districts adjacent. Ever since its opening a little over a year since, unvarying prosperity has attended Mr Stoll's enterprise, and his patrons can always rely upon a really first-class and frequently unique entertainment. In the current week's enjoyable programme is the wonderful exhibition of Richard List's performing and wrestling bears, a troupe of fine animals, who go through their various tricks with apparent willingness, requiring no persuasion at all from their clever trainer. The four brown bears ride bicycles, drive a motor round the huge cage which occupies the stage, manipulate a see-saw, tumble, and even partake of a light meal at table, to the huge delight of the house, the magnificent Polar bear indulging in a wrestling bout with his intrepid master. The clumsy brute, if not exactly an expert at the "half nelson," has some very effective "hugs," but List never allows his huge antagonist to get the upper hand, and in the end manages to floor him, the bear finally lumbering off the stage arm-in-arm with his trainer. Altogether a most interesting and well-worked show. Another extremely clever turn is the fine hand and head balancing of the Wille Brothers, a trio of expert and finished artistes whose difficult feats are accomplished with an ease and sureness that are really marvellous, and earn for them some of the loudest applause heard during the evening. The Sisters Devona, in their "electrical lyre" aerial act, also give a smart acrobatic display, the girls showing great strength of arm and jaw, and contributing altogether a most attractive and varied turn. A very enjoyable musical interlude is submitted by the Howards (Ralph and Nellie), melody and mirth being cleverly combined. The pair give fine renderings on the cornet of "Eileen Alannah" and "The Boys of the Old Brigade," and the male of the duo works a humorous and original idea in "The Broken Melody." Mr Charles Gardiner gives a funny dame impersonation, his song "I'm a lady all the time," and its accompanying patter, hugely amusing his auditors; and laughter is the continuous accompaniment to the droll duologue The Revolt of Man; or, 100 Years Hence, played in exactly the right spirit by Phillips and Terry, the gentleman of the duo giving a screamingly funny impersonation of the "man" who is compelled for a time to wash up the plates, peal the potatoes, and perform the usual domestic duties; and his partner being equally humorous as his decidedly better half—until he strikes. Miss Nellie Coleman wins hearty approval for her realistic impersonations of an Irish comedian and a comic singer of the red nose and baggy trousers type, her step-dancing being particularly neat and skilful; and Dome, the "comedy clay man" fashions some fairly faithful portraits of General Buller, Lord Kitchener, and Buffalo Bill; Bill Bailey and a Russian admiral also being executed by the adroit modeller, who also introduces much laughter-provoking business into his novel and appreciated turn. That popular and clever character artiste Miss Alice Maydue has a funny ditty in "The Greatest London Actress ever seen," which enables her to display her undoubted versatility by her burlesque impersonations of the hero, villain, heroine, and old man in melodrama—all humorous portraits. The novel acrobatic act of the Lumars is also included in the programme, and the pictures shown by the American Bioscope are interesting and keenly enjoyed. Mr E. H. Dobson is the courteous and energetic acting manager here; and the fine orchestra is directed by Mr George Richardson.

BATTERSEA EMPIRE.

An agreeable evening is always assured at the Battersea Empire, where for the past three years entertainments have been given twice nightly with gratifying success. Every form of amusement finds a place in turn in the programme, and this week the bill-of-fare contains many items that are interesting and amusing. Battersea is always prepared for anything in the nature of sport, and it, therefore, welcomes with open arms the appearance of Mr Joe Carroll, whose fame as a wrestler had preceded him. Carroll, who hails from Manchester, and is the champion middle-weight wrestler of England, will forfeit during his engagement at Battersea's Empire £25 to any English wrestler who can stand him off for fifteen minutes; and will pay £100 to any man who successfully defeats him in that time. At the first house on Monday only one wrestler took the mat against the champion, Joe Barker, of the Navy. He made a very good show against Carroll, who was declared the winner after a little over eight minutes' apparently severe struggle. A couple of brawny Batterseatites were anxious to at once try conclusions with the victor, but the gentleman who introduced Carroll informed them and the audience that they could be accommodated at the second house. Early in the programme Miss Hettie Lee, an exceptionally agile and neat dancer and high kicker, won cordial applause for her clever and attractive exhibition; and Miss Florrie Beck, serio-comedienne, interested her auditors with her ditty "I'll come back again, lad," the story of a sailor who has to leave home and little one to brave the perils of the deep. Much amusement was the outcome of the burlesque pantomimical extravaganza, The Rajah of Thigamy-ou, presented by the M'Mays. The male of the duo impersonated an Oriental potentate, and his partner his English wife, and in a quarrelling duet the lady led her husband plainly to understand that she meant to be master. When he endeavoured to use force she quickly proved her superiority, an encounter with swords convincing him finally that his English spouse was not to be trifled with. Having settled their little differences, the couple engaged in an attractive song and dance, and their novel turn was warmly received. An interesting and much-appreciated item was Walter Payne's Bio-Photoscope, the pictures shown on Monday representing Whirling the Worlds, the adventures of a party by rail, motor, airship, and submarine, an ingenious and funny series of films that proved exceedingly popular. Tiny Reiff, comedienne, aroused some amusement with her song "It's a nice time to come home in the morning," the lament of a mistress whose domestic arrives home with the milk; and the descriptive song of Mr G. A. Stevens, "Too Old at Forty," was well rendered, and exactly suited to a popular audience, who loudly applauded the sentiments contained therein. The Leslie Brothers are a pair of smart and resourceful musical eccentrics who thoroughly deserved the applause lavished on them at the conclusion of their stay. They gave a clever rendering of "The Carnival of Venice" on the violin, both manipulating one instrument, and their solos on brass instruments and some tuneful bells were also well-executed. Humorous byplay and numerous original devices for the creation of mirth were also interspersed with their musical selections, and their entire show was most enjoyable. The sketch of the programme is supplied by the prolific and versatile Wal Pink and his company, and is entitled The Prize Baby. Continuous merriment is evoked by the antics of the grown-up infant in the huge chair, the part being drolly played by the gentleman responsible for its interpretation; and the head of the combination is also very humorous as the impecunious husband of two weeks, who successfully "palms off" his dearest friend as "the prize baby." The two other characters in the amusing trifle were both capitally undertaken. The exhibition of photographs in connection with the profit-sharing scheme inaugurated some time since is also a popular feature. Mr Lennox Barry is the new manager here; and Mr W. Hinkinson carefully conducts an excellent little orchestra.

NEW CROSS EMPIRE.

Crowded audiences nightly testify their perfect satisfaction with the generous programmes submitted every week by the clever management of this handsome hall. The ever-popular T. E. Dunville heads the bill, and this artist must be well pleased with the cordial reception accorded him in his songs, entitled respectively "Enquire within," "The Scotchman," and "The railway guard." Mr Dunville's patter is very funny, and evokes roars of laughter. The Three Ronay Sisters submit a charming contribution to the evening's entertainment. These ladies style themselves the original lady clowns, and are pretty, dainty, and well-dressed pierrettes, their turn being both clever and enjoyable. Mr Milner Verren is rewarded by prolonged applause for his singing of "A Playground in the Sky," and receives much encouragement for an excellent imitation of G. H. Chirgwin. The Max Welson Four present a marvellously smart rope performance which is warmly appreciated. Two ladies calling themselves the Llewellyns, Australian operatic vocalists, give some operatic selections with skill, and wind up with "I Dreamt that I Dwelt in Marble Halls" and "A Venetian Boat Song." The Grais Baboon Prodigies excite general admiration and wonderment by their quaint performance and the skilful manner in which they have been trained, especially the baby baboon, who loops the loop so ingeniously. The Musical Jees are always welcome here in their attractive "Musical Smithy" act, and their entertainment goes with its usual smoothness and success throughout. The American Bioscope presents some most amusing pictures, including "Sardine Fishing," "Motor Mishaps," "The Boar Hunt," and illustrations of the methods adopted in the production of a newspaper. The Brothers Pueblo give a quaint and amusing turn, including a song, "My Dixie Queen," a cake-walk, and a smartly executed sand-dance. Last, but not least in point of merit, come Alburtus and Bartrum, who juggle most skilfully with clubs.

COMPLIMENTS TO MRS. HARRY BAWN.

Mrs Harry Bawn, who to the world in front of the footlights is known as My Fancy, has been entertaining Clapham folk with her superb sand dancing at the beautiful local Grand Palace. During her engagement last week she was presented with several beautiful bouquets, and one of them—a lovely floral trophy—that was handed to her over the footlights, was a tribute of admiration from the orchestra of the Grand, where the lady's husband, Mr Harry Bawn, is making himself exceedingly popular both with the profession and the public.

At the Granville, Walham-green, Mrs Bawn has also been honoured, and on Saturday evening last, after her wonderful Terpsichorean display at that popular house, she was given a lovely basket—four feet high—containing large lilies, chrysanthemums, and tuberoses. The gift was a little surprise prepared for the recipient by the staff of the Grand, Clapham. In these pretty compliments paid to his charming wife Mr Harry Bawn discovers a reflected glory, and he rejoices exceedingly at the good feeling so touchingly, so delicately, and so charmingly displayed.

THE M.H.A.R.A.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—In reply to my esteemed friend Mr Albert Voyce's letter, which appeared in your columns last week, I will only say that there is another old adage which says "Be just before you're generous." The profits of the M.H.A.R.A. are to be divided between the railway charities and the music hall charities, and must be equally given. This condition is, indeed, the bed rock of the said association. Neither can they be used for any other purpose, after paying working expenses. This was all I had in my mind in bringing the matter before the M.H.B.F. general meeting. I trust that this explanation to Mr Voyce and everyone concerned will be accepted.

Yours faithfully, PAT CAREY.

43, Knowle-road, Brixton, S.W., Dec. 7.

MR HARRY CARTE desires to thank the artistes for the 7s. 6d. collected at the Empire, Holloway, by Mr Harry Jee.

HARDY, the American Blondin, is drawing packed houses nightly at the Pavilion, Carnarvon, Owing to other engagements, he has had to refuse a tempting offer to prolong his stay there after Dec. 17. He has, however, been re-engaged for the near future.

MR GEORGE GULLIVER, ventriloquist, sails on Thursday next by ss. Tabor en route for Malta, where he is engaged for three months by Mr D. Gardner-Brown for his Bioscope entertainment. He returns to England at the end of March.

THE CAMBERWELL ANNIVERSARY.

A triumph in anniversaries was achieved at Camberwell on Tuesday, when the directors saw with satisfaction a houseful of enthusiastic supporters, who had met to honour the fifth annual celebration and to enjoy an evening's entertainment in which the promise of a prodigious programme was amply fulfilled. Mr Jesse Sparrow, who has administered to the amusement of the busy suburb from the first opening of the hall, has won and kept the friendship of all in and out of the profession, and it is not surprising that his popularity on occasions like the present is testified to both at the box-office and the footlights. One of the first favourites of the festive bill on Tuesday was Mr Geo. Robey, who distilled abundant comic essence from the monosyllable "Oh!" the inevitable recall being met with a song equally productive of laughter. The name of Mr Gus Elen is one synonymous with mirth which always flows unchecked, and the comic propensities of Mr Harry Gifford were also exercised with effect. A full course of hilarity was run by Mr Harry Pleon, whose sketch of "How to Make a Book" was backed by unceasing laughter; and anticipations of the Yuletide season were raised by Mr Ernest Rees in a song in which "Good King Wenceslas" figured ludicrously. Mr Paul Martinetti and company added largely to the fun with their droll performance of A Duel in the Snow, the finished acting of the celebrated mime and his comrades being as highly relished as ever. A new view of Miss Harriett Vernon was obtained when she appeared in the native dress of Japan, which serves to heighten her personal charm; Miss Kittee Rayburn was a source of exhilaration in her "Christening" song; and Miss Tots Davis elicited sympathy by the pathos of her impersonation of a waif. Moran and Marruce as the "musical burglars" had many strange devices for making mirth and music, including a row of railings, which produced both melody and a gorgeous display of flags. Loud applause was showered upon the Twin Sisters Anderson for their singing and dancing, in which a pretty little girl shared abundantly; the aroma of Sunny Spain was brought by the Two Graces, who sang and danced to the sound of the castanet; Miss Del Levey cut a dashing figure in the rôle of a lady-killer; Miss Marguerite Broadfoote rendered in her own charming way her quaint perversions of nursery rhymes; and among those who added to the entertainment of the long evening were Miss Peggy Pryde, May Massey, Clyo and Rochelle, Miss Gracie Grahame, the Leslie Brothers, Miss Hettie Lee, Miss Cecile Lyndon, Miss May Milburn, Mr Will Musgrave, Miss Dolly M'Calla, Major Moss and Son, Mr Jack Mansfield, Miss Flo Raynor, Miss Dorothy Royal, Silent Tait, Miss Marie Pownall, and the Edisonograph, with some well-defined pictures. Messrs Arthur W. Bray, H. Comfort, E. H. Golding, H. Joyner, and W. Howard Smith, the directors, all honoured the occasion, and received the felicitations of representatives of various branches of the profession, among whom we noticed Mr Tom Tinsley, Mr Harry Masters, Mr Geo. Foster, Mr Dave Cohen, Mr H. Burroughs Smith, Mr E. Edelsten, Capt. Woodger, and Mr Harry Lester, the secretary of the Terriers' Association, who, as on all similar occasions, attended in force. Mr Cory Woodrow governed the stage arrangements, deriving great assistance from Mr W. Broadbridge, the stage manager, and an able hand was evident in the direction of the orchestra by Mr Leon A. Bassett.

HERBERT CAMPBELL MEMORIAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—A memorial to the late Mr Herbert Campbell in the shape of a bust, either in marble or bronze, is to be obtained, and placed, if possible, in the vestibule of the Theatre Royal, Drury-lane, the scene of so many of his triumphs. Mr Harry Randall has kindly consented to act as president and Mr Edward Ledger, of The Era, as treasurer to the fund.

It is the intention of the committee to engage an artist of repute to execute this work to the memory of the above-mentioned generous and genial comedian. The committee will esteem it a great favour if his old friends and admirers will assist in making this memorial a success. All subscriptions will be duly acknowledged in The Era.

Yours faithfully, FRANK HEATH, (Secretary).

LA BELLE UNITA and PAUL arrived home on Saturday by the Umbria, after two years' engagements in the principal vaudeville theatres in the United States. Their performance met with such success on their first tour that they were re-engaged at nearly every place they appeared.

VARIETY theatre-goers in Glasgow have recently had an opportunity of renewing acquaintance with a very popular artiste in the person of Miss Frances Letty, whose appearance as an American comedienne at the Tivoli Variety Theatre, after an absence of four years, gave very great pleasure and satisfaction. The lady is the wife of a gentleman well known and much esteemed in theatrical, athletic, and cycling circles. There is every probability that Miss Letty will be seen and heard on the London variety stage shortly.

MR ERNIE LEECH, ventriloquist, wishes to thank the brother and sister artists who sent letters of sympathy in his sad bereavement at the loss of his dear mother; also to those who sent floral tributes.

MR BOB BAXTER, "The Genial One," has been engaged by Mr Robert Arthur to play the part of Mrs Crusoe in his production at the Theatre Royal, Nottingham.—Harris and Worth, comedians, have been secured by Mr Barrasford for another five years through Day's Agency.—Mr Harry Softley is appearing this week as the "Clincher," in Mr Geo. Gray's Fighting Parson sketch at Cardiff.

MISS MAY HENDERSON AND MR B. HENDERSON wish to thank Mr Frank Glenister for his good wishes for the young lady's success in Vienna and Berlin at Christmas. Should Miss Henderson not be comfortable she can speedily return to the London Pavilion, where she is always welcome.

MR DAVID HART, of Gravesend and Chatham, has fallen down a ladder from the flies at Chatham a distance of 15ft., hurting himself internally; but under the care of Dr. Bryden he is progressing favourably, and hopes soon to be himself again.

MISS FLO PENLEY and MR GEORGE ENGLISH are meeting with considerable success on tour in their happily conceived duologue Four a Shilling—Fine Mackerel. At the Palace, Swansea, where they are this week, they were re-engaged after the first night.

THE LONDON COLISEUM.

If Mr Oswald Stoll had talked of or published his ideas concerning public amusement even ten years ago he would have been regarded as an unpractical dreamer, and the practical caterers of that time would have laughed him to scorn. But a decade has done much for variety. Colossal schemes are to be discovered on every hand, and the scope and purpose of what our American cousins term a vaudeville entertainment expand with the hours. The ballet-master, the scene-painter, the designer, the engineer, the electrician, and the musical composer are all called upon in turn to aid in the improvement and the remodelling of the entertainment that most emphatically may claim to be in consonance with the tastes of the people. Far-seeing men of great enterprise and rare astuteness have made their mark by their generous interpretation of the wants of the masses, and we have many beautiful Palaces, Empires, and Hippodromes, but we think the London Coliseum marks a new departure in the world of entertainment, and when this magnificent place is opened on Dec. 19 it will be acclaimed as a building worthy of the genius who conceived and carried it through.

West-enders who have grown familiar with the façade of this new home of wonder will learn from Mr. Frank Matcham, one of the most eminent of theatrical arch tects, that he has adopted throughout an Italian style of architecture—in fact, the frontage in St. Martin's-lane and the beautiful cupola that rises above it have been treated in free Italian Renaissance. The four corners of the cupola are artistically relieved with allegorical figures boldly chiselled, representing Art, Music, Science, and Architecture. What strikes the spectator on entering the unique auditorium is that there is not a single pillar or obstruction to impair the view of the stage from any part of the house, which is divided into four distinct parts or floors—the ground-floor containing the stalls, the first floor the dress circle, the second the grand tier, and the third the balcony. The stall floor is not sloped in the usual way, but is stepped up one row behind the other, back to a row of private boxes, with the Royal box in the centre. The boxes are divided by arched marble columns, with arched hoods over, and are draped in bright red antique velvet, with richly broidered embellishments. The whole of the stalls are carpeted with velvet pile Wilton. The occupants of the dress-circle look straight towards the stage, and a similar arrangement obtains in the grand circle and balcony tiers. In the balcony the armed seats are upholstered in red velvet, and the floors are covered with superior Wilton carpet. This concession to the humbler patrons, who have the comfort of what is practically an upholstered stall for sixpence, is one of the most remarkable innovations of a remarkable enterprise.

The scheme of decoration, which as yet is in a state of incompleteness, is cream, deep red, and gold. The front of the tiers is painted cream colour enriched with gold. In the centre of the ceiling is a lofty windowed dome, which lifts at intervals in the programme, and, opening up the space, clears the vitiated air in the building. The large dome ceiling under the proscenium is no less than 55ft. wide, and is perhaps the largest opening of any theatre in the world. It takes the form of a semi-circle built of marble, the corners being occupied by large figures holding aloft Roman devices. The keystone is also composed of Roman trophies, the whole being grand in the extreme. Everything that experience can devise for the safety of the public has been introduced, and, of course, the building is fireproof, and the sanitary arrangements are most complete. The building covers more than an acre.

Like all astute enterprisers, Mr Stoll has given much consideration to the comfort of the fairer portion of his audiences. Leading out of the entrance vestibule, a sumptuous apartment of large dimensions, decorated in strict Pompeian style, is the ladies' sitting-room, fitted up in the most attractive manner, with couches, writing-tables, electric reading-lamps, ferns, and flowers; also the information bureau, where for the convenience of visitors letters can be taken down from dictation, typed, and despatched. Telephones will be provided here, and messages for the public sent out by messenger-boys.

From the ground floor the grand staircase, of Italian marbles, alabaster, &c., leads to a large baronial smoking-hall, for the use of all parts of the house. It is carried out in heavy oak timbering, the walls being covered with tapestry, and the floors of polished wood-blocks are furnished with thick rugs.

The stage at the Coliseum has not the like in any place of entertainment in the world. It comprises three moving platforms, each mounted upon an independent set of carrying wheels driven by electric motors, and on the outer table a speed of revolution equal to twenty miles an hour can be obtained. By such mechanical contrivances any limit to magnificent and original spectacular productions is almost removed. The tables can carry a load of eleven tons apiece in addition to their own weight, so that the total mass that can be set in motion is about 150 tons. On either side of the stage are sockets in which poles are fixed resembling a ship's masts in size, to which scenery and other stage properties can be secured. In the depths below is a mass of machinery, almost bewildering in extent to any but the expert. The panorama gear is very comprehensive, three large power-driven rollers and four sets of hand driven rollers being provided for the purpose of winding the great lengths of panorama cloths across the stage. In this department of the prospective entertainments as well the opportunities for beautiful displays are almost unbounded.

In addition, carriages have been fitted for the purpose of bringing people and scenery quickly into the sight of the audience. These carriages consist of a light steel framework carrying a teak platform, and depend from, and travel upon, a girder fixed 40ft. above the stage level. Altogether they can carry eight tons, and their maximum speed is seven miles an hour. There will be four distinct performances given every day—from 12·0 to 2·0, 3·0 to 5·0, 6·0 to 8·0, and 9·0 to 11·0 o'clock. Of these the first and third will be identical, and the second and fourth. Two separate companies will be engaged, representing two distinct performances; so that any of the visitors, after enjoying the first show, can stay in the building, in the refreshment-room, foyer, or writing-rooms, and receive a transfer ticket for the second performance—not, of course, without additional payment. But the prices are remarkably low. They will be 4s. in the orchestra-stalls, 3s. dress-circle tier, 2s. grand tier, front, and 1s. back, and 6d. in the balcony. The seating capacity of the building represents some 3,500 persons. We may conclude our inadequate description of this colossal and beautiful structure by expressing the hope that Mr Oswald Stoll, its creator, may find it a palace lifting to the eternal summer of prosperity.

THE newest recruit to the variety halls from the theatres is Miss Maud Marlowe, the well-known actress, who has just accepted from Messrs John P. Harrington and George Le Brunn three specially written songs, entitled respectively "The Pause," "The Knock of the Postman," and "That is the Best of being a Girl," all of which she intends to produce shortly at a leading West-end music hall.

MESSRS JOHN P. HARRINGTON AND GEORGE LE BRUNN have been exceptionally busy this week, specially writing songs and duets to fit Messrs Bert Gilbert and Daley Cooper for the forthcoming pantomime at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham. Mr Daley Cooper's absurdly funny number, "Tow-row-row," from the joint pens of these prolific authors, should, in the opinion of all who have heard it, achieve a great and lasting success.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

OCT. 11.—L'Aiglon excited more anticipatory interest than any play since Mr J. C. Williamson produced Ben Hur at the same theatre. Several reasons contribute to this. Napoleonic drama is always popular here. Sarah Bernhardt was the original Duke of Reichstadt, and the part was to be played on Saturday by Miss Tittell Brune, the American actress who had made such a hit as Sunday. Her Majesty's Theatre was packed from floor to roof. Miss Brune's Eaglet was a triumph. Shouts and cheers went up from the entire audience, the curtain being raised many times after every act and at the final tableau. The Flambeau of Mr Roy Redgrave was a sturdy exemplification of loyalty and manhood, and was rapturously received. Miss Mabel Lane made Marie Louise handsome and hard, just as the Austrian woman was. Prince Metternich could hardly have had a craftier or more cruel double than Mr Gaston Mervall, and Mr Albert Gran did good work as the Emperor of Austria, suspicious and vacillating, but withal loving. Mr Paul Scardon made the tailor an important rôle, and Mr A. E. Greenaway was a good Count Prokesch. A strong character portrait was Mr J. B. Atholwood's tutor, the Baron Von Obenaus. The Countess Napoleone Camerata was sustained by Miss Helen Ferguson, and Fanny Elssler as acted by Miss Florence Gleeson was particularly good.

"ONE OF THE BEST," which is, by-the-bye, one of the best of the Bland Holt plays, was revived at the Royal on Saturday with all the completeness and vitality which characterises Mr Holt's every effort, and he and his wife sustained the comedy parts. The other characters were adopted again by those members of the company who acted there previously.

SYDNEY, OCT. 18.—L'Aiglon at Her Majesty's Theatre grows upon one, and each visit increases the admiration of the stupendous character of the production. If Mr J. C. Williamson had done nothing else great save this Napoleonic success, his fame were assured. Miss Tittell Brune's Duke of Reichstadt is an intense surprise. The slender, graceful young American is full of power. She fills all hearts with sympathy for the son of the world's conqueror, sacrificed to diplomacy. Mr Gaston Mervale courts all the hatred heaped on the cruel ruthless Austrian Metternich, and Mr Roy Redgrave rouses the most callous by his loyal, manly portrayal of Flambeau. But the thrilling grandeur of the vision of Wagram is the best-remembered portion of the production. On it stagecraft is lavished in unlimited generosity. Romeo and Juliet is in rehearsal, with Miss Tittell Brune as Juliet, and Mr A. E Greenaway as Romeo.

"EAST LYNNE" is the bill at the Lyceum, where Mr Walter Sanford's American players are appearing. Mr Walter Sanford is the Archibald Carlyle, Mr Johnson Weir the Sir Francis Levison, and Miss Laura Wall the Isabel Carlyle.

"MAMMA'S NEW HUSBAND" is resurrected at the Criterion by Mr George Stephenson's American comedy company. Miss Olive Evans and Mr Charles Stone have their old parts, full of "go" and fun; and Miss Kate Douglas is "Pearly" Brood, a decided strengthening of the cast. The Bricknells have new and startling dances, and altogether the performance is bright and refreshing.

THE Tivoli has a pleasing change for its first part. Mr Harry Rickards has removed The Palace of Dolls, and now, in a beautiful harem painted by Mr Alfred Clint, the ladies lounge and sing with delightful abandon. The Cadwaladr Trio, the Frasettis, O'Meers Sisters, Miss Hilda Lane, Ward Sear, Gregson and Goodfellow, Kearns and Rosslyn, and a long list of artists appear nightly.

SYDNEY, OCT. 25.—L'Aiglon is having a remarkable success at Her Majesty's Theatre. The splendid mounting of Rostand's great play, the fine lines, and the electrical acting of Miss Tittell Brune rouse the jaded playgoer out of his customary indifference. The author has made this so essentially a one-part play that when one has said L'Aiglon and "Brune" little else remains. But one should also acknowledge the sterling work of Gaston Mervale, Roy Redgrave, A. E. Greenaway, Albert Gran, and Miss Mabel Love. The last nights of L'Aiglon are not yet announced, but Romeo and Juliet and Fedora are in rehearsal.

"ONE OF THE BEST" proves its title at the Royal, for, though a revival, it retains public interest longer than many other plays. The military scenes are loudly cheered, and it does not seem necessary that a change should be made But on Saturday next Mr Bland Holt will stage Sporting Life, with its exciting episodes of racing and boxing.

IN East Lynne at the Lyceum a notable advance is made by Miss Pearl Hellmuth, to long a portrayer of children, but now a very capable Barbara Hare.

"MARIA'S NEW HUSBAND," by Mr George Stephenson's American Comedy Company, goes well at the Criterion, but the end of the season is near, and the last four nights of this week will witness a revival of Brown's in Town. In these comedies Miss Olive Evans and Mr Charles J. Stone are the chief revellers in fun.

THE Tivoli has the best bill provided by Mr Harry Rickards for a long time. The Sisters O'Meers excel in their business, their graceful daring and quaint touches of humour make the audience happy. The Frasettis contribute an excellent musical turn, and the travesty on opera, by the Cadwaladr Comedy Company is most enjoyable. Miss Hilda Lane, a delightful soprano, is highly appreciated. Gregson and Goodfellow, Kearns and Rosslyn, James Opie, Goldie Collins, Ward Lear, the Diamond Duo, Ernest Wiseman, Tom Dawson, Irving Sayles, and Tom Bell, are all engaged to provide entertainment for Mr Rickards' patrons.

MISS NELLIE STEWART had a hearty reception in Melbourne on the first night of Pretty Peggy, and a handsome pearl necklace, valued at £200, was handed to her over the footlights.

MELBOURNE, OCT. 31. — HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE. — After a successful revival, lasting three weeks, A Country Girl was withdrawn on Friday evening last to make room for The Orchid, which was presented for the first time in Australia on Saturday evening to a packed house. Miss Clara Clifton, who appears amongst us for the first time, acquitted herself well in the part of Caroline Vokins, a rôle that suits her to perfection. Mr George Lauri in the character of Meakin was quite at home, his love scenes with Caroline Vokins keeping the audience well amused. The song of the evening was that plaintive and tender serio-comic "Little Mary," sung with great expression by Miss Evelyn Scott. Mr Haigh Jackson as Dr. Ronald Fausset made the most of a rather thankless part. The mounting and dressing of the play were superb, and the music was graceful and pleasing.

OPERA HOUSE.—Mr Harry James's American Travesty Stars have been drawing good houses during the week with the so-called musical comedy, Hoity Toity. The total absence of plot is more than compensated for by the bright choruses, smart dialogue, and well-arranged dances. Mr Winfield Blake, Miss Maud Amber, Kolb and Dill, Barney Bernard, and Miss Sutherland are conspicuous in the cast. Messrs Wirth Brothers' circus continues to meet with much favour. A feature of the entertainment on Saturday was a catch-as-catch-can wrestling match between Gunga Singh, a Hindoo member of the company, and C. A. Weber, of Melbourne. The contest was a fairly even one, Weber being wholly on the defensive. After an interesting struggle lasting eleven minutes the Hindoo succeeded in throwing his opponent.

MR J. C. WILLIAMSON'S Bio-tableaux of the Russo-Japanese War, which are being exhibited at the Athenæum Hall, are drawing large houses.

MUSIC HALL CONTRACT.

Mrs Cissie Louie Lawson, lessee of the King's Theatre, Walthamstow, and the People's Palace of Varieties, Tottenham, on the 2nd inst., sued two sketch performers, at Edmonton, professionally known as Benson and Geoffreys, for £7 10s. for breach of contract.

Mr H. Avery represented the plaintiff, and Mr O'Connor was counsel for the defendants.

The plaintiff's case was that the defendants were engaged, through Day's Variety Agency, to appear for a week at the People's Palace, Tottenham, the agreed fee being £7 10s. They did not, however, put in an appearance. The attendances during the week were less, and, instead of the usual profit, a loss was made on the entertainments. It was suggested that the defendants did not fulfil the engagement because they appeared at two other metropolitan halls.

The defence was that there was no contract. A contract form was sent from Day's Agency to Mrs Lawson in which the fee asked for was £8, not £7 10s, but no confirmation was received from the plaintiff, and no engagement was entered into.

Plaintiff's manager (Mr Payne) produced a contract in which the £8 had been altered to £7 10s. the alteration being initialled "H. D.," which were the initials of the agent. He also stated that the defendants had appeared at the King's Theatre, Walthamstow, for £7 10s.

The manager of the agency declared that he never saw the contract form as altered, and the initials were not put there either by his or Mr Day's authority.

Mrs Lawson said that when the contract form was first received she would not confirm the engagement at £8, but offered to do so at £7 10s. The form was returned to the agency, and was subsequently sent back to her as altered.

His Honour decided that there was a breach of contract, and awarded the plaintiff £7 10s.

MR. WILLIAM MURPHY.

Mr William Murphy, the subject of this biographical sketch, is one of the prominent roundabout proprietors in the North of England. He first saw the light of day some forty-seven years ago, in the market-place, South Shields, and his parents being old and respected travellers in the North of England, who will be remembered by many showmen of the present day. He is the owner of gondolas, "Golden Venice," a most elaborate carved and gilded roundabout. His route extends from Leeds in the South, to Kelso and Duns in Scotland, North of the Tweed. He is the lessee of the Corporation Feast Grounds from the City of Leeds, which includes the well attended Hunslet and Holbeck feasts. He is also the lessee of the principal feasts in Yorkshire, and has a large following of showmen, who regularly attend and occupy spaces at his carnival. In his time he has owned hobby horses, sea-on-land, flat gallopers, flying swans, galloping horses, and has, in conjunction with them, travelled as far south as Birmingham and Nottingham fairs, but of late years he has adhered to the route enumerated above. He travels entirely by railway, a special train being required for each shift, the North-Eastern Railway having the major of his traffic. He is partner-lessee of the Christmas Carnivals at the Garrison Field, Sunderland; a member of the Masonic lodge at Kelso, N.B., and is acknowledged good company by his personal friends. He has contributed largely to charitable institutions, running his machines and handing over the entire proceeds on many occasions. Of his parents, his mother, Mrs Bessie Murphy, is still hale and hearty at the ripe age of seventy. She resides at the family residence, 102, Holly-avenue, Jesmond, Newcastle-on-Tyne. Mr Patrick Murphy, father of Mr William, lies interred at Barnard Castle. Mr Murphy has still alive two brothers and two sisters, who also occupy a place in the showman world.

MR. WILLIAM MURPHY.

THE Duke and Duchess of Connaught were present at the Royal Court Theatre in the afternoon, and witnessed the performance of Candida. —Princess Henry of Battenberg and Prince Louis of Battenberg were present last evening at the Great Queen-street Theatre, and witnessed the first performance of Sein Prinzesschen by the German company.

CAPTAIN CLAYTON'S spirited management of the new King's Theatre, Sutton-in-Ashfield, is proving very successful. With a population of 65,000 within an area of three miles, and situated in the very heart of the Nottinghamshire collieries, the new theatre, which holds 1,000 is doing, as might be expected, excellent business, much of the success attained being due to the earnest assistance rendered to Captain Clayton by his able manager, Mr Edward Gray.

IN an automobile accident which recently occurred in the suburbs of Los Angeles, America, Mr Humphrey Praed, the assistant general manager of the San Jacinto Land Company of Riverside, Cal., was killed, and Miss Mina Rudolph, the leading lady of the San Toy opera company, was seriously injured. The accident occurred after the conclusion of the evening performance at the Mason Opera House, where Miss Rudolph was playing. Mr Praed called for Miss Rudolph after the theatre was closed, and took her for a ride in the country. Returning several hours later, he took charge of the machine, and coming into the city at a high rate of speed turned it from the road, and ran it over a ten-foot embankment, overturning it immediately. At the hospital it was found that Miss Rudolph was suffering from concussion of the brain.

AT the Queen's Opera House, Workington, on Monday, the Kellinos were rapturously received, their performance being exceptionally clever. Other successful artists were Harry Ray and Lillie Calden, De Lill, Gus Garrick, Les Straits, Alice Maple, and Hulbert.

"NAPOLEON."

Episodic Sketch, in Four Scenes,
Produced for the First Time at Sadler's Wells Theatre of Varieties, on Monday, Dec. 5.

Napoleon ..... MR ROLAND YORKE
Josephine ..... MISS GERTRUDE BONSER

The story of a mighty emperor's fall would seem to be a little beyond the ken of a music hall audience, but the quality of the acting and the artistic elaboration with which the sketch of Napoleon was presented at Sadler's Wells on Monday completely won over the immense gathering, holding them in the closest attention and gaining their hearty admiration. The little play is necessarily of an episodic character, dealing as it does with the latter career of the First Consul from the very beginning of his reverses to his captivity at St. Helena. It is upon this rock bound isle that the playlet opens, and the illustrious exile is heard lamenting his downfall in bitter terms, not, however, without a word for the valour of the British soldiers. He is full of remorse for his injustice to his wife the Empress Josephine, and, falling upon the couch, sinks to sleep with her name upon his lips. Though history has it that Josephine was in her grave long before the banishment of Napoleon to St. Helena, the injured Queen gains an entry into his apartment, and with delight hears the sleeping emperor breathe her name. In his dream Napoleon is carried back to the Palace at Fontainebleau, where, on account of her failure to give him a heir to the throne, Napoleon bids the Empress sign a decree of divorce. Josephine indignantly refuses, and after vainly entreating Napoleon to relent, defies him and all his hosts, predicting that though his arms have been victorious over the rest of nations he will never conquer Wellington. The fulfilment of Josephine's prophecy is depicted in a series of panoramic views showing the charge of the Imperial Guards and the ultimate defeat of the French at Waterloo. Mr Roland Yorke supplied the central figure in each scene, the effect of which was heightened by his impressive acting and his fine delivery. He presented a graphic picture of the iron-willed Emperor, and his rugged features, lit by the fire of passion, effectively suggested the despair of the fallen monarch, his arrogance towards his outraged wife, and the final agonies of his crushing defeat. Miss Gertrude Bonser's emotional power and refinement were admirably employed in her assumption of the Empress Josephine. The graces of youth and the art of long practice were allied in her performance, and the sweet tones of a melodic voice lent admirable aid to the impersonation. She wore a dress of surpassing loveliness, and gave a striking realisation of a queen renowned for her grace and beauty. The scenery, from the brush of Mr F. E. Boden, was ample and appropriate, and every justice was done to Mr H. G. French's stirring music by Mr Flexmore's model band. Sketches of such prettiness and dramatic excellence are welcome upon the variety stage, and the reception given to Mr Yorke and Miss Bonser when they were recalled at the end showed that the value of the piece was correctly appraised.

MUSICAL COPYRIGHT CASE.

In the King's Bench Division on Thursday, before Mr Justice Kennedy, the case of Francis, Day, and Hunter v. Matthews was heard. It was an action brought by Messrs Francis, Day, and Hunter, music printers and the owners of the copyright in numerous songs, for damages and an injunction restraining the defendant, Mr Edward Matthews, printer, of Charles-square, Hoxton, from continuing to print and publish several of their copyright songs —"I've made up my mind to sail away," "When the band begins to play," "All through riding on a motor," "Varmer Giles," "Just like the ivy I'll cling to you," and "Pansy Faces." Mr M'Call, K.C., and Mr Walter Payne (instructed by Mr Philip J. Rutland) were counsel for the plaintiffs, while the defendant appeared in person.

Mr M'Call, for the plaintiffs, said the defendant had been engaged in the musical piracy business since 1897, and injunctions had been obtained against him by other proprietors. The Act of 1902 only applied to cases where the words and music were printed together, and since it was passed the pirates had injured the proprietors of songs by printing the words alone on coloured sheets. The defendant had plant worth £250 to £300, which was capable of turning out 1,000 copies an hour. When it was discovered that he was publishing the plaintiffs' songs the necessary notice was served upon him.

Eventually a writ was issued, but the plaintiffs offered to drop the proceedings against him if he submitted to a perpetual injunction and paid £10 damages and £15 costs. The cause of action was admitted, and the defence set up was that the matter had been settled by a verbal agreement before the action was brought. The only real defence seemed to be that the defendant was a poor man with a large family. Unfortunately every pirate seemed to be in that position.

Mr Justice Kennedy suggested that the plaintiffs should be satisfied with an injunction, nominal damages, and costs.

Mr M'Call said his clients would be satisfied with the terms suggested by the learned judge.

The defendant said he was willing to submit to judgment for the plaintiffs for an injunction, with a 1s. damages and costs.

Mr Justice Kennedy pointed out to the defendant that if he broke the injunction he would be liable to be sent to prison for contempt of Court.

Judgment was accordingly entered for the plaintiffs for a perpetual injunction, 1s. damages and costs.

MR SAM MAYO'S laughable new song, "When I woke up in the morning" is being freely inquired for by pantomime comedians. It is in Fred Leigh's best vein.—Mr Nat Travers and his company of Merry Outcasts will be seen on Monday at the Coliseum, Sheerness.—Ben Hur, strong man, has just started a thirty-five weeks' tour.

MISS MYRA STANSFIELD has a song written by Mr T. Bingham Sedgwick, composed by Fred Elton, which is one shout. "Tommy Stout," by the same author, is also very laughter-provoking, and pantomime producers will be lucky if they can obtain these two numbers.

THE proprietor of the Parthenon, Liverpool, will take his fourteenth annual benefit on Thursday next.—Mr Phil Reymond's anniversary at the Palace, Sheerness, was a most gratifying success.—Mr Will Ellerslie and Miss Florrie Bray have just had two songs specially written for them, by Messrs Keith and Merton, entitled "I know what to do-oodle" and "Mary on the Pier."

AT the Sheffield Town Hall on Wednesday the Stage Plays Licensing Committee of the City Council received an application for a temporary licence to use the Broompark Congregational School-room, Newbould-lane on Wednesday night and Thursday evening for a performance of certain portions of Shakespeare's plays at a denominational bazaar. The programme included selections from Othello, Henry the Fourth, Henry the Fifth, As You Like It, Julius Cæsar, and Hamlet. A councillor remarked:—"I am very much inclined to think that we ought not to allow licences for stage plays to be performed in buildings which have been erected for the purpose of preaching the Gospel. It does seem to me to be a little bit out of place." The application was granted.

AT a meeting of the Wigan Watch Committee on Thursday, a full and unrestricted dramatic licence was granted to Mr John Worswick, of the Royal Court Theatre, Wigan. A licence was granted last year on condition that no Excise Licence was applied for.

.DINNER TO DAVID DAY.

A large number of song-writers and composers assembled at Holborn Restaurant on Saturday evening for the purpose of paying a well-merited compliment to Mr David Day, the popular head of the firm of Francis, Day, and Hunter, who has just returned from a business trip to America. Mr Day, his son Fred, and Mr Wm. Francis, his veteran partner, were entertained to dinner by the song-writers connected with the firm.

Mr FELIX M'GLENNON presided, and among the other authors and composers were Messrs Leslie Stuart, Frank Leo, Theo. Bonheur, Karl Kaps, Edward St. Quentin, John P. Harrington, George Le Brunn, Bennett Scott, A. J. Mills, Bernard Phelps, J. Bernard Dickson, William Murphy, Warwick Williams, Maurice Scott, Dan Lipton, F. Clifford Harris, James W. Tate, Kenneth Lyle, R. P. Weston, Fred J. Barnes, Charles J. Taylor, Hermann E. Darewski, and Hannen Swaffer.

"We wanted our old friend to ourselves for once," said the CHAIRMAN, in proposing the toast of the evening, and referring in the most complimentary of tones to Mr Day's many good business and personal qualities. What song-writers owed to their guest's strenuous efforts to kill the music pirate would never be estimated, added Mr M'Glennon.

The guest of the evening, who was accorded a great ovation when he rose to reply, said that the day of the song-writer was coming. The dramatist, the poet, and the novelist were often rewarded during their lifetime, but in the past the writers of songs of the nation had not received sufficient recompense. Things were changing though now, he thought. Mr DAY proceeded to give an interesting account of his experiences in America and Canada, explaining the changed conditions which existed in the song-publishing world across the Atlantic, and saying that things were by no means as satisfactory as they were in England. "It is a day of cheap music," he went on. "As you know, our firm made an experiment twelve months or so ago which might have been disastrous. We issued the most popular songs we had for sixpence, and then waited for the result. I am delighted to tell you that at the end of twelve months the result has been a decided success for publishers and composers alike. Why cannot these meetings of song-writers take place oftener?" asked the guest of the evening. "No harm can come of your having many meetings at which the rights of song-writers might be discussed and defended."

At this point of the proceedings an interesting telegram was read. It was as follows:—"Hearty congratulations. Best wishes for a pleasant evening.—WILLETTS." Mr J. F. Willetts is well known as "the king of the music pirates." There was a roar of amusement at the grim sense of humour which Mr Willetts possesses. Even on an occasion like that he had taken the opportunity of poking fun at song-writers and the man who was the sworn enemy of pirates.

MR. DAVID DAY.

and coupling with it the names of Mr Wm. Francis and Mr Fred Day, Mr LESLIE STUART told the story of his early struggles as a song-writer in Manchester, where he and Mr M'Glennon started writing together years and years before. "We used to sit waiting for the dull thud in the letter-box which used to precede the postman's knock. It meant that a manuscript had been returned. There was always the dull thud. It never missed."

After Mr FRANCIS and young Mr DAY had responded, Mr DAVID DAY toasted his hosts, "The Founders of the Feast." In response, all the song-writers present rose simultaneously, and replied in a different speech. The result, of course, was a mere noise.

AT Worship-street Police-court, on Tuesday, William Tennant, trading as J. Fisher and Co., at Banner-street, St. Luke's, and other places, answered a summons, before Mr Cluer, at the instance of Messrs Francis, Day, and Hunter, music publishers, to show cause why 32 089 copies of music, pirated publications of copyright works belonging to the complainants, should not be given up to them. The complainants, acting on information of sales from the premises, 59, Banner-street, obtained an order from this Court for the seizure of certain pirated copies, and on officers and agents of the complainants going there, the room in which the business was carried on could not be got into, but persons were heard inside tearing up paper, and when, after an hour and a half, entrance was obtained, a large mass of torn music was found. In addition 168 247 copies of musical publications were seized as pirations. Of these the complainants claimed 32 089 as pirations of their copyright works, and now asked for an order for their surrender to them. An order was made for the 32,000 odd copies to be forfeited to the complainants, the defendant being also ordered to pay six guineas costs.

THE management of the Queen's, Swindon, has provided patrons with a real attraction this week in Mr William Greet's The Lady Slavey company, under the business management of Mr T. S. Mayne. The name part is pleasingly undertaken by Miss Addie Lennard. Maude and Beatrice are brightly played by Miss Jean Van Dalle and Miss Ethel Ashton respectively, the delightful dancing of these talented artistes being quite the feature of the piece. Flo Honeydew finds an able exponent in Miss Millicent Marsden. Mr Harry Walsh, who is responsible for the neat staging, scores a great success as Major O'Neill, and also demonstrates his abilities as a cornet player. The part of the American millionaire was taken at very short notice on Monday by Mr Frank Fraser with distinct credit, and Mr Frank Sherlock (Roberts) and Mr Walter T. Hybert (Lord Lavender) were each seen to advantage.

"THE TRAGIC DRAMA."

Mr Lewis Campbell has added a learned, and what is of even more importance, a readable volume to the literature of the drama. He tells us, in his introduction to his work, that his reading has been "casual and fragmentary," but he adds "I have revered Æschylus since 1847, when I read Prometheus for the first time at school; and in the following year I improved my acquaintance with Sophocles by reading the seven plays without assistance for the Greek Blackstone prize at Glasgow." These facts show his love for his subject and his right to embody his reflections on the great masters of Greek tragedy. To plunge in medias res. What is the meaning of tragedy? The dictionary tells us that it is a dramatic poem representing an important event or series of events in the life of some person or persons in which the diction is elevated, and which has generally a tragic or fatal catastrophe. Schopenhauer, for whom the subject had a special fascination, expresses the view (vide Mr Haldane's English translation) that tragedy "is to be regarded and is recognised, as the summit of poetical art, both on account of the greatness of its effect and the difficulty of its achievement. It is very significant for our whole system, and well worthy of observation, that the end of this highest poetical achievement is the representation of the terrible side of life. The unspeakable pain, the wail of humanity, the triumph of evil, the scornful mastery of chance, and the irretrievable fall of the just and innocent, is here presented to us; and in this lies a significant hint of the nature of the world and of existence. It is the strife of will with itself which here, completely unfolded at the highest grade of its objectivity, comes into fearful prominence. It becomes visible in the suffering of men, which is now introduced, partly through chance and error, which appear as the rulers of the world, personified as fate, on account of their insidiousness, which even reaches the appearance of design; partly it proceeds from man himself, through the self-mortifying efforts of a few, through the wickedness and perversity of most. It is one and the same will that lives and appears in them all, but these phenomena fight against each other and destroy each other."

In other words the spectator of a perfect tragedy goes forth convinced that life is not worth living, But as Mr Campbell says, "Experience does not lead us to suppose that tragedy is most enjoyed in times of exhaustion or depression. The reverse has really been the case. The mind in low states of vitality seeks for lighter modes of recreation and refreshment. It is then we hear it said, as is often repeated at the present day, 'Life is full of real unhappiness; why make us weep over imaginary woes?'" Yet we never tire of Shakespearian tragedy, notwithstanding the press and strain of modern existence; and it is a question whether the public attitude towards modern tragedy would not be favourable could modern poets be found who would treat their themes with the elevation and dignity that we find in Æschylus or Sophocles. The question of a happy ending does not seem to have troubled Shakespeare, or else he might have accepted the common version of the story of Lear, in which Cordelia survives and triumphs. In selecting for his purpose a cardinal event or incident from the body of tradition, and fixing his thought upon the critical point, the world's greatest dramatist followed the example of his classic predecessors, and the Danish critic, G. Brandes, laid excessive stress on the possible relation of several of Shakespeare's dramas to crises in the poet's life, suggesting, for example, that Hamlet "was written soon after his father's death, or that Volumnia reminded him of his mother." In richness and depth of characterisation, Shakespeare stands alone, and in the evolution of character through situation his tragic art is unrivalled and supreme. In speaking of the three poets Mr Campbell asserts that they are found to be partakers of one spirit, yet with diversity of operations.

"Æschylus, uplifted on the wave of Hellenic progress, looked back upon the confusions of an earlier world, and saw in them a struggle towards the Athenian light of equity. The lawless and uncertain thoughts of a past age were moralised by the Eleusinian prophet. In the history of his own people from Miltiades to Aristides, in which he personally had taken an active share, he saw the rising of a spirit that was not to be overcome of evil, but, as he believed, was destined to overcome the evil with good. He exulted in a redemption of humanity which he saw to be at hand, and which among his own countrymen he believed to have begun. For Sophocles that mirage had partly been dispelled. He looked with steady, serene, and solemn gaze upon the actual world, and saw there good and evil, balanced and commingled."

According to Schlegel, "Sophocles profited by the essays of that original master, so that Æschylus appears as the rough designer, and Sophocles as the finisher and successor. The more artificial construction of Sophocles' dramas is easily perceived; the greater limitation of the chorus in proportion to the dialogue, the smoother polish of the rhythm, and the purer Attic diction, the introduction of a greater number of characters, the richer complication of the fabel, the multiplication of incidents, a higher degree of development, the more tranquil dwelling upon all the moments of the action, and the more striking theatrical effect allowed to decisive ones, the more perfect rounding off of the whole, even considered from a merely external point of view. But he excelled Æschylus in something still more essential, and proved himself deserving of the good fortune of having such a preceptor, and of being allowed to enter into competition in the same field with him. I mean the harmonious perfection of his mind, which enabled him spontaneously to satisfy every requisition of the laws of beauty, a mind whose free impulse was accompanied by the most clear consciousness. To surpass Æschylus in boldness of conception was perhaps impossible I am inclined, however, to believe that is only because of his wisdom and moderation that Sophocles appears less bold, since he always goes to work with the greatest energy, and perhaps with even a more sustained earnestness, like a man who knows the extent of his powers, and is determined, when he does not exceed them, to stand up with the greater confidence for his rights." Towards the end of the book Mr Campbell has a most instructive criticism of the character of Macbeth: "There is a vast difference between the warrior as we see him at the opening and the tyrant at the close of the play. At his first entrance he is a brave and gallant chieftain, who has nobly served his king and country and receives the meed of honour which is his due. In a less tubulent age, in a constitutional State, where the crown was not synonymous with absolute power —if otherwise mated—such a nature might have passed through life, if not as a model of exalted virtue, yet with well-deserved distinction and untarnished name. But there is in him, unknown hitherto even to himself, a lurking demon of ambition, which, once awakened, all the better counsels of his higher nature, all his knowledge of the world, his love of approbation, his milk of human kindness, his imaginative visions of the better life, are powerless to control or to repress." There are also some comments full of interest concerning Othello and King Lear. The volume is admirably printed and has a most serviceable index.

AT St. Etienne, Paris, on Monday, during a performance at the Grand Theatre of The Wandering Jew, when Dagobert appeared on the stage, accompanied by Rose and Blanche on horseback, the boards gave way and the artistes fell into the basement, the ladies being severely bruised.

GRIMSBY PALACE THEATRE.

The new Palace Theatre and Buffet, which is situate at the corner of Victoria-street and Corporation-road, Grimsby, is now fast nearing completion, and will be opened on Monday, Dec. 12, as a first-class theatre of varieties, under the able management of Mr Frank Macnaghten, whose experience and ability as a theatrical and variety entertainer are well-known. The theatre will be worked and booked in conjunction with the "Macnaghten Circuit," which comprises several London and provincial theatres and variety halls.

Externally the buildings are principally of red Accrington bricks with buff terra cotta dressing. The elevation to Victoria-street is early Victorian in style, and is carefully grouped and has a most imposing effect. The central feature is surmounted by a large tower capped with a cupola and flagstaff. This is flanked on either side by a smaller octagonal turrets with a terra cotta gable with centre supporting an allegorical figure representing "Music." Along the whole frontage to the theatre is placed an ornamental iron and glass verandah as a protection to the public in bad weather. The buffet adjoining is placed at the junction of Victoria-street and Corporation-road, and is designed in a quiet and more domestic manner, the flank walls being broken up by a series of bay windows and gables with a bold octagonal Oriel at the corner, the whole blending harmoniously and forming a most imposing group of buildings as viewed from Victoria-street.

The architects have designed the interior arrangements upon the most approved and up-to-date principles. Special provision has been made so that the audience leaving the theatre after the first performance will do so by separate exits, and will not come into contact with the audience entering for the second performance. There are no less than eight exits provided from the various parts of the house. All doors will be fitted with specially made automatic panic bolts, and in case of emergency the theatre can be easily emptied in less than two minutes. The house is to accommodate 2,000 persons, and consists of a large pit, orchestra stalls, grand circle, four private boxes, and a spacious gallery, and a clear and uninterrupted view of the stage can be obtained from all parts of the theatre. Four handsome saloon bars are provided, and these have tastefully designed fittings. There are excellent promenades at the rear of grand circle, &c. The main entrance is placed in the centre of the building in Victoria-street, through a large hall with wide staircases right and left leading to the circle, the walls of which are lined with a beautiful ornamental pale green tile dado.

No expense appears to have been spared in the internal decorations of the auditorium, and certainly the effect produced is almost dazzling. The richly moulded ornamental plaster work to the proscenium opening, the circle fronts and boxes, with their bold projections and dome-like treatment, supported by minarettes carrying electric lights, delight the eye. There is a large hand-painted panel arranged in the central tympana of the proscenium. The ceiling is boldly lined out in panelling worked up into a large descending enriched centre piece, from which are suspended innumerable electric globes. The decorations are carried out in the style of Louis Quinze, the scheme of colour being cream and gold, tastefully relieved with turquoise blue and rose tints. The draperies to the boxes and the tableau curtain and valance to the proscenium opening are executed in "flame red" silk plush with old gold appliqué trimmings and heavy fringes. These, together with the crimson velvet "tip up" seats in the grand circle and stalls, give a warmth and cosiness to the house which must be seen to be appreciated. The orchestra stalls, circle promenade, and saloons, together with the private boxes, are carpeted with specially woven Axminster carpets of a rich crimson colour. The cheaper parts of the theatre floors are covered with a cork carpet.

The whole of the theatre will be lighted by electricity. Handsome brass fittings are suspended from the ceiling and round the circle fronts, boxes, &c. Every precaution has been taken against an outbreak of fire. Hydrants are placed in all parts of the building, and a modern fireproof curtain is fixed to the proscenium opening, thus shutting off the stage from the auditorium in case of necessity. The building is heated and ventilated throughout by specialists in this kind of work. The stage is fitted up on the most modern lines, and is capable of producing any of the large plays touring. The size of the stage is 60ft. by 30ft., whilst the proscenium is without doubt one of the largest in the provinces, it being no less than 34ft. in width. Dressing-rooms and other rooms contiguous to the stage are arranged at the back thereof. They are well fitted up and heated throughout by hot-water pipes. The architects who are responsible for the designing and carrying out of the buildings are Messrs Owen and Ward, of Birmingham.

THE EASTBOURNE HIPPODROME.

A month ago the Theatre Royal, Eastbourne, ceased to exist as a playhouse. On Monday, Dec. 5, the house was reopened to the public as a music hall under the name of the Hippodrome in the most favourable and promising circumstances. Extensive alterations have been carried out. The grand circle has been enlarged, and a large handsome bar takes the place of what were formerly residential flats. A fine bar has also been fitted at the back of the gallery. The whole of the flooring has been covered with rich carpet of a warm, comfortable red colour, and all the seats have been reupholstered in peacock blue. Newly painted and decorated, and brilliantly lighted, the new Hippodrome is a warm, comfortable, bright, and up-to-date music hall. A gentlemen's cloakroom has been added, and the old dress-circle bar has been converted into a spacious manager's office. The attendants are smartly uniformed; charming Hebes preside over the bars, and the comfort of the public has been studied in every way. A new stage has been laid down, and a new set of scenes, including a capital drop-scene, has been painted by Mr J. Hobbs. Mr Walter Smith is the stage-manager, and the turns have been quickly and smartly put on. The two houses a-night system has been adopted, and on Monday evening both houses were crowded. For the opening Miss Bertha Vere sang the National Anthem, and an excellent variety bill followed. The programme for the week includes Miss Ella and her lions; and this turn proves a most daring and exciting one. Mr W. L. Murray is an admirably developed specimen of a man, and his feats of strength command commendation. Messrs Alber and Amber have an eccentric juggling act which is very clever. Steel and Laing, an eccentric tumbler and a pretty, dainty lady dancer, contribute a very taking and popular item. Mr Frank Gee is a highly amusing comedian and singer. Miss Bertha Vere is a most pleasing vocalist. Mr Clive Watts is a good comic singer, and the Hippodrome animated pictures complete the entertainment.

"WHO'S WHO?" has now swelled into a portly volume of nearly 2,000 pages; and the care which has been devoted to the preparation of the "biographies in brief" which it contains is as evident as ever. Like the trunk of an elephant, "Who's Who?" can deal equally well with the most important facts and with the most trivial details. We learn from it that Baron Nathan Mayer Rothschild owns about 15,400 acres, and that Mr G. R. Sims's recreations are "battledore and shuttlecock, bulldogs, and trotting ponies." The work is indispensable to all who live in the London world, and like to know as much about the prominent people in it as is possible.

STORIES OF SHOWMAN LIFE:

By the REV. T. HORNE
(Hon. Chaplain, Showmen's Guild.)

SAVED FROM THE TIGER'S MAW.

"You would hardly credit it, yet what I tell you is true. The meek and mild lady in the pay-box, whom you would scarcely believe could say 'Boo, to a goose, was, ten years ago, the most daring lion queen on the road."

"Well, certainly the lady does not impress one as being capable of deeds of derring do. Tell me the story!"

"Well, sir, it was this way. Being brought up amongst animals all her life she was without fear, and besides that inherited from her grandfather, Van Hambergh, the magnetic power of subjugating the most wild and untamable beasts of the forest. From her cradle as she toddled about the show all animals were her pets, and she was to them a pet; they all loved and held her sacro sanct. At twelve years of age she had a tremendous success as the 'Child Queen of the Lion's Den.' The show toured Europe, and even penetrated as far as St. Petersburg, in then almost inaccessible Russia. At sixteen her fame was world-wide. Mdlle. Zalza, the Lion Queen, was a name to conjure with. Wherever the show went the people crowded, and were as much charmed and delighted with her beauty and grace, her wit and verve, as by her undoubted fearlessness and daring."

"So this is the Mdlle. Zalza of whom I have read, but up to now have never seen. I am all curiosity to know why she lost her nerve and disappeared completely from he public gaze."

"The story is a true romance of show life, and only just now do I find myself at liberty to tell the tale. You noticed the magnificent full-grown Bengal tiger in the show?"

"Yes."

"Well it was the sister beast to that one that destroyed her nerve. At the age of nineteen she was a happy wife and mother, and still the Lion Queen. Now, it was the imminent peril of her husband and first-born that led up to the critical moment of her life, that stopped for ever her marvellous performances with wild and trained animals. The tiger was quite a cub when purchased, and for over two years the constant pet and favourite of the Lion Queen. It slept in the waggon at the foot of her bed, was fed from her hand, and followed her about the concern like a faithful hound. Like all favourites, the tiger was jealous, as our Mr Wittington found out speedily. Many a good laugh had the young couple, both in their days of courtship and early married life, over the disapproval of the tiger expressed towards the altered state of affairs that the transition from Mademoiselle to Madame involved. Still, as the tiger was the most highly-trained of the animals that Madame exhibited, its dislike to the master and to their first-born child was regarded with pardonable indulgence. But one night came the crisis. The fond mother, nursing her child after a hard day's work (it was the Monday of Knott Mill Fair), Wittington busy at the Locker counting the day's takings, and the tiger, still a member of the family circle, crouched at Madame's feet, with jealous eye upon the baby, was licking the hand of the Lion Queen. All was still, except the chink of the money as Wittington counted, the love crooning of the mother, and the bonny baby's response, when a note of discord, only audible to the mother's ear, destroyed the harmony; it was a low penetrating growl from the tiger, accompanied by the swish, swish of its tail.

"All alert in an instant, with a mother's fear, a wife's alarm, she suffered in that moment of dread discovery an age of physical and mental agony. Gazing into the eyes of the tiger, she saw in one fateful glance that all her power over the beast was gone, and gone for ever. At the same instant she discovered the cause of it all. The tiger had tasted blood. Licking her hand with its rasping tongue, the skin had been broken, and for several moments, all unfelt by her, the animal, true to its nature, had been draining her life's blood. What could she do? Her child at her breast, her husband and herself in danger from the now utterly excited beast. To scream (oh, how hard it was to prevent that!) would have brought the crouched tiger full spring upon her and the child; to shout to her husband would be but to divert the danger to one she loved better than her own life. To her agonised mind, to her quick and throbbing brain, there came in a flash of illuminating thought the way to meet the crisis.

"'In a low voice, suppressing all tone of terror or alarm, she said to her husband, 'Dick, hand me the loaded pistol, the one with shot in it.' With a look of surprise that instantly died down as he saw her terribly pale face, Wittington said not a word, but, reaching out to its place over the mantlepiece, handed her the weapon. In an instant the pistol was laid full square between the eyes of the tiger, the trigger pulled, and with a terrible howl the beast fell dead at their feet. Madame fainted, poor Wittington for weeks could only guess at the terrible sequence of events leading up to the tiger's death, poor Madame was in the gravest danger, brain fever having followed the fainting fit. When, at length, consciousness returned, and the story was told in full, the father and mother, over the child, vowed that never again would the Lion Queen exhibit her prowess over animals, either wild or trained.

"And, indeed, sir, Madame's nerve was so shattered that she no longer dared to enter the lion's den or to have animals as domestic pets."

MISS MAUD MORTIMER has scored a great success in the first pantomime of the season at the Grand Theatre, Glasgow. Her excellent rendering of "Farewell, my Little Yo San" has secured for her unbounded applause and many recalls. The author and composer may congratulate themselves on a big winner.

MR EDWARD LEWIS, through the agency of Alfred Saker and Co., has been engaged by Mr Oswald Stoll for twelve weeks at the Coliseum.—The latest to swell the ranks of the Terriers is Atroy, the well-known juggler.—Miss Ella Rose and Mr Harry Harcourt have been engaged by Mr Henry Eglington for the pantomime of The Babes in the Wood as Fairy Queen and Baron.—Mr Thomas E. Finglass produced most successfully a new scena at the Tivoli, Glasgow, on Monday, entitled The Jap and the Coon. The words and music are by J. V. Jones, of the Theatre Royal, Dublin. Mr Finglas was ably assisted by Miss Grania Herbert as the Jap.

CAPTAIN BEN WOODGER, an indefatigable member of the Terriers Association, will have a complimentary concert, under the patronage of that society, at the Dover Castle Hotel, Westminster-bridge-road, on Friday, when many well-known music hall artistes have promised their support.

MISS DEL LEVEY desires to contradict the ridiculous reports concerning her health that are rife. She was never better in her life, and one would have to travel many miles to discover so fine and well-set-up a specimen of athletic womanhood.

THE name of Arthur J. Mills was inadvertently omitted from a recent placing on record that an American edition of "Just like the ivy" had been called for. The song is by Mills and Castling.

PRESENTATION.—Mr Fred Conneaux, the popular manager of the Grand Theatre, West Hartlepool, was on Tuesday evening the recipient of a silver cigarette case, presented to him by the Hartlepool Amateur Operatic Society, in recognition of the valuable services rendered by Mr Conneaux during a recent performance, and to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of his wedding day.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

(COPYRIGHT.)

(FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

THE author of the "story" "Maccomo and the Lions" is glad to receive the historic corrections of our two correspondents of last week—Mr Charles J. Child and "Lion." He heartily thanks both. At the same time, he wishes it to be understood that the sketches he writes under the heading "Stories from Showman Life" are not historic articles but only what the word "stories" clearly indicates. There may be in some of them a basis of historic fact. A local colouring and the setting of the scenery may show technical knowledge, and the props. may be all right. For the writer knows from experience in early life all about showland, yet he makes no pretensions to making history. He is a story-teller. Truth in the tale, yes; yet, as George R. Sims expresses it,

With a little invented
And a little bit inferred.

HAD Mr Horne been in touch with his showmen books of reference the ending might have been different, but the story was written away from all authorities; in fact, when he was in the throes of removing his goods and chattels from Manchester to London.

AN extremely interesting point was raised by W. M. A. last week—the expediency of ground lessees putting friendly pressure upon tenants to join the Guild. It is a moot point with many real friends of the society. We know more than one lessee who, rather than put pressure on his tenants, sends the Guild a substantial and additional subscription. It is an old element of dispute in the councils of the society.

RULE 20 of the Guild reads as follows:—"Lessees of Ground.—To promote the interests of the Association, it is incumbent on all members who may be lessees of ground, or others who may have the letting thereof, to give preference in letting and sub-letting to members of the Association." That is, as far as law and justice permit. It is distinctly preferential trading, as clearly set forth in the test case, Whiting and Dixon v. Garside and others, wherein it was acknowledged that preferential trading was permissible, and, if not carried to excess, lawful.

STILL, in our opinion, it is a most dubious and uncertain weapon. Persuasion, yes; but a threat to compel—or, as the Fiscalists put it, "Retaliate"—is often a mistake and but seldom a success.

ADDITIONAL Christmas and New Year fixtures to hand are—Rochdale; Ordsall-lane, Salford; Bolton (in the Drill Hall), Sunderland; P. Collins's, Limited, new ground, London; Farrell's new ground at Birkenhead; and Barrack-street, Hulme, Manchester.

WE print an interesting article on Martinmas fairs by a local lady. Our point in so doing is that it shows one of the sources of the strength of the showmen's position is the national feeling. For every one against us there are a thousand for us of all classes and conditions, high and low, learned and simple.

MARTINMAS FAIRS.

"MY only glimpse of the fair this year was on Sunday morning. My meditation on the sermon I had heard was disturbed by the joyful cry of a small boy, and patter of many feet hurrying through the bar to catch sight of a huge yellow caravan drawn by an elephant and a camel! What an odd, incongruous pair they looked. One recalled other ill-matched couples one had met with on life's journey, ill-matched alike physically and mentally; and into my mind flashed the text—'Be ye not unequally yoked!'

"THOSE painted caravans took me back in thought to days of yore, when, as children, we lived but a stone's throw from the fair ground. It spelt Fairyland to us in those days. The blare of the trumpets, the pom-pom of the drums, the hoarse cries of the showmen, vieing with each other in setting forth the wonders to be seen inside the canvas walls; the roar of the wild beasts filled our childish hearts with rapture and awe. We were only allowed to attend the fair in the daytime, in charge of a supposed responsible person; but we generally managed to elude the responsible one (to our mutual satisfaction, no doubt), to meet again at the end of a passage, in which our home was situated, when the responsible one would meet us with a smile, while another would glide from out the shadows to disappear round the corner of the narrow street. We liked best to go without surveillance, sub rosa, which but added a spice to our adventures. Sometimes the spice was taken out when a wrathful paterfamilias, armed with a cane, met us on the threshold; but the strokes were powerless to extract all the sweetness from our stolen joys. How vividly fascinating it looked to us under the red glare of the flaming, spluttering oil lamps which swung from stall and booth! What good-natured jostling, hustling, joking crowds we pushed our way through. The prince and the princesses were not wanting in this enchanted ground. There they were, arrayed in much bespangled bright hued velvet and silk, with golden crowns surmounting their well-oiled locks, and their small feet encased in scarlet leather high-heeled boots, pirouetting on the entrance stage, to the admiration of the gaping crowd. Our highest ambition in those days was to be a dancer at the fair. The canvas-covered bazaar was a favourite haunt. Our purses were small, but on Martinmas Day the pence we had contrived, with much self-denial, to save, bulged them out in true aldermanic fashion. Still our fairings had to be modest ones. We gazed longingly at the toy-laden shelves with their rows on rows of dolls and trumpets, wriggling snakes and noisy rattles, wooden eggs filled with tiny cups and saucers, and countless other toys. Invariably it ended in my purchasing a 'monkey on a stick.' They had an irresistible attraction for me, in spite of my brother's rude remark that 'one monkey was enough without buying another.' Perhaps it was a family likeness drew me to them! I have, stowed away carefully somewhere, a relic of the bazaar, a shell-covered box with a heart-shaped scarlet velvet pin-cushion on the centre of the lid. Inside the box are a few faded flowers—that is a tale of the fair in later days, when my brother took other boys' sisters, and I—well every 'Gill had her Jack' in those days—and there is joy in remembrance!

"NEXT came the swing-boats and whirligigs. They were not an unmixed joy to me. I used to experience a queer feeling which I have since been reminded of when on a rough sea. I always started gaily enough; but, alas! it ended in a small, inert bit of humanity, with sickly face, being dragged from her steed, to whose neck she clung with desperate hands. A ghastly thing occurred once. My purse with its meagre contents—my little all—was stolen! It was hard to have to stand on terra-firma and watch my brother go riding gaily by; harder still to nibble a small piece of brandy-snap while he gobbled piece after piece; but, hardest of all, to see his last halfpenny bartered for cocoanut, and have it placed to my lips and bidden 'not to take a big bite!' only to find it withdrawn ere my teeth had well-nigh scraped it. Bitter and sweet mingled for me that night at the fair.

"BUT the shows were the crowning point of happiness. We wandered hand in hand through the crowds, struggling to get well in front that we might feast our eyes on the crude pictures there displayed. It took much time deciding between the rival attractions of the 'Lion-headed Lady' or the 'Giant,' the 'Fat Man' or the 'Dwarf,' the 'Two-headed Calf' or the 'Bearded Woman;' the decision had to be made, and it was invariably the most gruesome that we chose. I remember a favourite show was a miscellaneous one here. A small pony trotted round the tent picking out the children who stole the sugar or told lies! A guilty conscience gave me a bad time in that show, and glad was I when I escaped the laughter and jests which followed the knowing nod of the pony at some poor trembling child. The 'Marionettes' was another favourite; but space forbids my entering into detail of all the wonderful sights we saw. Our outing always ended in regaling ourselves at one of the stalls; our favourite condiments being hot peas, ginger-beer, hokey-pokey, cocoa-nuts, and oranges. No visions of nightmare or impaired digestion troubled our childish thoughts in those days of long ago."—Yorkshire Herald, Dec. 2, 1904.

THERE is a large number of showmen at present stationed in the Quarry Show Grounds, Gateshead-on-Tyne, which is one of the wintering quarters of the North County. Walter Hoadley's four-abreast gallopers make a welcome reappearance; also Piniger's hobby horses, swings, and shooting gallery, and the fair ground concerns of Messrs Black, Biddal, Palmer, Brundle, Sedgemore. Near to the above grounds we noticed the exhibition of Messrs Mitchell and Bounds, with the coloured giantess, Miss Lucy Moore.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE at present can only boast of one fair ground now open. We refer to the fair ground, Byker, Newcastle-on-Tyne. Here we noticed Messrs W. and B. Murphy, with their No. 2 gondola set, the fine art gallery of Messrs O'Brian, and the fair ground concerns of Messrs F. Newsome, Walker, and Carter. Newsome's high-flyers and Mrs Campbell's china bazaar complete the list.

IN the report of Barnum and Bailey, Limited, which shows a profit balance of £69,125 on the year's working, £30,000 is placed aside for wintering the animals in London, Stoke-on-Trent, New York, and Bridgeport. Keeping a circus in idleness is no inconsiderable drain on the resources of a proprietor.

IN aiming a wooden ball at a cocoanut "shy," a Mr Raynor unluckily hit the attendant full on the nose. The victim, Syder by name, recovered 8s. 6d., the amount of the doctor's bill, from Mr Raynor in the Romford County Court on the 2nd inst.

SIX camels belonging to Bostock and Wombwell's Menagerie, now at Sunderland, were found in their temporary stable apparently dead, the place being filled with gas, which had escaped during the night. Four of the animals were brought round, but the other two could not be restored.

MISS H. M. HORNE, Manchester, general secretary, the Showmen's Guild, writes:—"For the past three years it has been evident that the society I represent is slowly but surely drifting down to bankruptcy. This would have happened four years ago but for the earnest appeal of the hon. organising chaplain and the munificent response of Lord George Sanger. May I as the secretary, and speaking with the knowledge of how the Guild finances now stand, as revealed in the cash debit and credit accounts for the current year (two funds, be it remembered—the ordinary Guild account and the extraordinary account, the Parliamentary Defence Fund), express my profound alarm at the serious deficit before us for the coming year. We are well within a fortnight of the annual audit. Yet there are certain committee men who have not yet sent in the money taken by them from subscribers during the past year. This is neglect of the most reprehensible character.

"I ALSO draw attention to the significant fact that only a few of the many business firms interested most deeply in the fair ground business have as yet subscribed. Their self-interest ought to prompt them to see that the Parliamentary defence work is their trade defence work, and I still hope that this hint, plain and unmistakable, will be a word to the wise—and in season. May I ask your showmen readers to notice the Guild advertisement in The Era this week? 'Read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest,' as the chaplain would say. Send in your money now; the books must be got ready for the auditors.

"WITH reference to the timely discussion in The Era re the possible consolidation and union of all the society into one comprehensive and powerful organisation, let me say that whilst discussion is proceeding, creditors are waiting, and some them cannot afford to wait; yet committeemen hold the subscribers' money in hand that might be now, and ought to have been long ago available to pay the society's creditors. We started the Parliamentary Defence Fund last year in order that all the societies, lessees, and stall-holders alike might recognise their responsibilities and through the Parliamentary fund pay for the defence work of their trade. What was really wanted was not what was done. The Guild set the true example by paying over in 1903 the whole of its credit balance to start the Parliamentary Fund, but no other society followed suit. The British Roundabout Proprietors and Showmen's Union, instead of a grant in aid from its accumulated funds, sent the question back to its members, asking them to give two guineas each to the Fund.

"THIS, in my opinion, was not the 'wise thing'—certainly not the generous thing. An immediate grant for the Parliamentary Fund of £100 would have shown prompt business sense; but no, the official reply was, 'Our funds cannot be drawn upon for that purpose.' As though the vital interests of every roundabout owner, ground lessee, and show proprietor were not at stake. I hold that the Allied Proprietors made a mistake. At least, a grant of £100, in immediate aid, was the sum that the wealthy union ought to have voted, and not relegated the matter back to individual members. The mistake of that policy is seen in the slowness with which the subscriptions are coming in. No; a good substantial annual grant in aid is the only thing that will meet the situation. It was a mistake for another reason. It exposes the poverty of our defence machinery to the enemy—a fatal mistake once the official mind grasps the truth, that showmen are not supporting the Parliamentary work; and they will, if care is not taken in time. Mr Ledger and the Rev. T. Horne, with myself, undertake to receive subscriptions. The Era inserted appeals and lists of subscribers to help in every way to make the appeal known. Yet I believe I am correct in saying that not one single penny has Mr Ledger received.

"ALL that I can say is that, if disaster follow this apathy and neglect, it will be no matter for wonder, and hardly one for regret. Now with reference to the stallholders and tenants, their trade responsibility in proportion to their invested capital, is just as much in danger from bad laws as the proprietors' and lessees'. What have the stallholders and tenants done? I mean, of course, not as individuals, but as organised societies really banded together for this very purpose.

"THE only justification of this over-cautious policy would be overwhelming success. But is it successful? No; a miserable, palpable failure. Whether we agree to federate or not, one thing is clear, and that is that Parliamentary defence is the very life of the trade, and that most showmen prefer to let the enemy kill the business rather than properly defend and support it. Now will the other secretaries express their views as fearlessly?"

WE must agree with H. M. Horne that if the other societies' funds are so tied up that a grant in aid for necessary trade defence cannot be made, according to rules, the sooner the rules are amended the better.

ON Oct. 18 the Bolton Markets' Committee instructed the General Purposes Committee to include clauses in the Corporation Bill giving them power to control markets, fairs, and exhibitions in places other than those appointed by the Corporation, and to exclude convicted persons from the markets and fairs. Seeing the serious nature of this, Mr Thos. Hurst wrote to Superintendent Pike, of Bolton, as follows:—"I see by the papers that your committee are going in for powers to control outside fair-grounds. Are you aware that Eccles, Mansfield, Halifax, and Acton have applied for the same powers, which we have successfully opposed, the last-named, Acton, having to pay our costs in the House of Commons? Kindly lay this letter before your chairman, so that he will be in a position to judge if it will be wise on your committee's part to go on. If you think some friendly arrangement can be come to in the matter I shall be pleased to arrange a deputation."

On Dec. 2 Mr Hurst was pleased to receive the following reply:—"Dear Sir,—My committee on Monday last struck out the clause in the Corporation Bill relating to fairs being held on private ground in the borough.—Yours respectfully, ROBERT PIKE, Superintendent of Markets."

HANCOCK'S PLYMOUTH WINTER GARDENS are the resort of multitudes nightly to enjoy the varied programme. This week the items include animated pictures, capital songs by Will Beecham, Coon vocalism and dancing by Miss Ray Moig, and an entertaining turn by Miss Ada Wilson.

NOW the Cattle Show is over, Messrs T. and T. E. Read, lessees of the "World's Fair," at the Royal Agricultural Hall, Islington, are making rapid progress with their preparations for the forthcoming "Fair," which opens for the twenty-sixth consecutive year on the 24th inst., and will continue for six weeks. A large and varied programme of attractions is promised, and the public may rely upon finding plenty of amusement for the modest sum of sixpence.

MR WALKER HOADLEY, proprietor of the electrical jumping horses that attend the fêtes and galas in the North of England, was born at Bradwell, Bucks, his parents being well known and respected travellers. His route extends from Darlington to Hawick, N.B., and he conveys part of his effects by railway and part by road, with the aid of a powerful traction-engine. He is the owner of a large caravan that travels by road, and is reputed to be the largest in the world. He is a member of the Masonic lodge at Sunderland. His hospitality and geniality are well known and recognised by his tenants. His winter quarters are at the show ground, Gateshead-on-Tyne, where he usually remains until the Easter holidays, his permanent address being at Gateshead.

IN partnership with Murphy and Hoadley, he was one of the first to "travel" the four-a-breast galloping horses with the overhead motion. The partnership has now been dissolved, Mr Hoadley being in business on his own account. Always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to his fellow-showmen in the cause of charity contributions he has on many occasions run his machine, and handed over the entire proceeds to various deserving institutions.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—In a recent issue of your paper you make mention of Mr H. Gould as being one of the oldest showman, but go on to state that you are in doubt as to whether he is still alive. This article came to the notice of Mr Gould, who is alive and hearty, and he thought it might interest some of your readers to know that such is the case. He claims to be the oldest of the old showmen alive, and recalls many interesting events in his varied career.

Yours faithfully, A. HURST.
Stockton-on-Tees, Dec. 1.

INFORMATION relating to Shows and Fairs, suitable for this column, should be addressed to THE EDITOR, "The Showman World."

HOCKEY.

MISS CECILIA FOWLER'S LADIES ATHLETIC TEAM v. COTHAM AND REDLAND LADIES ATHLETIC TEAM

Played near Clifton Downs on Dec. 3. The following were the teams:—

Miss Cecilia Fowler's Ladies Athletic Team.—Miss E. Bowman, goal; Miss I. Bowman and Miss L. Carter, backs; Miss N. Bailey, Miss C. Fowler (captain), and Miss L. Belding, half-backs; Miss A. Bernard, Miss K. Elvin, Miss M. Leonard, Miss G. Leonard, and Miss B. Godfrey, forwards.

Cotham and Redland Ladies Athletic Team.—Miss M. Fisher, goal; Miss R. Davis and Miss M. Hamilton, backs; Miss N. Courtenay, Miss L. Norris, and Miss L. Coles, half-backs; Miss W. Bradley (captain), Miss Jessie Maguire, Miss K. Montgomery, Miss Florrie Hooper, and Miss N. Lawrence, forwards.

Referee, Miss E. Lawrence (of Cotham and Redland Club). Result:—Miss C. Fowler's Ladies Team, one goal; Cotham and Redland Ladies Team, one goal. Misses N. Bailey and K. Montgomery scored for their respective sides.

LAURI WYLIE has made an instantaneous success at the Oxford with his mimicking mannikin. With what is known as a living marionette, he gives clever impersonations in miniature of Geo. Robey, Harry Lauder, Eugene Stratton, &c. Mr Wylie manipulates the hands and feet of the figures entirely unassisted, and at the same time has to remember the voice, actions, and mannerisms of the several artistes he impersonates.

THE marvellous Howards have now in course of construction, at a great cost, one of the most humorous illusory acts ever seen, with up-to-date magical effects. They will produce it after Christmas.

MASTER CLIFF RYLAND made his first appearance last Monday at the Palace, Croydon, and his clever dancing made quite a hit. He was highly complimented by everybody, and has a bright future before him. Of course, papa is pleased.

A NEW play entitled The Palmist, by R. Henderson Bland, will be produced for two special matinées on Friday and Saturday, Dec. 16 and 17, at the Alhambra, Brighton, under the direction of Mr Augustus Bingham. The specially selected London cast engaged includes Miss Edyth Olive, Miss Jessie Dorynne, Mr Julian Royce, Mr Percy Nash, Mr Henderson Bland, Mr Edward Fielding, and others.

MISS FLORENTIA GLYNNE, Welsh soprano, the wife of Valvo, ventriloquist, passed away at the Royal Infirmary, Bradford, Friday, Dec. 2, from neuritis, after long and painful suffering. She was laid to rest on Tuesday in her native village, Brynford, North Wales. At the funeral of the deceased singer, who is deeply mourned, there was a large gathering of relatives and friends. Her bereaved husband, who was devotedly attached to her, has received many messages of sympathy.

MR W. F. FRAME appears next week, in his kilts, at the Empress, Brixton.—Mr Ryder Slone, who is at the Empress, Paragon, and Euston with a new character song entitled "Are yer 'sleep?" is in town for three months. He opens at the Tivoli on Monday.—The M'Kays' magic kettle will be seen in many pantomimes this season.

 Provincial Correspondents are requested to forward with their next week's Reports a full list of the Theatres and Music Halls in their respective towns, also the names of the present Lessees or Managers, for insertion in The Era Annual, 1905.

ST. HELENS.

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr M'Leod Loader. — Messrs Dottridge, Longden, and Livesey's company is here in the interesting drama, The Village Blacksmith, which is meeting with a favourable reception. In the title-rôle Mr Sam Livesey gives a fine and manly impersonation of the part. Mr Joseph Carter is a sufficiently villainous Captain Leo. Miss Ethel Kay is exceedingly good as Kate Strong. The remaining characters are in the safe hands of Miss Maggie Edwards, Little Christobel, and Messrs Fr. Wells, G. V. Campbell, T. E. Marshall, and Mr. C. T. Livesey.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs T. Barrasford, Will Sley, and F. Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr A. V. Carnell.—The chief item here this week is the Daunton-Shaw Troupe in their marvellous trick cycling act. The Dean Tribune Trio are scoring well in their absurdity, The Cheerful Idiot; M'Cann's terriers and leaping dogs are very clever; Haig and Novel give a smart acrobatic turn; Miss Fanny Erris is a good burlesque artiste; Mr George Prince is popular as a comedian; Smith and Johnson are rapturously received as coloured comedians; and the Violas are good in mental telepathy.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietress, Mrs Weldon Watts; General Manager, Mr Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr R. G. Elder.—The Fatal Wedding, by Mr Bert Coote's clever company, is here on a return visit. As Howard Wilson Mr Wilfred Payne plays excellently. Mr Wallace Stranack makes a successful Robert Curtis, and Mr Charles Kenny's Toto is nicely done. Mr Jack Waring's O'Reilly is capital, as is also Mr Arthur Law Raynor's Rev. Dr. Lanceford. As Mabel Wilson Miss Marie Houseley is admirable, and plays with much feeling. Miss Harriet Clifton's Bridget is the character to the life, and Miss Gertrude Harrison's Cora is a cleverly studied piece of work. Miss Gladys Rose Jones as Jessie, the "little mother," is amazingly well done considering her age. Mr Walter Westwood appears as Peter Schwartz, and adds a good deal of humour to the piece in company with the trained troupe of juvenile singers and dancers.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr J. Batty; Manager, Mr W. Batty.—A well-arranged bill here is headed by the Mannings in their laughable sketch, A Turkish Bath Rubber; George and Edwards, comics and dancers; Harry Drew, a fine basso; the Three De Veres, speciality acrobats; the Watson Family, vocalists and instrumentalists; Geo. Formby, a really funny vocalist, who is in great demand; Marie Gibson, ballad vocalist; and Payne's Bio. with a fresh series of pictures.

STOKE.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr P. Collins; Manager, Mr Frank Egerton.—Another capital programme is submitted by the popular manager, Mr Egerton, this week. Ben Brown and George Le Clerq hold the premier position in a really funny sketch, Black Justice, which causes roars of laughter; Ben Hur in his entertainment of strength is really wonderful, several of his feats being unexcelled; the Six Seltinas in their acrobatism have but few rivals; Miss Ray Hartley is a dancer of much ability; the Bros. Levett in their acrobatic business are much applauded; Alec Kendall is a comedian of merit; the Three Raymonds in a smart musical act meet with much appreciation; Marcus Boyle is most amusing, his songs being well chosen; and Collins's animated pictures are always excellent.

SUNDERLAND.

AVENUE, LIMITED. — Managing-Director, Mr Chas. E. Machin; Business-Manager, Mr Percival Craig.—The drama A Woman's Pluck holds the boards here this week. Mr James Willard as Dick Darrell is a decided success. Miss East-Robertson admirably sustains the part of Grace Daremant. Others worthy of special mention are Mr Edward F. Ashby as Winston Dale, Mr J. P. Dryden as Jim Daremant, and Miss Yatman as Jessie Pope.

ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Chas. E. Machin; Business-Manager, Mr Percival Craig.—Messrs Haddon and Loader's company, in a melodrama entitled The Greatest Scoundrel Living, occupies the boards here this week. Mr E. Munro as the hero, Frank Fielding, and Miss Nellie Thorne Hallam as the heroine, Rose Moultor, are equally successful. Mr Jack Haddon gives a clever portrayal of the scoundrel, Percival Haynes. In the comedy parts Messrs J. Lennol, H. Liddle, and Miss Lottie Pearce provide considerable amusement.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Managing-Directors, Messrs Livermore Bros.; Acting-Manager, Mr George V. Wybrow; Treasurer, Mr Alfred Browne.—The programme this week is headed by Boswell's stage circus, an interesting and popular item. Harry Freeman renders songs in his inimitable style. Bert Lytton, comique; Hughes and Elliott, rag-time vocalists; Baker and Balfe, xylophone players; Sisters Pyne; and Vernon's animated pictures are all excellent turns.

SWANSEA.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs David Allen and Sons; Lessees, the Executors of the late Frank Boyce; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter Bellian.—No Man's Land, a stirring and highly interesting drama, has been the attraction here throughout the week, presented by Miss Ida Millals and company under the direction of Mr Henry Herne, who appeared to much advantage as the hero, Harry Oaklands, as also did Miss Millals as Mary Bathurst. The villain, Silas Moore, was capitally played by Mr Fred Conyers; Mr Claude Haviland was well suited as Dr. Buxton; Gilbert Bathurst and Captain Norman Bathurst was ably doubled by Mr Alfred Byron; and Solomon Jacobs, James Cross, Iky Moss, and Captain Spencer were well represented by Messrs Sydney H. Morton, Percy Lawrinson, John Weston, and Vaughan Howe respectively.

NEW STAR.—Lessee and Manager, Mr T. Morton Powell; Acting-Manager, Mr William Coutts.—Dishonoured, an interesting military drama, has been presented here during the week by Miss Blanche St. Albans and Mr J. Leicester Jackson's company.

NEW EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Albert Mitchell.—An enjoyable programme here includes:—Carl Hertz, assisted by Mdlle. D'Alton, who appears in an exceedingly clever illusion; the American Bioscope, with series of capital pictures; the Barowsky Trio, clever gymnasts; Three Sisters Trentanovi, graceful trapezists; Miss Kitty Bell, capital vocalist and speciality dancer; the Passports, smart dancers; Leonard and Francois, Continental artists and eccentric acrobats; Miss Childie Stuart, charming comedienne; and the Troubadour Four, capital vocalists.

PALACE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr T. W. Grantham.—The engagements here for the week are as follows:—Cheevers and Kennedy (Joe and Ned), in quick changes; Newling Major, the Etonian ventriloquial marvel; Lily Jackson, male impersonator; Three Sisters Gilbert, Anglo-American comediennes and Hungarian dancers; Payne's Photo-Bioscope; J. R. Val, eccentric comedian and dancer; the Miniature Malverne, Lilliputians; Mark Lane, comedian; Penley and English, in comedy duologue, Four a Shilling, Fine Mackerel.

TON-Y-PANDY.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs Carlton and Duckworth; General Manager, Mr S. Duckworth; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry Counsell.—Despite inclement weather, a full house on Monday welcomed Mr James Stillwell and company in The Queen of the Night. The play was mounted and dressed in a lavish manner. Frank Cavendish was played in a manly way by Mr Stillwell; Mr C. V. Sandford makes a thorough blackguard and schemer of Phillip Stoneleigh; Old Briskett was presented in a praiseworthy manner but as no name appeared on the programme, the praise cannot be assigned to its proper quarter; Dick, a waif, was safely entrusted to Miss Irene Tracy, and the title-rôle was cleverly sustained by Miss V. St. Lawrence.

TORQUAY.

THEATRE ROYAL. — Licensee and Managing Director, Mr R. Snowdon; Secretary, Mr A. Pearce.—Richard Lovelace is the attraction here this week. Mr Laurence Irving in the name-part is admirable. Miss Mabel Hackney as Lucy Sachoverell is irresistible. The Colonel Hawley of Mr William E. Ashcroft is a clever and realistic representation, which is well seconded by the subdued presentation of the Alderman by Mr Henry Crooker; whilst Mr Michael Sherbrooke, Mrs Campbell Bradley, and Mr Chris Walker very capably sustain the minor characters.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Captain Welton Dale; Acting-Manager, Mr F. Edgar Manaton.—Monsieur Beaucaire has had a successful three nights' visit to Tunbridge Wells. Mr Norman Macowan admirably portrays the French Prince, and is well supported by his company, notably Miss Violet Sterne, who gives a powerful impersonation of the imperious Lady Mary. As the rascally Winterset Mr F. Stuart Wilson is also deserving of special mention, while Mr Hans Schlessinger plays the dual-rôle of François and the French Marquis. Among the ladies Miss Millie Hamer, in the part of Lucy, should also be mentioned.

WAKEFIELD.

ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Sherwood and Co.—Mr Godfrey Lamplugh's company in the new musical comedy Miss Mischief is here this week. The part of Private Harris, V.C., has a capital exponent in Mr T. E. Conover, whose amusing impersonation is a distinct feature of the performance; Mr Harold Stanley is effective as Admiral Sir Hannibal Bethune; Mr Cecil Curtiss sings well as Captain Jack Bethune; Mr G. H. Liot is well suited as Lord Percy Fitzherry; Mr J. C. Bland is very successful as Hiram Q. Peg; and Mr H. Ellesmere does well as Count Von Himmelblau. Miss Evelyn Hughes is a charming Kitty Malone; Miss Chrissie Frances makes a praiseworthy Maid; and Miss Eileen Guilbert is a stately Lady Orrery.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Wakefield Hippodrome Company, Limited; Manager, Mr D. G. Mooney.—The Imperial Boys' Orchestra contributes a well-varied musical performance, which evokes hearty applause; a clever equestrian entertainment is provided by Miss Scott Hanneford, bareback rider; Miss Biddall, flying horsewoman; Young Poodles, boy equestrian, assisted by Clown Burgess; Miss Emma Don and company presents a vocal sketch which is well appreciated; and Miss Molly Doon, comedienne and dancer, and Mr Andy Fagan, Irish comedian, also appear.

WALLSEND.

THEATRE ROYAL. — Owners, The Wallsend Theatre Company; Acting-Manager, Mr T. Richardson.—Mr Harry Firth's company produced the pantomime Cinderella here on Monday night. The auditorium was filled to its utmost capacity, and the performance was most successful. Miss Dora Denmark makes a dashing principal boy, and as Cinderella Miss Madge Osmond is excellent. Mr Fred Lake is amusing as Pimple, and as the Baron Mr Ernest Wilson leaves little to be desired. The Ugly Sisters are in the able hands of Mr J. Binns and Mr H. Hains. Miss Chrissie Shannons gives a commendable rendering of the Fairy, and her songs are heartily appreciated. In the Palace scene some excellent specialities are introduced. Mignon in her up-to-date musical act; the Four Sisters Godfrey, dancers; Madge Osmond, male impersonator; Miss Rosie Lewis, legmania dancer; and Marsh and Morris, comedians, all receive a cordial reception.

WALSALL.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE, LIMITED.—General Manager and Secretary, Mr W. H. Westwood.—Mr E. Oswald Brook's company opened here on Monday with The New Housemaid. Mr Ralph Roberts as the Hon. Bertie Rashleigh was most successful, and created much amusement. Mr Theodore Jones was a commendable Peter Pinkerton, J.P.; Mr Howard Brenan as Peter's nephew pleased everyone; and the part of Marmsbury Doom was successfully filled by Mr Pan E. Draco. Mr Campbell Goldsmid was comical as Rosebery; Miss Ada Mansfield was well placed as Caroline; and Miss Ethel L. Carylon appeared with credit in the rôle of Dulcie. Miss Mabel Verne was exceedingly good as Nellie Haddock.

GRAND THEATRE, LIMITED.—General Manager and Secretary, Mr W. H. Westwood.—Mr J. A. Campbell and Mr G. Fulton's company occupy the boards here this week with A Bid for Fortune. Mr Dick Thomas as Cobb Cuttle is exceedingly good, creating much amusement. Mr Herbert Clifton does well as Sir Milton Netherley. Mr Geoffrey Fulton is well cast as Desmond Netherley, and Mr C. Brereton Borer makes a capital Sir Philip Templemore. Miss Olive Fulton is very pathetic as Agnes Netherley, and Miss Mary Ainslie is successful as Barbara.

WALTHAMSTOW.

PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr C. Adney Payne; Manager, Mr Arthur J. Barclay; Acting-Manager, Mr Geo. F. Slatter.—Mystification is, perhaps, the principal sensation created by the doings of Carl Hertz with his "Demon Kettle—a culinary vessel which, could it be adapted to ordinary requirements, would be invaluable in many a humble home. Miss Bonnie Goodwin and her Apollo piccaninnies are received with tumultuous applause; Cruikshanks' songs, parodies, banjo playing, and really comical patter call forth screams of laughter; Mr Ben Albert sings a couple of songs with much comic power; the Three Phydoras are seen in a good musical novelty act; One Billie Farrell, who claims to be "the originator of the cake walk," sings with peculiar volubility of his race, and dances with lightness and effect; the Allisons (James and Lucy) contribute a clever sketch, including song and dance; Rich and Rich "patter" amusingly; and some really clever pictures are shown by Ruffel's bioscope.

KING'S THEATRE.—The bill here this week is occupied by the well-known drama, Queen's Evidence, the joint work of the late Henry Pettitt and George Conquest. The cleverly constructed and interesting piece is capitally played by a good company. A very fine performance of Isaacs is given by Mr Herbert Landeck.

WEST BROMWICH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr James P. Moore.—Mr F. Brooke Warren's company, The Mysteries of the Thames, has been enthusiastically received here. Mr F. Brooke Warren cleverly sustains the part of Captain James Denbeigh. The character of Richard Brandon is sustained with care and ability by Mr Roy Fortescue. The fun is in the hands of Mr Dan Hardie, whose droll style is well appreciated. Praise is due to Miss Clare O'Sullivan for her refined and clever acting as Bertie Fitzgerald, and Miss Gwynne Warren and Miss Lalah Shelton are to be congratulated on their smart portrayals of their respective rôles.

WARRINGTON.

ROYAL COURT.—Proprietors, Messrs W. Johnson and J. Potter; General Manager, Mr J. Potter.—Mr William Bourne's company is here this week in the drama When Darkness Falls. Mr Frank Ellwood is capital as Captain Harold Montrevor, and a typical specimen of the good-hearted cleric is presented by Mr Frank Liston as the Rev. Arthur Graham. Mr E. J. Preston as the unscrupulous James Woodruffe acts with dramatic force, and Mr Will Clements makes the most of the humorous Mike Cavanagh. Miss Maud Buchanan acts with grace the part of Helen Montrevor, and a clever sketch of Mrs Woodruffe is submitted by Miss Amy Vennimore. Miss Lydia Hart as Jim and Miss Alys Eden as Harry are excellent.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES. — Proprietors, Messrs W. Johnson and J. Potter; General Manager, Mr J. Potter; Director of Amusements, Mr F. Willmot.—Palles and Cussick, two old favourites here, top the bill. In their sketch, The Original Firm, they have ample scope for displaying their versatility. De Henau, the man who paints with his feet, makes a welcome reappearance. Mattie Crawford sings several songs in capital style, and the Carney Brothers are good vocal entertainers. Adelina, with her cockatoos, scores, and the Corries are clever speciality dancers. Fred Curran is a quaint comedian, and Curtis Leo an expert conjuror. The Royal Bioscope presents some fine pictures of "A Wife's Revenge."

WEST HARTLEPOOL.

PALACE. — Director-General, Mr Frank Macnaghten.—A programme, strong in every number, is submitted this week, at the head are Barton and Ashley in their absurdity Canal Boat Sal. The pictures by Abd'el Kader and Fatma and Aicha Ben Kader are veritable works of art. Taking songs and choruses, prettily illustrated, are done by the Langdons; the patter of Sam Redfern is inimitably funny; the comedy duo, Drew and Alders, in a novel acrobatic sketch, The Billposters, do some brisk and amusing work; Carne Curre's dog is wonderfully intelligent; and Charles Bowker, actor-vocalist, and Geo. Foyle, character vocalist, complete the programme.

GRAND. — General Manager (for Mrs Weldon Watts), Mr Sidney Bacon; Resident Manager, Mr Fred Conneaux.—The Hartlepool Amateur Operatic Company, so successful in previous years in helping the funds of local institutions financially, has again come forward, and by permission of and arrangement with Mrs D'Oyly Carte, are playing for six nights The Gondoliers. Mr Lindsay Harman has acted as the professional coach, and in every character can the valuable work of this gentleman be traced.

WEST STANLEY.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing Director, Mr Mark H. Linden.—Mr Howell Webb's company is here this week with the sensational drama The Convent Bell. Mr Stanley Carlton as Philip Vaulter and Mr Chas. E. Howell as Colonel Vaulter do well in their respective parts. Mr Oliver Birrell is also good as Henri Cassilla, and Miss Ruby Maude is pleasing as Marguerite Courier. Mr Teddy Myles as Jean and Miss Florrie Manderville as Susette are very funny.

VICTORIA THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr T. C. Rawes; Acting-Manager, Mr D. Williams.—The management of this theatre having decided to run it as a hall of varieties, opened on Monday night with an excellent bill-of-fare. Topping the bill were the Five Rhynes. Mr Geo. Daunton, with his toy terrier, Biddy, was a complete success. The other artists included Miss Flo Atkins, mandolinist; Mr Tom E. Hall, eccentric comedian; Messrs Warner and Wilson, comedians; Stanert and Yondl, in their musical act; the Schallers, in their comedy act, "Billy's Blunders;" and Costello, the conjuror.

WIGAN.

GRAND THEATRE AND HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Company; Managing-Director, Mr J. Worswick.—The New York Comedy Four give a very acceptable performance here; Lotto, Lilo, and Otto, trick and comedy cyclists, do some remarkable feats; the Abadaroffs create great fun in the act entitled Prehistoric Mountebanks; Martha does a very entertaining gymnastic act, and is highly appreciated; and Collins and Croft are smart illustrators. The Stella Troupe are expert dancers and vocalists, and Grey and Grace, in their original comedy act A Surprise Packet, are entertaining. T. W. Johnson and Charles Woodward, character comedian, are capital. The Hippodrome pictures are very interesting.

EMPIRE MUSIC HALL.—Manager, Mr W. Birchall.—Dolly, Agnes, and Maud give some smart exhibitions of fancy cardboard box making here. Hyde and Elton are speciality eccentricities. Francis L. Kimball is a clever musician, and Lilian Kildare is a vocalist and expert dancer. Mr Robb Gilmore, comedian; the Brothers Hannaway, vocalists; and Miss Lizzie English, comedienne, complete the list of artists.

WOLVERHAMPTON.

GRAND THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Mr E. H. Bull and Mr Milton Bode; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy Percival.—Mr Leigh Lovel's company is appearing here this week in The Duke of Killicrankie, a refreshing and amusing play. Mr Herbert J. Bentley as the Duke plays the part admirably; Mr Leigh Lovel very cleverly sustains the character of Henry Pitt-Welby, his performance being natural and entertaining; Miss Octavia Kenmore as Lady Henrietta Addison displays much skill in her portrayal; and the Mrs Mulholland of Miss Naomi Neilson is an excellent impersonation. The remaining characters are efficiently filled.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessees, Mr Fred Benton and Mr F. J. Little; Business Manager, Mr Henry L. Compton.—For this week On the Stroke of Twelve is provided for the patrons of this house. The play is being performed by Messrs Fred Darcy and Fred J. Little's company.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr Chas. Barnard; General Manager, Mr W. H. Lennon.—Bransby Williams is the great attraction here. His impersonation of Dickens' and other characters are extremely good, and particularly popular with local audiences. The bill also includes Geo. Elliott, vocalist; the Danbys, comedians; the Bros. Lavelle, quasiut acrobats; Spry and Monti, comedians; the Four Magnets, vocalists and dancers; Gladys Archbutt, danseuse; and Primavesi, juggler.

YORK.

ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr T. H. Barrow.—Dan the Rake is a drama possessing all the elements which conduce to success, and as it is capitally played by Mr J. Rice Cassidy and his able company large audiences are the rule. Mr Cassidy himself causes much amusement in the title-rôle. Mr Frank Copeland was in every way suited to the rôle of Lieut. Charles Kavanagh, and Mr Frank Orchard did well in the thankless part of Colonel Flamer. Sufficient villainy was evinced by Mr Frank Biron as Tom Cooper, and a highly meritorous performance was given by Miss Ada Roscoe, whose Mrs Downelly supplied evidence of much study. Miss Lilian Clare must be specially complimented on her lively and amusing rendering of Madge.

OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr Sidney Brooke.—Chanti gives an entertainment which is at once unique and clever; his reception during the week has been most flattering. Lily Turner sings in first-rate style, and the musical act of the Four Jumels is interesting and clever. Tom Costello contributes several good items, and Barnard's marionettes are successful and amusing. Victoria Dagmar's performance on the bar, &c., is clever; and Robins and Collier are comedy artistes of great ability. Miss Lue Lord and Ferris and Farnley complete a strong company.

THE QUEEN OF CHORUS SINGERS,

TESSIE.
TESSIE.
TESSIE.

Leicester Daily Mercury, Dec. 6, 1904, says:—
. . . And in response to an encore, unanimous and hearty, she sang "Tessie," in the chorus of which was represented some original effects, much to the amusement of the house. She was warmly called on to come back, and had to bow her thanks many times, and finally repeat the chorus before the house would let her go.

The Original Singer of
and
MAH MOONLIGHT LOU,
MISS MADGE LESSING,
has found another equally Popular Number in LUCY LINDA LADY.
Sung in
"SERGEANT BRUE,"

MISS CLAIRE ROMAINE,

"JOHANNES HERKNER."
Play, in Five Acts, by Ernst Rosmer,
Produced at the Lessing Theatre, Dec. 12.

Herkner	Herr RITTNER
Frau Herkner	Fräulein ALBRECHT
Elisabeth	Fräulein KNORR
Dr. Tachan	Herr REICHER
Miriam	Fräulein TRIESCH
Scheithammer	Herr GRUNWALD
Moedl	Herr STIELER

BERLIN, THURSDAY, DEC. 15.—The author of this piece is a lady, Frau Elsa Bernstein, living at Munich. She is a writer of well-known novels and a few plays, and the wife of an author, too, and as everyone knows and esteems her name, why she should publish her plays under the pseudonym of Ernst Rosmer is not quite clear. Three years ago Frau Bernstein's drama, Mutter Maria—produced at one of our principal theatres—was well noticed, and Tedeum, a tragi-comedy by the same authoress, met with a fair measure of success here and in other cities. Her first dramatic work, Dammerung—produced at the Deutsches some ten years ago, and at that time fully detailed in your columns—is perhaps Frau Bernstein's best work. To Johannes Herkner no very cordial reception was accorded, and I fear it will soon disappear altogether from the bill, notwithstanding the very admirable acting. The play is too loosely woven; the action is not concentrated enough, and so many inconsistencies are apparent that—in addition to some unbearably drawn-out scenes—the three middle acts tried the patience of the audience, who frankly showed their boredom. Thus it came about that a few of the scenes intended to be dramatic and moving were received with ironical mirth. The bearer of the title-rôle does not appear at all; Johannes Herkner is dead; it is his influence only that is supposed to live again, extending itself—how is not very distinctly explained—over his son Albrecht, a sculptor. The young man is a robust, even coarse, character. Between him and his friend Tachan—a Jewish journalist—there is a vivid contrast, the latter being the more intellectual. The men are close friends, and the first act—the scene of which is laid in Herkner's studio—is very bright, owing chiefly to the clever dialogue between the two men. Herkner's most beautiful model is his friend's sister Miriam, and the girl has become, freely and even preferably, his mistress. The young sculptor never thinks of matrimony, which he believes would hem his progress, and Miriam has no love for conventional forms. That the brother does not know of the liaison is a matter of surprise, but he does not. Long dissertations upon the virtues of the dead Johannes Herkner fill up three equally long acts. The widow and daughter—Albrecht's mother and sister—talk and talk and talk. Finally the sculptor become convinced of the wrong he has done to Miriam and his friend, and he confesses his fault to Tachan, and desires to repair it by marrying Miriam. The brother is horrified and cut to the heart. He tears himself from the friend who has filled his life, and goes off on his travels accompanied by Miriam, who will not leave her brother alone. Thus the sculptor is left to his conscience, but he has enough self-assurance to believe both the travellers will return to him again, so he will wait in patience. It will be seen that there is a good deal of sentimentality mixed up with the other qualities of the play, which alone detracts from its literary value. The cast, with a solitary exception—the rôle of Herkner's sister Elisabeth—was a first-rate one.

MR BERNARD SHAW has become the fashion. His Teufelskerl is still running well at the Berliner, and on Thursday the Deutsches Theatre produced his three-act comedy Helden with distinct success. The author's satirical wit, the pungent humour which is so characteristic of him, have made him a favourite with public and critics alike. The piece was well interpreted, Herr Sommerstorff, Herr Strobl, Fräulein Olly, Fräulein Hartwig, and others of the excellent company giving the chief characters. Dr. Lindau appeared on behalf of the author in response to the cordial applause.

FRAULEIN ROSA OLITZKA has been engaged for a brief season at the Theatre des Westens, and made her first appearance there on Monday in Der Troubadour. Her Azucena is well known, and is among Fräulein Olitzka's best rôles, but she was suffering from slight hoarseness, which was unfortunate. The members of the Des Westens company supported the "guest" in a worthy manner, and Fräulein Olitzka's reception was a very friendly one.

THE Berliner Theatre has produced its annual fairy-play for the delectation of the juveniles. It is entitled Die Schöne Melusine, and is in five tastefully-arranged tableaux. There is plenty of innocent mirth, and several effective dances have been introduced—notably a Dutch peasant dance and a rococo ballet. The piece, being capitally acted, will certainly prove a draw all through the holidays.

A HIGHLY interesting performance was given by a St. Petersburg company, under the management of M. Orleneff, at the Theatre des Westens last week. It was Tschirikoff's drama The Jews that was chosen for representation—a play which has been done here in German some time ago, and which is doubtless known in England also. It is a typically modern Russian piece, in the style that Gorki and other writers have made their own—powerful, realistic, and teeming with gloomy tragedy. The play was splendidly acted—so convincingly, indeed, that the nerves of many among the audience suffered severely. The programme was judiciously furnished with a synopsis in German, so that no difficulty in following the course of the drama was experienced. Die Juden was listened to with close attention, and the applause at the close was genuine and hearty.

A VERY successful evening at the Theatre des Westens was on Saturday last, when Don Cæsar—Rudolph Dellinger's bright little operetta—was revived. It has not been heard here for many years, so it came to many in the light of a novelty, and met with an enthusiastic reception. Herr Prasch has a happy knack of hitting upon just the right thing for his audiences, who are in consequence most appreciative. The operetta was capitally acted and sung. Herr Turmfeld, from Leipsig, gave the title-rôle very successfully, and Fräulein Linda was a charming Maritana, whose pleasing voice was heard to best advantage. Other parts were excellently taken by Frau Gaston, Fräulein Hagen, and Herr Below; chorus and orchestra under Kapellmeister Roth's careful guidance performed their duties admirably, and the setting of the work was excessively tasteful.

"HERKULESPILLEN" ("Les Dragées d'Hercule"), three-act farce, by MM. Bilhaud and Hennequin, German by Max Schoenau, has made its début at the Residenz, succeeding the successful Hochzeitsnacht. It will scarcely rival its predecessor either in merit or popular favour, and as the play is certainly already known to your readers it will be superfluous to describe the plot. Herr Alexander—the popular actor-manager—carried, as usual, the whole thing on his capable shoulders. In the rôle of Dr. Lucien Frontignan, Herr Alexander acted with his own original and irresistible humour, and was well supported by Herr Leisner in the part of Jonathan Brackson, Fräulein Koerner as Madame Frontignan, and Fräulein Witt as Odette. Incidental rôles were also very humorously sustained by Herren Georg, Bach, and Seldeneck.

THE 100th anniversary of Schiller's death—which falls in May next—will be celebrated throughout the country as a national event. Every stage of importance in Germany will give one of Schiller's plays on that day.

"DER WEIBERKONIG has reached its 100th consecutive performance at the Thalia, and is still running briskly. At afternoon performances twice and three times a week Max und Moritz, an amusing children's piece, is being given with success.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

SYDNEY, Nov. 1.—Mr Bland Holt revived Cecil Raleigh and Seymour Hicks' drama Sporting Life on the 29th. The Earl's-court Exhibition, training stables at Newmarket, and the National Sporting Club were all there as of yore, and the house was full of those interested in sport. The same efficient cast, including Miss Francis Ross, Miss Harrie Ireland, Walter Baker, Albert Norman, Charles Brown, with Mr and Mrs Bland Holt, gave a good all-round performance.

"AFTER DARK," a perennial favourite, has been revived at the Lyceum by Mr Walter Sanford, who plays Old Tom. Mr Olly Deering is Dicey Morris and Miss Adelaide Boothby an excellent Rose Egerton. The convict, Knatchbull, gives George Kunkel a good chance, and the play has all the old-time sensations which are presented with modern appliances.

THE George Stephenson American Comedy Company finished at the Criterion on Saturday, and the theatre is now undergoing the alterations ordered by the Lord Mayor.

THE Theatre Royal is also to be improved by direction of the same official. The proposed alterations include extra exits and other costly works.

THE Tivoli has a particularly strong bill, the Frasettis, O'Meers Sisters, Cadwaladr Opera Trio, Ward Sear, Hilda Lane (a fine soprano), and Tom Dawson being included. Hackenschmidt, "the Russian Lion," has arrived, and will give wrestling exhibitions.

MISS NELLIE STEWART has scored a big win with Pretty Peggy in Melbourne, and the favourite actress is expected here about Christmas.

SYDNEY.—Nov. 8.—L'Aiglon will run yet another week at Her Majesty's. Meanwhile everybody is asking everybody else if anything better was ever done by Mr J. C. Williamson. In this most hypercritical city no word of cavil is heard as to the production, and praise of Miss Tittell Brune is general. Miss Tittell Brune will play Juliet on the 12th to Mr A. E. Greenaway's Romeo. Mr Williamson intended to produce a pantomime at Melbourne this Christmas, but the scenery, properties, and costumes were burnt on the way from America. Why it is deemed necessary to import these things, which can be equally well made here, remains a mystery.

"AFTER DARK," made less thrilling than heretofore and ornamented with good variety business, pleases Mr Walter Sanford's patrons at the Lyceum.

THE Tivoli has an additional attraction in Mr Carden Wilson, whose imitations of well-known actors are excellent. The turn was most favourably received. The Cadwaladr Trio now gives Derryquin, an operatic sketch, including many Irish musical selections. The Frasettis play as charmingly as ever, and the wire-walking of the Sisters O'Meers is very attractive. Miss Hilda Lane, the high-class soprano, is a great favourite. George Hackenschmidt, the famous wrestler, opens on Saturday a sixteen weeks' engagement with Mr Harry Rickards.

WEST-END BALLAD CONCERTS.

The thirty-fifth concert of the fifth season, which was given at Queen's Hall, on Dec. 9, under the control of the London Concert Direction Company, sufficiently proved the popularity of the concerts, and a very large attendance also proved the readiness of the public to support them. A programme of thirty-two items almost precludes our commenting on everyone of them, but many of the vocal and instrumental pieces revealed considerable talent, and certainly one of the best singers was Miss Lillian Barnes, whose excellent voice and pure style were fully displayed in Liddle's expressive song "Abide with me," which we have not often heard so well rendered. Miss Myfanwy Jones, whose name probably indicates a vocalist of Welsh extraction, was rather ambitious in her choice of the "Jewel Song" from Faust. Gounod is a little beyond her powers at present, but the fluency of her execution promises success in future, and her voice is not deficient in quality. Miss Evelyn Booth merited distinct praise for her graceful delivery of Botten's pretty song, "April Morn," and Miss Ethel Ingram sang "The Enchantress," by Hatton, creditably. Miss Ethel Osborn recited "The Pride of Battery B" in a very effective manner, and Miss Frances Barrington was equally successful in Conan Doyle's "Confessions." Miss F. Mabel Charter played the Polonaise of Vieuxtemps for the violin with considerable brilliancy, and Miss E. M. Powell displayed skill as a pianist on the "Second Mazurka" of Benjamin Godard. Mr Stimson Smith was fairly successful in Leslie Stuart's "Bandolero," and Mr Arthur L. Edwards, who has a capital voice, used it effectively in a Serenata of Mascagni. Among those who contributed to the lengthy programme were Miss Doris Greville, Mr C. Poynting, Miss Maud E. Penseney, Mr Cooke (who was set down for imitations of popular actors), and Madame Stimson Smith. Miss Powell and Miss Elkington assisted at the pianoforte.

DEATH OF MR. GEORGE D. CLARENCE.

Mr George D. Clarence, an old Liverpool actor, was buried on Wednesday at Anfield cemetery in the presence of a large number of theatrical and other friends. Mr Clarence, who was universally esteemed, had reached the age of sixty years, and died on Sunday after some months of ill-health. Few living actors can pride themselves upon having had his experience, for it may be said that during forty years he was attached to stock companies, and a quarter of a century ago or more he belonged to the old patent Theatre Royal, now an ice warehouse, in Williamson-square, where "stock" work was a feature, and afterwards removed to the now defunct Adelphi in Christian-street, at which place he was manager until its close a few years ago.

The Adelphi was, perhaps, the last of the old genuine stock theatres in the country, for, unlike others, it did not lay aside for Christmas pantomime its weekly dramatic fare. Here for many years six different plays were produced every week, and sometimes (it being a two houses a-night arrangement) a change would be made the same evening, the menu ranging from Shakespeare to the most blood-curdling pistol and dagger work. Consequently every year would find the company dealing with perhaps 200 different plays! To Mr Clarence fell the task of not only arranging the stage and overlooking rehearsals every day, but the shaping of parts to suit the time allowed for representation. He was a man of liberal education and a versatile actor, being especially good in the heavy rôles. It has often been said by many who knew his abilities that he had never had a fair chance, otherwise he would have made his mark in a higher walk of theatrical life. Mr Clarence, whose memory will always be kindly recalled, was well known in Masonic circles, having been a past-master of the Liverpool Dramatic Lodge, 1,609.

MESSRS OETZMANN AND CO.'S list of Christmas presents and novelties is so intensely attractive that it has only to be read to suggest possibilities of generosity beyond the dreams of avarice. Most of our readers, however, will be satisfied to choose one or more of the dainty articles which are on sale at this establishment, where the variety of the exhibits is only equalled by their excellence.

MR W. H. ARMSTRONG, the well-known solicitor, has been the victim of false statements made by some evil-disposed persons who have circulated reports that he has abandoned his London practice, and gone to live in the country. He has given up his practice in the country for some time, and is now to be found at his new office in Rochester-row, Westminster.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDARE.

NEW THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Z. Andrews.—Mr James Stillwell's company is here in Queen of the Night. Mr James Stillwell does exceedingly well as Frank Cavendish. Mr Charles V. Sandford has been cast for the part of Philip Stoneleigh. Old Briskett is played with great ability by Mr Thorpe Tracey, a comedian of considerable power. Mr Herbert Colley gives an amusing impersonation of Adolphus Briskett, his songs being much appreciated. Mr Paul E. Teulon is an excellent David Pentreath. Miss Katherine Barnett is sweet and winsome as Maud Sylvester. Miss Marie Moore is capital as Mrs Briskett.

ABERDEEN.

PALACE THEATRE, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Ernest Sheldon.—The big event this week is the daring cycle feat, "Looping the Loop," by Dartigan. A crowded house holds its breath nightly as the mad ride is in progress. The Jackson Family are received with much heartiness in their musical entertainment; Shavo, the comic juggler, performs a number of clever tricks; and Mr Joe Conley gives an entertaining turn as a vocalist and dancer. The Smythsons contribute a pleasing little sketch of an amusing character, and Mr John Terry and Miss Mabel Lambert brightly and humorously delineate a number of Irish characters. The Bros. Warlock are very popular, and Mr Tony Iveson is successful with his musical interlude. The Bioscope display of pictures is unusually interesting.

ABERTILLERY.

THEATRE METROPOLE.—Lessees, Messrs Arthur Carlton and Sam Duckworth; Resident and General Manager, Mr Geo. W. Ventom.—Mr John H. Morton's popular company is here again in The Rajah of Ranjanpore. Mr Alvin Sawyer gives a delightful and finished performance as Horatio Chick; Mr Harry Cornwall plays with good effect the part of Mr Stubbs; Mr Arthur Reid gives a clever portrayal of Captain Hertage; Mr Chas. Linney makes a dashing Ernest Travers; Mr E. F. Welch acts with much earnestness the rôle of Ted Perkins; Mr Bert Harrow as Thisles and Mr W. Harrison as Potts are exceptionally good; whilst Miss Minnie Blackmore is charming. Miss Nell Ascot as Primrose plays the part in a very graceful manner. Miss Madge Clayton as Marie gives a pleasing rendering. Miss Marion Walker as Eliza plays with much vivacity. The Rajah Troupe of lady dancers introduce some graceful dances.

ACCKINGTON.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr J. Mill; Assistant Manager, Mr T. W. Moyes.—A very attractive bill is provided here this week. Codge, the whistling newsboy, is a host in himself. Miss Flo Claribell is also very good. Onda and Leon, horizontal bar performers, are particularly clever in their line, Mr Charles Cassell, comedian, is well received. Mr Harry Boothman, with some smart patter and a good voice, meets with deserved success. The Revell Troupe are particularly smart.

ALDERSHOT.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr George E. Williams.—The Mockery of Marriage is being played here this week by Miss Olga Audré's company, and to lovers of sensational drama is proving highly attractive. A special feature of the performances is the clever acrobatic business of the Four Aces. The scenery, too, is effective. Miss Olga Audré gives a good impersonation of Alva; Miss Lydia Audrey does well as Rose; and amusement is caused by Mrs Sydney Halling's Mary Ann. Mr Arthur Winpenny is acceptable as Dick; Mr Harry Stebbing is Jack Stanley; Mr Frank Dalton as Seth is capable; and Mr Will Skelton (Toby) and Mr Harold Graham (Joseph Vernham) are well placed.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr Armstrong Fairbairn.—Mr Edmund Tearle and his Shakespearian combination are here this week. Mr Tearle appeared on Monday as D'Artagnan, the adventurer in The Three Musketeers, dramatised from Dumas's novel of that name, and had excellent support from Miss Kate Clinton as Miladi. D'Artagnan affords many opportunities to Mr Tearle of impressing his hearers and holding them spellbound with the intensity of his acting. Miss Clinton was equally powerful as the Spy. Effective impersonation of character was given to Richelieu by Mr W. J. Miller, King Louis XIII. by Mr F. Barlow, Villiers by Mr J. V. Fairley, Rochfort by Mr W. G. Ross, and minor male parts by Messrs T. W. Benson, W. Raynham, Neal Fitzwilliam, V. Crabtree; and Misses M. Campbell Violet Lesborough, Rose Bennett, Claire Armytage, Esther Tearle, and Nelly Bennett. On Tuesday Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor was produced with Edmund Tearle as Sir John Falstaff, and Miss Kate Clinton as Mistress Ford. Wednesday evening saw the staging of Macbeth; on Thursday the Haymarket romantic play, Under the Red Robe, was represented; and on Friday, for Mr Tearle's benefit, Shakespeare's Roman tragedy, Julius Cæsar, was performed with Mr Tearle in his favourite rôle of Brutus.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr Charles Revill; Director of Entertainments, Mr F. Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr L. Campkin.—The company here this week includes the Kellinos in their musical acrobatic act, "In Venetia;" dexterity and skill are exhibited in all they do. The Daunton-Shaw Troupe of trick and comedy cyclists are well received, as are also Beattie Kent, an accomplished serio; Les Strads, Continental illusionists; Ray and Calden, comedy and acrobatic dancers and patterers; Rappin and Lucus, a versatile couple of fun-makers; Gus Garrick, character comedian; and the Bioscope.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, W. H. Broadhead and Sons; Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy B. Broadhead; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr W. Leech.—Heading the bill here this week is the popular comedienne Miss Marie Kendall in her latest vocal successes. Vance Brothers, comedy instrumentalists, in their act "Sharp and Flat" create much fun, and other artistes include David Poole, ventriloquial expert; Roy and Lee, gymnasts; the Sisters Lytton are charming vocalists; the Four Herberts, the Jolly Californian Farmers; Goldinis with acrobatic carpet spinning; Steve M'Carthy, comedian and dancer; Winona, lady rifle shot; the Pinaros, in their American comedy act; Mahatma, in second-sight marvels &c.

ATTERCLIFFE.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, North of England Theatre Corporation, Limited; Managing-Director, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Resident Manager, Mr Claude Seaton.—Mr Herbert Fuller's company is fulfilling a week's engagement here with Fiends of London. Mr Hugh Carmichael has a trying part as Joe Ormerod, but acquits himself admirably. As Captain Crawley Mr Francis Everard is sufficiently villainous to earn the execrations of the audience. As Sir Horace Bream Mr Harold Weston plays with quiet force. Mr Herbert Fuller as Bob Archer, the jockey, is well placed, and makes the part an interesting one. Tod Bailey, an American, finds an able exponent in Mr Charles Webb. The old soldier, Mat Christie, played by Mr James J. Newell, loses none of its points, and is a fine performance. A good character sketch is given by Mr Sidney Sarl as Sandy Macduff. Miss Agnes Collier has an onerous part as Laurie Christie, but she succeeds admirably in bringing out the light and shade with due regard to effect. Miss Emily Lewis is a vivacious Flossie Spring, Miss Nelson Ramsay does well as Sophie Shade, Miss Edith Leslie scores as Trixie Gilliard, and Miss Alice Lane in the thankless part of Mother Murphy is to be commended. A word of praise is well deserved by Little Gladys in the dual rôles of Sally Frost, a match girl, and Little Tim, a clown.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr T. Allan Edwards; Assistant-Manager, Mr W. Massey Baker.—An excellent bill-of-fare is provided for the patrons of this comfortable house. The Four Maisanos contribute a laughable and clever musical turn. Lillie Lassah, daintily costumed, sings well and dances neatly. An exceptionally interesting couple are the Woellhafs, who as patterers, pantomimists, and dancers secure hearty applause. Pulo, juvenile juggler, is very smart; Lily Martell, comedienne and acrobatic dancer, shows ability; Harry Thurston is a capital mimic of music hall artistes; Calvo is, as he describes himself, a "vocal wonder;" and the De Voy, Hurst and Fredericks Trio are a success in their sketch, Dark Town Insurance Depôt.

BACUP.

NEW COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Frank Denman-Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr Richard Nightingale.—A Girl's Cross Roads is here this week, played by Mr Douglas Bruce's company. The central figure is the dipsomaniac Barbara Wade, portrayed by Miss Lilly Hammersley with great firmness, her most violent drunken scenes being so realistic as to leave a deep impression. As the farmer's daughter, Nellie Meadows, Miss Kate Walford does not spare herself, but gives a capital study from life. As Farmer Meadows Mr W. E. Griffiths submits a delightful character sketch. Miss Ethel Bracewell's portrait of Constance Cornell is graceful and charming. As Jack Livingstone Mr George Gainsford throws heart and soul into the part, his remorse being intensely effective; and Mr E. Eardley Howard as Dr. Weston acts with sincerity and earnestness. Mr W. Fraser-Brunner's performance as the callous villain Cuthbert Lumley is sufficiently repulsive. As the irrepressible Toby Tervey Mr Will Corrie is genuinely funny; Tilly Vance finds a charming representative in Miss Gladys Newcombe; and Mr John Rogers invests the part of Luke Ramsden with characteristic force.

BARNSLEY.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr A. C. Mitchell.—The farewell visit of Sherlock Holmes is attracting good houses to the above theatre. The title-rôle is played realistically by Mr Kenneth Rivington; Mr Fred Inwood is an able Dr. Watson; John Forman is capably played by Mr Charles E. Scutt; Professor Moriarty is effectively presented by Mr Arthur B. Murray; Mr Ernest Gray does well as James Larrabee; Sidney Prince is a satisfactory impersonation by Mr Harry Stafford; and Mr Charles Chaplin is successful as Billy. Miss Florence Radcliffe is a clever Alice Faulkner, and Miss Carry Lacey makes a marked impression as Madge Larrabee.

BARNSTAPLE.

MUSIC HALL.—Proprietors, the Town Council; Manager, Mr O. J. Micklin.—This week we are favoured with a visit by Charles W. Poole's Myriorama, which is proving an immense draw. The programme also includes animated photographs, the Royal Comedy Four, Coma, who executes some smart juggling; Henny, a child actress and dancer of pronounced ability; Harry Raymond, coon dancer; Fanning's Fantoches, the Schafers, who introduce some novel musical turns; and the Three Condos, a Japanese troupe of equilibrists.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.

ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr George Stone.—Mr J. A. Campbell's No. 1 company in The Sin of Her Childhood is here. Mr Campbell himself plays with distinction as Captain John Thornton; Mr Chas. Fancourt is a worthy Rev. Alan Gray; and Mr A. Milroy is a capable Stephen Haysel. There is much humour in the Barney O'Reilly of Mr Fred Elvin, and Eliza Muggins is capitally rendered by Miss Nellie Freeland. Miss Jennie Hicks is a success as Maria Haysel, Miss Mary Fulton as Mary Haysel shows sympathy and power, and Little Dot Moss is an engaging Hannah Spry.

TIVOLI THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Stage-Manager, Mr Tom Whiting.—Dr. Boyd's mysterious magic kettle creates much speculation and amusement here. Primavesi is a competent juggler; the Folary Duo give a capital musical act; the Venola Brothers are clever comedy gymnasts; and Billy Richardson is as amusing as ever in his particular style. James Brady, comedian, sings with success.

BATH.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr Lewis A. Long.—Henry Carlton and his comedy team occupy a prominent position in their hilarious sketch Obliging a Lady. Signor and Madame Prosper Benn, in their smart musical interlude, From Pavement to Stage, are enthusiastically received. No more entertaining raconteur than Charles Pond, in his "Glimpses of Life," can be imagined. Clark and Argyle, national dancers and pipers, are welcomed with cordial pleasure. Carne Curre and his wonderfully intelligent dog returns to win further admirers and create amusement. Hannah and James are a couple of foot equilibrists that can hold their own with the best. Minnie D'Aublyn, burlesque artiste, has a capital "Toasting" song, which she delivers with much gusto and success. Baker Belphor, baritone vocalist, sings some popular ballads with feeling and approval.

BEDFORD.

ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter R. Wilson.—For the first three nights of this week Mr Ben Greet's company, under the direction of Mr J. Bannister Howard, is occupying the boards in the drama East Lynne. Mr C. H. Pullen makes a good Justice Hare, and Mr Vernon Travers is well suited to the part of Archibald Carlyle; Mr Wilfred Beckwith cleverly undertakes the rôle of Sir Francis Leveson; Mr Walter Powell is entirely successful as Richard Hare; and the humour of the piece is well sustained by Mr J. O. Stuart in the character of Bullock. Miss Rosalind Ivan gives a pathetic rendering of Lady Isobel; and Barbara Hare finds a clever interpreter in Miss May Straker. The Bedford Amateur Dramatic Society appeared on Thursday in the comedy, Mother-in-Law, by Geo. R. Sims.

BELFAST.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr James M'Cann.—The farewell visit of Mr Eugene C. Stafford's company, in the successful comedy The Private Secretary, commenced here on Monday, and this "evergreen" piece was received with as much enthusiasm as of yore. The important rôle of Mr Cattermole was filled with great acceptance by Mr W. Hargraves, and no less successful was the performance of Mr Geoffrey Guise as the Rev. Robert Spalding. Miss Dora Grey, an accomplished actress, assumed the rôle of Edith Marsland in convincing style, her handsome stage presence being exactly suited to the requirements of the part. Mr Raymond Chester was strikingly convincing as Mr Marsland, and Mr Vivian Gilbert could not easily be excelled in his impersonation of Harry Marsland. Mr A. Austin Leigh most admirably portrayed Douglas Cattermole, and the rôle of the ambitious tailor, Mr Sydney Gibson, was capitally sustained by Mr Wilfred Compton. Mrs Alfred Davies was excellent as Miss Ashford, and other rôles were satisfactorily sustained by Miss Mary E. Deverell, a charming Eva Webster; Miss Cecily Wade, and Messrs D. Benford and J. Macredy. The domestic comedy Good for Nothing formed an attractive curtain-raiser, the various characters being cleverly interpreted by Miss Dora Gray, Messrs R. Chester, W. Compton, V. Gilbert, A. Austin Leigh, and D. Benford.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing Director, Mr Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr John P. Beardmore.—The chief attraction here this week is the exhilarating farcical comedy A Terrible Night. Mr Paul Martinetti assumed the leading rôle of Benjamin Roque, and his impersonation was very successful. Other rôles were capitally sustained by Messrs Alfred Martinetti, Clara Martinetti, John Heard, Emile Josset, Adolphe Marcelli, and Harry Chapman. Stern and Stern, comedians and dancers, make a big hit fully deserved, and a welcome return visit is being made by Mr Gus Hindell, a clever comedian with a taking style. Mr George Bendon, the white coon, is the happy possessor of a fine voice, and his songs have been successful. The Doran Brothers supply a capital performance in their eccentric gymnastic display, and the bill is completed by the Mozondos, speciality artistes, and Miss Rose Waller, refined vocalist.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Brock.—Mr Charles R. Sweet, "the original musical burglar," heads the bill here, and his novel musical act has been received with enthusiasm. Mr Billy Keene and Miss Jessie Adams, the clever society duettists, have been very successful, and the artistic violin performance of Mr Jan Rudenyi is certainly one of the features of the bill. Mr Horace White, the smart ventriloquist and talented pianist, furnishes an entertainment which is admirable in every sense, and the sweet and cultured vocalism of Miss Lilian Lowe has been applauded to the echo. Wisper, the comic juggler, is funny, and others included in the programme are Johnny Gilmore, a humorous comedian, and Miss Beattie Bloom, comedienne.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General Manager, Mr Henry T. Downs.—The Sutcliffe Troupe head the bill, and their novelty acrobatism and smart dancing have been accorded a hearty reception. The descriptive songs rendered by Mr Arthur Albert have created quite a furore; Messrs Farley, Rennie, and Farley appear to much advantage in their exhilarating comedy act, "Fun at a Railway-station;" Mr Max Sterling submits some novel and startling feats of illusion; Baker and Rose, comedians, have been well received; Wal Croft is a good Scotch comedian, with capital patter; and others appearing are Will Harvey, character comedian; Miss Lil Gorman, vocalist and dancer, who made a big hit on Monday; and Mr Carl Verdi's talented musical act, which is an acquisition to any bill.

IMPERIAL HIPPODROME AND CIRCUS.—Proprietors, Messrs Carter and Bosco; General Manager, Mr Irving Bosco; Assistant-Manager, Mr George Dobler.—The patronage accorded this popular circus continues to increase. This week we have a visit from Mr Otto Schuman, whose clever equestrian act is unquestionably worthy of the enthusiastic reception accorded it. The unique feats of the horses, ponies, and boarhounds are amazing; the comedy bar performance of Stoll Bros. is a great attraction; and the Sloan Family of equestrians are fulfilling a successful engagement. The ladder performance of the Four Uniques is exceptionally good. A novelty, and one that is certain to be a big attraction, commenced on Monday, viz., a steel plate rivetting competition. Also appearing are the Babusians, in their unique staircase act, and the new series of animated pictures. With characteristic generosity Messrs Carter and Bosco gave a matinée on Wednesday for the benefit of the unemployed in Belfast. The performance, which was successful, was under the patronage and presence of the Lord Mayor of Belfast, Sir Otto Jaffe, and Lady Jaffe.

BILSTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr Harry Battersby.—The variety programme for this week includes Gambo, an ape impersonator, in a clever act entitled The Musical Garden. Good receptions are accorded to Joe Hastings, the popular jumper; the stylish Radium Girls; Clara Hastings, vocalist; Brenda Leslie, song illustrator; Charles Bradford, comedian; and comical Pearce and Ward, including funny Fred Ward.

BIRKENHEAD.

THEATRE METROPOLE.—Lessee, Mr W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Pell.—The New Century Company's exhibition of animated pictures, on a return visit, is the attraction here this week.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr D. J. Clarke.—A comprehensive company includes Verno and Voyce, in their popular vocal sketches; Hanco, a clever handcuff manipulator; Mr Charles R. Whittle, an excellent comedian; the Violas, second-sight artistes and expert mystifiers; Miss Lily Turner, comedienne; Jules Keller, the human enigma; Mr Slade Murray, an actor-vocalist of ability; the Knick-Knacks, dancers; Palles and Cussick, comedians; and the Bioscope pictures.

BIRMINGHAM.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr J. W. Turner; Manager, Mr Victor Turner.—Our Boys won a friendly reception here on Monday, when the comedy was produced by Mr Charles Otley and company. Mr Otley himself plays the part of Perkyn Middlewick, and invests it with much interest. Mr Lawrence Grove proves successful as Talbot Champneys, and Miss Beatrice Marsden as Mary Melrose and Miss Amy Coleman as Clarissa handle these parts well. Mr Arthur Estcourt as Sir Geoffrey Champneys, Mr Frank Wade as Charles Middlewick, Mr Fitzpatrick as Kempster, Miss Ethel Verne as Violet Melrose, and Miss Marie Jonquil as Belinda complete the cast. Our Friend the Major has preceded the comedy.

CARLTON THEATRE, SALTLEY.—Owner and Manager, Mr Arthur Carlton; Resident-Manager, Mr Ben Sydney.—Parson Thorn has won the warmest expressions of sympathy and approval, Mr Ormonde G. Smethurst acting in this clever rôle with the utmost good taste and ability. Miss Clara Knowles wins sympathy for her clever acting and singing; Miss Jessie Chandler is successful as Lady Maud, the woman with a past; and Mr Fred Harker is good as Wylde Crewell. Mr Will Priestley with his humorous acting and diverting ditties wins a big success as Paddy O'Quirk, being ably assisted by Miss Mollie George as Dotsy Doddles.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Lessee, Mr Charles Barnard; Manager, Mr Dan Barnard.—A Traitor Prince continues to please when and wheresoever it appears. This week it is being played at Aston by Messrs Beaudyn and Livesey's company. Mr Alex Temple as Lieut Frank Derrick is cheered vociferously; Mr Henry Lonsdale acts cleverly as the Prince; Mr G. M. Montanini wins respect as Cara; Miss Lilian Roseberry sustains the heroine's part in a perfectly satisfactory manner; and Miss Beatrice Western conveys a profound impression as Vashti. Messrs E. Carter Livesey, Austin Mortimer, Miss L. Rignold, and Mrs E. C. Matthews have excelled in the comedy parts, and the scenery has given great delight.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident-Manager, Mr A. W. Matcham.—The programme here this week is headed by Bella and Bijou, whose entertainment is excellent. Rejected Remounts is presented by Fred Ginnett's company, who are warmly appreciated; the Two Romers render their operatic selections with effect; Florrie Gallimore is loudly applauded for her Japanese song; a novel trapeze act is done by Leona Dare; and the gymnastic display of the Sisters Mascotte is decidedly clever. Phil Hermann, Cavallinis, and Juan and M'Que add to the fun of the evening.

GAIETY THEATRE.—General Manager, Mr Albert Bushell.—Phil Ray, comedian, wins well-deserved applause here. Ray Wallace, in her imitations, appears with success. A refined entertainment is that given by the Strolling Players, who are very versatile. Wal Pink and company appear in an amusing sketch, Uncle's Wife. Boyd and Gilfain, in their operatic sketches, are highly appreciated. A clever gymnastic display is that of Alethea, Arthur Holland, Walter Bellonini, and the animated pictures are well received.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr Thomas Barrasford.—That quaint comedian, Harry Ford, displays all his old attributes to popularity. Radford and Valentine are amusing jugglers; some interesting picture postcard posing is done by A. Ba-Bee; John Lloyd has a good tenor voice; and the Donatos, one-legged acrobats; Kate Gourlay, Fielding and Hull, and Kweery, the illusionist, win loud applause.

BORDESLEY PALACE.—Resident Manager, Mr Edward Foster.—Bransby Williams, in his impersonations of Dickens, has an enthusiastic reception here. A clever acrobatic performance is that of the Lukushima Japanese Troupe and a smart skating act is presented by Les Vicentinas. Frazer and Mac are as amusing as ever; Frank Harwood, in his dramatic scena "The Looking Glass," is highly appreciated; the Schutzenliesserin Quartet render their selections with effect; Katie Butler, character comedienne, is most successful; as also is Captain Slingsby, in his ventriloquial act.

BLACKBURN.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr Harry Yorke; Business-Manager, Mr Reginald Yorke.—Mr Fred Karno's company, in Saturday to Monday, is the source of much amusement this week, and the comic knockabout business causes much laughter. The weight of the piece is borne by Mr Fred Kitchen as John Willie Jaggs, and he is well supported by Miss Aggie Morris as Corinda Blake, Miss Ada Maskell as Aunt Skinner, Mr Chas. Baldwin as Mr Potts, and Mr Frank Haylett as Tom Freeman. Some graceful dancing is done by the Camille Troupe.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr E. H. Page.—The Midnight Mail is the attraction here this week. It is played by Messrs Dottridge and Longden's company.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr F. Macnaghten; General Manager, Mr Will Murray; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry Drury.—The Magic Kettle is creating much astonishment here this week. Kurtz does some clever juggling feats. Other good turns are the Sisters Hayden, comediennes; Wilfrid, the Canadian contortionist; the Northern Troupe of dancers; the Jalvans, Oriental jugglers; Dandy George and his dog Rosie; Chas. Bowker, tenor vocalist; and Mdlle. Rosa's Hippodrome.

BLACKPOOL.

PALACE.—General Manager, Mr G. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr Fred Waller.—A good all-round programme is provided here this week. Datas, the memory man; Eva Westcott, in an interesting playlet; the Four Figaros, vocalists and dancers; Tom Browne, the famous siffleur; J. A. Cassels, an amusing Scotch comedian; Sybil Montague, a charming ballad vocalist; the Brothers O'Brien, bar performers; Hal Forde, comedian; Ruby Aston, a very dainty comedienne and dancer; the Hennequez, comedy acrobats; and Major Sitherland, the spinning marvel, are all well received.

HIPPODROME.—Lessees, Signor Pepi and Co.—Dinah Morris and her troupe of Southern State artists top the bill here. The Rhondda Valley Glee Singers give an excellent selection of well-known glees; Maisie Pelham dances well; Kid Johnson, club juggler and ball puncher, gives a very attractive turn; and Marie Wilson, Captain Iona, and Burg, Haud, and Wise are also included in the bill.

BLYTH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr George E. Good.—The Wearin' o' the Green once more forms the attraction here. Mr Chalmers Mackay as the rollicking Irishman, Barney O'Hea, is undoubtedly the life of the pretty musical play, and to Mr Reginald Garland praise is due for a fine rendering of Shamus. Miss Lalla Stanhope makes a charming Biddy, whilst Mrs Chalmers Mackey has a good reception as Norah.

BOLTON.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Hermann.—A return visit is this week being made by Mr Charles Frohman's company in Sherlock Holmes. Mr H. A. Saintsbury gives a natural and perfect representation of the famous detective, and is well supported by a capable company, prominent amongst whom is Miss Vera Longden in the pathetic part of Alice Faulkner. The play is well staged.

GRAND THEATRE, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry Kenyon.—Mr Hesslegrave is appearing here in his favourite character, Soft Tommy Shuttleworth, in Grelley's Money. Other turns are Johnnie Renson and Rose Waite, speciality artistes; the Three Dagmars, acrobats and tumblers; Fred Spencer, comedian; Ormonde Penstone, billiard ball manipulator; Cliff Ryland, comedian; the Langdons, Williams and Brown, Mdlle. De Vernet, Alec Thomas, Eunice Titiens, and the Imperial Bioscope.

OHMY'S CIRCUS AND HIPPODROME.—The chief attraction here this week is Miss Ella and her forest-bred lions and boarhound. Claude Ohmy and Mr J. Yelding give a clever double jockey act; Miss Scott appears in a globe performance; and Rolo and Rando, comic gymnasts; Miss Yelding, wire performer; Turle and Turle, trapezists; and Miss Lilly Ohmy, in a leaping act, also appear.

BOURNEMOUTH.

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietors, Messrs David Allen and Son; Sole Lessee, Mr Mouillot; Manager, Mr Rowland Stewart.—Mr Norman V. Norman's company opened here on Monday. The répertoire includes Under the Red Robe, Nell Gwyn, David Garrick, and Country Life. In Nell Gwyn Mr Norman V. Norman gave an impressive picture of the Merry Monarch, and was much applauded. He was ably supported by Miss Beatrice Wilson, who, as the Orange Girl, played her part with vivacity and charm. As Lord Dellans Mr Eric Maxon was quite successful. Mr Robert Hilton in the part of Master Ralph Cursitor played very well, as did Mr Iden Payne as Adam Bareacre. A sympathetic rendering of Betty Arndale was given by Miss Kathleen Rind; and Miss Norah Doyle's Rose—a small part—stood out well. Others in a strong cast were Mr Barnet Parker as Earl of Rochester, Miss Lilian Kevil-Davies as Lady Castlemain, Miss F. Glossop-Harris as the Duchess of Portsmouth, and Mr Norman Leslie as Colonel Blood.

BRIGHOUSE.

ALBERT THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr T. Morton Powell; Manager, Mr M. Manley.—The popular drama It's Never Too Late to Mend is here this week, and is admirably portrayed by Mr John Wainwright's company. It's a long time ago since Mr Wainwright first took the famous part of Tom Robinson, and yet he is now as successful in the part as at any time of his career. Messrs Alfred E. Calver, Henry Lee, Edwin Davies, and Miss Kitty Carew are also very good in their several parts.

BROUGHTON.

VICTORIA, LIMITED.—Managing-Director and Licensee, Mr James W. Haworth; Manager and Secretary, Mr James M. Hardie, jun.—Mr T. Morton Powell's company in the drama Honour Thy Father is the attraction this week. Gabriel Garth is a skilful piece of work by Mr J. W. Evelyn, ably assisted by Miss Kate Newton as Gertrude Garth. Mr Ernest Hartington as Duncan Bly, and Mr D. B. Watson as Jack Halyard give excellent portrayals of two opposite dispositions. Mr Fred W. Graham is very comical as Mike Copplestone, and much amusement is also caused by Mr W. H. Melrose as Ned and Miss Lizzie Moorley as Poppy. Lillian Garth is excellently presented by Miss Mabel Coleman; Miss Rose Mylrea is a charming Mercy Merry. Mr Charles Woodward appears in the second act, and gives two good songs, which are well received.

BRADFORD.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr John Hart; General Manager, Mr T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr J. Richardson.—The theatre is this week in the possession of the Bradford Amateur Operatic Society, who on Tuesday evening gave an excellent performance of The Pirates of Penzance and Trial by Jury. The proceeds are to be devoted to the funds of the city charities.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Francis Laidler.—The powerful play entitled The Priest of the Temple was presented here on Monday. Mr March himself is particularly noticeable in a bold, well-studied representation of the character of Valerius, and the Chief Priest, Decus Fronto, is a powerful performance on the part of Mr Ronald Bayne. As Appius Herdonius, father of Valerius, Mr Henry Moxon acts with force and vigour, and Mr Stanley May's Hermanus, too, is an assumption of power. Præstantia, a Roman lady, is represented with much grace and charm by Miss Marie Noath, and Miss Evelyn Hope's emotional acting as Polita arouses sympathy.

EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Limited; Resident-Manager, Mr E. Crawford Swann.—Charming Mdlle. Diane De Fontenoy in her classic poses and tableaux is paying a welcome return visit here, and Tschernoff's performing animals are again delighting and interesting the audience. Charles Stevens, comedian, gives a meritorious turn, and double foot juggling by the Wartenberg Bros. is a distinctly clever item. Lizzie Fletcher submits a bright turn as a comedienne, and Arthur Lennard, actor vocalist, scores with some good songs. Joly is clever with the cornet, Nellie Wallace is good in eccentric comedy, the Raies are a pair of dainty and expert dancers, and Nello, the female contortionist, submits a clever turn.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr W. E. Berry.—In an exceedingly well acted and very diverting sketch, Three of a Kind, Miss Ethel Arden and Mr George Abel are scoring a genuine success here this week, and Whit Cunliffe, comedian, has made a hit. With guitar and mandolin, the Bandurrias discourse excellent music. "Urk" gives a very clever entertainment as a magician and illusionist, and in a comedy bar act the Wiltons are smart and entertaining. Ada Fawn, comedienne, makes a welcome reappearance. The Bros. Durant submit a clever acrobatic turn, and R. W. Russell gives some excellent character impersonations, and completes the company.

BRIGHTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr H. Cecil Beryl; Assistant-Manager, Mr Harcourt M. Beryl.—Mr and Mrs Kendal opened here on Monday with A Scrap of Paper. Mr Kendal was highly successful as Colonel Blake, and Mrs Kendal was as charming as ever as Susan Hartley. Mr Ernest Hendrie made a capital Dr. Penguin; Mr Bassett Roe was well suited as Sir John Ingram; and Mr R. Sheldrick was a lively Archie Hamilton. Mrs A. B. Tapping as Mrs Penguin, Miss Elise Clarens as Lady Ingram, and Miss Mary Jerrold as Lucy Franklyn also merited praise. The programmes for the week included The Elder Miss Blossom and The Housekeeper.

AQUARIUM.—Lessee and Manager, Mr H. Bernhardt; Acting-Manager, Mr Henry De Groot.—Mr Richard Temple's dramatic and musical recitals prove very attractive here this week. Miss Florence Allabone, a popular local soprano; and the Bioscope pictures, "Whirling the Worlds," also add to the success of the entertainments.

ALHAMBRA.—Managing-Director, Mr J. L. Graydon; General Manager, Mr Ernest Lepard.—The following are here this week:—Harry Lauder, Scottish comedian; Harry Tate and company, in Motoring; Edie Gray and her White Coons, harmonious vocalists; Ryan and Hall, burlesque acrobats, eccentric comedians, and comic wrestlers; Charles Mildare, "the human parrot;" Dan Conroy, comedian; Clifton and Gibson, comedians and patterers; Cora Casselli, comedienne and dancer; Frank Boyce, character comedian; Rose D'Alberg, serio and comedienne; and the Alhambra pictures.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr Thomas Barrasford.—The following are here this week:—Osaph, who speaks in five different tones of voice, in a clever ventriloquial entertainment; Harry Leybourne, comedian; Algie and Reggie, in an eccentric musical turn; the Five Purroscoppis, jugglers; Imro Fox, illusionist; Mountford and Walsh, speciality artistes; the Cattaneos, eccentric acrobats; Joan Teddie, burlesque artiste; the Manhattan Comedy Four, who sing with great taste and are also very humorous; and animated pictures.

COLISEUM.—Licensee and Director of Entertainments, Mr Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr C. Smith-Wilkes.—The following are here this week:—Madge Roberts, comedienne and dancer; J. G. Ford, extempore vocalist; Les Sprays, Continental artistes; Mark Anthony, story teller and comedian; Harry Luck, eccentric character comedian; Eva Ellersley, comedienne; and Nelson Hardy, ventriloquist. The entertainment concludes with "Whirling the Worlds," a fantastic picture series. Owing to an attack of bronchitis Millie Hylton was unable to appear.

BRISTOL.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Ernest Carpenter.—Miss Blanche St. Albans and Mr J. Leicester Jackson's company is here with the military drama Dishonoured, the play being staged with liberality and satisfactorily performed. Mr Percy Ballard presents a fine and convincing study of Philip Cunningham; Mr Frederick Loyd is consistent in the heavy part of Captain Pentland; Mr Frank Fuller is well placed as Colonel Sir William Cunningham; Mr Reginald Hunt acts well as Captain Cholmondeley; and the comic parts of Jem Stokes and Anna Maria are taken in amusing style by Mr Horace Buckley and Miss Nell Ingram. Miss Florence Creagh distinguishes herself by a sympathetic performance of Leslie Maynard; and Miss Violet Crawford plays well as Sybil; the remainder of the cast having capable exponents in other members of the company. The performance on Thursday evening for the benefit of Mr A. G. Palmer, principal money taker here for many years, who has been seriously ill for some months, proved very successful. There were numerous extra attractions, and the attendance was very satisfactory in all parts of the house.

PALACE.—Managing Directors, Messrs Livermore Bros.; Resident Manager, Mr Horace Livermore; Secretary, Mr Welchman.—The leading attraction here is "The Motogirl" (Miss Dora Chertsey). The show is both interesting and amusing, the movements of a mechanical doll being imitated to perfection. James Bard does a skilful wire act; the Leonards (Bob and Jenny) do a capital turn of cross-talk, song, and dance; Miss Madge Daly, comedienne, sings in good style; the Sisters Pine (Vesta and Minnie) are pleasing duettists and dancers; Sinclair and Parr have a good vocal sketch, By Appointment; the Brothers Lavelle do some expert acrobatic and tumbling work; Miss Agnes Krembser presents a juggling act successfully; Johnny Worman, comedian, has some good songs and patter; and the entertainment concludes with some interesting animated picture. The Thurday matinées continue to increase in popularity.

EMPIRE.—Proprietor, Mr Thomas Barrasford.—There is a good entertainment here this week, the turns including Banker's sensational aerial somersault act on a bicycle, the feat obtaining prolonged applause; Joe Hayman and speciality; J. C. Morris, a really entertaining patter comedian; Hurman, in a good turn as a juggler, club swinger, and hoop manipulator; and Miss Agnes Hanson, a capable comedienne and dancer. The performance concludes with an excellent series of animated pictures.

BURTON-ON-TRENT.

NEW THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Messrs Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr John Waller.—Mr Joseph Poole's Myriorama is here with a series of up-to-date paintings and animated pictures. A good variety show is also given, in which the following appear:—Victor Howlett, with a clever marionette show; Zelda, lady instrumentalist; Mr Harry Sullivan, eccentric comedian; Wal Owen, in his burlesque juggling and conjuring act; Sulle and Saroni, vaudeville duettists; the Magnet sketch party; and Mr Frank Freeland, guide and entertainer.

BUXTON.

OPERA HOUSE.—Secretary and Manager, Mr Arthur Willoughby.—For Tuesday and Wednesday evenings we had the novelty of 'an amateur pantomime of Cinderella, in aid of the Buxton Nursing Fund and Actors' Orphanage Fund. The theatre was packed, and the performances reflected great credit upon Miss Stanley Cooper (professionally known as Miss Evelyn Aylestone), who promoted the entertainment.

CAMBRIDGE.

NEW THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr W. B. Redfern, J.P., D.L.—On Monday night, for the commencement of the holiday season here, Mr J. F. Elliston's company presented the sporting drama, In Old Kentucky. Miss Amy F. Hermann's portrayal of the true-hearted Madge Brierley was very realistic. Mr J. George Steel was equally praiseworthy as the hero, Frank Harley; Miss Beatrice Shirley played the part of Barbara Grafton admirably; while Miss Edith Halford's Alethea Harley was all that could be wished. Messrs Alfred S. Banks, Eric Hudson, Gerald Kennedy, and Mr Harry Leander were also fully up to the mark.

CARDIFF.

KING'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Frank Bateman; General Manager, Mr Robert Sawin.—A special attraction here this week is the Adelphi drama The Bells of Haslemere. The piece is presented by a capital company, under the direction of Mr Chas. A. Chandler. Mr Leonard Yorke's impersonation of Frank Beresford is a brilliant piece of acting. The villainous John Silkstone is cleverly acted by Mr Montague Turner, while Mr C. A. Chandler as Captain Vere and Mr Douglas Hamilton as Matthew Brookfield are each responsible for excellent delineations. Mr Chas. Cecil as Reuben Armstrong is successful in keeping the audience in good spirits, and the part of Joseph Thorndyke has a reliable exponent in Mr Fred F. Allen. Miss Harrietta Pollini submits an effective rendering of Evelyn Brookfield; Miss Mary Hardacre deserves much credit for her admirable impersonation of Mary Northcote; and Miss Stafford Smith and Miss Florence Chandler give excellent portrayals of their respective parts.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Lea.—The excellent programme, which has been drawing unusually large audiences here, includes Albert Chevalier, comedian; the Lumars, in a novel acrobatic act; the Sisters Devons, in an aerial act; Chas. Gardiner, eccentric comedian; Dome, clay modeller; the Howards, Nellie Coleman, lady comedian; Phillips and Terry, in their successful Revolt of Man sketch; and Richard List's performing bears.

CARLISLE.

NEW PUBLIC HALL.—Mr Ralph Pringle's Animated Picture Company is delighting large audiences here this week. Some new pictures are shown, including the remarkable film "Whirling the Worlds." The pictures are interspersed with some capital varieties by a smart vaudeville company, prominent amongst whom is Miss Le Clair, who charms her audience with her rendering of "Blue Bell," beautifully illustrated.

CHATHAM.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Messrs C. and L. B. Barnard; Acting-Manager, Mr Lionel Barnard; Secretary, Mr Geo. G. Ridley.—This week's attraction is Dare-Devil Dorothy, in which one of the leading features is Mr Arthur Verne's amusing impersonation of Silas Crump.

BARNARD'S PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor, Mr L. B. Barnard.—At the top of the bill we have Miss May Henderson, supported by a well-varied list of turns.

GAIETY THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Captain H. E. Davis; Manager, Mr Frank J. Donne.—The company here includes the Borellis, operatic duettists; Mdlle. Effie White, kaleidoscopic dancer; King and Delane, in musical act, At the Club; Bert Woodward, the cycling coon; Maudie Ford, comedienne and dancer; Fred Walker, comedian; Amy Russell, ballad vocalist; and T. B. Lloyd and company in sketch, In the Tempter's Coil.

CHESTERFIELD.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr Holberry Hardy.—Messrs Alfred Paumier and Walter Howard's company, with Why Men Love Women, forms the attraction here. Mr W. S. Hardy makes a manly Gerald Fielding. Mr S. Herbert Humber is well placed as Serge Staniloff. Mr C. R. Haws is good as Tommy Fitzgerald. Mr Edwin Lever scores a success as the Maharajah of Balore. Mr Harwood Roberts is an amusing Orlando Figgings. Mr Henry Fitzgerald deserves mention as the Rev. Edward Grey. Miss Beatrice Sinclair gives a fine rendering of the part of Muriel Zoluski. Misses Queenie Nigel and Violet Godfrey do good work as Birdie Summertop and Baby Winterbottom respectively. Miss Annie Saker gives a pleasing performance of Violet Livingstone.

CHORLEY (LANCS.).

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr G. T. Sante; Secretary, Mr J. Clay.—Mr B. Miller's popular variety combination occupies these boards this week. The combination includes an excellent Bioscope with up-to-date films. The Wills give an exceptionally smart hand balance and acrobatic turn; while Professor Anderson, in a novel mystifying entertainment, is much appreciated. Gus Garland is good as a ventriloquist. The Butt Marvels are also acceptable. Other turns include Albert Ventor, Joe Leonard, and the Edna Trio, all capable artists in their several ways.

COATBRIDGE.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietress, Mrs Mary Watson; Manager, Mr C. B. Fountaine.—Mr James Hare and company opened here on Monday with The Golden Chance, and met with a good reception. Mr Hare exhibits talent as Hubert Zae; Mr H. M. King successfully portrays Stephen Clinton; Mr Tom Arkinstall gives a good delineation of Isaac Shelberg; while Bert Atherton delights the audience as Sam Brown. Miss Irene Clifford displays ability in the dual-rôle of Mother Hawk and Viva Zae; Miss Jenny Halworth ably portrays Susan, and Miss Agatha Halford makes a clever Lydia Hastings. A Woman's Redemption is also billed.

COLCHESTER.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor, Mr Chas. Macdona; Resident Manager, Mr F. Graham Macdona.—The attraction this week is Mr Leslie Norman's company in A Trip to Chinatown, with Mr Norman himself as Rashleigh Gay. The Ben Gay of Mr Jerrold Manville leaves little to be desired, and Mr Will Smith is a humorous waiter. Mr Chas. Sequin as Welland Strong and Miss Harriet Fawn as the widowed Mrs Guyer introduce a pleasing little scene entitled "Tramps in Trampland." They are extremely clever, and add much to the popularity of the evergreen musical comedy. A charming and vivacious maid is Miss Daisy Revett, and Jones, of Chinatown, is capitally taken by Mr Ewart Drake.

CLYDEBANK.

NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr Frank Wilson.—The attraction here this week is Mr Chas. Majilton's vaudeville company, which includes Foy and Burke, comedians; Sisters Brownie, American speciality artistes; Bunth and Bond, comedians; Herbert Ashmore, dancer; Miss Maddie Majilton, burlesque artiste; and Mr Chas. Majilton, all of them being well received. A comedy sketch entitled The Plumber; or, She Would Be a Widow, is also well played by the company. Another item worthy of mention is the singing of Miss Isa Clark, the winner of Mr Frank Wilson's amateur competition.

CORK.

OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr John Horgan.—The Kennedy Miller company appeared here on Monday in the romantic Irish drama Lord Edward; or, '98. As Pamela Miss Annie Hylton acted with pathos and true dramatic force. Mr Robert Faulkner as Lord Edward rendered his part in a capable manner. The rich humour of Mr James O'Brien was well displayed in the part of Thady M'Grath. The Insurgent Chief, The Shaughraun, The Irishman, The Colleen Bawn, and Wolfe Tone are also in the répertoire.

PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Henry Kemble.—The programme here is a very good one, the chief turn being that given by Jean Seul, an Indian man of mystery. Arthur Richards is an excellent comedian. Renee Walon, comedienne and dancer, also contributes pretty songs and dances with much taste. Bert Williams in his ventriloquial performance is well received. Marion De Verne sings catchy songs. Hyam Long contributes instrumental items which please. Fred Land is happy in his selection of songs, and the Three Etherdos give a wonderful performance on rocking ladders.

COVENTRY.

OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr Wm. Bennett.—The King of Crime, written by Arthur Shirley and Benjamin Landeck, is being presented by Messrs Dottridge and Longden's company at the above house this week. Mr William Clayton gives a realistic representation of Ronjarre, alias Gaston Lemaire. Mr W. H. Porter admirably portrays the part of Simon Gandelu; Mr Alfred H. Elliott makes a success as the Magistrate, M. Folgate; Miss Marion Turner shows great ability as Henriette; and Miss Elizabeth Turner Elliott is equally successful as Matilde.

CROOK.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Messrs Wallace Davidson, Limited; Managing-Director, Mr Wallace Davidson.—Mr Harry Firth's company is here this week in the ever-popular pantomime, Cinderella. In the title-rôle Miss Madge Osmond looks and plays the part well; Miss Curette is a dashing Prince, and also possesses considerable vocal ability; Miss Ethel Mona makes a pleasing Dandini, and her two songs, especially "The Nigger and the Bee," are loudly applauded. As Pimple Mr Fred Lake is quaint, and Miss Rosie Lewin is charming as Dorothy. Mr E. Wilson (the Baron), Mr J. Binns (Butterina), Mr H. Haines (Margerina), and the two gentlemen who appear as Ping and Pong are all very funny. Specialities are introduced by the Sisters Godfrey, Chas. Reste, Madge Osmond, Rosie Lewin, and Messrs Lester and Ford.

CROYDON.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Lawson Lambert; Acting-Manager, Mr Reginald Lawrence.—Mrs Langtry, supported by Mr Paul Arthur and company, is meeting with a cordial reception here in Percy Fendall's interesting comedy Mrs Dering's Divorce, and the visit is giving much gratification. Mrs Langtry's great charm of manner and artistic acting as Mrs Dering are worthy of all praise, and her efforts are heartily applauded. Mr Paul Arthur is very successful in the rôle of Captain Dering; Mr Ernest Stern renders sterling services as Jimmy Foster; Mr Courtenay Thorpe has made a study of the character of Lord Grandpier; Mr Harold Carfax deserves a word of praise as Mr Gordon; Mr Harold Brooke is seen to advantage as Mr Clive; and Messrs Norman Wrighton and Ivan Berlyn are adequate as a footman and the servant Parker. Miss Lelia Repton is a handsome Mrs Haydon; Miss Annie Mildmay has got the right idea of the part of Miss Verner; Miss Davis is good as Mrs Dicky Fowler; Miss Helen Palgrave touches the correct note as Lady Grandpier; Miss Bessie Harrison is well got up as the Duchess of Lawshire; and Miss Di Forbes is reliable as Mrs Gordon. Special mention must be made of the fine rendering of "William Tell" and "Faust" by Mr Leonard Gautier's excellent orchestra.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Samuel James; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry E. Reckitt.—Mr George Kirk and Miss Mary Neil's company, in Judy; or, the Fatal Hand, is pleasing visitors to the Royal. Miss Florrie Groves acts with good judgment and effect in the rôle of Judy; Miss Mary Neil proves herself an accomplished actress in the part of Alice; Miss Violet Langley's performance as Blake is an artistic effort; Mr George Kirk makes the utmost of his opportunities as the detective, Grip; Mr Richard Terris displays histrionic abilities in the character of Duburg; and Mr Will Casey gives a praiseworthy impersonation of Jim. The drama is creditably mounted.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Resident General Manager, Mr Eustace H. Jay.—The amusements at Mr Jay's varieties are of the usual high standard. Mr Fred S. Partridge's band is well to the fore; Harry Cotton, comedian, has a quaint and curious method; Lieutenant Albini, illusionist, causes a sensation with the "Mysterious Lady in Black;" the Japanese Princess is a clever contortionist; Arthur Denville, comedian, has a capital selection of songs; the Eugene Family are expert aerial gymnasts; Alf Aubyn is a refined coon comedy artiste; the Palace Pictures are worth seeing; and others who are liked are Jack Foster, vocalist; Edith Mellor, ballad vocalist; Peter Kelly, comedian; Ella Lane, serio; and Blanche Albini, comedienne. Marie Lloyd is the brilliant star, and she works with a will. She is a great favourite here, and is repeatedly encored.

DARWEN.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr E. L. Ormsby.—William Hamilton's Excursions and variety company are here this week. The pictures are both interesting and entertaining. The variety portion of the bill includes Hector, wire performer and hoop manipulator; Eileen and Mayne, the two "dainty dots;" David Davies, Welsh whistling soloist; Little Elly, quick-change artist; and Mezzetti and Mora, who give a daring triple bar performance. Mr Claude Howell is a very useful and humorous guide.

DUDLEY.

OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr J. Maurice Clement; Acting-Manager, Mr J. W. Tilley.—Mr Fred J. Kirke is presenting the Naval Detective to Dudley audiences this week. Mr Kirke works hard in a triple rôle, and is ably supported by Miss Louie Fountaine, who also essays three parts with distinct success. Mr Arthur Beaufort deserves special mention for his excellent performance as Captain Hustle, introducing some clever legmania business; the Misses Mamie Walsh and Elsie Paul are graceful acrobatic dancers and smart banjoists; Miss Edith Claris is well appreciated as Susan Scrubbs.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Tom Prichard.—A good programme is provided here this week, headed by Barnard's Marionettes, which are cleverly manipulated. Gerald Mount is a first-class vocalist and mimic; the Clayton Twins in the amusing sketch, Pepper and Salt, secure hearty applause; the Sisters Volbecque prove a popular turn; the Seltina Troupe are smart acrobats; the Brothers Levett, chair vaulters; Alf. Mitchell, comedian; and Nellie Moon serio, complete the bill.

DARLINGTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manageress, Mrs T. W. S. Jennings.—Messrs M. H. Glenville and Fred Osmond's company is here, in The Still Alarm. Mr Matthew H. Glenville plays the part of Jack Manley, and makes a fine hero. Mr Paul Lovett as the unscrupulous John Bird is very successful; Mr Fred Osmond is capital as Doc Wilber; Mr Tom Beasley makes a smart Willie Manley; Miss Mary Lovett is an excellent Elinore Fordham; Miss Mabel Veriton is good as Mrs Manley; Miss Hettie Zillwood is successful with her songs and dances. A very pleasing feature is the singing of the Lyric Comedy Four.

DERBY.

GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor and General Manager, Mr T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr Chas. Denley.—Mr Fred Bulmer's company is here this week in a melodrama called Sentenced for Life. Mr Ernest Vaughan as Paul Derrick, Mr Harry Lloyd as Roy Stillwell, and Mr Cecil Ravenswood as the Rev. Martin Orris, all merit commendation. Plenty of diversion is provided by Messrs A. Marchant and Edward Tinley in convict rôles. As Kate Rennel Miss Florence Trevior is praiseworthy, and Miss Madge Douglas figures agreeably as Adele Gray. The last-named contributes a good song and Mr Frank Zara, who impersonates Percy M'Gentle, also introduces songs acceptably.

PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr T. Allan Edwardes.—Mdlle. Luba De Sarema, with her highly trained bull, ponies, and dogs, forms the principal attraction here this week. The turn, which is an interesting one, is cordially received. The Watson Family present a high-class vocal and musical performance; Houpla and Hecla, clever equilibrists and acrobats, are as usual well to the fore; Fred Curran is successful in all that he does; Sisters Bartholomew are pleasing duettists and sprightly dancers, their merits being duly recognised; Lottie Siegenberg is highly entertaining in her variety vocal sketch, The Lazy Slavey; the Alberts are capable wire and hand equilibrists; and Professor Bennett is a clever ventriloquist.

DONCASTER.

NEW GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr J. W. Chapman.—This week variety still reigns supreme. The Seven Savonas and the Six Elliotts heads the bill. Harry Morriss makes a big hit as a humorous mimic and character comedian; Fields and Acres cause roars of laughter as the eccentric parkkeepers; the singing of Eva Ward merits applause; Alexandra Royal, burlespue actress, is charming; Rennie is a ventriloquist of ability; and H. O. Wills sings with much success.

DUMFRIES.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr W. E. Potts.—Mr E. Hoggan Armadale and company were here the first three nights of the week. The Vicar of Wakefield was well received on Monday. Mr Hoggan Armadale played the title-rôle in a most pleasing manner; Mr Fred Emery as Squire Thornhill proved himself to be an actor of no mean order; Mr A. L. Baron as Mr Burchill was all that could be desired; Miss Marie Florence as Olivia was sweetly natural; Miss Violet Wilson as Sophie was well placed, the rest of the company lending able support. On Tuesday The Sleigh Bells was played, and Wednesday, David Garrick.

DUBLIN.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Lessees, Michael Gunn, Limited; General Manager, Mr Charles Hyland.—The patrons of this popular place of amusement have this week been treated to an enjoyable return visits of the Royal Carl Rosa opera company. On Monday a large audience was present when Gounod's opera Faust was played. Mr E. C. Hedmondt appeared in the title-rôle; his singing was excellent throughout. Miss Lizzie Burgess gave a charming embodiment of Marguerite. Mr Arthur Winckworth appeared with his accustomed success as Mephistopheles and Miss Anna Hope made an excellent Siebel. Mr Lewys James gave a praiseworthy rendering of Valentine. The choruses were perfectly sung and Mr Waller Van Noorden conducted the orchestra in a successful manner. On Tuesday night Verdi's Rigoletto was played. Mr E. C. Hedmondt as the Duke of Mantua, Mr Charles Victor as Rigoletto, and Miss Lizzie Burgess as Gilda appeared in their respective rôles with great success. On Wednesday, Carmen was played; on Thursday, Tristan und Isolde; and on Friday, Don Giovanni.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Moullot; Resident Manager, Mr Arthur Armstrong.—Mr C. St. John's company is here, in Kitty Grey, again. Miss Hilda Guiver fills the title-rôle in excellent style, her singing and dancing being highly appreciated, and in the part of Lady Binfield Miss Lily Helene is vivacious, and displays considerable talent. The character of Lord Plantagenet is cleverly acted by Mr Leslie Harris, who causes much amusement in the part. Mr Robert Whyte, jun., is an able exponent of the rôle of the King of Illyria, and Mr Innes Smith acts in a capital manner as Sir John Binfield. Miss Emily Stevens is very good as Mrs Bright, and Miss Constance Hamilton does well as Sadie De Poulson.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr J. W. Whitbread; General Manager, Mr Kennedy Miller.—Miss Bonwin Carlton's company is here this week with the sensational drama The Plucky Nipper. Miss Bonwin Carlton as Polly Hithard displays considerable ability, and the rôle of Bill Burgess is played in an admirable manner by Mr Edward Surrey. Miss Lilian Radburn is seen to advantage in the part of Ina Fenwick, and Mr Geoffrey Sutherland achieves success as Captain Frank Leslie. Mr W. Anderson cleverly acts the part of Captain Gripp, and as Daisy Paget Miss Esther Lamonte is excellent. The rôle of Colonel Fenwick is capitally played by Mr G. B. Wright, and as Henry Paget Mr Claude Kingston is acceptable.

DUNDEE.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; General Manager, Mr Sandon Perkins.—A sensational domestic drama, entitled As Midnight Chimes, is presented here this week by a company under Mr Edward Marris. The acting of Miss Gertrude Price as the grief-stricken wife at times reaches a very high level; Miss Minnie Ethel as Little Davy gives a clever assumption of her part. Mr Frank E. Petley submits a masterly delineation of the character he portrays—that of Dave Stannard; and Mr Arthur Proctor is well to the fore in the character of a policeman.

PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Will Parker; Secretary and Treasurer, Mr Alf Ross.—The top of the bill is justly assigned to the Mannon Troupe, in their comical sketch Uncle Yank; Clarke's Nippers, as on their former appearance, quite captivate the house with their boxing, singing, and dancing; Coram displays much ability as a ventriloquist; and a great deal of laughter results from the sketch The Blind Spinster, played by Fred Lloyd and company. Allis and Cassati pleases the audience immensely by a smart comedy turn; and Vasey and Ramsey prove to be skilful dancers. The others include Leslie Clare, John E. West, and Lilly Simmons.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Will Percival.—Mr Howell Webb and company are here this week with The Convent Bell. Mr Webb was seen to much advantage in the rôle of a bluff British sailor; a clever performance was given by Mr Stanley Carlton as Philip Vautier, who excels as an elocutionist; and Mr C. E. Howell was impressive as the Colonel. Mr Oliver Birrel made a capital villain, and as his paramour Miss Humphreys gave a quietly forceful interpretation. Mr Teddy Myles was a very funny page, and was ably assisted by Miss Florrie Manderville in his funnisities. Miss Ruby Maule was charming as Philip's sweetheart.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Acting-Manager, Mr H. Dobell Lyle.—The pantomime season here opened on Saturday, when Aladdin was presented before a crowded assemblage. New scenery and dresses have been specially made for this production, which has entirely captivated the public taste. Miss Gladys Sylvester makes a fine principal boy, and scores a decided success. The Princess Balroulbadour was capitally played by Miss Marion Edwards, and Miss Amy Elcock made a capital Peco. The Misses Florrie St. Roy and Belle Russel, as Cheekee and Selim respectively, give a good account of themselves; Mr James Stephens as the Widow Twankey submits a very quaint impersonation, and sings "An Aching Heart" with true humour. Mr Mike Johnson as Muchee Drunkee proves himself to be a comedian of resource. A capital performance is that given by Mr P. D. Bermingham, whose sallies in the part of Dougal Mactootie, the fairy Hielan'man are greatly relished. Mr E. H. Williams does some good work in the part of Abanazar; and Mr John Levey cleverly acts the rôle of the Emperor Wang. Messrs Harley and Hardon, one of whom is well known here as a smart acrobat, create great fun as the Chinese policeman. Much credit is due to Mr S. King Alexander, who produced the pantomime. Mr T. B. Jakes, the musical-director, and Mr W. Henry Young are responsible for the music; the book has been written by Mr S. Planche.

DUNFERMLINE.

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr W. E. Potts.—Miss Adria Hill and Mr Robert Ayrton's company is here this week. On Monday The Shadow of the Cross was presented. Mr Robert Ayrton made a capital Wulfere, King of Mercia; Edgar was very capably handled by Mr Charles H. Lester; Mr Edward Sheedy did well as Egbert; Miss Adria Hill's powers as an actress were seen to advantage in the double part of Werebode and Edelgitha; Miss Harriette Loydall was excellent as Ethelinda; and Miss Renie Douglas was well placed as Caloda. Justice at Last was played on Thursday.

EASTBOURNE.

PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr George Hayes.—Mr Leigh Lovell's company is appearing here this week, in The Duke of Killicrankie. A conspicuously successful performance is given by Miss Naomi Neilson, who, notwithstanding a very heavy cold, is a bright distinctive Mrs Mulholland, and her comedy belongs to the highest class. Miss Octavia Kenmore is a quietly effective and pleasing Lady Henrietta; Miss M'Aimee Murray is a stately Countess of Pangbourne; and Miss Helen Tytler does all that is necessary as Mrs M'Bayne. Mr Herbert J. Bentley is a manly and attractive Duke of Killicrankie, and gives point to all his work. Mr Leigh Lovel contributes a capital character sketch as Pitt-Welby, and his efforts are always legitimate. Mr F. Danvers-Yates, Mr H. D. Cottell, and Mr Vernon West give excellent help in smaller parts. The scenery is very fine.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr Samuel Lloyd.—A capital variety bill is being offered here twice nightly to good audiences. The Ramlos, in their triple-bar act, combine fun and extremely clever bar work, and their turn is one of the most popular in the programme. The Woolfords have an animal show which pleases the audience; Anthy is a skilful and daring wire-walker; Miss Rose Harvey, of fine figure and voice, is a successful vocalist; Miss Sadie Seymour has a charming appearance, and she sings her songs well; Mr Sydney Lee is a very smart conjuror and expert palmist; Mr Will Lytton is a skilful dancer and comic singer; Resford and Hunt contribute an amusing sketch, and the Hippodrome Pictures complete the bill.

EDINBURGH.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs Howard and Wyndham, Limited; General Manager, Mr G. T. Minshull.—A new musical play entitled Peggy Machree commenced a six nights' engagement here on Monday evening. Mr Charles Hamilton's excellent company includes such well-known artistes as Mr Denis O'Sullivan and Miss Marie Dainton, the former making a most successful appearance as Barry Trevor. The rôle of the happy-go-lucky hero suited Mr O'Sullivan well, and his artistic and tasteful rendering of a number of tuneful Irish ballads was delightful to listen to, the vocalist having to respond to many encores. Miss Marie Dainton was a charming Lady Margaret O'Driscoll, who masquerades as Peggy, singing and acting with much spontaneity and intelligence, her dainty dancing being also much admired. Miss Ethel Weyburn made a graceful Emily Pryor and Miss Millicent M'Laughlin a praiseworthy Madame De La Cour. Miss Freda Bramleigh rendered good service as Moira, and Misses Patty Rusholme and Bertha Seaton as Nora and Kathleen were alike excellent. Mr Mark M'Dermott played Sir Lawrence Borthwick with ease and effect, and Mr Stanley Pringle was a grim Captain De La Cour. Mr Graeme Campbell looked the typical Scot as the Major Domo, and Mr Shiel Barry appeared as Michael. The choruses were sung with spirit, and mounting and dresses were alike picturesque. The company is under the able acting-management of Mr Morris Harper.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr H. E. Moss.—Mr Tom Edwards, an accomplished ventriloquist, tops the bill here, and gave an excellent show on Monday. Swan and Bambard are acrobatic comedians, whose business was distinctly amusing, and Prince Kokin's feats showed him to be one of the most marvellous of Japanese jugglers. The Vasilescu Troupe proved very diverting in their pantomime act on bars, and Diamond and Beatrice retained from last week, have repeated their brilliant harp and saxophone selections with increased success, the dancing of the gentleman and fine solo playing of the lady being received with delighted applause. The musical transformation act of the Loro Quartet was cleverly carried out, and the one-act comedy-drama, Brocky's Temptation, smartly played by Fiske and M'Donough. Mr Charles Cardow is a comedian of undoubted ability, and considerable interest was manifested in his songs, which are written and composed by himself. Miss Mabel Hind, Vosper, Ambrose Thorne, and the Five Olracs also appeared.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Eade Montefiore.—This theatre—which had a varied, if somebrief, career as the Tivoli—reopened its doors on Saturday evening under new management. As we indicated last week, the interior has been improved considerably, and the decorations pleasantly brightened up, while smoking is now allowed in every part of the building. Commencing his season with a pantomime, Mr Montefiore has made a big bid for success. He has engaged a competent permanent staff, a large company, and two sets of clever dancers, who secured immediate attention. The story of Cinderella is popular with all audiences, and although the libretto in this instance is not of much account, the music is a feature one can dwell on with pleasure, and more than anything helped the performance forward on the opening night. To Mr E. T. Banzie, therefore, special praise is due for his effective share in the entertainment. The plot of the old world tale is kept pretty closely to. Miss Millie Engler made a most attractive Prince Rupert, and Dandini was played with abundant animation by Miss Fanny Wright, whose acting, singing, and dancing were in keeping with the sprightly nature of the part. The Cinderella of Miss May Marton delighted everybody; she has a charming presence, a graceful figure, a sweet voice, and is evidently an accomplished dancer. The brightness and vivacity displayed by this talented lady was a notable feature of the pantomime, and will be one of the chief stays of its career. The Fairy Godmother was represented with distinction by Miss Vera Schlesinger, who sang "Bid me discourse" with ease and finish; and other characters by Misses Rhoda Beresford, Lily Piercy, Rona Merrick, Ada Jenner, and Beatice Holmes were satisfactorily filled. Little Zola made a diverting appearance as Buttons. Mr George Traverner, actor and musician, was a good second as the Demon Discontent; Mr A. G. Spry appears as the Baron De Guile. There was a large and tastefully dressed chorus, whose singing was effective, and the various groupings were well arranged, the Ball-room scene forming a gorgeous spectacle. Another feature of the stage arrangements was the electrically-lighted fairy coach which, drawn across the stage by four diminutive Shetland ponies, bears Cinderella to the Prince's ball. The Six Lancashire Lasses danced their best, and the lively acrobatic gyrations of the Four American Idols were particularly effective. This part of the entertainment was received with the greatest possible enthusiasm.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Tom Ellis.—The romantic play Quasimodo was put on the stage here on Monday evening by Mr Roy Jackson's company. The cast was a good one, and introduced Mr Jackson himself as the hunchback, of which character he gave a vivid presentment. Mr G. Lambton was a good Claude Frollo, and Mr Percy B. Braithwaite threw a fine comedy effect into his acting as Pierre Gringoire. Miss Kitty Douglas was a fascinating representative of Esmeralda, and Miss Inez Harrman made a charming appearance as Fleur-de-Lys.

COOKE'S ROYAL CIRCUS.—Proprietor, Mr John Henry Cooke.—Mr Cooke is always ahead of time in his preparations for the amusement of his many patrons, and this year he anticipates Christmas by a good fortnight with his holiday entertainment. Aqua-Wreck, produced on Saturday last to an overflowing house, is one of the best and most startling of the water carnivals designed by this enterprising manager, and there should be a rare harvest of patronage during the festive season and after. This year the sensation is produced by the breaking down of an aqueduct, the water of which floods a village that lies below. The arena represents a rural hamlet, with its inn and village green, and the story is told in three parts—representing dawn, midday, and night. A rustic wedding forms the chief incident of the piece, which, after a realistic storm, is brought to a thrilling climax in the way above stated. The three scenes were crowded with picturesque episodes and healthy fun, and in this Mr Cooke was loyally supported by his company. The characters were well distributed. The bridegroom was played by Mr Leicester Alfred Cooke, and Mdlle. Rose made an interesting bride. Two immensely popular characters were Sally Burntheart and Louie Freezer, cleverly made-up and divertingly played by Miss Marie De Cartartet and Miss Edina Moika, a dance by the former lady being warmly applauded. The Yoricks introduced some original business as two tramps, and little Syd was here, there, and everywhere as the village booby. A Punch and Judy show was received with screams of laughter by the juveniles; and the dancing and singing of a number of young Edinburgh children was an enjoyable feature of the village sports. The equestrian and variety items that preceded included Picitt, an Australian handcuff king, who has a perfect genius for getting out of all kinds of chains, fetters, locks, and police fixings; and Arthur and Agnes Lynch, American song illustrators, who were very popular. Mdlle. Eva and Mons. Henri were again brilliantly successful, and the performing stallions of Mr Anthony Powell performed some very wonderful feats.

EXETER.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Secretary and Manager, Mr Fred Pollard; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy M. Dunsford.—The visit of Mr Laurence Irving and his company in Richard Lovelace has been anticipated with much interest by local playgoers, as was evidenced by the crowded state of the house on Monday last. Mr Laurence Irving fully sustained his reputation in the title-rôle, his enactment of the poet-cavalier being touching and dramatic and creating a deep impression. Miss Mabel Hackney was enthusiastically received, and her rendering of the heroine was most striking and pathetic. As Colonel Martin Hawley Mr William E. Ashcroft was seen to advantage, his portrayal being replete with true artistic skill. The other characters were well sustained. Richard Lovelace was preceded by Pinero's clever little curtain-raiser Daisy's Escape.

FALKIRK.

GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr Horace W. Ebbutt.—Another varied programme was given this week, which could not fail to satisfy all classes of theatre-goers. For the first three nights A Country Mouse was played by the company of Miss Emma and Percy Hutchison. Miss Violet M. Harley as Angela, the fresh and unsophisticated maiden from the country, gave a delightfully sweet interpretation of the character. Miss Edith Walker's Lady Sylvia Bowlby was an artistic character study, and as Violet Aynsley Miss Eve Erskine was no less successful. The Hon Archibald Vyse is a part in which Mr Chas. Howitt displayed great ability. As the Duke of St. Kitts Mr Arnold Lucy proved most entertaining. Mr Chas. Harley's John Bowlby, M.P., was effectively portrayed, and in the character of Lord Robert Wykeham Mr Wilson Lumley was also a distinct success. All the other parts were well taken, but a word is due to Miss Emily Levettez for her acting of Mrs Cropper. The comedy was beautifully dressed and admirably staged. The one-act farce His Landlady was a most agreeable curtain-raiser. On Thursday Mr C. Finch-Hatton's company paid a return visit in the stirring detective drama From Scotland Yard.

TOWN HALL.—On Saturday evening Mr Durward Lely and his company had a hearty reception from a large audience, when he appeared in the musical drama of Guy Mannering. Although suffering from a severe cold Mr Lely quite charmed the audience with his singing in the character of Henry Bertram. Mrs Lely impersonated Meg Merrilees capitally, and her "get up" was most effective. Miss Jennie Sneddon as Julia Mannering, Miss E. Lorraine as Lucy Bertram, Mr R. B. Drysdale as Dominie Sampson, and Mr Albert Semper, in the capacity of Dandie Dinmont, all did well.

GLASGOW.

ROYALTY, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr Wm. M. Downie.—That amusing farcical comedy Are You a Mason? is after a short interval again on a visit here. The company is organised by Messrs Charles Frohman and Geo. Edwardes, and includes Messrs Harry Ashford, Stephen Wentworth, Anthony Fawcett, Frank Ridley, and Misses Violet Graham, Lily Beagle, and Isla Glynn. Hushed Up is given in front.

KING'S, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr H. Macfarlane.—After an interval of a few weeks only The Earl and the Girl is paying a special return visit to this house. The company is Mr William Greet's, and the cast is almost the same as before, the exception that the part of Crewe Boodle is now represented by Mr Fred Hill in good style. As Jim Cheese Mr William Stephens is again the source of much laughter, being cleverly supported by Miss Dot Carey, in the part of Liza Shoddam. Dick Wargrave and Elphin Haye are charmingly represented by Mr Percy Carr and Miss Aimee Grey respectively. Mr William Walshe is capitally suited as Bunker Bliss, and the Downham of Mr Will Hindson is another smart performance. The Hazell of Mr Thomas Redmond and the Talk of Mr J. C. Graves are very good. Miss Florence Imeson is attractive as Daisy Fallowfield and the Mrs Shimmering Black of Miss Gladys Fontaine is imposing, Miss Helen Langton also making a striking figure as Virginia Bliss. The strong chorus and augmented orchestra are again under the direction of Mr Evelyn Baker.

METROPOLE, LIMITED.—Managing Director, Mr Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr John Dunbar.—A stirring play entitled When a Man Hates is being given here by Miss Olga Audre, Messrs Travis Green, and Arthur Hinton's company. Miss Leila Zillwood gives an admirable performance of the part of Miss Olga Gwynne; Mr Arthur Hinton as Pietro is excellent as the cool, scheming villain; Paul, a half-witted young man who helps to unravel the plot, is cleverly portrayed by Mr Travis Green; Miss Marion Forestor makes a sympathetic Letty; humour is plentifully supplied by Mr Tom Taylor as a man-of-all-work and by Miss Marie E. Robertson as Dolly Dimple. Mr Chas. Cairns as Detective Smart, Mr Phoens Gains as Sir Rupert, and Mr Edward Williams as a Police Sergeant complete an able cast.

LYCEUM.—Proprietor, Mr Rich Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr J. H. Oakden.—Wep-ton-no-mah, by the company of the Indian actress, Miss Go-Won-Go-Mohawk, is appearing here this week. Miss Go-Won-Go-Mohawk gives a convincing study of the title-rôle; Mr C. W. Charles makes a hearty representative of Colonel Stockton; Mr R. Thorne is sufficiently villainous as the Spanish desperado; Mr G. Courtney is well suited as Captain Franklin; and Miss Minnie Goepel as Nellie Stockton acts with much grace and charm. The humorous element of the drama is well presented by Miss J. Hart as Matilda, Mr Dan Ryan as Garry, and Mr Guy D. Hackney as the Negro.

WHITEVALE.—Proprietor, Mr George Green; Acting-Manager, Mr W. H. Webster.—Mr Maurice Love is here with his company in Fun on the Bristol, in which Mr Love as Widow O'Brien brings out the humorous traits of the character. Mr J. R. Hews as Captain Cranberry makes a gruff and hearty old sailor; Mr Fred James as Tom is highly amusing in his delineation of bashful timidity; Mr E. Allen as Count Menaggio makes an extremely picturesque Italian; and Mr W. J. Thompson as Richard Sparks is quite satisfactory. The same may be said of Mr Joe Edwards as Steward on board the Bristol. Miss Mabel Greville enacts Nora O'Brien charmingly. Miss Florence Symons as the widow's elder daughter acts with piquancy and dances gracefully, and Miss Nellie Wilson makes an amusingly lively coloured domestic.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss's, Limited; Resident Manager, Mr Arthur Aldin.—Hermann Melot, the conjuror, heads the bill here, and his turn is very mystifying. The Brothers De Wynne are wonderfully neat and clever head and hand balancers; Gallagher and Bild take well in their "Navaho" scena; George Newburn's imitations are always successful. those of Harry Lauder and Mark Sheridan being specially good; Walter Munroe's songs go with a swing as of old; Vasco repeats his wonderfully good musical turn; Mdlle. Pia Carozzi as a harpist takes high rank, her selections being much enjoyed; and Bijou Russell, sand dancer; Alexandra and Bertie, in their "Après le Bal" act; Doody and Wright, Australian comiques; and Margaret Ashton, vocalist, make up a good programme.

IVOLI AND QUEEN'S, LIMITED.—Manager, Mr S. King Alexander; Acting-Managers, Messrs T. J. Colquhoun and Fred C. Ewing.—At these two halls clever performances are submitted and are well patronised. Ara, Zebra, and Vora appear in their smart turn, entitled "Indian Pastimes;" Bros. Lloyd give their smart and daring wire act; the Dayton Troupe are neat and clever Risley performers; the Musical Palmers contribute a turn that is heartily enjoyed; Angeline is a really artistic lady juggler; Mdlle. Yetta is a wire-walker of special merit; Little Barney, the boy comedian, is again fetching the audience with his clever songs; and Royal Best, the mimic; Bendon's Bioscope; Archd. Cameron, descriptive vocalist; Vernardo, ventriloquist; and the Cosmos, in their eccentric musical business, also provide attractive items.

PALACE.—Proprietors, Messrs Rich Waldon and Thomas Barrasford; Assistant-Manager Mr. H. M'Kelvie.—The Onllaw Trio, in their daring and graceful wire act, are an outstanding feature of the programme here. Miss Frederica's performing terriers show wonderful intelligence and clever training; J. H. Scotland's excellent baritone voice is heard to advantage in several songs, including one in "Zomerzet" dialect; B. Troba contributes a wonderful display of strength and juggling; Warden-Reed and Glenny appear in an amusing duologue, Married or Photographed; the Three Laurels in their "ping-pong" table act; Alfonso Silvain in a smart equilibrist turn; Lily Seville and Dorothy Tremain, comediennes; and the animated pictures complete a varied programme.

BRITANNIA.—Lessee, Mr James Anderson; Manager, Mr Geo. Saphrini.—A varied programme is provided here this week, and attracted a large audience on the opening night. Harry Glynn's Combination is entitled to premier place in a humorous sketch; Sam Thomson, Scotch comedian, makes a good impression; and other attractions include Charles Cowen, comedian; Rosie Leslie, comedienne and dancer; Harry Jennings, comedian and dancer; George and Edwards, comedians and dancers; Maud Darlow, ballad vocalist; Mdlle. Leoville, conjuror; the Eltenos, comic gymnasts; and the Bioscope, with up-to date pictures.

HARMONIC CONCERTS.—Musical Secretary, Mr Wm. Biggam.—A good programme with a large proportion of the comedy element is submitted here. W. B. Whelan, Harry Jennings, George Ray, and the Stanleys, in songs and dances; Sisters Terry as baby mimics; Agnese Lynch, American song illustrator; Alice Golding, a popular favourite here; Hewitt and Ritchie, in Macpherson's Holiday; and J. H. Harris and Jack Beveridge, Scotch comics, all contribute clever turns.

GATESHEAD.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Newcastle and Gateshead Theatres, Limited; General Manager, Mr Sidney Bacon; Resident-Manager, Mr J. Straughan.—The principal item in a strong bill at this theatre is the musical comedy extravaganza, The Belle of the Orient. Winn's Parisian Puppets provide a most interesting turn, as also does Mansell Fane, character vocalist. Craig, Rose, and Craig are responsible for an entertaining show, while Musical Silvo and the Animated Song Sheet are also good turns. Other good artistes are Harry Maynard, actor-vocalist, and Wilton Warton, magician.

GLOUCESTER.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Owners, Messrs C. W. and J. R. Poole; Manager, Mr W. H. Weller.—Mr F. S. Cody's company, in The Klondyke Nugget, is appearing this week. The specialities include cowboys, trained animals, and Dan Merritt, champion drummer. The characters in the drama are sustained by Mr Elward Leroy, a most effective Sam Deats; Vivian Cody, a good Joe Smith; Waco is well played by Leon Cody; Jim Barker makes a capital Bill Sykes; and Mr Doc Horsfall does well as Tom Lee. Miss Edith Mumford is clever as Rosie Lee, and an excellently played part is that of Ted Lee by Mr Geo. Alnge.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL AQUARIUM.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr J. W. Nightingale.—Edward Rainier and company give an excellent interpretation of a detective episode, entitled The Bank Robbery; Rappo and Ella provide a smart equilibrist and acrobatic act; Rice, Rose, Davis and the Half introduce plenty of fun into their sketch, Ferguson's Dog; Tom Carney's songs and dances are well received; the Terras Bros. supply a clever acrobatic turn; Mattie Crawford, vocalist; Steeley and Dowton, vocalist and comedian; and the Aquarium Bioscope complete an excellent programme.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr Geo. Gilbert.—A capital programme is, as usual, provided. Tom White's Arabs, in a vocal and conversational entertainment, gain hearty applause; Burnette, the quick-change character musician, gives an interesting performance; Miss Unity Vezzey introduces her wonderful fiddling poodles; the Bros. Bastow do well as Herculean gymnasts; Ben Hur gives a wonderful exhibition of strength; Doodles and Little Bishop supply any amount of fun; and new pictures are shown by the Bioscope.

GREENOCK.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, the Executors of the late Mr Alex. Wright; Managers, Messrs A. B. Wright and J. J. Wright.—Mr and Mrs Charles Clifford's company is here this week with On Circumstantial Evidence. Mr A. M. James plays Sir Lawrence Kinloch with ability; Mr Leonard Williams as Jack Ogilvy distinguishes himself; Mr Charles Clifford submits a powerful piece of acting as Captain Hamilton; Mr J. Stuart does well as General Garibaldi; Mr Harry Cooke is a capable exponent of Jeremiah Tobin; Convict 49 is well played by Mr James Long; and Mr Anderson Delph makes a good Warder Symes. Mr Hill-Cremer does justice to the part of Antenia; Miss Maud Camfield gives a sympathetic rendering of Violet Ogilvy; and Miss M. Hastings is an agreeable Polly Smithers. Miss M. Trevelyan is effective, playing the twin sisters. The play is well mounted, and is drawing good houses.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr H. L. Skivington.—Kioto heads the bill here, and performs some amazing balancing feats; the Paragon Trio are capable vocalists; Cinizelli, the silent jester, is amusing; Lidder and Hayward give a funny musical absurdity entitled "A Quiet Rehearsal;" Lily Sharplin, mimic, is applauded; the Gartells, eccentric comedians and dancers, give a good turn; Jessie N. Fraser is a charming soprano; and Hill, Barry, and Lang are funny sketch artists.

GRIMSBY.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr J. H. Curry; Assistant Manager, Mr Sydney Tolfree.—The Slavonic drama Under the Russian Flag, presented by a company under the direction of Messrs Paumier and Howard, has this week made its second appearance here. It embraces a wealth of stirring incident. Mr Walter Howard, the author, himself undertakes the part of Demetrius, giving an excellent interpretation. The highly contrasting characters of the brothers, Ivan and Michael, are well portrayed by Mr. F. W. Freeman and Mr George Arthur respectively. Vera Vassiloff is pleasingly played by Miss Ada Champion, whilst Miss Ellen Snow admirably sustains the difficult part of Luka Marishla. The comedy characters are well embodied by Mr Hal Forde as Peter Poluski, Mr Alfred Bennett as Alexis, and Miss Agnes Howard as Ogarita.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr T. Allan Edwardes; General Manager, Mr H. F. Millar; Assistant-Manager, Mr H. H. Watson.—A dramatic equestrian sketch, The King's Highway, has been presented here this week by Mr Frank Gerald's company. It is illustrative of incidents in the life of Dick Turpin, Mr Gerald representing the famous highwayman. An amusing pantomimic scene, in which there was a good deal of surprise trap work, was introduced by the Five Bon-Bons. Tom Brantford, comedian, has caused much laughter with his imitation of a band. A smart comedy acrobatic and dancing act was contributed by Steel and Laing, and other turns were given by Annie Laurie, comedienne and dancer; the Lannons, duettists; and Ernie Williams, comedian. A display of animated pictures by Leslie's apparatus completed the programme.

NEW PALACE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr Steuart Cecil.—This new theatre was opened on Monday. A special report appears elsewhere.

HALIFAX.

GRAND THEATRE.—General Manager, Mr Otto C. Culling; Acting-Manager, Mr Norman Robinson.—A troupe of highly trained ponies go through a clever performance here this week, directed by Clown Caban; the Dandies, three ladies and two gentlemen, give a good vocal entertainment; Herr Fritz is a smart conjuror and illusionist; Book Pylades does a good mimetic show; Hughes and Elliott are smart dancers; and the comedians, Tom Lloyd, Fred Horsfall, and Harry Barker, each do a good turn.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr Frank Macnaghten.—A nicely varied programme is this week headed by Miss Raffin, whose troupe of trained monkeys do some clever and laughable work; Alec Hurley enjoys a great popularity; J. A. Wilson, comedian and dancer, causes amusement; Hart and Rudd, a funny pair, are responsible for some excellent dancing; the Sisters Redfern do a musical act in artistic style; Friscarl is an adept artiste at juggling and hat manipulating; and Billy Hubbard and George Foyle, a couple of comedians, complete the bill.

HANLEY.

ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Chas. Elphinstone.—This week the stage is occupied by the drama A Modern Adventuress. Miss Beatrice Anderson in the title-rôle is well placed, and Mr Leonard Aardale as Pietro Donelli acts with much skill. Mr Evan Roland contributes a capital reading of John Crompton; Mr W. R. Winning as Wallace Denton is seen to advantage; Harry Delby finds a worthy exponent in Mr Royce Carleton; and Mr Geo. J. Knight as William Delby; Mr Geo. P. Lester as Beal and Mr Henry Hampton as Steve Meredith do exceptionally well; Miss Alice Defoe as Vivette Delby acts with much ease and grace; and Miss Mimi Fisher makes the most of the part of Sally.

GRAND, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr C. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr James Wynes.—Edwin Boyd heads the bill, and scores most successfully in his clever songs; Zarmo, a comedy juggler, contributes a wonderful exhibition; the Arthur Saxon Trio are men of exceptional strength, their weight-lifting being much appreciated; a welcome return visit is paid by Parks' Eton Boys, who sing in their usual excellent manner; the Sisters Julian dance cleverly; the Rayfords have a capital sketch, as also have the Sivronis; Leo Tell is a wonderful mimic, his imitations being first class; Fred Herbert sings his songs admirably.

HARROGATE.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager Mr A. Smith.—The whole of the week at this popular house has been devoted to vaudeville entertainment, which has proved very popular. The artistes included the Three Sisters Lee, who were applauded for their clever dancing; "Wee Mona" gave smart imitations of Eugene Stratton; Barton and Ashby, in their comedy act, and Nellie Norton and George Ryder also displayed considerable versatility; whilst Julian Mack received an ovation for his smart patter. The vocal scena "Jack Shepherd," in which Messrs Vernon Cooper, Harold Perry, and Miss Ethel Faber took part, was also highly entertaining. Campkin, a tramp cyclist, and the Werners, tea-cup tricksts, completed a capital programme.

HARTLEPOOL.

EMPRESS.—Proprietors, Councillor Everton and J. W. Craggs; Manager, Mr Harry Burns.—A great attraction here is Cyril Demane, who demonstrates the working of the enchanted kettle, and does some smart conjuring. The Three Juggling Geraldos are exceptionally clever in their club manipulations; the Earles are heartily applauded; Jack Lorimer, Scotch comedian, provokes much amusement with his grotesque dancing; Florence Deighton takes well; as also do Millie Harris and Gus Harris on their return visits Ted Waite gives a well-rendered comic song; Ryde and Beeman retain their popularity; and the Three Sisters Urma on their return visit give a graceful triple bar act.

HASTINGS.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Geo. H. Gaze.—H. R. Sylva's sensational drama, The Greed of Gold, is being being performed here this week by Mr T. Morton Powell's company. Mr Carthage Caldcleugh as Harry Hood gives full effect to the cruelty and baseness of the villain's character; Mr Walter M. Cameron as Hood's cowardly accomplice plays strongly; Mr Chas. Coleman well presents the true-hearted Arthur Errol; Mr B. Fox is very effective as the unlucky Tom Welstead; Mr T. G. Warry is well placed as Mr Brightson; Mr H. Shea as Conn provides much of the necessary humour, and is ably assisted by Miss Winnie Donovan as Patty. Miss Daisy Halling as Dora acts throughout with much charm, and Miss Grace St. John is dignified as Mrs Maxwell. Miss Florrie Woods plays cleverly as the youthful Cecil.

HASTINGS PIER PAVILION.—Pier Master, Mr R. Turner; Entertainment Manager, Mr J. D. Hunter.—Mr Dion Boucicault's drama entitled The Life of an Actress is being produced here by Mr A. B. Tapping, Miss Alice Farleigh, and company. As Grimaldi Mr A. B. Tapping may be credited with exceptional ability, the lights and shades of emotion that the character demands being finely delineated. He is well seconded by Miss Alice Farleigh, who in the difficult rôle of Violet acts with charming naturalness. Mr Charles Hawker is a good Wopshot; Mr Charles T. Doe, an amusing Selwyn Dawdle; and Miss Stella Leigh, an acceptable Julia.

ST LEONARDS PIER KURSAAL.—The Kursaal Orchestra, conducted by Mr Val Marriott, is rapidly gaining in popularity. This week their selections are interspersed by the singing of Miss Winifred Dixon, a youthful vocalist possessing a sweet voice and pleasing manner.

HASTINGS HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General Manager, Mr Harold Penny.—An excellent company of artists is appearing this week. Miss Lily Stewart is an attractive comedienne and dancer; Mr Burton Joyce possesses an excellent tenor voice; the silent illusionists the Davenports are remarkably smart and clever; the well-rendered songs of Mr J. W. Ellison are much applauded; the graceful dancing of the Sisters Oswald finds plenty of admirers; O'Gust gives some marvellous imitations of animals and musical instruments; Mr Hamilton Hill, the Australian baritone, is cordially received; and Akimoto's clever Japanese troupe is a decided success.

HOYLAND.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Owner, Mr Arthur Carlton; Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr Geo. S. King.—Mr W. W. Kelly's company is this week playing The New East Lynne. Miss Agnes Imlay as Lady Isabel merits warm praise, and Mr W. M. Heilbronn as Archibald Carlyle wins admiration for his performance. Mr James Willoughby as Richard Hare plays his part with spirit and tact; Miss Helen Stewart as Barbara Hare effectively does the work entrusted to her; Miss Lilly Ellison makes a charming little Willie; Miss B. F. Stewart as Cornelia Carlyle and Mr T. Ford as Lawyer Dill are acquisitions to the cast; and Mr Robert Wilton is good as Justice Hare. Mr W. F. Cox creates hearty laughter as Murty O'Flynn; Miss Lizzy Maddocks is well placed as Joice; and as the unscrupulous Francis Levison Mr W. T. Clifford evokes the execrations of the audience.

HUDDERSFIELD.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy G. Arthur.—The sporting drama, Bound to Win, as played by Mr and Mrs F. G. Kimberley's company, appeals strongly to the popular parts of the house. Their approval was shown by the enthusiastic applause accorded to the hero, Lyndon, Mr F. G. Kimberley; the heroine, Marion, Miss Nina Blake Adams; and their friends, Ned Oakley, Mr James Hont; Buffet, Mr Edgar Morgan; Wilkins, Mr Horace Custins; and Winnie Oakley, Miss Edie Macklin. Howls of execration were as whole-heartedly showered upon the villains of the piece, Philip Ayre, Mr D. Strickland; Blake, Mr Fred Tenaur; and Gladys Orme, a fiend in petticoats, Miss Kathleen Eckhart.

HULL.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr W. Morton; Resident-Director, Mr W. F. Morton.—Mr Wm. Maclaren and Miss Lily Bandmann are appearing here this week with a very welcome revival of Proof. As Pierre Mr Maclaren has a part which he fills with considerable success. The Madelaine of Miss Lily Bandmann was distinguished by many pleasant touches that drew the sympathy of the house, David Garrick and The School for Scandal have been included in the week's bill.

GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr John Hart; Local Manager, Mr Wynn Miller.—The Hull amateur operatic company has held the boards this week.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Sole Owner, Mr W. Morton; Manager, Mr Geo. Morton.—Why Women Sin, a play with a strong nautical interest, therefore very popular in this port, is the attraction this week. Mr Fred Jennings gives a manly interpretation of the rôle of Captain Herbert Carlton, R.N. Miss Cora Deane scores in the rôle of Lily De Vere of the halls.

PALACE THEATRE.—Moss' Empires, Limited; Resident Manager, Mr A. Graham.—The conjuror Chung Ling Soo remains for this week, and it must be said that he is most skilful and dexterous in his tricks. Madame Alice Simmons is a vocalist with a voice of pure quality. George Bohee maintains his great reputation as banjoist and vocalist.

SYLVESTER'S EMPIRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Jno. Sylvester Sage.—The Jno. Watson Trio top the bill in a smart entertainment; Flo Melville is a smart burlesque artist; Kavados performs some neat tricks; the Schallers are a good comedy couple; and Ida Kennesley, with her terriers, and Will Fieldhouse complete the bill.

CIRCUS.—Manager, Mr E. Emerson.—"Our Imperial Army" Animated Photo. Co. shows some up-to-date pictures, and a full orchestral band adds to the interest of the entertainment.

HYDE.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Joseph W. Maloney.—This week the attraction is provided by Mr J. Rice Cassidy's God of War company. Mr Frank Orchard gives a good embodiment of the rôle of Rega Alvado; Mr Fredk. Biron makes the character of Count Raspa Cortes sufficiently repulsive; and Mr Stephen Crossley is well placed as Carlos Armado. Another praiseworthy performance is the Lord Brandon Beamer of Mr Frank Copeland. Mr J. Rice Cassidy submits a highly amusing sketch of the ubiquitous son of Erin Dandy Donovan, and is ably supported by Miss Lillian Clare, who looks charming and acts with grace the part of Dolly Daly. Miss Florence Halton plays with feeling the rôle of Madeline Alvado; Mr Storman Wallet is entertaining as Dr. Maximo Gomez Roderigo; Miss Rose Lodge displays ability as Zella; and Mr Chas. Crosby as Marcio is deserving of praise.

ILKESTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr L. F. A. Rogers; Musical Director, Mr C. Keith Smith.—Mr F. S. Gilbert's opera company is paying a return visit this week, and is playing The Bohemian Girl, The Daughter of the Regiment, Maritana, Faust, and Satanella. The Bohemian Girl was chosen for the opening night, when Mr F. S. Gilbert was, as usual, highly successful in the rôle of Thaddeus, whilst Miss Marie D'Alcourt gave a delightful rendering of Arline. Miss Grace Parish received much applause as the Gipsy Queen, and Mr Fletcher Sansome was a capable exponent of the part of Devilshoof. Messrs J. Halpin and Stuart Bolton as Count Arnheim and Florestein work well in their respective spheres. A well-trained chorus adds to the success.

QUEEN'S PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr Joe Richards.—The following turns are entertaining at this place of amusement:—Sisters Sidney, duettists and dancers; Edith Celestine, balladist; Joe Wright, vocalist; Alice Albaie, serio; and Mabel Dearing, vocalist.

INVERNESS.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Cameron Burgess.—The Moody-Manners opera company is here, and on Monday appeared most successfully in Wallace's opera Maritana. Mr Edward Wynn represented the rôle of Don Cæsar De Bazan creditably, Don José found a capital impersonator in Mr Wilfred Heath, Mr Gordon played the Alcade with artistic effect, and Mr T. Sandbrook made a praiseworthy Captain of the Guard. The King of Spain was well played by Mr H. Buckley. The title-rôle was embodied by that charming vocalist Miss K. Brownless, whose rich voice drew forth the plaudits of the house. Miss Gertrude Alexander was good as Lazarillo, and Miss Coe made a clever Marchioness. The Daughter of the Regiment was given on Tuesday and Faust on Wednesday

IPSWICH.

HIPPODROME.—Among the novelties introduced into the programme at the Woodbridge-road place of entertainment this week are Kyasyas, a marvellous weight lifter; the Alskarno Trio of acrobats; Harry Grey, comedian; the Bensons, vocalists and dancers; Ernie Shelman, comic vocalist; and Miss Daisy May and Miss Tiny Reif, both graceful and clever dancers.

KIDDERMINSTER.

NEW OPERA HOUSE.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr Jas. P. Moore; Acting-Manager, Mr R. C. Gudgeon, jun.—The attraction here this week is Messrs Beaudyn and Livesey's company, in the emotional melodrama entitled A Beautiful Fiend. Miss Sidney Crowe in the title-rôle is all that can be desired; Mr Montague Beaudyn as Ivan Paulovitch is realistic; Mr Herbert Skardon is admirable in the rôle of Count Fedor Karateff; Sergius Strogoff is capably portrayed by Mr John Keane; and Mr Chas. Rean's Christopher Crackles is very funny. Miss Irene Munroe as Nadine Karateff is well placed.

TIVOLI.—Proprietors, Messrs Lester Reekie and Howard Stephens.—Chief amongst a good company are Grapho and Jackson, Bert Kemp, Billy Bowler, and Albert Freear. Mr Douglas Randall is an efficient and popular conductor. On Wednesday afternoon a matinée in aid of the Poor Children's Boot Fund was given, and was in every way a success.

KILMARNOCK.

KING'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr A. Hales.—Mr Harry Foxwell and company are appearing in Shadows of a Great City. Mr Harry Foxwell makes an admirable Tom Cooper, and Mr Charles Vivian gives a clever impersonation of George Benson, the man about town. As Arkwright Mr Arthur A. Tomlin does good work, as does Mr Newton Pearce as Jim Farren. Miss Sheila Walsh gives an effective rendering of the double part of Annie and Nellie Standish.

LEEDS.

GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr John Hart; General Manager, Mr Fredk. Vincent.—A musical comedy by a Negro composer played by a complete company of Negro artistes is a decided novelty, and great crowds have flocked to the Grand this week to see In Dahomey, which answers the above description. The company is ably led by Mr Dan Avery and Mr Charles Hart, a pair of very able coloured comedians. The piece has plenty of tuneful numbers, and Miss Laura Bowman, Mr Howard Watson, and Mr Dan Washington receive due appreciation for their excellent work.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs Dottridge and Longden; General Manager, Mr C. H. Longden; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Bush.—Man to Man, which once again holds the boards here, is presented by Mr Bourne's company. Mr Frank Elwood is to be complimented on a manly performance of the hero; Mr Ellis J. Preston plays in vigorous style the villainous Richard Ellerton; that accomplished actress, Miss Maud Buchanan, capably enacts the rôle of Ethel Maythorne, the heroine; good assistance being given by Miss Amy Vennimore as Gipsy Madge. Mr Arthur Rich infuses some welcome comedy into his character, and in this direction Miss Lydia Hart also renders good service. Other parts are in the able hands of Mr Chas. Boult, Mr Frank Liston, and Mr Will Clement.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; General Manager, Mr R. Ernest Liston.—The Streets of Leeds is to be seen here this week, and the piece is effectively played by Mr John F. Preston's company, that excellent actor himself appearing in an effective portrayal of Badger. The Mark Livingstone of Mr Alfred Wade is a powerful effort which arouses general enthusiasm; Mr George R. Montford makes good use of his opportunities as John Stonecastle; the part of Lucy Fairfax is cleverly presented by Miss Gertrude Godart; and some excellent comedy business by Mr Fawcett Lomax and Mr Hardy Macro is a most welcome feature. Mr E. R. Allen is also to be specially noted for a fine presentation of a heavy dual-rôle.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Moss Empires, Limited; Resident-Manager, Mr T. Gerald Morton.—Mr J. L. Shine, a talented comedian, is here this week with a smart company in Hogmanay, the presentation of which has aroused great enthusiasm. Another capital turn is the marionette entertainment by Professor Bernar. Carl and Mary Ohm's trained animal show is again voted a great success; the Emelia Sisters are vociferously applauded for a talented musical entertainment; Miss Florrie Robina again displays her ability as comedienne and burlesque artiste; Les Voces find favour with capital singing; the contributions of Chas. Adams, comedian; and Arthur Melrose, whistling comedian, are distinctly above the average; Mueller and Coyne are a smart comedy duo; and Lyane and Greks, novel contortionists, also contribute to a capital bill.

TIVOLI.—Proprietor, Mr Thomas Barrasford; General Managers, Messrs Charles Weldon and Edgar O. Waller.—"The Magic Kettle" is the chief cause of the crowded state of this popular hall during the present week. An exceedingly popular contributor is Sam Mayo, a clever comedian of the immobile species. Larola also entertains with comical business; the Patty Brothers have a novel and expert acrobatic act which goes well; the Gregsons submit a good comedy sketch; Will M'Ivor evokes much applause by fine vocal work; Rose Cabani and Stella Stanley are comediennes with a pleasing variety of songs; and we are further entertained by Dale and Vale and Dusty Rhodes, comedians.

CITY VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr F. W. Wood; General Manager, Mr J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr S. Jones.—The song scena, "The Factory Girl," is the main feature of entertainment here in the hands of Joe Peterman's company. May Lilian Levey proves a bright comedienne and a great favourite; some clever speciality dancing by Viviana is as popular as anything in the bill; that expert conjuror, Henri Bekker, again gives a mystifying entertainment; Cliff and Kean are a pair of favourite comedy artistes; the Four Jumels submit their musical act with success; and Harry Hayton, comedian, is also appearing.

LEICESTER.

ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor, Lieutenant-Colonel J. A. Winstanley; Acting-Manager, Mr C. D. Leigh.—The evergreen and popular military drama In the Ranks is the attraction here this week, being presented by Messrs Arthur Carlton and H. Armitage's capital company. Miss Edith Blair-Staples as Ruth Herrick and Mr Edward Lloyd as Ned Drayton, the heroine and hero, are both to be complimented on clever embodiments, which entirely wins the sympathies of the audience. Mr Herbert Cecil is a success as Gideon Blake, and Mr Arthur Palling as Colonel Wynter and Mr Archie W. Chappell as Captain Holcroft are both good. Mr Walter Wilson makes an excellent Richard Beleon. Mr Cecil Clayton is amusing as Joe Buzzard, the same remark applying to Miss Anna Beaumont as Mrs Buzzard. Miss Ella Wilmer is well placed as Barbara Herrick.

THEATRE ROYAL. — Sole Lessee, Lieutenant-Colonel J. A. Winstanley; General Manager, Mr John H. Clarke.—Miss Annie Bell and company are here this week in the play Sapho, dramatised by Birkett Winning. As Fanny Legrand Miss Annie Bell is conspicuously successful with a performance of great merit; Mr Frederick Ross makes an excellent impression as Jean Gaussin; and Mr George Antley as Cessire and Mr R. A. Greene as Paul Dechelette are both good. Mr H. Langford does well as Caoudal, and Mr J. A. Storey is equally successful as Father Legrand. Miss Laura Rayn is well placed as Machaume. Little Miss Lottie Ray displays ability and intelligence as Joseph.

PALACE THEATRE, LIMITED. — Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Leonard Vidal.—The great attraction in this week's bill is the Boisset Troupe (Frank and Albert and company), who are presenting for the first time in Leicester the uproariously funny sketch The Bricklayers. The Three Brothers Pantzer give a remarkably clever show as equilibrists, their balancing feats arousing great applause. A pretty, clever, and versatile turn is submitted by Miss Lalla Selbini, which includes trick cycling, juggling, dancing, bâton swinging, &c. She is assisted by Midget Harry, an amusing little fellow. A. W. Hall and B. P. Earle are a couple of eccentrics who display great smartness in their acrobatic work, besides being very funny. A special feature of the programme is the Bioscope, an entirely new set of films being projected to the delight of the audience. The Four Olympian Stars, burlesque vocalists and dancers, give an enjoyable turn. Miss Kitty Marion sings exceedingly well. Miss Ella Retford, coon vocalist and smart dancer, scores a success. Princess Pauline, serio, also entertains.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter Lapworth. — The programme here is headed this week by Blake and Granby, comedy duologue artistes, in The Man in Possession, which raises hearty laughter; the Three Novells are smart acrobats and tumblers; the Athlones, Herculean athletes, score a success in their clever speciality act; J. C. Manley, character vocalist, is good; Nellie Dunbar, a popular local vocalist and dancer; J. H. M'Cann, comedian and roller skate dancer; Collins and Croft, in their latest success, The Aliens; and Alice Gill, vocalist, also entertain.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Mr Walter Jeff's New Century pictures are being shown here this week. They include a series of pretty views in colour photography. The audience accord the entertainment, which is interspersed with well-rendered songs by Miss Kathleen M'Cabe, unstinted applause.

LEIGH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr J. Dewhurst; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Dewhurst.—This week Mr Penfold Field's company is occupying the boards here with A Fatal Fortune. Miss Rose Lehmann as Beauty Glitters is very effective; Miss Shirley Dalton is a sympathetic Mary Weston; Mr Raymond Thomas is a capable Captain Seton Desmond; Mr Harry Treeham as Jack Weston acquits himself well; Mr Percy Boucher as Tim Larks and Miss Florrie Hall as Becky are responsible for much merriment.

LINCOLN.

ROYAL.—Sole Manager, Mr Frank King.—Messrs Polini and Melford once more present to us The Silver King, and the company are to be complimented on their representation. Mr Lauderdale Maitland finely plays Wilfred Denver, Miss Lilian Bethell gives a powerful impersonation of Nellie Denver, and Mr Charles Levey is excellent as the Spider. Mr E. J. George scores as the old servant Jakes. All the other characters are cleverly played.

PALACE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr Sydney Arthur; Assistant-Manager, Mr Brandon Blake.—The Four Burnells, in their lively act, Over the Garden Wall, present the chief item in a programme remarkable for its dash and go. Gintaro, a Jap juggler of amazing dexterity, wins immense applause, and makes probably the hit of the evening, and another excellent turn is that of Mr J. G. Grahame, jun., and Miss Zerlina Harrington, in the well-played sketch, A Daughter of Pleasure. Permane's bears give a clever show. Zuma is a smart athlete, Ruby Bijou and Gracie Vernon dance most daintily, and Kit Keen's song and dance are also very taking.

LIVERPOOL.

ROTUNDA THEATRE.—Manager, Mr M. Montgomery; Licensee, Mr J. G. Howard; Acting-Manager, Mr M. Montgomery, jun.—Good business has been done here during the week with An Actor's Romance, played by a numerous company under the control of Mr Cecil Barth. Mr Guy Hastings played with effect the part of Harold Davenport, and Miss Bertha Northam was an impressive Louise Davenport. Creditable work was also done by Mr Ernest Rushton, Mr W. H. Beaumont, Mr E. H. Dobell, Mr Percy Marmont, and Misses Constance Elgin, Gracie Woodleigh, Little Marie Dowsing, and Mrs Louise L'Estrange.

LYRIC THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Henry C. Arnold; Directors of Entertainments, Messrs T. Barrasford and F. Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr Fred Coles.—Mr George Robey tops the bill here. He keeps the audience convulsed with laughter. The O'Malleys are amusing comedians, and come in for a good share of the applause. Smith and Johnson, the coloured couple, win the hearts of all with their characteristic coon songs; Sig. Bellany is a most daring acrobat, and is loudly applauded for his clever performance; De Henau, the armless wonder, wins the sympathies and applause by his clever painting; Aladina and her cockatoos are interesting; Len Lever is unmistakably a clever dancer; and the Korries are good in their potpourri act.

STAR THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr H. Fineberg; Acting-Manager, Mr M. Simmons.—The business done at this favourite house during the week has been particularly good, an able company organised by Tom H. Taylor having produced The Female Swindler. The work is one to command the close attention of an audience, and comprises many striking situations. The title part is presented by Miss Violet Ellicott, an actress of high merit, and Mr Jerrold Heather is a powerful Jack Coulson, the crime investigator. Other capable artistes include Mr Weldon Atherstone, Mr George Unwin, Miss Florrie Kelsie, Miss Evelyn Marrable, and Mr Luke Forster.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs Carson and Granville; Manager, Mr Fred Granville; Business Manager, Mr F. L. Arthur.—The pantomime season in Liverpool this year has been inaugurated by the Queen's. On Monday a twelve nights' stay was commenced by Mr John Walter's Cinderella, and has proved very successful. Some fifty artistes are engaged, the dialogues are smart, the songs new and catchy, the dresses pretty, and the scenery picturesque. Taken altogether the show is a good one, and ought to continue to enjoy the strong patronage bestowed upon it during the early days of the week. Miss Florence Drew was a dainty and vivacious Cinderella, Miss Constance St. Bride scored as the Prince Charming; and the fun, of which there was a good supply, was provided by Messrs George Reeves, the Baron; Arthur Hickman and T. H. Solly, the ugly sisters; Ally M. Benson, Buttons; Clarence and Bell, the flunkeys, &c.; and Miss Flo Merry, the Baroness.

EMPIRE THEATRE, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr H. E. Moss; Acting-Manager, Mr T. A. Cook.—Principal here this week is a somewhat uncommon entertainment, which has commanded some attention. It is entitled "Rousbys in Paris," and consists of a series of views of the French capital charmingly illuminated by electricity, accompanied by incidental music. Maxwell and Francis are a couple of able speciality artistes and dancers; the coloured Meisters sing several sweet quartets, for which they are loudly encored; Cole De Losse, comedians, perform a number of clever slack-wire feats in a humorous way; Charles Baron's animal show is very mirth-provoking; Miss Sybil St. Elmo renders several pretty songs, for which she is loudly applauded; Lily Burnand is a charming burlesque artiste; J. H. Milburn, an old favourite comedian, had a good reception; and others on the programme are the Two Butterflies, juvenile gymnasts; Fanny Robina, comedienne; Jimmy Shields, one-legged artiste; and Robertus and Wilfredo, with their dog.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr Thomas Barrasford.—Good houses have been the rule here during the week. At the head of the bill are the Bennecelli Troupe of novelty gymnasts, who put in some good work, for which they receive loud applause. Mr F. V. St. Clair, a clever artiste, gives a number of songs, including his latest success "Little Jap Horner;" Nellie and Nora are a smart pair of society musical entertainers; the singing of George Martinengo and his work as a 'cellist were of a high order; the Brothers Bellong perform some clever feats in bicycle balancing; Addie Dorina is a smart quick-change artiste; Charles Vandyke and company provide a funny pantomime sketch, Nicodemus; and others who appear are J. W. Bray, comedian; Florence Hill, dancer and comedienne; and Emma and Victor, vocalists and acrobatic dancers.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES. — Manager, Mr M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr F. O'Toole.—A very acceptable bill-of-fare is presented here this week, the principal item being a sketch company under the control of Miss Dorothy Dean and Mr H. C. Le Fre. The scena A Sham Hero is exceedingly funny, and provokes great laughter. The first visit to Liverpool of the Hungarian Midget (Prince Henrich Herczeg) has been a success, and the diminutive figure has commanded attention. Little Lady Fauntleroy, with her natty ventriloquial act, is well received; O'Connor and Traynor are smart comedians and dancers; the Five Wee Macks provide a clever comedy act; Miss Bessie Willows is a burlesque actress of ability; Alf Brooks, a quaint comedian, has some catchy songs; and Miss Alma Curzon is a pleasant comedienne.

NEW PARTHENON.—Proprietor, Mr Edwin W. Smith.—Heading the programme here are Jack and Evelyn, a couple of exceptionally good sand-dancers who have been warmly applauded; the Victoria Troupe of quick-change dance artistes are an excellent turn; Professor Hennesey proves himself a smart club manipulator and juggler; George Renton is a comedian and mimic of ability; the Yankee tourist, Dan Kennedy, creates great laughter with his antics; Carr and Rose are a couple of able comedians, their item, "Cockney Americans," being funny; and Eva Frear sings and dances gracefully. On Thursday the proprietor took his fourteenth annual benefit, when a great array of talent from the local theatres put in an appearance.

PADDINGTON PALACE, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr J. Kiernan. The cake walk competition for silver medals continues to prove extremely interesting. George French, a popular comedian, is head of the bill, with his smart songs; Ralston and Frances provide a neat nautical musical scena; Speeks and Thorne are a couple of accomplished coloured comedians, their sand-dancing and mace-swinging being cordially recognised; Gracie Logan shows herself to be a graceful dancer; Evelyn Taylor is creditable as a male impersonator; and the remainder of the programme is occupied by Alf Davis, comedian; Marion Francis, burlesque actress; Walter Lester, comedian; and Edie Endon, acrobatic vocalist dancer.

WESTMINSTER.—Proprietor, Mr M. Montgomery.—That uproariously funny absurdity Muldoon's Picnic has been the principal item here this week, James M'Grath being the Michael Mulcahy and George Casey the Denis Muldoon. The audiences of the week have been large and enthusiastic. Also in the bill are Caselli and James, an accomplished pair of banjoists; Wright and Elton, speciality eccentricities; Major Moss and Son, vocal scenic artistes; Fred Keeton, comedian; Will Farrell, comedian; and the Royal Victorian Trio, smart dancers, who have won many prizes and valuable medals.

PARK PALACE.—Director, Mr James Kiernan.—The principal engagement here this week consists of Tom Herman's naval and military spectacle For King and Country, in which fifty Liverpool boys and girls take part. The sketch is well produced, and received with loud applause. Leighton and Mora provide a smart turn with their laughable item, The Tramp and the Soubrette; the Black Apollo gives a capital entertainment with his playing on ten different musical instruments; Harry Barclay, a popular comedian, renders, among several good songs, his "Fighting for Freedom;" Kier and Allen, comedy artistes, create laughter with their "terrible tale of the sea;" and others on the programme are Bella Leaburn, a pleasing singer; Akbar, a performer on rings; and Tom Hayes, juvenile comedian and mimic.

LLANELLY.

ROYALTY THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr John Tully.—Mr A. Clifton Aldersons' company, in A Soldier and a Man, was here the first three nights of the week, and did well. Mr Alderson in the part of Harold Sinclair was most successful. Miss B. Doyle as Rose Melbury, the heroine, was also very clever and charming. Mr Frank Powell as Hubert Walgrove and Mr Henry F. Wright as Jim Farron were exceptionally good, as was also Miss Daisy England as Nora and Miss Nettie Schrier as "Sergeant" Jane. For the remainder of the week Mr John T. Kershaw's Cremona Choir and Picture Show are here.

LONGTON.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr H. S. Howard.—Messrs Campbell and Fulton's company, with A Bid for Fortune, is here. The interesting play is well supported by Messrs Oswald Douglas as Kent Rickett, C Brereton Borer as Sir Philip Templemore, Geoffrey Fulton as Desmond Netherley, Dick Thomas as Cobbe Cuttle (with songs); Mesdames Olive Fulton as Agnes Netherley and Mary Ainslie as Barbara.

LUTON.

GRAND.—Lessee and Manager, Mr E. Graham Falcon; Assistant Manager, Mr Louis J. Beard.—The Bedford Amateur Dramatic and Operatic Society presented Mr G. R. Sims's comedy Mother-in-Law for the first three nights this week in aid of the Children's Convalescent Home. The comedy was preceded by The Area Belle. On Wednesday evening his Worship the Mayor, Mr Geo. Ordish, and other local notabilities were present. On Thursday and Friday East Lynne was played by Mr Ben Greet's company.

MACCLESFIELD.

ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr W. K. Gatley.—The boards here are occupied this week by Messrs Marston and Buckstone and company in The Streets of London. Mr H. Glenny is successful in the dual parts of Captain Fairweather and Paul Fairweather; Mr Syd Bazley is amusing as Mr Puffy; Mr Fred A. Marston creates a good impression as Badger; Mr Cliff Allan makes an acceptable Mark Livingstone; Mr W. A. Buckstone portrays the part of Gideon Bloodgood with credit; Miss Ada D. Hinder as Lucy Fairweather and Miss C. Glenny as Alida Bloodgood ably fill their respective parts; and the remaining characters are satisfactorily filled.

HIPPODROME. — Lessees, Messrs Bendon and Larder.—Ada Marjutti, "From Demon to Fairyland," is proving a great attraction here. Marti and Julietta present a very clever act; Syd Hermann receives applause for a very smart turn; Queenie Palmer, balladist, is a capital artiste; the Tooles are a delightful turn; Miss Ethel Yorke, serio, sings some good songs; Frank Tyrell, comedian, is a most amusing turn; whilst Spanglettie's circus is an attractive item.

MAIDENHEAD.

GRAND THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs Edgar Dereve and F. L. Schmitz.—Miss Lena Stanton an old favourite at Maidenhead, is here for a week playing The Belle of Bangalore and The Bashful Beauty. The first-named piece has been revised and brought well up to date, the new songs—especially those referring to local affairs and current topics of the day—being heartily applauded and redemanded. Miss Lena Stanton and Mr Harry Jay are as entertaining as ever as Princess Ko-Ko and Pat Murphy; Miss Marie Gerrard is lively and entertaining as Small Sing; and a bevy of fair ladies sing and dance well as attendants on the Rajah, who is capitally represented by Mr Bruce Green. Little Keeno's every appearance is greeted with roars of laughter, and there is not a dull moment while he is in sight. Dancing is gracefully supplied by the Cecil Troupe; Rynfeld does an astonishingly clever turn as acrobat; and Eugene Mart contributes some wonderful feats as a strong man.

PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr George Gude.—Gus Daniels takes well, particularly in "Here's to the colours red and blue;" George Trusty, on a return visit, is applauded for "Heroes of England;" and other comedians appearing are Jack Coleman, Geo. Ransford, Dick Gutherd, and Dave Hall. Iona contributes a pleasing turn as instrumentalist, vocalist, and dancer; Miss Ethel May is a dainty speciality dancer; and Miss Ruby De Guar's songs are given in good style.

MANCHESTER.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Oscar Barrett; Acting-Manager, Mr Edmondstone Shirra.—Mr F. R. Benson's welcome in Manchester is always assured by that section of the public, and it is a large one, who have had already innumerable proofs of the sincerity and thoroughness with which he invariably presents his choice répertoire of Shakespearian and other old English plays. His company, moreover, including Mrs Benson and himself, is always of the highest available quality, strong in reserves for the various changes of the week, and fitting each important part to its most suitable exponent. On Monday Othello was presented by an excellent cast, Mr F. R. Benson appearing with his usual success in the title-rôle, and Mrs Benson presenting a very pure and womanly idea of Desdemona. Mr Arthur Whitby's Iago was distinguished by a somewhat humorous tone, hardly suited, perhaps, to the unmitigated villainy of the character, but, at the same time, bold and effective; while notable successes were gained by Miss Gertrude Scott as Emilia, Mr B. A. Pittar as Brabantio, Mr Cyril Keightley as Cassio, Mr Percy D. Owen as Roderigo, and Mr H. O. Nicholson as the Duke of Venice. On Tuesday As You Like It and on Wednesday Macbeth were produced with similar success, Mr George R. Weir figuring admirably as Touchstone in the first-named play, and the central parts in each receiving excellent interpretation from Mr and Mrs Benson. The remainder of the programme is made up of The Taming of the Shrew, She Stoops to Conquer, Henry the Fifth, and Hamlet. All the plays are admirably staged.

PRINCE'S THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr Oscar Barrett; Acting-Manager, Mr George Lee.—Charity is the motif of the current week's performance at this theatre, the Ryder Boys Old English comedy company giving a répertoire of plays in aid of the N.S.P.C.C. and the Manchester and Salford Hospital for Skin Diseases. The company is an amateur one, but proved itself quite equal on Monday to an adequate and entertaining production of Louis N. Parker's play, The Mayflower, in which Mr Ryder Boys, Miss Lilly E. Hughes, and Messrs Charles Kenyon, W. Henry Williams, and Henry Worrall especially distinguished themselves. On Tuesday Robert Buchanan's comedy, Sophia, was given, the programme including also a matinée of Garrick, by special desire.

ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr W. H. Broadhead; Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—Mr Lingford Carson's Drama of Life is presented here this week by a capable company, under the direction of Messrs Carson and Granville. The play is of strong sensational and domestic interest, and pleased a large audience on Monday night. The prominent parts are in the hands of Messrs Jerrold Ord, John J. Hooker, Owen Remonde, and Misses Cissie Bellamy, Muriel Inglis, Nelly Daly, and Marie Murray. The drama is well staged and entirely effective.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Oscar Barrett; Acting-Manager, Mr H. M. Thorburn.—Messrs W. T. M'Lellan and H. Rousby's Laughter Land, music by Frank Corrie, is a musical pantomimical absurdity designed to fit the particular business—and it is very good business—of the Marvellous Craggs, who are well described as the premier gentlemen acrobats of the world, and who are assisted by a number of capable comedians and clever ladies. Three of the latter dance in expert style as the "Sisters Belgrave," otherwise Miss Cissie Dawes, Miss Kitty Lingard, and Miss Maisie Ryder; a fourth, Miss Agatha Rose, being seen to great advantage as Clothilda. Messrs Henry B. Lewis, Harry Rousby, Victor Raymond, and Arthur E. Behan are also prominent in the fun.

METROPOLE THEATRE. — Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—Among many turns in this week's programme here are those of Budd and Budd (Fred and Florence), who give a most amusing sketch, The Hump Shifters; George White's Night Arabs, in songs and dramatic sketches; and Vincent, a clever and sensational table tumbler. Other good business is supplied by the various efforts of Mephisto and Marie, in a speciality act; Reuben Hill, vocal comedian; the Daniels, song illustrators; Little Rene, juvenile mimic; Charles Rose, comedian and dancer; the Sisters Desmond, character duettists; Nellie Graham, comedienne and dancer; and Fred Weston, comedian.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr M. Flanagan; Acting-Manager, Mr M. Potasch.—This theatre was reopened on Monday by Mr Flanagan, of the Queen's Theatre, after a lengthy period of closed doors. A big audience attended, manifesting lively interest in the brilliant renovation of the house, which is probably brighter and more attractive than it has even been before. It would seem to have entered also upon a new and higher phase of entertainment, for the stage was occupied by Mrs Lewis Waller and her company in Zaza, a powerful play, rendered in their usual successful style. Mrs Waller's répertoire for the week includes two performances of Vilma, a play recently produced in Manchester, and two performances of a new comedy, entitled Miss Talk, the initial production being arranged for Wednesday night. A notice of this piece appears elsewhere.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—Defending His Honour is a well-tried attraction at local theatres, and this week it has served to draw good audiences here. The piece is particularly strong in emotional and sensational crises, and it receives a very able interpretation at the hands of Messrs. Carson and Granville's company. Mr John Davidson and Miss F. Melrose-Millet are seen in the heroic parts, considerable assistance being rendered by Mr Clifton Boyne, Mr John Hignett, Mr Willie Black, Mr Kenneth Black, jun., and Mrs Edmond Lyons.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr R. Flanagan; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Berry.—Messrs Dottridge and Longden's pantomime of The Forty Thieves was produced here on Monday. A notice appears elsewhere.

HIPPODROME.—Manager Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead. — The principal attractions here this week are the Three Romas in some clever and novel feats of strength, and John Tiller's Eight Mascottes, whose pretty and graceful dancing and tuneful singing is well received. Pete and Juno, coloured comedians, provide a good turn, their songs, patter, and excellent sand dancing being much appreciated. Wallace Whitney, an eccentric character comedian, is successful in songs and patter; George Edney, character comedian, makes a hit with "Welcome Home;" and Texas Hattie is a remarkably clever tight-rope artiste. H. K. Bradshaw possesses a fine tenor voice, and sings with effect; Fred and Lila Lorrison are amusing comedy artistes; the Wheelers are decidedly clever trick cyclists; Cavern and Cave appear in a laughable comedietta, An Early Morning Dip; and Emmie White dances nicely. The animated pictures depict a pathetic series, "Driven from Home."

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—The wonderfully clever dogs of Lieut. Chard are here this week, and delight and interest the audience by their amusing gambols and their daring leaps; Charles Serra gives a neat acrobatic performance on the top of a high column; Michel and Polo present a pleasing exhibition of strength and agility; Herr Schuyler plays several wind instruments very ably; the Three Sisters Kilner sing and dance well; and Cordite shows her ability in throwing the lasso. Humour is supplied by an excellent pair of "patter purveyors, Walker and Lake; by Fred Casburn, comedian; by Cribb and Cribb, burlesque artistes, in After the Ball; and by Tom E. Hughes, comedian, who sings "One of the Upper Ten" and other songs. The series of animated pictures shown are interesting and up-to-date.

TIVOLI. — Managing Director, Mr Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr Arthur B. Wilkes.—Tom Costello appears here this week with his usual success, his latest songs being great appreciated. Tom and Marie Motramo are vastly entertaining in their musical comedy act, causing endless amusement; and Wyotti is well termed the "jocular juggling genius." Fred Cary, comedian, sings two capital songs, and meets with a good reception; Mina Marie is a pleasing comedienne and graceful dancer; and enjoyable items are contributed by Lil Esplin, comedienne; Kitty White, comedienne; Beaty and Blanche, comediennes; and Fanny Errie, comedienne. The Cranks, trick cyclists, did not appear on the occasion of our visit.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Collins.—One of the most remarkable of Risley acrobatic performances is to be seen here this week in that of the Kremo family, whose feats are at once startling, perfect, and, in a large degree, original. This extraordinary turn is supplemented by the smart comedy act of Burke and M'Voy; a really clever farce by Mr and Mrs Harold Finden; a fine performance on the trapeze by the Sisters Geretti; an amusing sketch by the Arthur Lloyd Trio; and the various entertaining items of Preston and Mayne, song illustrators; Paul Mill, character comedian; Charles Bayman, Negro comedian; Will Newman, comedian; and Fred H. Leslie's cleverly trained troupe of leaping dogs.

GRAND.—Lessees, Messrs Thomas Barrasford and Will Sley; Manager, Mr H. C. Arnold, jun.—Charles Morritt, the well-known magician, is here this week in an elaborate series of new and startling illusions, and successfully mystifies an interested audience. Considerable laughter is caused by the Waldrons, whose business is highly amusing; Jack Hylton, eccentric comedian, is very popular; and Charles Best, the "supple" comedian, appeals with much success in an original comedy act, M'Bunker the Mountebank. Other good turns are Kardoc, the handcuff king; the Wonderful Blind Man, in marvellous feats of memory and calculation; Henri, boy juggler; Katie Eplett, comedienne; Will Letters, speciality comedian; and an interesting series of animated pictures.

PALACE. — Manager and Secretary, Mr P. Watson; Assistant-Manager, Mr J. H. Stringer.—The sensation of the week here is the performance of Harry Houdini, handcuff king and jail-breaker, whose remarkable manipulation of locks and fetters in freeing himself from bondage more than fills the seating accommodation of the house at every show. The programme is full of good things besides, namely, Staig's cycle and motor sensation round a bottomless track; Ross and Grayson, in their funny sketch, The Professor and the Pupil; the eccentric comedy business of Tom Leamore; Keen and Waller's amusing acrobatic act; the fine singing and dancing of Nelson's Newsboys Quintet; and the entertaining contributions of Vendome and Chase, duettists and dancers; Marco, the boy magician; Mainwaring and Anderson, sketch artistes; and the Haywards, in a dancing speciality. The Palace pictures are especially interesting this week, and the orchestral selection is quite up to its usual high standard of merit.

MELTON MOWBRAY.

CORN EXCHANGE.—Under Mr J. W. Warner's experienced bâton, and well augmented by professionals, the local choral society gave a largely and fashionably attended concert. The chief item was Cowen's "Rose Maiden," the rendering of which reflected much credit upon the society, and was well received. In the second miscellaneous part Miss Christine Warner was heard to advantage in an impressive rendering of "The spring has come;" while Mr H. Ripley Evans delighted his audience with "Nirvana." Miss Dora Hunt's contralto voice was pleasing; and Mr Sidney Stoddard was popular as leading baritone.

PUBLIC HALL.—Catlin's Pierrots pay a welcome return visit here, and play to enthusiastic audiences.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr Will Smithson; Assistant Manager, Mr Albert J. Lewis.—Messrs Preston and Doherty's company opened on Monday in The Rich and Poor of London. Mr Andrew Money gave a capital impersonation of Mark Stanley, and Mr Robert Hall did well as Dr. Morton. Mr Sidney Cranston admirably filled the rôle of Gussy Lamb, and Mr Sidney Dench was a capable representative of Spider Jack. The part of May Braithwaite was well sustained by Miss Dora Dench; Miss Mary Ramsey was effective as the adventuress, Ruby Redgrave; Miss Lillie Wood was good as Auntie Scrimp; and Miss Sybil Viney was well suited as Polly Philpot.

MEXBOROUGH.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr W. H. Melton.—Mr Charles H. Phelps's company is this week playing One Woman's Wickedness. Mr L. Brien gives a manly embodiment of Philip Beaufort; the Paul Rowne of Mr H. Humphreys is a capable effort; in the rôle of Jem Craggs Mr C. H. Phelps plays with rare dramatic power; Mr A. Ferris is a first-class comedian, and is very funny as Limpy Larry; Mr Geo. Byrne is amusing as Lord Fitznoodle; Miss Amy Dalby presents a pathetic portraiture of Lilian Craggs; the heartlessnes of the scheming usurper, Janet Raymond, is cleverly depicted by Miss Florence Lloyd; Miss Ethel Asbury is vivacious as Jenny Jiggles.

MIDDLESBROUGH.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Directors, Messrs George and Charles Imeson.—Mr Frank E. Burdett's company in the military play, The Indian Mutiny, occupies the boards here. Mr H. Ryeland Leigh appears as Lieutenant Manley, and gives a capital representation; and Miss Agnes Kingston is seen to great advantage as Kate Ingleby, and Mr Reginald Fox makes the most of his opportunities as Lieutenant Manley's brother. Mr John Hignett represents Terry O'Brien. Mr Villiers Stanley is excellent as Nebu Singh; Mr J. S. Sheddon, Mr Ernest Keand, Mr D. Matthew, Mr A. Saumy, Mr J. Peters are good in their respective rôles. Miss Maud Digby appears with much success as Ghuznah, and the same may be said of Miss Dora Moorhouse's Roma Goosh.

OPERA HOUSE, LIMITED.—Licensee, Mr T. Hopcutt.—Messrs Dottridge and Longden's company in A Woman's Pluck, under the personal direction of Mr James Willard, is here this week. Mr Willard and Miss East-Robertson take the principal parts, and give a most powerful delineation, which receives hearty plaudits. Mr Charles P. Wentworth is all that can be desired as Sir Noel Fordyce, and Mr J. P. Dryden is an excellent Mark Scanlan. Mr Cecil Raymond pleases as Sir John Daredevil. Mr Harry Emmerson, Roger Pippin; Miss Agnese D'Aragon, Ophelia Pippin; and Miss Tina Shaw, Bertie Daredevil, are responsible for the humorous parts, and highly please the audience.

EMPIRE.—Managing Director, Mr John Brill; Manager, Mr J. W. Thornborrow.—The Six Brothers Luck, in the sketch The Hermit, heads the bill here, and creates much laughter. Sable Fern sings some PORT ARTHUR.

The Proprietors of FUO shipped to this now historic town a large quantity of their Mouth-Wash, just previous to the outbreak of hostilities. A cynic has suggested that this may have something to do with the tenacity with which the Russians are holding on to the town and its contents, and also the determination of the Japs to obtain control of the Port.

FUO is a delicious and refreshing teeth-beautifier and mouth-sweetner.

good songs, which are heartily received. Virginia and her piccaninnies are great favourites, whilst Harry Anderson is as successful to please as on his previous visits. The Edgar Forrest comedy sketch company, in My Friend, the Enemy, provides a capital turn. Baker and Balfe, xylophone turn, is well received, and Winnie Derson, comedienne, pleases everyone. Teddy Denham, comedian, and the Bio complete the programme.

OXFORD.—Lessee, Mr W. Peacock; Manager, Mr Wm. Ainsworth.—A good all-round programme is provided here this week, the principal attraction being the well-known Andos Troupe of Japanese. They do some remarkable feats as acrobats, jugglers, and wire-walkers. The Ross Clyde combination, in a sketch I Must Have It, creates much amusement. Signor and Madame Louie, who describe themselves as the world's greatest thought-readers and clairvoyants, well deserve that title, whilst E. J. Wilkes and his dog Woof provide a good turn. The Percys are pretty dancers and singers. Fredk. Clifford sings some good songs, and Rose Morn, vocalist, pleases. Joe Hudson, comedian; Tate and Tate, acrobats; and the Bio complete the bill.

MOTHERWELL.

NEW CENTURY THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Resident Manager, Mr W. Gillespy.—The Garside, Knowles, and Ludlow company is appearing this week in The London Fireman. Mr J. F. Knowles makes a capital Hal Curtis; Mr Arthur Fleming portrays the part of Viscount Fleming with effect; Mr Edward L. Garside is capable as Ratty; the part of Ida Curtis is well suited to Miss Mona Gray; Miss Adeline Raby is clever as Grace Curtis; and Miss Violet Temple shows histrionic ability as the Countess Fleming. The comic element is left in the capable hands of Mr Chas. Preece and Miss Nellie Garside.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

TYNE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr Fred C. Sutcliffe.—A successful season is here brought to a close with the performance of Captain Robert Marshall's comedy, The Duke of Killierankie, which is presented by Messrs Charles Frohman and Arthur Chudleigh's company, the members of which generally acquit themselves admirably, and special mention is due to Mr Langhorne Burton, Mr Arthur Grenville, Miss Doris Templeton, and Miss Aida Jenoure for their clever impersonations. Each evening Jerome's one-act piece, Barbara, has also been given with much acceptance.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr Thos. W. Rowe.—In the Shadow of Night is being performed here to the admiration of Palace audiences by Mr James Willard's company.

ELSWICK THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr Chas. M. Daly.—Mr Fred Harcourt, supported by a variety company, is in possession here for a second week. Mr Harcourt presents his vivisection act with success, and the performance of the mysterious Lilith creates something like a sensation. The Dillons may always be depended upon to give a smart acrobatic and gymnastic performance, and there are also appearing Lilian Warren, with her vocal pictures; the Two Arnolds; the Itrams, acrobats; Baby Lloyd, coon dancer; Percy Farrimond, the Lancashire collier; and Fred Griffiths, comedian.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Moss Empires, Limited; Resident Director, Mr Richard Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr E. Leslie Conroy.—The principal attraction here is provided by Hagedorn's wonderful grotto, a most beautiful and novel entertainment. G. W. Hunter still maintains his popularity as a comedian; a charming young lady is Miss Amber Austa, who shows exceptional merit as a coon singer and dancer; and Griff, comedy juggler, has on this visit the aid of an assistant, and their combined efforts are favourably received. "Blue-Bell," the forthcoming pantomime song, is rendered by the Three Sisters Jonghmanns, who make it popular; Eugen Mander's fire dancing horse has evidently been marvellously trained; Great Alexander, as a trick cyclist, is clever and original; and another capital turn is provided by the Four Milons, equilibrists. Driscoll and Beattie's company, in a sketch; the Three Georges, comic acrobats; and Will Haines, vocalist, are all decidedly clever in their respective acts.

GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr E. W. Bacon.—Although the company this week does not boast of any great star, yet the artistes are all capable ones, and the programme is most acceptable. The top turn is that of the Max Trevelly Harley Troupe, who give an excellent acrobatic performance. Percy Vere and Edith Royal are a very clever couple of comedy artistes, their patter and singing being first-class, the lady being the fortunate possessor of a first-rate voice; Pattie Varley and Beatrice Sinclair sing an excellent duet, which is heartily encored; J. P. Carroll, an ex-soldier, gives a smart performance as a military tambourinist; Florence Bray is a burlesque actress with plenty of style and with a very good voice; Brady and Johnson's company give an exceedingly smart matrimonial sketch Turning the Tables, which convulses the audience; and another sketch entitled The Hot Member is acceptably played by Billy Ross and company. Other turns are George Tustin, dancer; Will Ellerslie, comedian; and Harry Zetter, comedian and dancer.

OLYMPIA THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs Thornton and Bacon; General Manager, Mr Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr Nelson Barry.—Mr Coleman Davies and company, who just recently appeared at the theatre in the Elswick district of this city, have transferred themselves to this place of entertainment, where they are engaged in giving representations of the drama No Escape.

PAVILION.—Managing-Director, Mr Thos. Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr W. H. Boardman.—The clever Japanese wrestler, Yukio Tani, is the leading attraction at this popular theatre this week, and has been exhibiting his prowess to crowds of admirers. He offers to forfeit twenty-one guineas to any wrestler whom he fails to defeat in fifteen minutes, and local amateurs at the sport are also encouraged to do their best against the Jap for suitable rewards. Vesta Victoria has scored another great success at this hall with her amusing songs, and has to respond to numerous encores. F. F. Reynard introduces his mechanical figures with much acceptance. He is a ventriloquist of above the ordinary, and his contributions to the programme are much enjoyed. Messrs Monks and Wood appear in a musical duologue, Mr Nobody, in which they do much that is clever and entertaining; Clive Watts is a dancer of ability; and Stanley and Greenor, banjoists, earn repeated recalls and are warm favourites. The Seddons, comedy jugglers, are very prominent with their eccentricities, and others who appear are Catherine Dahl, prima donna soprano; and Michelle and Landre, acrobatic equilibrists, together with the up-to-date animated pictures. During the week a march written by Mr F. Pickard, leader of the orchestra, entitled "Pavilion," has been played by the band. It is a spirited production, and has been warmly received.

NUNEATON.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter J. R. Bryan.—Messrs Ediscope and Barnum's electric animated pictures and variety company form the attraction here this week. The first item on the variety programme is Clown Ohmy, who gives a clever performance with his dog "Toby." Le Brun and Irene are clever jugglers; Loder Lyons contributes a diverting ventriloquial entertainment; Mons. Edgar performs some marvellous feats on the trapeze. Will Ivor, high stilt performer; W. H. Kay, miniature vaudeville entertainer; W. Bell, mimic; Vera Snowdon, comedienne and dancer; and Jessie Harper, the Singing Lancashire Mill Hand, are all well received.

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Mr Nat C. Goodwin began his annual engagement in this city at the Knickerbocker Theatre last Monday, appearing with success in the character of John Maddox in a four-act play, by I. N. Morris, entitled The Usurper, which was well received by a large audience. Maddox is a wealthy American, who, beginning as a cowboy in the West, has acquired a large fortune, and leased a fine estate in England. During his cowboy days he has met and fallen in love with a beautiful English girl named Beatrice Clive. Later he finds her residing on the property that he has leased in England, and learns that she is being wooed by a scamp named Sir George Trenery. This titled rake has misled a poor girl, and her father, thinking to avenge her, has killed an innocent man, and has been put in prison, from which he escapes, taking refuge in a haunted tower on the estate of John Maddox. Beatrice consents to elope with Sir George Trenery, but Maddox contrives to upset this plan, and to cause Beatrice to be detained with him all night in the tower. The villainous conduct and character of Trenery are exposed—the truth being learned from the escaped convict—and Maddox and Beatrice are happily mated. Perhaps a few quotations from the dialogue may be interesting:—

"Romance in America! Oh! The men spring off a trolley car and ask you to marry them, and you say 'Yes' and 'No' quick—because they've got to catch the next car."

"What! Twenty-two and don't understand women? Why, you ought to know them by heart. It's only when you get along towards the forties that they begin to puzzle you."

"I know that a woman can more easily forgive a strong man who is wrong than a weak one who is right."

"Don't worry; the ghost of Lady Jane will be our chaperon." "She's a mere empty form." "All chaperons are."

MR LOUIS MANN, who has made all New York laugh in German dialect rôles, has a semi-serious part to play in Gordon Blake's comedy The Second Fiddle, which was recently produced at the Criterion Theatre. It is that of Leopold, Baron Von Walden, whose foster-sister, Paula, a Viennese singer, goes to Paris to seek her fortune, but almost starves to death in a garret while she writes brave letters to Leopold telling of her success. Leopold, who has lost his fortune and is now second fiddle in a Vienna orchestra, composes operas which are always rejected, and writes similarly of success that exists only in his imagination. Then he goes to Paris, expecting to find Paula on the topmost round of the ladder of fame. They meet and learn the truth about each other. Paula is penniless, and is about to be turned out of her lodgings. She has an admirer in the Count De Gardinet, supposed to be the composer of a new opera which is about to be produced, and he offers Paula the principal part if she will promise to marry him. Paula consents and makes a success, and the Count claims his bride. But it turns out that the score of the opera was stolen from Leopold, so the Count makes his exit, and Paula and Leopold share a success at last that is not imaginary. In Mr Mann's impersonation of Leopold, humour and pathos are effectively blended and his cleverness has made a success of the play.

"A CHINA DOLL," a comic opera in two acts, has proved successful at the Majestic Theatre, although it was "damned with faint praise" by the critics. The book is by Harry B. and Robert B. Smith, and the music by Alfred F. Aarons. The scenes are laid in Hong Kong, and this locale is represented in two artistic and effective stage pictures, the first showing a public square in Hong Kong, and the second the interior of the porcelain palace of the Mandarin Wing Lee. In this piece CORINNE has made her reappearance after a long absence, and renewed her popularity as Hi See, the pert son of Sing Lo, the Hong Kong chief of police. Pee Chee San (Miss Helen Royton), daughter of Wing Lee, loves Hi See, but she has lost her automatic doll, and until it is found she refuses to marry him. The search for the doll is the burden of the play. Messrs Albert Hart and George C. Boniface, jun., are funny as the two jugglers Hoochee and Hanki respectively. Mr W. H. M'Donald, formerly of the Bostonians, appears with success as Wing Lee, and Mr Arthur Cunningham gives a droll impersonation of Sing Lo. Miss Adele Rafter as Cerise, a Parisian milliner, sings a French song cleverly. One of the best numbers in the piece is called "How to be happy though married."

"THE BARONESS FIDDLESTICKS," billed as a musical satire on society, by George De Long and Emil Bruguière, has won a favourable verdict at that exceptionally fortunate theatre the Casino. A failure at this house would be, indeed, a novelty. The plot may be briefly outlined as follows:—Patrina, a London music hall favourite, is invited by Mashaway, a parvenu, to visit him at his country place. Fearing that his daughters will discover the identity of the visitor, Mashaway calls her the Baroness Fiddlesticks, not knowing that there is such a person in real life. Mashaway's daughters wire the news to a London paper, and the Duchess of Realborough, who knows Mashaway and the real Baroness, comes to investigate. Trouble begins immediately, but Mashaway manages to "square" himself, of course, before the curtain falls. Miss Anna Fitzhugh, as Patrina, is graceful and pretty, and her songs are well rendered. Mr John Henshaw is amusing as Mashaway. Miss Toby Claude has made an emphatic hit in her song, "At a fancy costume ball," and Miss Nella Bergen's fine voice is heard to advantage in several pleasing numbers. The score is melodious, and the piece in its entirety is an attractive entertainment.

MISS FRITZI SCHEFF has scored a decided success at the Broadway Theatre in a comic opera, by Stanislaus Stange and Ludwig Englander, called The Two Roses, the book of which is founded on Goldsmith's comedy, She Stoops to Conquer. Mr Englander has provided a merry, tuneful score, and Mr Stange's book is bright and witty.

"WOODLAND," the current attraction at the New York Theatre, is described as a "musical fantasy of the forest." The book and lyrics are by Frank Pixley and the music by Gustav Luders. The author of the book has contrived a fresh and ingenious conceit, and the costumier has carried out the idea with tasteful fancy. All of the characters are birds or creatures of the forest, and they are prettily distinguished by appropriate head-dresses and costumes. The scene of the first act is King Eagle's Royal Court, and the time is just before sunrise. The birds assemble and Judge Owl lectures some of them for being late. King Eagle has sent for his son, Prince Eagle, to come home and marry Lady Hawk. But the Prince is in love with Miss Nightingale, and refuses to marry Lady Hawk. So he is banished. King Eagle is killed shortly afterwards, and the Electors, the Owl, the Raven, the Rooster, and the Jaybird, meet to choose a successor. The Jaybird votes for himself and is chosen king, but before long a revolution is started by the Robin, who has sent the Dove to bring back Prince Eagle. As Lady Peacock Miss Emma Carus makes a hit in her song "Will you be my little bride?" and as a leader of society wins much applause by her rendering of a satirical effusion in which society is defined as "a number of accidents entirely surrounded by money." Miss Helen Hale, as Jenny Wren, and Mr Harry Bulger, as Blue Jay, have an eccentric song and dance, "Bye-bye, baby," which proves popular, and Miss Hale scores again in a solo, "If you love me, Lindy," with a chorus of blackbirds. The eccentric dancing of Miss Mattie Nichols and Mr John Donahue, representing "a cold bottle and a hot bird," is heartily applauded. The scenic effects are superb and the music is delightful. Woodland was produced by Mr Henry W. Savage.

FAMOUS SCENIC ARTISTS.

MR. GEORGE TWEDDELL.

Mr George Tweddell was born in Yorkshire in 1845. His father was a well-known local writer and author of a book long out of print called "Shakespeare, his Times and Contemporaries," which gained him the friendship of all the leading Shakespearian scholars of that time. One of those, being a very old friend of William Beverly, gave George, his son, an introduction to that gentleman, and in 1869 Mr Tweddell entered the painting-room at Drury-lane, having previous to this been a student at the South Kensington School of Art. After leaving Mr Beverly Mr Tweddell had various engagements in the provinces and at the Royal Alfred in Edgware-road, where he painted the scenery for his first pantomime in 1872. He afterwards worked at the Prince's and Royal, Manchester, and did the pantomime at the Theatre Royal, Sheffield, and the new stock of scenery for the theatre then building at Huddersfield. Mr Tweddell's next engagement was to paint the scenery for Mr R Younge at the Tyne Theatre, Newcastle, including a very elaborate transformation scene. The late John Coleman, seeing Mr Tweddell's work, asked him to paint some scenery for a play he was producing at the old Olympic, and while engaged there Mr C. Holt asked him if he would accept an engagement with Mr J. R. Newcombe, Theatre Royal, Plymouth. Mr Tweddell readily agreed, and looks back to the eight years with Mr Newcombe with much pleasure. Mr Newcombe was very fond of scenic art, and was in the habit of spending a good deal of time in the painting room with his pipe, and, being then one of the oldest managers alive, was full of very interesting reminiscences of the great actors whom he had known well, such as Edmund Kean, Macready, and others. He was fond of sport, and was never absent from a meet even when it was raining; he rode to hounds when eighty, and was a very remarkable old English gentleman. Mr Newcombe used to produce some very elaborate pantomimes, and gave the artist a good chance, for he used to have the scene-painting, &c., commenced in the early part of the year. Mr Tweddell remained with Mr Newcombe until his death in 1887, and on leaving Plymouth a benefit was given to him at the Theatre Royal. He was next engaged by Mr Melville at the Standard, Shoreditch, and remained there for a long period, producing the scenery for many new plays. Mr Tweddell has painted the scenery for over thirty pantomimes, and has had very excellent notices of his work in the press, as well as many compliments from the managers he worked for and the public.

PROVINCIAL PANTOMIMES.

"THE FORTY THIEVES" AT GLASGOW.

Eastern luxury and magnificence are the predominant features of the seventeenth pantomime produced by Messrs Howard and Wyndham at the Theatre Royal, Glasgow, on the 8th inst. Year by year Mr F. W. Wyndham and his able coadjutors have the task set before them of eclipsing their own records, and, if possible, establishing a new one. And again they have risen to the occasion, and for beauty of dressing and elaboration of scenery and mounting The Forty Thieves will take premier rank in their long list of successes, and its popularity will rest chiefly on spectacle. Four scenes in particular stand out as triumphs of stagecraft, viz:—The Market Place of Bagdad, a picturesque set, with all the animation of an Eastern market place in the foreground, and the grim and mysterious heights of the city, rising Lhassa-like, on the hills behind. The next is a set of totally different kind, showing a rocky gorge with a mountain road down which the robbers defile to their cave at the foot. This scene conveys a sense of distance and reality, and the effect is striking. In the scene representing the interior of the cave the artist has given free scope to his imagination and the air of luxury which pervades the scene shows the forty thieves to have been possessed of æsthetic tastes which more than half atoned for the disagreeable aspects of their sordid calling. The fourth scene of particular merit is Ali Baba's Gold Palace, a handsome interior, with here and there a touch of humour indicating Ali's new-rich proprietes. All four scenes are from the brush of Mr T. F. Dunn, resident scenic artist at the Royal, and are quite the best he has yet given us. Three clever scenes are contributed by Mr Stanley Schuter, The Interior of Cassim's House, The Bazaar, and The Exterior of Ali's Palace. Mr T. E. Ryan is represented by the opening scene, The Abode of Sesame. Mr Ernest Glover contributes two scenes, The Road to the City and The Message on the Wires, a cleverly designed cloth with eight choristers as swallows perched upon telegraph wires, introduced as a setting to Miss Annie Purcell's song, "The Airship and the Swallow." The other scenes, three in number, are by Mr T. F. Dunn. In the selection of principals for the pantomime Mr F. W. Wyndham has made some specially happy engagements. Miss Annie Purcell as Ganem is as dainty a principal boy as has been seen here, and her vocal abilities are of the highest order. In San Toy and other of the George Edwardes productions Miss Purcell has already endeared herself to Glasgow playgoers and a pantomime engagement is sure to further enhance her popularity. All her songs were received with acclamation, and for "The Airship and the Swallow," which she had previously popularised in Glasgow, she was accorded several hearty recalls. In "Navaho," "The Troubadour," and "The Big Umbrella" she imparts much piquant humour to the songs. Miss Pearl Lyndon, the Morgiana of the cast, has also made her name in San Toy, and is a plump and pleasing person, with a sprightly humour of her own. She acts with grace and vivacity, and sings her various songs, "Mister Moon," "Good-bye, little girl," &c., with excellent effect, while she is also a dancer of much ability. In the comedians, Mr Tom E. Murray and Mr George Lashwood are hosts in themselves. Mr Murray as Ali Baba is on in every scene, and while he is on the fun is continuous. His humour in the concerted business is always entertaining, but as a patterer on his own he is simply irresistible. He lays no claim to be an operatic vocalist, but his various ditties are all the funnier from the quaint, dry humour he infuses into them. Mr George Lashwood as Abdallah takes what has so long been a "swagger boy's" part, and in style and appearance no one is better suited to it. He has been equipped with a number of strikingly handsome costumes, and makes a debonair Captain of the Forty. He introduces several smart songs, notably his first, "Twenty Girls," and another, "If I were King,' in which the eccentricities of smart society are scathingly criticised. "Angelina Hawk" and "She cost me Seven-and-six" are also likely to be popular. Mr Fred Griffiths, who impersonates the donkey, Ibrahim, made one of the most decided hits of the pantomime and as a clever bit of dumb-show acting was entitled to the enthusiastic applause with which the audience rewarded him. Miss Annie Braddan as the Fairy Sesame sang several fine songs with much taste and expression, the American ballad "Anona" (altered to Morgiana in this case) catching on at once; while a unanimous encore was given to a duet "Love and Hate" sung by Miss Braddan and Mr Henry Claff, the fierce and forbidding lieutenant of the Forty, and a dramatic vocalist of more than average ability, as he has already proved here. Mr Claff's song "Come, my lad, and be a Soldier," was also given with first-rate effect. Mr Percy Clifton as Cassim Babe, and Mr William Benson as his angular wife Cogia, are invaluable in the fun-making, and both prove themselves comedians of considerable resource. Miss Marcelle Chevalier as La Vicomtesse, a French lady, is happily suited in a part which could be extended with advantage to the production. Mr C. St. John Medley gives a clever rendering of the character of an unscrupulous old slave dealer, Shacabac. Mr G. Bruin, in a venerable get-up as Melchisedec, the magician, acts with due impressiveness. The Diamond Troupe of dancers, in some strikingly beautiful costumes, enliven a number of the scenes with neat and graceful dances. The chorus is strong, and vocally and physically attractive, and the musical items receive sympathetic attention from them and the largely augmented orchestra, under Mr Alfred Carpenter, musical director for Messrs Howard and Wyndham in Glasgow, and this gentleman has also shown considerable skill in the selection and arrangement of the elaborate incidental music. The book is, as in previous years, by Mr J. Hickory Wood, and is in that clever author's best vein. Additional lyrics have been contributed by Mr George Arthurs. The beautiful costumes which, as previously mentioned, are on quite an exceptional scale of grandeur, have been executed by Alias, of London, from designs by M. Comelli. The striking electrical effects are by Mr William Morton, machinery by Mr Charles Penman, and properties by Mr George Sutherland and Mr Duncan Wright, all of the Royal staff. The pantomime was received on the opening night with hearty enthusiasm, and Mr F. W. Wyndham and Mr T. F. Dunn were called in front several times, as also was Mr Lynn Norgate, who is again stage-manager for the pantomime, and whose excellent taste and judgment in ensemble are invaluable. At the close Mr Wyndham, in response to calls for a speech, thanked the audience for their hearty welcome to his seventeenth annual, and casually mentioned that his next year's pantomime would be Aladdin, with a cast that includes Mr Harry Lauder, an announcement which elicited loud and prolonged applause. A jocular little speech from Mr Tom E. Murray, a few remarks from Mr George Lashwood, and a graceful word or two of thanks from Miss Annie Purcell finally brought down the curtain. The pantomime went without a hitch from first to last, a fact which reflects infinite credit on all concerned, and the front of the house was looked after with admirable tact by the able manager at the Royal, Mr Percy Humphrys.

"GOOSY GANDER" AT GLASGOW.

On Saturday Mr Rich Waldon produced the twenty-fifth Royal Princess's pantomime, and it was received with great enthusiasm by an audience which filled all parts of the house to overflowing. Adhering to their traditions, extending to a quarter of a century, the management have made a feature of the fact that the pantomime is entirely new and original, and invented and written expressly for the theatre by that popular pantomime writer, Mr Fred Locke, author of all the previous annuals at the Princess's, a record unequalled, we are certain, in the annals of British theatricals. In selecting a subject like Goosy Gander, Mr Locke has had a free hand in the working out of the story, the meagre details given in the old-time nursery rhyme being hardly sufficient to satisfy the requirements of an up-to-date pantomime audience. The story, however, as evolved by the author, includes all the essentials of a Christmas production. We get the unscrupulous Baron Ganderdubbs, and his silly son, Goosey Gander, living in grand style on the estates that by right belong to the village beauty, Rosey Posey. This young lady has been brought up since childhood by the local postmistress and storekeeper, by name Jenny Awthings; and Rosey is courted by a dashing young man, Fred Fearless, in reality a Prince in disguise, seeking a bride who will wed him for love alone, and in this case rewarded with pantomimic liberality, in that he secures youth, beauty, wealth, and happiness in the object of his choice. The story is further assisted in its development by a designing lawyer, a Scotch serving-man of the Baron, and two retainers of the Prince Sunny Jim and Cloudy Tim. Fairy Harmony and Demon Discord likewise lend a hand, the one to help and the other to hinder the course of true love. The book is smartly written, and has many neat hits at the fads and foibles of our local notabilia. It provides a plethora of smart lines for the comedians and all concerned, and, happy augury, is followed with reasonable fidelity by the members of the company. In engaging his artistes this year Mr Rich Waldon has evidently gone on the principle of securing those whose previous successes in this theatre have endeared them to the Princess's patrons. Thus as principal boy we have Miss Lily Morris, Miss Daisy Dormer as principal girl, Mr Dawson Dewick as Dame, Messrs Regan and Ryan as knockabouts, after two years' absence, and Mr John E. Coyle, comedian, for his fourth pantomime season here. All these artistes were accorded enthusiastic greetings, and a kindly welcome was extended to new-comers. Miss Lily Morris as Fred Fearless makes a dashing principal boy, with plenty of aplomb and that happy knack of getting at once on good terms with her audience. Her lines are given with telling effect, and all her songs were encored repeatedly, the audience joining heartily in the choruses of "Blue-Bell" (which is worked up with some beautiful effects in electrically-lit blue-bell lamps), "Navaho," and "Good-bye, little girl, good-bye." Miss Daisy Dormer, who plays Rosey Posey, made a decided hit when she last appeared here, and has distinctly improved in the interval. Her acting is marked by much vivacity and animation, while her dancing is again making her "the darling of the gods." Mr John E. Coyle as Goosy Gander is extremely clever as the soft son of the Baron, and his amusing by-play and facial eccentricities keep the audience in roars of laughter. He is indefatigable at the devising of new business, and in a seaside lodgings scene he was particularly good. Of his songs, the one entitled "As a friend" was specially well rendered. Mr Dawson Dewick is a good dame as Jenny Awthings, and both in dress and action avoids any trace of exaggeration or vulgarity. In all the fun of the pantomime he works well with the other comedians, and sings several clever ditties. Mr Arthur Poole imparts a smart touch of burlesque to the part of the designing Baron Ganderdubbs, and in his various interviews with his son, Goosy, the laughs come fast and furious. Another clever couple are the Prestons (John and George), who appear respectively as Peter Paterson and Simpson Sly. The former has a good Scotch tongue in his "heid," and gives the lines of broad doric throughout his part with excellent effect, and ably sustains the reputation of the Princess's for the cleverness of the exponents of Scotch character in past pantomimes. He contributes a number of songs, and made a happy hit with Miss Daisy Dormer in a burlesque operatic ballad. Mr George Preston as the lawyer, Sly, is the traditional nimble and eccentric lawyer of pantomime. Messrs Regan and Ryan as knockabout comedians have long been favourites with the Glasgow public, and they bring a lot of clever, clean business and smart patter and songs to aid them in their speciality scenes. They were accorded hearty and enthusiastic recalls for all their items. Miss Lottie and Miss Florrie Cora are smart and graceful singers and dancers, and as Ralph the Rattler and Mamie Woodbine prove an attractive couple. Their various coon songs and rag-time dances were given with unfailing spirit, and they soon ingratiated themselves with the first night audience. In modern pantomimes the fairy element grows fine by degrees and beautifully less, but Miss Lulu Bonney as the good genius of the piece, Fairy Harmony, and Miss Leslie Wallace as Discord, the corresponding evil element, are well equipped, in appearance and vocal ability, to make the parts stand out prominently. Misses Vi Stockelle, Lillian Leslie, Vera Thompson Minnie Marshall, Gladys Lester, and Daisy Pavor make an attractive group of village swells and belles, and the last-named young lady contributes a clever solo dance in the Palace scene. The pantomime is in two parts, with five scenes in each, and all the scenery is from the brush of the clever resident artist here, Mr J. C. Bontor. Scene one, the Village of Ganderdubbs, is a charming set, with a pleasant seascape in the distance. Scene three, the Village Store, is a shop interior, with a profusion of display in eatables and 'wearables" that might make Whiteley or Harrod look to their laurels. Scene five, On the Continent, shows a foreign watering-place of gay and animated appearance. Scene six, Ayr Racecourse, is cleverly arranged to give the idea of an attractively designed course, with huge crowds occupying the grand stands, &c. In this scene a neat dance of jockeys is given, which has been arranged by Madame Cavalazzi-Mapleson. Scene seven, My Lady's Chamber, is a pretty interior; Scene eight, Seaside Lodgings, is chiefly notable for the many humorous notices which adorn the walls; and Scene ten, The Prince's Pavilion, is the most ambitious effort of the artist, and makes a Palace scene worthy of the occasion. In this and the Continental scene a special feature has been made of the electrical effects, which are on a most elaborate and costly scale. In both scenes, clever suspended designs are lowered into view, one representing a true lover's knot, and the other the star and decoration of the "Order of the Thistle." Both are specially well carried out, and the theatre's electrician, Mr D. Barbour, deserves the heartiest commendation for his ingenious work. The other scenes in the pantomime include a picturesque cloth representing Burns' Monument at Alloway, the Dame's Cottage, and a view of the district south of Glasgow taken from the heights of the Queen's Park. For all these scenic successes Mr Bontor was given hearty calls on Saturday night. The music, as in former years, has been well looked after by the Princess's chef d'orchestre, Mr Henri Vollmer, who has arranged some striking finales and composed the incidental music to the various scenes. The production was ably stage-managed by W. Mowbray Harle. The handsome dresses, which mark an advance on anything yet seen here, have been supplied by Madame Despréz, of the Boulevard Haussman, Paris; M. Allas, of London; and Miss Binnie, costumier to the Princess's Theatre. The wigs are by Fyans, of Liverpool. Mr Wm. H. G. Hatch and Mr Wm. Stewart, of the resident staff, deserve every credit, the first for the intricate mechanical changes, and the latter for the properties and appointments. Mr Paul Valentine's Eight Heather Belles contribute a number of clever dances, and a large and attractive chorus complete the ensemble. Mr Rich Waldon and Mr Fred Locke, joint supervisors of the production, received an ovation when they appeared in response to an imperative call at the conclusion, and after the enthusiasm had somewhat abated Mr Waldon in a few words thanked the audience for their glorious reception of the Princess's twenty-fifth pantomime. Mr Hugh Murdoch ably looked after the arduous task of finding places for as many of the Princess's patrons as could be accommodated on the opening night. From the first scene onwards the success of Goosey Gander was never in doubt, and the first act terminated amidst unbounded enthusiasm, which brought Mr Waldon on twice to bow acknowledgment. The second act finished to vociferous cheering by an upstanding audience.

"BABES IN THE WOOD" AT ABERDEEN.

The Babes in the Wood, which was produced by Mr Milton Bode on Monday, is the brightest, cheeriest, and most lavishly equipped pantomime that has ever been put on the local stage. In spite of the boisterous weather on the opening night, the house was filled in every part, and the hearty applause that frequently rang out showed how heartily the programme was appreciated. The book is by Mr J. Hickory Wood; it is clever and well sustained, and the company do the rest. In the opening scene Miss Veronica Brady, the principal girl, gives a delightful rendering of the pretty song "Good-bye, little girl, good-bye." Miss Ernestine Desborough, who plays the principal boy, early ingratiates herself with the audience by her skilful rendering of the quaint ballad, "Rain came pitter-patter," which received an enthusiastic encore, and was even more successful with the well known ditty, "Bluebell." In her second effort, "Ill be your dewdrop," Miss Brady again made a most decided hit. The Sisters Morgan, who represent the second boy and girl, put in some excellent work. The vigorous rendering of the duet entitled "Society," with the spirited and extremely clever dancing, was admirably received. The two pretty and clever little girls, Miss Ruby Forbes and Miss Minnie Mace, also had a very gratifying reception. They lilt prettily and dance gracefully. Mr Ernest Sefton, who plays the Baron, is a thoroughly good comedian; and Mr Frank Couch is highly amusing as Buttons. Messrs Woodhouse and Wells go through a lot of very funny business, the duel in the wood, in particular, making the audience rock with laughter. Mr W. P. Sheen's restrained style of acting in the part of the Widow Slapp is thoroughly appreciated. Miss Mabel Murray as the good fairy and Miss Molly Seymour as the bad one play their parts with much good taste. Mention must be made of the amusing "Cock-a-doodle" duet, and the excellent singing of the Albion Glee Quartet. The scenery throughout is most effective, reflecting the utmost credit on Messrs Davies and Storey, and in regard to the dresses it can with truth be said that they show superior artistic taste. Mr H. Wellings, the musical conductor, has his orchestra well in hand, and altogether Mr Bode and his able manager, Mr Hugh Nolan, are to be congratulated on the success of the production. As usual, Mr Henry C. Cavanah, C.A., the popular manager, is indefatigable in looking after the "front of the house."

"FORTY THIEVES" AT MANCHESTER.

This season's first production of pantomime in England is to be recorded of Messrs Dottridge and Longden's The Forty Thieves, which was staged at the Queen's Theatre, Manchester, on Monday, Dec. 12. The subject is one which lends itself to picturesque and gorgeous treatment, and it is equally rich in opportunities for the low comedian, without whom, of course, pantomime would be of no potency at all. It is pleasant to be able to say at once that this production (which, by-the-way, is destined to the road) combines the needful splendour with a plenitude of comic business, and that its run is sure to be successful and satisfactory to the management, the artists, and the public. The action is divided over nine scenes, the first of which is The Market Square of Bagdad. In this the principal characters are introduced, with an outline of the situation between Ali Baba and his brother Cassim, who seeks repayment of Ali's debt. Ali Baba is portrayed with virile humour by Mr James Danvers, who goes forward in the best of spirits to the opportunities of his part, while Mr Forsyth Bruce as Cassim has a style and make-up already indicative of the dramatic effort he is to be asked for in the Cave scene. Messrs Lewis and Robert Oetzman are also in evidence as a pair of policemen who are very much knocked about, and who cause considerable laughter. Mr Cliff Dover's Cogia is on old-fashioned lines, and might be improved by a more extravagant make-up; it is, nevertheless, presented in lively style and with a clear delivery. Hassarac (or, as he is designated on the programme, Lieut. George Augustus Fitz-Hassarac) is perhaps the most notable personage on the scene. The part is played by Mr Ernie Myers, who already crowds so much comic business into his lines, and with such spontaneous gusto and invention, that he looks like developing into the big success of the piece. The part has been written with a scope that takes in almost every incident of the show, and this clever comedian proved vastly amusing in it. Hassarac's courting of Morgiana in the first scene is part of the initial fun. Add to all this the antics of Ali Baba's donkey, Moketta, who conceals the very clever personality of Mr James Dubois, and it will be seen that, in regard to sheer humour, the pantomime makes an exceedingly good start. Of Ganem it must be said that Miss Dolly Elsworthy makes a gracious, vivacious, pleasing, and obviously an experienced principal boy; while Morgiana is presented daintily by Miss Lily Lonsdale, who is the fortunate possessor of a good soprano singing voice. In the scene outside the Robbers' Cave a considerable amount of humour is exploited round a further incident of Hassarac's courting of Morgiana, which the jealous Ganem chances to observe, and which he proposes to requite by means of boxing-gloves, which he invites Hassarac to put on. Ali and his donkey having arrived, the former acts amusingly as one of the seconds, while the latter perches himself on an eminence, beating his hoof upon a clock to signify "time." This boxing act is very funny, thanks to the comic inspiration of Hassarac and Ganem's clever use of the gloves. Not improbably it will make up into one of the most successful interludes of the pantomime. It is followed in due course by a highly effective ensemble of the forty thieves, and the incident of Ali and Ganem's robbery of the cave. The over-loading of the donkey is well managed, the ultimate collapse of the animal over an embankment closing a really capital and satisfactory scene. The subsequent set of the Interior of the Cave is very well put on, and is a good background for a fine display of the dresses and accoutrements of the forty thieves and their fearsome captain, Abdallah. The latter is impersonated by Miss Cissie Kingsley, who is distinguished by a sounding contralto voice, which she employs to good effect. Mr Forsyth Bruce's dramatic effort as Cassim in this scene is worthy of high praise, and was watched with some excitement by the audience.

This quality of performance all round by the company is kept up through the various subsequent scenes, in one of which, The Valley of Blue Bells, Mr James Dubois gives an exceptionally lifelike impersonation of a monkey, for which on Monday he was deservedly recalled. In the same scene we have a speciality sketch, En Voyage, by the Reed Oetzman Troupe of acrobatic comedians, who add largely to the entertainment. In the final grand scene of Ali Baba's Palace of Flowers, moreover, one of the most novel and sensational of variety turns is introduced—namely, the Ichmed Ibrahim Troupe of Bedouin Arabs, who are well described as the greatest bounding marvels of the age, and whose leaping acrobatic fantasia is surely the most spirited and wonderful performance of its kind to be seen on the stage. This speciality is well placed for an admirable wind-up to a pantomime sufficiently full of life and colour to realise the expectations of its producer. Innumerable comic passages are interspersed, and many songs are sung, the most notable of the latter being Ganem's "Good-bye, little girl, good-bye;" a duet, "There's no one in the world like you," by Ganem and Morgiana; Ganem's song and dance, "Girlie;" Morgiana's exceptionally well-rendered "Just Idle Dreams" and a selection from Italian opera; Abdallah's "Shadows on the Blind;" and Hassarac's chant-like ditty about the ills of married life—all by arrangement with well-known London publishers. Our notice would be incomplete without reference to the minor successes of Mr Phil Leonard as Mustapha, Miss May Fallowfield as Zorilda, and Miss Ada Beaumont as Fizzel, one of the lieutenants of the "forty." Mr Joseph L. Barry is responsible for the book; the incidental music has been composed and arranged by Mr Herbert Barnes; Mr John Cunningham takes credit for the painting of the scenery; and the whole is produced by Mr Ernest Dottridge.

WEST KENT AMATEURS.

The West Kent Amateur Comedy Company gave an entertainment at the Parish Church Hall, Ladywell-road, Lewisham, on Wednesday, in aid of the funds of the St. John's Hospital, Morden-hill, Lewisham. The entertainment began at 8 0 o'clock pompt with the overture, after which the curtain was raised on the first item of the triple bill, Daisy's Escape. The piece was well rendered on the whole, the chief honours falling to Miss Grace Aucutt, who made a charming Daisy White, and played with much intelligence. Miss Frieda A Murzetti was also good as Mollie, but Mr Walter L Roberts left much to be desired in the part of Caddel, and would have done better had he been more acquainted with the text. Mr W. Freeland White did fairly well as Tom Rossitter; Mr Alfred G. Garside was capital as Major Mullett; and the small part of Bullamore was safe in the hands of Mr Arthur Cook. In the farce My Lord in Livery first mention should be made of the Spiggott of Mr J. Farries Moss, who caused roars of laughter by his fine performance of this nervous old butler. Mr Alfred Garside did very well as Hopkins, but when he plays this part again it would be well if he did not put himself into so many different attitudes. Mr Robt. F. Bean was a fairly good Lord Thirlmere, but would have improved the character if he had made it a little more breezy. Master Wilfred Aucutt was very good as the page, and spoke his lines well. In Miss Lily Nesbitt we have a clever amateur lady, and she delighted everbody with her charming performance of Sybil, her dancing in the minuet with Mr Robt. F. Bean being much admired. Miss Mary Aucutt and Miss Mildred Forrester gave much assistance to the piece by their good acting of the parts of Laura and Rose. The well-known play of Bubbles, which followed, was finely rendered all round, the parts being evenly played, Mr Walter L. Roberts as Christopher Hogg and Miss Mildred Forrester as Polly appearing to great advantage, while Mr Clarence Brown as Sir Thyngummy Talboy and Mr J. Farries Moss as Bob were also good. Miss Grace Cowell and Miss H. Northfield Brownlee as respectively Adele and Mrs Hogg were very effective. During the evening the company's fine orchestra, under the bâton of Mr Percy Leeds, played a capital selection of music, their rendering of the Grand March from Tannhäuser being much applauded. The stage-management of Mr Geo. Seymour Snowden, under whose direction the plays were produced, was excellent.

A MANAGER'S CLAIM.

In the Westminster County Court on Wednesday, Mr Frank Hayter, late manager of The Cherry Girl touring company, sued Mr C. Lubbock, describing himself as a financial agent, and running several touring companies, for £50, including salary, &c.

Plaintiff stated that he was employed by the defendant as manager of The Cherry Girl company at £4 a-week. Previously he was manager of The Flood Tide at £2 10s. per week. For July, August, and September he received £4 a-week, and on Oct. 3 he was summarily dismissed. The claim he had put in was for three weeks' salary, booking fees at 10s. each, amounting to £20, and £17 0s. 4d., money spent on behalf of the defendant.

Cross-examined, witness denied that he was employed by the Westminster Exploitation Company; they were known as C. Lubbock's companies.

Defendant stated that the plaintiff was dismissed by order of the directors of the Westminster Exploitation Company because they could not get the accounts sent in regularly and to time. There was, he said, £238 11s. 11d. which had not been accounted for. Defendant said the plaintiff knew that he was only acting for the company, and all the business of The Cherry Girl was conducted at the offices of the company in Queen Victoria-street, and the plaintiff was a shareholder of that company. Witness asked for an adjournment to prove his case.

Upon a guarantee that the defendant would pay £30 into court within seven days, Judge Woodfall adjourned the case. Failing the payment in, he should give the plaintiff judgment for the amount claimed, with costs.

Against the same defendant Miss Greta Ravensburg brought a claim, but this was not disputed, and judgment was entered for the plaintiff.

MR H. P. OWEN, who has been business-manager this autumn with Mr Norman M'Owan's Monsieur Beaucaire company, was, at the conclusion of the tour last Saturday evening, presented by Mr F. Stewart Willson, on behalf of the members of the company, with a handsome case of pipes—one for each day of the week. Mr Owen is re-engaged for the spring tour to stage-manage and play Major Molyneux.

MR EDWARD S. MICHEL, the energetic lessee of the Assembly Rooms, Bath, has arranged for a beauty show and promenade concert to be held on Boxing Day.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

"RABELAIS."

Comedy, in Three Acts, in Verse, by M. A. Du Bois, Produced at Bouffes-Parisiens, Dec. 12.

François Rabelais	M. ARMAND BOUR
Angelo Pignon	M. HENRY KRAUSS
Le Chanoine	M. FRANCIS
Le Comte d'Entraves	M. PRADALY
La Comtesse	Madame FERIEL
Dolly	Mdlle. LEBLANC
Dame Rose	Mdlle. PERROT

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, Dec. 15.—In these three capitally-written acts the author shows us Rabelais in altogether a new light—a Rabelais different from the gay, ironical poet such as he is generally portrayed. The story is very simple. The old priest in Meudon having died, Rabelais and Angelo Pignon have come forward as candidates for the post. But the Comtesse D'Entraves, rich and powerful, has sworn that the cure will belong to him who will have prevented her son from marrying Dolly, a young English girl, to whom he has lost his heart. The pedantic Pignon thereupon tries his luck with Dolly by advising her to enter a convent, and threatening her with the worst punishments hereafter. Poor Dolly! Half dead with fright, she is glad when Rabelais comes upon the scene, and in admirable language discourses on Nature and the blessings she bestows upon us. Rabelais is victorious. Better still, Dolly is quite fascinated by the man who speaks so delightfully. Pignon then resorts to trickery. He shows Dolly the manuscript of "Pantagruel," and, of course, points out to her the worst passages therein, and the girl becomes indignant with her hero. Fortunately, Rabelais is able to explain matters to her. In fact, he shows her his inner man. He tells her that under this laughing mask he has vented his rage on all hypocrites, on fools and snobs, on all who exploit the ignorance and weakness of their fellow-creatures. He has performed a work of justice by trying to kill these birds of prey, and he no longer laughs, he cries. This scene is very fine indeed. Dolly has heard enough. She has done for ever with the Count D'Entraves. She loves Rabelais. She swears she will never leave him; and the latter promises to watch over her. And as it is Rabelais who has prevented the Comte D'Entraves' marriage he is appointed to the cure of Meudon. The difficult rôle of Pignon was excellently interpreted by M. Krauss. M. Bour imparted great charm to the sympathetic figure of Rabelais; Mdlle. B. Leblanc was a fascinating Dolly; and Mdlle. Irena Perrot an amusing type of a priest's servant.

"SAINTE-ROULOTTE"

Play, in Four Acts,

by M.M. Jean Lorrain and Gustave Coquot, Produced at the Théâtre Molière, Dec. 10.

General Dourateff	M. CASTELLI
Docteur Rabastens	M. RAMBERT
Terke	M. RENE CRESTE
Comte Sternos	M. HOWEY
Jacques Ménard	M. REGNIER
Mirka Cirbey	Mdlle. LAPARCERIE
Meryenis	Mdlle. RITTER
Princesse Alexiateff	Madame LERICHE

It is very rare that a melodrama comes our way possessing so many good qualities as Sainte-Roulotte. The plot can be briefly told. At Monte Carlo General Douratieff has been attacked in his villa by a mysterious burglar, who, after having stunned him, has robbed him of 80,000f. Mourline, the General's adopted son, has committed the deed, and has not only robbed his benefactor of his money, but has also taken away Mirka, the latter's mistress. On the point of being denounced Mourline commits suicide. But Mirka and her accomplices know that the General has still a large sum of money in his possession, and plot a fresh crime. Having discovered a man who bears a close resemblance to the deceased Mourline, they take him with them, and enter the General's apartment. When the General sees before him the man who already robbed him once and who died since, the shock is too great for him. He falls down and dies whilst the four thieves quietly lay their hands on the rest of the money. The work met with first-class interpretation.

"LE BERCAIL,"

Comedy, in Three Acts, by M. Henry Bernstein, Produced at the Gymnase, Dec. 13.

Etienne Landry	M. TARRIDE
Jacques Foucher	M. GRAND
Voisinot	M. NUMES
Angel	M. MAURICE LUGUET
Boequet	M. ANDRE-HALL
Julien	M. FELIX RICHE
Eveline	Madame SIMONE LE BARGY
Julie	Mdlle. HENRIOT
Rosa	Mdlle. BELLANGER
Louli	Mdl'e. MARIE BURTY
Madame Lormoy	Mdlle. GILBERTE SERGY

Our playwrights have served us up of late so many ladies leaving their homes to follow their lovers that we felt sorry M. Henry Bernstein deemed it necessary to harp upon the same theme. Eveline Landry, the heroine, is a kind of Madame Bovary, less the charm. In fact, Eveline is so exasperating that we consider her husband ought to feel pleased when she informs him that she intends to leave him. But the husband does not at all share our feelings. He loves the woman, and her departure makes him wretched. Eveline belongs to that terrible category of women who believe they are "misunderstood." Etienne, her husband, many years older than his wife, is a bluff, good-natured, even-tempered man, with whom every sensible woman would have been happy. Unfortunately, Etienne lacks poetry. He cannot "spout sentiments," and when Eveline comes across Jacques Foucher, a young poet, she feels she is no longer an incomprise—she has found the man who will understand her. And, having told Etienne that nothing will keep her away from her beloved Jacques, she walks out of the house. In the second tableau, four years have elapsed. Etienne has divorced his wife, who is living with Jacques. The latter has introduced her into what is supposed to be a literary and artistic milieu; and Eveline is sick with her entourage. For the first time we are in sympathy with her, and we begin to wonder where the author has picked up such an experience of the literary and artistic world. It is more like an artistic half-world. We meet there one of Jacques' friends, who offers Eveline a magnificent pearl necklace in the name of a well-known millionaire. A newspaper proprietor introduces a music hall star, who displays more lace flouncings than manners. An elderly lady, having had a dispute with her lover, is severely taken to task by her young married daughter for treating this lover so unkindly. Altogether, a beautiful crowd! Eveline possibly never realised that her husband, although not possessed of a "temperament," had the instincts of a gentleman; but it certainly dawns upon her that below Jacques' poetic nature lurks the cad. After a stormy conversation she leaves him, and tries her luck on the stage, and, in the course of her wanderings, comes to Lyons, where her ex-husband is living. And then—somewhat late in the day—the wayworn creature remembers her child, the little boy, whom she gave little or no thought when she left her home. The boy's old nurse smuggles Eveline into the house late at night, and the pathetic scene is interrupted by Etienne entering and finding his divorced wife kissing little Georges. The explanation between Etienne and Eveline is also of a rather stormy nature. The woman prays for forgiveness, and good old Etienne, who has never ceased to love her, finally consents to take her back. The crushing weight of the piece rests on the shoulders of Madame Le Bargy, who gives us not a sympathetic but a highly interesting Eveline. She acted the part superbly. In M. Tarride the rôle of the husband gained much in importance. With infinite tact this clever artist portrayed this good-natured man, carefully avoiding ever becoming grotesque. M. Grand made the most of the ungrateful rôle of Jacquer, and Mdlle. Bellanger, Mdlle. Henriot, and Mdlle. Marie Burty completed an excellent cast.

MISS BATEMAN'S PUPILS.

The parish of St. Cuthbert, Earl's-court, is indeed fortunate in having Miss Bateman (Mrs Crowe) as a parishioner. Two most successful performances were given by her and her pupils on the afternoon and evening of Dec. 5, which must have materially lessened the debt on the hall, for which object they were given. Miss Bateman's special gifts for training pupils for the stage are too well known to need further comment here, but one may be at least allowed to congratulate her on her successful method. The chief item of the afternoon was several scenes from Romeo and Juliet, a performance of really remarkable achievement. Miss Gladys Vanderzee, by kind permission of Mr Tree, was a most romantic and convincing Romeo, while Miss Rita Jolivet, by kind permission of Messrs Harrison and Maude, was not only young and beautiful enough for the part, but showed really remarkable dramatic power and feeling in her interpretation of Juliet's precocious Italian temperament. When we say that Mrs Crowe herself played the Nurse, we have said that it was played to perfection. The Friar Laurence of Mr Basil Watt was very dignified, and his elocution was beautiful. The other characters were adequately filled, Miss Leah Bateman-Hunter being a rather youthful Peter. Two very clever sisters, Miss Muriel Gough (soprano) and Miss Helen Gough (violin) provided a delightfully artistic musical interlude, and the performance concluded with a scene from Mrs Gaskell's Crauford, a card party, which gave an opportunity to several of Miss Bateman's pupils to distinguish themselves, which Miss Gertie Lloyd and Miss Hilda Scholes noticeably did, the Peggie of Miss Kathleen Harrison being delightfully fresh and rural. The evening performance was even better than that which preceded it. "King Cophetua and the Beggar Maid"—a romantic poem by an unknown author—gave an opportunity to Miss Gertie Lloyd of which she took ample advantage. She played the little maid with a charming simplicity and reality which won other hearts than King Cophetua's. Miss Vanderzee's King Cophetua was all that it should have been—brave, noble, and, above all, a lover; while Miss Viola Holland as Gaspar completed a very pretty picture. The Misses Gough again provided the musical interlude, and delighted their audience by their beautiful singing and playing. The feature of the evening was, perhaps, a scene from King John, played excellently by Mr Basil Watt, Mr Gray, and Miss Leah Bateman-Hunter. This little granddaughter of Mrs Crowe has inherited much of her family's great gifts, and it would be hard to find a more appealing or truly dramatic Arthur than was represented by the juvenile. Her performance went straight to the hearts of those who heard her. The entertainment ended with an amusing little play by Miss Cameron called The Kleptomaniac, which amused the audience considerably and gave another opportunity to the various young ladies who acted in it to do their best in their various parts. Altogether Miss Bateman is to be much congratulated on two remarkably good performances.

MR. CHARLES J. ARCHER'S BENEFIT.

On Saturday a matinée was given at the Theatre Royal, Croydon, for the benefit of Mr Charles J. Archer, formerley lessee of that house, who through severe illness and advanced age is unable to follow his profession. The entertainment was a dramatic and variety one, and was under the patronage of his worship the Mayor of Croydon, Alderman Allen, Alderman Sir Frederick Edridge, Alderman N. Page, and many other influential gentlemen. As the theatre was generously lent for the occasion by Mr Samuel James, and the entertainment was provided free of charge, the whole of the receipts go to Mr Archer. We were pleased to see Mr Willie Cousins, so long associated with Mr Archer as acting-manager, taking an active part in the benefit arrangements.

The variety items on the programme were a song, Miss Isa Bellingham; American recitation, Mr Austin Melford; descriptive song, Mr Herbert Shelley; recitation, Mr Henry Bedford; burlesque lecture, Mr Harry Paulton; recitation, Mr Thomas Kingston; and turns by Walton and Lester, comedians; Sadie Simpson, serio and dancer; Harry Phillips, comedian; Cliff Ryland, comedian; Lilie Mackney, violin solo; Ethel Ryland, comedienne and dancer; and Mrs H. E. Rickett and Miss Winnie Love, ballad vocalists.

The third act of the drama, The Sins of Her Childhood, was well received, and Mr and Mrs Blake Adams appeared with considerable success in a dramatic episode entitled The Last Pitch. Another interesting item was a cleverly written drametta, by Albert Ward, entitled

"A NOBLE REVENGE."

Richard Tremayne	Mr ALBERT WARD
Beatrice	Miss FRANCES ALLEYNE

The story tells of an author who, after struggling for years for fame, has a play accepted at last, when he is almost dying. The plot of his piece contains his own history, including his desertion by his wife. The actress who undertakes the part of the wife in the drama is the author's wife in reality. He meets her at rehearsal, and they are reconciled, the author afterwards dying from his privations. Mr Albert Ward and Miss Alleyne sustained the two characters in the play most expressively. Another novelty was a one-act piece, by Arthur Shirley, entitled

"BEN."

Jasper	Mr ALFRED HOLLES
Ben	Mr BERNARD COPPING
Doctor	Mr W. KYBURN DELLAR
Phil	Mr C. WINDERMERE
Minnie	Miss ISA BELLINGTON

Ben is a faithful old servant who, finding his master's fortune has been lost by the breaking of a bank, places his own savings in his master's safe. The latter is too ill to be told of his misfortune, and Ben is rewarded by a handsome and unexpected legacy. Mr W. Kyburn Dellar and Miss Isa Bellington acted excellently as the Doctor and Minnie, the daughter of the invalid; and Mr C. Windermere was genuinely droll as Phil; Mr Bernard Copping and Mr Alfred Holles deserving credit as Ben and Jasper respectively.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

The orchestral concert at the Royal College of Music on Tuesday last introduced a novelty in the shape of a composition by Fritz Volback, called "Raffael," suggested by the three famous Madonnas of the great painter—"The Madonna di Foligno," "The Madonna del Granduca," and "The Madonna di San Sisto." As a matter of fact, it was "programme music" carried to its utmost limits, but it was decidedly interesting and artistic, and made such a good impression that the composer was recalled no less than five times after conducting his own work with great skill. We are not strong advocates of "programme music" as a rule, but in this instance we cannot withhold a tribute of praise to a gifted musician. Other items were included, making the concert unusually attractive. Beethoven's magnificent overture "Prometheus" was splendidly played by the band, and taken correctly as to tempo by Sir Charles Stanford, and the fine Serenade for orchestra by Brahms was given in admirable style, tone, and execution being alike worthy of commendation. Mr Isidore Epstein played the "Polish Fantasia" of Paderewski with much brilliancy, but the music is too fragmentary to make the effect probably intended by the composer.

MR ARTHUR CARLTON will, on Boxing Day, produce at the Ealing Theatre, with the aid of his energetic manager, Mr Fred S. Jennings, his first Christmas pantomime of Aladdin, with a company of 150 artists.

PRESENTATION TO FRED MORGAN.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

On Tuesday morning the public testimonial to Mr Fred Morgan, the manager of the Theatre Royal, Norwich, took place. It was presented to him by the Mayor, Mr H. L. T. FLOWERS, J.P., at the Maid's Head Hotel. It consisted of a handsome silver cup weighing 50oz., an illuminated address, and a purse of gold. The cup bore the following inscription:—Presented to Fred Morgan on retiring from the management of the Norwich Grand Opera House by the mayor (Mr H. L. T. Flowers), the sheriff (Mr H. L. Clarke), and leading citizens of Norwich." The address is in a handsome oak frame; and to is appended a list of subscribers. The border is brightened with the City Arms, a view of the Opera House, and Mr Morgan's monogram worked in colours. Among those present were the Mayor and Sheriff, Mr F. O. Taylor, J.P., D.L., Mr Bosworth Harcourt, Councillor F. W. Fitt, Mr E. Burgess (hon. secretary), Mr Fred G. Shields (hon. treasurer), Mr G. Baxter, Mr A. S Wild, Mr E. S. Parker, Mr Louis Morgan, Mr W. L. Burgess, and several others. The Mayor occupied the chair, and was supported by the Sheriff, who most hospitably entertained the company.

The MAYOR, in opening the proceedings, said it was a great source of pleasure to him to join in a movement which had been set on foot to show public appreciation of the life-long work of Mr Fred Morgan in furtherance of the histrionic art. Continuing his Worship said:—There are really few good theatrical managers in the provinces, and even where you find them, as in the case of Mr Morgan, good as a caterer, and good as a man and a citizen, they have a difficult task to perform in maintaining the success of the drama. Mr Morgan has given us the best of his services for the past quarter of a century, and has worthily upheld the dramatic art in the city of Norwich. There are hundreds and thousands of citizens who can scarcely be called playgoers at the present time, who yet have pleasant recollections of the old house in Theatre-street. I trust that in the congenial atmosphere of the old home at the Theatre Royal Mr Morgan will have greater success. Not only do I wish him this as an individual, but I recognise it would be a loss to the city and neighbourhood if we failed to maintain the drama in our midst. I have been asked by the subscribers to hand Mr Morgan a slight testimonial of their appreciation as an acknowledgment of his devoted work in the past, and as an earnest of their good wishes for the future. The testimonial consists of a silver cup, an illuminated address, and a purse of gold, and I have the honour, my good friend Mr Morgan, to ask your acceptance of these gifts, not only for their intrinsic worth, but more especially for the friendly feeling they represent, and from the bottom of my heart I wish you good health and good luck.

Mr FRED MORGAN, who spoke under the influence of evident emotion, said he hardly knew how to express his thanks for the kindness which was expressed in this testimonial. He had prepared a speech intended to convey his thanks, but it had all disappeared. He could only say that he was deeply grateful to Mr Edward Burgess, Mr F. G. Shields, and the Editor of the Eastern Daily Press, and also to the Press in general, for the kindness it had shown him throughout many years. He was deeply conscious that a great kindness was being shown him; and he could only assure the subscribers that after the curtain had fallen on his life the presents he had received would be deeply treasured by his family.

Mr BOSWORTH HARCOURT gave some interesting details of the "New" Theatre Royal, which was opened on Easter Monday, 1826, taking the place of an older one on the same or adjoining ground. Mr George Smith was the manager, in whose hands and those of his family the management remained for many years. The Smiths were very highly esteemed in the city and county, and conducted the theatre in every way to the satisfaction of their patrons. Each year bespeaks from the Mayor, the Sheriffs—there were two Sheriffs then—the High Sheriff, the Colonel and officers of the garrison, the wine clubs, the Board of Guardians, and private individuals of standing went to make up a "season" of theatrical amusements and instruction; for the old plays and players did educate as well as amuse. Nearly twenty years after this opening a Smith still reigned—George Smith, the younger, but very shortly. Mr W. J. Abington for a time took the reins. He was an M.A. of Cambridge, and, like the Smiths, was an occasional actor, but he only had the house one season, and Mr Davenport took it over. He had come from another circuit, and exploited his talented daughter; and he (Mr Harcourt) thought she must have been the first actress he had ever seen. Davenport was said to be, on the authority of John Forster, the original (of course burlesque) of Dickens' immortal Crummles. It was interesting to mention that in this year he found the benefit of Miss Hartley and Mr Gilbert. This Miss Hartley was the Mrs Gilbert whose death in America, at the age of eighty-four, was announced but a week or so since. In 1848 that splendid actor Charles Dillon, for a season—a disastrous one—took the theatre. Joseph Clarance during the previous year had been the low comedian in Davenport's company, and he continued on with Dillon, and eventually, on Oct 7, 1850, became the actual manager. He was the Clarance Holt of later days, and after some years of successful management yielded the reins to William Sidney, who also was a resident here, where his children were born and educated. That brilliant actor, dear old John F. Young, leased and governed for three or four years, and after the temporary government of the theatre by Mr Chaplin, and at times others, Mr Fred Morgan—first acting for William Sidney—eventually bloomed out as the responsible and only manager of the old house. The stock company system gradually faded and died. Christmas pantomimes also glided from the scene, and the travelling one-piece company system became the vogue. Norwich was an early, though not the earliest, convert to the new scheme—now the accepted and only method throughout the country. Amongst those who had trod the old boards in Theatre-street since the opening of the house in 1826 were Macready, Charles Kemble, Edmund Kean, Miss Foote, Miss Paton, Mesdames Vestris and Celeste, Charles Mathews, Tyrone Power, Ellen Tree, Charles Kean, and many others. For a long series of years the Norwich boards—the boards of the dear old house standing that day, and to which Mr Morgan returned, with the very best wishes of his friends—had echoed to the tread of almost every actor and actress of repute from the London stage. They all wished Mr Morgan well and had great hopes of his future. His career was not ended, but only making a fresh start—laden with experience dearly bought, and always the more valuable. As disinterested friends they joined in this heart-felt testimonial to his services in the past, feeling sure that in the experiences of that past he would read the lessons that taught them all, and accept the good wishes and the candid expressions of the feelings of his friends.

Mr F. O. TAYLOR in an eloquent speech wished Mr Morgan in the future a continuance of the success which he had long enjoyed at the old Theatre Royal.

Mr GEORGE BAXTER and the Sheriff of NORWICH having added a few cordial good wishes for Mr Morgan's future,

Mr FRED FITT said that he also, as well as his partner (Mr Bostock), desired the welfare of Mr Morgan on his return to the Theatre Royal.

Some further speeches followed, in all of which the most cordial feeling towards Mr Morgan was displayed, and the proceedings ended with a vote of thanks to the Mayor for presiding, and to the Sheriff for his hospitality, proposed by Mr Edward Burgess and seconded by Mr F. G. Shields.

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

THE GRAND.

On Monday, Dec. 12, the Drama in Five Acts, entitled
"THE WORLD."

For the concluding weeks of the dramatic season Mr George Davey has secured an excellent attraction in Mr John Asche's company, presenting the above drama. Mr Asche has spared no expense in mounting the play, as a result we get several very elaborate scenic effects, which thoroughly deserved and secured appreciative applause from the audience. He has got together, too, a very hardworking and capable company, who are whole-hearted in their endeavours to secure a general success for the production. Mr Stuart Lomath, who appears as Sir Clement Huntingford, gives a vigorous and thoroughly satisfactory performance, his interpretation of the rôle finding great favour with the audience. Mr Francis Hawley in his original part of Harry Huntingford plays the heavy rôle with distinction and finish, and is altogether to be commended. Mr Bernard J. Lieli as Moss Jewell portrays a Hebrew diamond merchant in a humorous vein, and causes amusement. Mr Jackson Hayes as Martin Bashford submits one of the best performances of the evening; intense and particularly effective, his acting in the last scene of the second act is particularly good. Mr Angus Alexander as Langley is admirable; Mr Edward Beecham as Owen scores in a small part; and Mr Craige as Blackford is efficient. Miss Georgette Thierry as Mabel Huntingford is quite excellent in the rôle, and deserves congratulations on a successful embodiment. Miss Beatrice Fay acts with sound judgment, and deserves commendation for a good performance. Miss Ellen Owen as Miss M'Tabb presents an amusing study of an elderly lady of vivacious temperament. The remaining members of the company are adequate. It is worthy of mention that two scenes in the play were excellently worked, the first being The Destruction of the Ship, and the second being The Raft on the Seas. Miss Ida Irving dances an acceptable pas seul in the last act.

THE PAVILION.

On Monday, Dec. 12, the Drama, in Five Acts, by Sutton Vane, entitled
"IN SIGHT OF ST. PAUL'S."

For the last week of the dramatic season the management of the Pavilion have put forward a revival of Mr Sutton Vane's stirring play In Sight of St. Paul's, which on Monday evening was received with every sign of satisfaction by an audience who followed the five acts of this exciting story with breathless interest. Mr Ashley Page thoroughly maintained his reputation by his vigorous and convincing exposition of Tom Chichester, and Mr James C. Aubrey is powerfully effective as the scheming Captain Gridstone. Mr Edwin Palmer—well made up—gave a clever impersonation of Mr Chichester, and Mr Fred Withers as Gillie Fletcher supplied a fund of quiet humour which was much appreciated. Mr Frank Lister, who made his first appearance this season, gave an excellent character study of Fretley Burnside. That the Pavilion audience do not forget their favourites was evidenced by the loud applause with which Mr Lister was received on making his first entrance. Mr Dudman Bromwich was a very efficient Harry Chichester, and Robert Treacher had adequate treatment at the hands of Mr Alfred Ibberson. Mr Harry Barford was in his most genial and humorous vein and revelled in the opportunities afforded him in the part of Jim Palfrey, while Mr Harry Bristow did good work as Dennis Sheridan. Mr Fred Bousted was distinctly successful as Inspector Clarkson, and Mr Roland Ryley a creditable Prescott. Miss Marion Denvil was natural and sympathetic as Aileen Millar, and her acting won for her the warm interest of the house. Cynthia Dell, known as "the Panther," was portrayed with expression, directness, and vigour by Miss Valerie Crespin, and a charming rendering of Grace Chichester was given by Miss Daisy Scudamore, while Miss Tina Mavro was entertaining as Becky Vetch. Miss Kitty Cardigan was dainty and attractive as Rose, and Miss Evelyn Maxwell was fairly spirited as Beatrice Moreland. The drama is admirably stage-managed, and the scenic arrangements are all that can be desired. With the close of the stock season, special commendation must be given to Mr Fred Bousted for the excellent way in which he has stage-managed, being ably assisted by Mr Harry Bristow, and to Mr Charles Aves, the talented musical director, for the high state of efficiency of the orchestra. Thanks are due to Mr Fred Brown for his uniform courtesy and kindness, and the many departments are skilfully supervised by the vigilant managing director Mr Isaac Cohen. The theatre re-opens on Boxing Day with Dick Whittington.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, Dec. 12, the Drama, in Four Acts, by the late F. A. Scudamore, entitled
"THE BEAUTIFUL AVENGER."

Every success attended the visit of Messrs Scudamore and Richmond's company to the Royal West London Theatre this week. Each of the four acts of this sensational play abound with original and thrilling realism That talented actor Mr Algernon Syms imbued the part of Cyrus Telford with those quiet and effective methods only developed by actors of Mr Syms' ability. Mr Lionel Gillet portrayed the oily old scoundrel Zadox Foxbane with faithful clearness, and Mr William Diamond as his son Herman distinguished himself well. As Jim Jahms Mr Arthur Richmond, in a capital make-up, worked with unflagging energy and zeal, whilst Mr William Ames as Peregrine Patch was full of life and go, pleasing his audience greatly. In the dual-rôle of Vashti Volta and Victor Stanhope Miss Nannie Meade was most effective, playing with that touch of artistic skill that is always so welcome. Delightfully frank and boyish was Miss Cissy Podmore as Baldie Mansfield, and Miss Lilian Hawkins was decidedly amusing as Arabella Binks. Miss Mabel Scudamore quite deserves the warmest of praises for her Edna Volta by reason of the marked graceful pathos with which she endowed this very trying part. All the minor characters were carefully played, and the scenery and effects were most elaborate.

THE BRITANNIA.

On Monday, Dec. 12, the Drama, in a Prologue and Four Acts, by J. A. Campbell, entitled
"THE SIN OF HER CHILDHOOD."

A year ago this drama was produced at the Theatre Royal, Accrington, and since then it has been toured in the provinces with successful results. The story is one likely to appeal to the average playgoer and to arouse his interest as the plot develops. The leading female character is Mary Haysel, the daughter of a farmer, who has married twice. His second wife is a drunkard. Through his neglect, her little girl, Nancy, sustains an injury. By medical advice the farmer decides to send the child abroad as the best method of restoring her health; but in order to meet the extra expense he has to take his son, Stephen, away from college. The young man resents this, and induces his little sister, Mary, to place poison in a basin of gruel prepared for Nancy. Mary is detected and is sent to a reformatory, where she undergoes punishment for "the sin of her childhood." Here she meets the Rev. Alan Grey, who proves to be a friend in need, and eventually asks her to become his wife. The drama has been excellently played by the members of the Britannia stock company. Miss Rose Ralph succeeds in giving a telling embodiment of Mary Haysel, deeply repentant of her early sin and eager to atone. Her acting in the emotional scenes is particularly effective. Miss Mara Collings deserves warm praise for her careful and wholly artistic study of Maria Haysel. Mr Chas. A. East does good work as Farmer Haysel, whose son Stephen has a thoroughly capable exponent in Mr Frank Harding. Mr Arthur Burne depicts the Rev. Alan Grey, the vicar of Northfield, in a manner that gives complete satisfaction; and Mr W. S. Hartford finds scope for his ability in the rôle of Captain John Thornton. Mr Tom Wallis is an amusing representative of Barney O'Reilly, a rollicking, good-natured Irishman, and Miss Maria Wright does well as Eliza Muggins, Barney's sweetheart. Miss Nellie Baker scores as Hannah Spry, the street arab, who proves a staunch friend to the repentant heroine. Miss Marjorie Villis appears as Little Mary in the prologue and as Little Eric Dugdale in the play, acting both parts in an intelligent and engaging fashion. Mr Chas. Groves embodies a police-sergeant, and other parts are entrusted to Messrs C. Roberts, Fred Groves, John Bury, and Arthur Green. The varieties this week include Mr Lester King, the popular baritone, who sings popular songs which are pictorially illustrated. Miss Agnes Molteno, vocalist, gives a pleasing rendering of "Killarney," and Mr Charles Ridgwell, eccentric comedian, makes a hit with his ditty, "The Peckham Fat Boy." The programme concludes with the laughable sketch What? Another? in which Mr Chas. A. East takes the leading part. Active preparations are in progress for the Christmas pantomime, which will be produced on Boxing Day.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, Dec. 12,
"THE BREED OF THE TRESHAMS."

Mr Martin Harvey and company are appearing this week in John Rutherford's exciting drama The Breed of the Treshams. This play, if not a great one or a startlingly original one, is a splendid vehicle for the exhibition of Mr Martin Harvey's wonderful talent and power in a part of the Sydney Carton type, where unflinching heroism and unfaltering loyalty towards a woman are required of one whose name has become a by-word of reproach and contumely. The period of the Civil War is a favourite one with dramatists, as it lends itself so admirably to picturesque treatment and the weaving of pretty romances. John Rutherford's play, however, is more of a grim tragedy, lit by sardonic flashes of humour and eked out with a very ordinary little love story, the roses of romance being very sparingly distributed. Yet it affords Mr Martin Harvey the opportunity for presenting a most poetical, engrossing, and admirable study of character as the staunch scoundrel and valorous traitor, Lieutenant Reresby, "the Rat." He first gives us a taste of his quality as a swashbuckling, hard-swearing, stick-at-nothing renegade. Then, with a glimpse of pure womanhood and a pretty face, the heart of gold in him is resurrected, and he is faithful even unto death in his self-imposed martyrdom. In his blustering, bullying manner, as in his tenderer moments, Mr Martin Harvey is entirely admirable, and they must be stony hearts and inartistic minds indeed which are not moved by his pathos. Miss N. De Silva excels in the small part of Batty, "the Rat's" faithful retainer, and contrives to invest the part with much charm and realism. Mr Charles Glenny has seldom had a more thankless part than that of the craven cur and cowardly poltroon, Colonel the Hon. Clement Hungerford, a man as despicable and sans-redeeming feature as we remember to have met in the higher walks of stageland. It speaks volumes for his ability that his handling of the part can evoke nothing but praise. Mr Percy Anstey, on the contrary, has a most agreeable and congenial part as the brave and steadfast Colonel Sir Henry Curwen, and he shows to great advantage in the part. Mr Milton Rosmer is good as Cornet the Hon. Francis Tresham, a part which is not very prominent, but pleasant throughout. Miss Coleridge makes a very sweet and gentle Margaret Hungerford; Miss Edith Coleman is an attractive and elegant Mrs Bagshaw; and Miss Bessie Elder is a satisfactory Helena Pierrepoint. Mr Albert E. Raynor, made up like an inquisitorial Don, is appropriately unbending and relentless as Viscount Dorsington; and in small parts Messrs Gilbert Yorke, Reeve Denbigh, P. Alexander, and C. J. Cameron, among others, call for special mention. The piece was received with intense enthusiasm, and in response to reiterated cries of "A speech, a speech," Mr Martin Harvey at length said, "I thank you for the enthusiasm with which you have received my play. There is no audience like a London audience, and we are all glad to be among you once again."

THE CAMDEN.

On Monday, Dec. 12, the Play, by A. W. Pinero, entitled
"LETTY."

Mr Charles Frohman's company in Letty is the attraction here for the last week of the autumn dramatic season. Mr H. B. Irving and Miss Irene Vanbrugh are appearing in their original characters, a fact which lends additional interest. Mr Pinero's play has been thoroughly discussed many times since it was first produced, and whatever faults it may have it will ever remain one of the finest examples of his work that he has given us. Mr Pinero is generally lucky in the choice of exponents of his plays, and there is no doubt that no finer Nevill Letchmere could be wished for than Mr H. B. Irving, who handles the part in a truly admirable and artistic manner. His acting in the fourth act of the piece was superb, and to say that he reminded one of his distinguished father at times is, perhaps, the greatest compliment one can pay him. It is a remarkably fine study throughout. Miss Irene Vanbrugh is none the less deserving of praise for her clever handling of Letty. Miss Vanbrugh has a fine grip of the character, and her rendering has greatly improved since she was seen in it in the West-end. She has added many little touches here and there which go to make the finished picture. Bernard Mandeville is well played by Mr Scott Craven. Mr Leslie Victor is delightful as the photographer, Perry; while Neale and Ordish are capitally acted by Messrs Charles Troode and Tom Heslewood. Miss Eleanor Souray deserves high praise for her delineation of Hilda Gunning. It is a decidedly clever character study. Miss Beatrice Forbes-Robertson is likewise to be congratulated on her capital rendering of Marion Allardyce, a somewhat difficult part to play. Miss May Blaney makes a fascinating Mrs Crosbie. Mr T. S. M'Causland Stewart is seen to advantage as Ivor Crosbie, and Mr Vernon Steel is an acceptable Coppinger Drake.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Dec 12, the Sensational Drama, by William Hibbert, entitled,
"WHEN WOMAN HATES."

Miss Nettie Ware and the members of her company who are appearing this week at the Dalston Theatre in the drama entitled When Woman Hates, work hard to ensure an amount of success, which in the end, speaking generally of the performance is attained. Miss Nettie Ware appears in the principal character, that of Cora Daintry, an adventuress, who is known in the story of the play as "the fiend with the angel face." The part is effectively sustained. This revengeful lady has several victims, some of whom meet with actual death at her hands, being either enemies or "in her way;" others have trouble heaped upon them. Among the latter is Lieutenant Fred Rokeby, R.N. He has once been loved by Cora, but falling to succumb to her charms, the woman hates both him and his wife Marie, and persecutes them in a dastardly manner. Mr J. Petley plays Lieutenant Rokeby, and Miss Jennie Hughes is his faithful and patient wife. Miss Ivy Henigan gives a most intelligent rendering of Nellie, the little daughter of the young couple. Mr William Yates is General Sir Henry Rokeby, who is murdered by Cora Daintry in the first act. Miss Louise Brandon does all that is required in the part of Edith Rokeby, who follows wrong paths and tries hard to make amends. Mr Oscar Adye as Godfrey Lawton, an accomplice of Cora's, who is eventually stabbed by her, acts with care and effect. Mr George Leaver as Col. Hiram R. Vancutson, an American millionaire, is a popular character. The serious side of the drama is relieved by some good comedy work by Miss Grace Cannon as Mrs Sally Potts, Miss Ida Cunard as her daughter, Miss Sybil Newman as "Thirsty Meg," Mr Will Percy as P.C. Patrick O'Brien (a really amusing part), Mr R. N. Stephenson as Alphonse Picolot, and Mr Eric Campbell as Bill Smasher—the latter being in every sense a striking character. The cast also includes Mr James Hannam, Mr Richard Hodden, Mr C. Watson, Miss Agnes Bertram, Miss May Jameson, Mr H. Brown, and Mr R. Seaton.

THE KING'S, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Dec 12, the Romantic Play, by Robert Neilson Stevens and Lyall Swete, entitled
"MISS ELIZABETH'S PRISONER."

As a fitting close to a very popular dramatic season, Mr Mulholland has produced the latest success from the Imperial Theatre, in which Mr Lewis Waller lately made such a strong impression. The company engaged for the representation is quite equal to its task. Mr Thomas Kingston, an actor of experience and ability, gives a breezy and dashing impersonation of Captain Henry Peyton. An excellent rendering of the mean-spirited and craven-hearted John Colden is supplied by Mr Elliot Ball. Mr George Mallett makes a capital Mr Valentine, and Mr Tom Taylor is a very capable Black Sam. Major Murphy and Lieut. Bland are exceedingly well played by Mr J. Harold Carson and Mr Roland Daniel. Mr Keith Fraser is a soldierly Captain Massey. Miss Eily Malyon, with whom it is delightful to renew an acquaintance, gives a charming depiction of the loving but wilful Miss Elizabeth Philipse. Mistress Sarah Williams has a decidedly attractive representative in Miss Alys Rees, and Miss Edith Elton is a bright Molly Edwards. The small part of Brenda is well sustained by Miss Marguerite Cellier. The scenery, costumes, and effects are very creditable.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.

"CHARLEY'S AUNT."

Increasing years seem in no way to detract from the vigour or vitality of Charley's Aunt. Mr Brandon Thomas's phenomenally successful farce made a welcome reappearance at the Alexandra Theatre on Monday, where it was played to a full house and an incessant accompaniment of laughter. The rôle of Lord Fancourt Babberley is, in the present case, entrusted to Mr George Desmond, and he does not fail to avail himself to the full of the many opportunities of scoring with which the part abounds. An exceedingly bright and breezy embodiment of Jack Chesney comes from Mr C. B. Keston, who proves himself a clever and alert light comedian, and Mr Wylie Thompson appears as Charlie Wykeham. A very finished and artistic portrait of Sir Francis Chesney is drawn by Mr F. Lumsden Hare; and the Stephen Spettigue of Mr Guy Lane, if a little too genial in appearance, is sufficiently repulsive in manner. Mr Henry W. Brame contributes a clever and characteristic sketch of the college scout Brassett; Mrs Leslie Oswell is a dignified and imposing Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez; and the trio of young ladies, Kitty Verdun, Amy Spettigue, and Ela Delahay, have charming and capable representatives in Misses Frances Ruttledge, Iris Banfield, and Marion Fitzgerald. The longer piece is preceded by Mr Brandon Thomas's one-act play Fourchette and Company, in which the author himself appears, supported by Mr Henry Adnes and Miss Ruth Suffield.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, Dec. 12, the Play, by David Belasco, entitled
"THE DARLING OF THE GODS."

For the closing item of the season, prior to the house being closed for the final rehearsals of Mr Purcell's second Marlborough pantomime, an important engagement is being filled by Mr Tree's Company. It is almost needless to say the company is an excellent one, and the result is an entirely satisfactory and effective performance. The scenery, too, contributes much to the success, and, considering the elaborate nature of all the settings, Mr Hubert Druce, stage-manager, and his able assistant, Mr Victor H. Leslie, did themselves credit. Miss Francis Dillon as Yo-San has excellent opportunities of distinguishing herself, and, despite a very bad cold, achieves a very great success. The strikingly effective change from the light and gay girl of the first part of the play to the intensely emotional woman of the later portion of the play imprints upon her impersonation the stamp of an actress of real ability. Mr Robert Pateman, whom we saw here last as Uncle Cesaire in Sapho, displays his customary power in the rôle of Zakkuri, the scheming, torturing, murderous Minister of State. It is a masterly performance. A corresponding success is achieved by Mr Douglas Gerrard, who enacts the rôle of Prince Kara. He delivers his lines with eloquence, his impersonation being impressive and picturesque. Mr Ivan F. Simpson is sufficiently austere as Saigon; and Mr Arthur Vezin touches lightly the part of Tonda Tanji. In addition to his onerous duties as stage-manager, Mr Hubert Druce essays the rôle of Kato, the fisherman, and his portrayal is a notable feature of the performance. Mr Douglas Payne contributes largely to the success by his impersonation of Yo-San's dumb servant, and Mr Kenneth Black brings thoughtful care to bear on his part as Banza, the Priest of Samurai. Miss Eve Muriel shows much talent and histrionic ability in her delineation of Rosey Sky; Miss Edith Deverill as Yo San's maid, Setsu, renders her part in a pleasing manner; Miss Alice Gordon acquits herself creditably as Kaede; and Miss Maud Ruthven does well in the small part of Noji Onna. The orchestra is under the direction of Mr Percy F. Fletcher.

OPERA HOUSE, CROUCH-END.

"FLORODORA."

Mr Tom B. Davis's company made a successful appearance in this popular piece, and notwithstanding the near approach of the Christmas holidays, played to a good and appreciative audience. Cyrus W. Gilfain was an effective and excellent impersonation by Mr Charles J. Barber. Frank Abercoed in the competent hands of Mr Cyril Dane met with characteristic treatment. Mr Derick Knowles cleverly sustained the part of Captain Arthur Donegal. The character of the overseer, Leandro, was well portrayed by Mr Lionel Williams, whilst Anthony Tweedlepunch was ably embodied by that quaint comedian Mr Albert Bruno. Miss Violet Bronson did full justice to the part of Dolores. Miss Florrie Cadman made a bright and sparkling Valleda. Miss Daisy Byford displayed plenty of verve and go in her interpretation of Angela Gilfain. Lady Holyrood gave opportunities for the vivacity of that dainty young comedienne Miss Rene Steadman. The dresser, mounting, and general stage effects were items well looked after, and the augmented orchestra and full chorus redounded to the credit of their leader. Mr J H. Hutchinson.

NEW EALING THEATRE.

On Monday, Dec. 12, the Play, in Five Acts, by Theo. Kremer, entitled
"THE FATAL WEDDING."

The Fatal Wedding is a play of great heart interest dealing with New York life, and it was very favourably received by a keenly appreciative audience. The adventures of the luckless heroine, Mabel Wilson, ably portrayed by Miss Helen Russell, were followed with breathless interest from start to finish. The fond, but easily fooled husband, Howard Wilson, was played in a polished manner by Mr Ernest Owtrim, who gave much satisfaction by his rendering of a somewhat difficult character. Miss Doris Gilham as the adventuress, Cora Williams, made a fascinating siren, and her companion-in-arms, Robert Curtis, was admirably represented by Mr Oliver Rogers. Miss Marjorie Lawrence as the little girl, Jessie, was bright and refreshing, and cleverly acted the part. Her song given in the third act was a great success. Mr W. E. Chowd as Toto, a French butler, and Miss Maud Lockyer as a cook created much amusement by their diversions.

TERRISS THEATRE.

"THE LIFE THAT KILLS."

This sensational drama, so excellently interpreted by Messrs Moule and Nicholls' capable company, is doing good business this week at the Terriss. A very strong contribution to the success of the venture is the impersonation, by the author, of the villain, Kendal Croat, and the intense interest he arouses is apparent from the storms of hisses which from time to time greet him. A fine performance is given by Miss Marie Menzies, who as the heroine, Laurie Linden, acts with a sincerity which cannot fail to impress. Mr Hugh Metcalfe is responsible for a bold and manly rendering of Hector Rodney, and the applause he receives is well merited. The weak and vacillating Valentine Telford is an effective portrayal by Mr Morris Maud; Mr E. D. Nicholls aptly presents the character of Lord Kelmarch; Mr A. G. Smith-Nelil displays marked ability as Captain Montagu; Miss Kathleen Cavanagh proves herself a capable exponent of histrionic villainy as Brenda Croat; a good rendition of Johanna Dicks is supplied by Miss Lucy Murray, who also appears as Tom Dicks; and the comedy element finds a remarkably efficient representative in Mr A. Hall Menzies, his ready wit never failing to raise a laugh. The scenery carried by the company is especially elaborate.

SHAKESPEARE, CLAPHAM-JUNCTION.

On Monday, Dec. 12, the Pantomimical Farce entitled
"HIS MAJESTY'S GUESTS."

In Mr Fred Karno's entertainment, "manufactured expressly for laughing purposes," the fun from start to finish is fast and furious, the company selected being well adapted to its work, the artistes responsible for the knockabout "pantomimical business" doing many dextrous acrobatic feats, and the trick properties being very ingenious, especially a collapsing balcony, which causes great laughter and applause. Mr Harry Roxbury as Sergeant Lightning from Scotland-yard is a host in himself, and is ably assisted by Miss Lenora Castelle, who makes a pretty Lady Maud, and shows considerable histrionic ability. Mr Frank Morton sings "A king am I" and "The Fireman's Wedding" very acceptably. Mr Char. Usher is good as Mr Miffin, and Mr Harry Studt is a very funny parson. Miss Blanche La Rose gives a clever sketch as a New Woman. Mr A. E. Johnson is satisfactory as Fritz. Miss Edith Ager sings and acts sweetly as Dolly. Mr L Sterling as Harry, Mr Fred Whittaker as Bunker, and Mr Harry Howe as Selina are responsible for much acrobatic and other fun. The other parts are all in capable hands, and the united efforts of the company result in complete success.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, Dec. 12, the Musical Play, in Three Acts, entitled
"MY SWEETHEART."

As fresh and attractive as ever, this tuneful play, which Mr Orton Tewson's company brought to Kingston on a return visit after several years, found a numerous audience awaiting its production at the Royal County Theatre on Monday night. The play has been considerably improved since Kingstonians last had an opportunity of witnessing it, and it was again received with marked favour in all parts of the house. Mr Broughton Black took the part of the German lad Tony, and sang the various songs allotted to him with success. Miss Grace Armstrong made a graceful appearance as Tina, in which she gave evidence of the possession of a pleasing soprano voice. Mr Harry A. Gribben as the schemer and Miss May Daniel as the adventuress both did well, and Mr Charles A. Stephenson played the part of the dude, Dudley Harcourt, satisfactorily. Mr Tewson himself in the part of the old sport acquitted himself well, and Mr Allan Cleaver appeared as Dr. Oliver. Other parts in the play, which was well mounted, were ably sustained.

THE GERMAN THEATRE.

It would appear from the highly interesting fare provided by the German Theatre on Monday that one-act plays occupy a far more important position in Germany than in this country. Suderman and Schnitzler have, perhaps, achieved their most notable triumphs with one-act plays, Fritzchen and Der Gruene Kakadu, and the practice of filling a bill with three or four one-act plays by the same author, widely different in subject and treatment, yet all connected by one central idea, is by no means uncommon on the German stage. The three plays by Otto Erich Hartleben, collectively called Die Befreiten, are splendid examples of multum in parvo art. Die Lore is a satire, dealing with the pedantry of a would-be "viveur;" Abschied vom Regiment, a very powerful and grim tragedy, reminiscent of Fritzchen and Pagliacci; and Die Sittliche Forderung, a wholly delightful documentation of the irresistible fascination of Das Ewig Weibliche. All three plays are distinguished by literary charm and wit of dialogue, masterly characterisation, and intense dramatic grip. They require the subtlest and most realistic acting, and these are just the qualities which we admire most in German acting. The chief honours were carried off by Fräulein Dalberg and Grawz; Herren Andresen, Stock, and Pabst. We must give Fräulein Dalberg credit for the restrained force and intellectual acting which she exhibited in both plays. Fräulein Rosie Grawz, on the other hand, might attach a little more importance to her get-up. Apart from this external shortcoming, however, she proved herself a brilliant artist. Herr Andresen furnished yet another example of his sympathetic and convincing style. Herr Stock, who may justly be regarded as a valuable acquisition to the small but fine ensemble at the Queen-street Theatre, was the pedant to the life, and Herr Pabst was once more a very "nice and fresh boy." The trialogy was followed by the ever-welcome military one-act farce, Militarfromm, one of the brightest examples of Moser's and Trotha's joint labour. The German-American lady who is by-and-bye to recognise the advantage, and even fascination, of Prussian discipline was portrayed with much charm by Fräulein Dalberg, who was no less at home in English than in her very quaint "Amurrican" pronunciation of German. Sound work was also done by Herren Leyrer, Pabst, Wiburger (a very useful and talented young actor), Walther (who is always at his best in such frankly humorous part), and Fräuleins Welss and Langfried.

THE Guildhall School of Music Lodge of Freemasonry 2,454, was consecrated at the beginning of the year 1893. It originated with the Guildhall School of Music, which has now for its principal Dr. W. H. Cummings, Past Grand Organist, a P.M. of the lodge, and for its secretary Mr George Frederick Smith, another Past Grand Organist, who is secretary of the lodge. It held its installation meeting last Monday night at the Holborn Restaurant, when Mr Albert E. Howarth, W. M., presided, and when in addition to the Grand Officers already named there were present Mr J. H. Matthews, the President of the Board of Benevolence, and a number of Past Masters, lay members of the lodge, and visitors. Mr Howarth ably installed Mr George Henry Dawson as W.M., and took his position as Immediate Past Master. Later he was the recipient of a P.M. jewel. The W.M.'s officers for the year were Mr A. L Simmons, Mr M. Borwell, Mr Walter Morrow, P.M., Mr George F. Smith, P.G.O., P.M., Mr H. Hinchliff, Mr A. A. Lines, Mr R. Thacker, Mr David Beardwell, Mr W. J. Barton, Mr G. K. Lang, Mr H. Sowerbutts, and Mr Charles Patrick, P.M. A fine programme of music followed the banquet.

"THE SCILLY GIRL."

A New and Original Musical Comedy, in Two Acts, Book and Lyrics by Athol Mayhew, Music by Wm. Neale, Produced at the Grand Theatre and Opera House, Woolwich, on Monday, Dec. 12.

Cecil Trevelyan	Mr CHARLES CAUTLEY
Hon. Adolphus Delaware	Mr H. E. GARDEN
Bertie Carruthers	Mr J. W. DAVIS
Hughie Fallowfield	Mr T. NICHOLS
Captain Johnnie Walker	Mr H. LEWIS
Duke of Ayrshire	Mr ROBERT RIVERS
Hiero	Mr ALFRED DONOHOE
Muriel	Miss BESSIE PELLISSIER
Patty Pepperjoy	Miss DOROTHY VERNON
Duchess of Ayrshire	Miss SUSIE OAK
Lady Spooner	Miss DUNCAN
Hon. Mrs Wormum	Miss DOT DANBY
Twixie Martingale	Miss KITTY WYNDHAM
Mrs Jack Bridge	Miss POPE
Madame Endora	Miss ELLA KITSON
Miss Katharine Wheeler	Miss BLONDIN

A very noticeable feature in several of the recent examples of musical comedy has been the tendency to make the plot really strong and dramatic, with the result that the chief interest has centred in the fortunes and misfortunes of the characters, the songs and music forming rather an added charm than the principal source of entertainment. This policy has, however, not been followed in The Scilly Girl, produced last Monday at the Grand, Woolwich, Here we have a return to the old style of a meagre story running through and holding together any number of disconnected turns—musical and otherwise—which are strung upon the thin strand of plot like beads upon a necklace, liable to be scattered in almost hopeless confusion by the momentarily threatening severance of the cord of dramatic interest. After all, however, the author has probably been wise in his choice, for the provincial theatre-going public is nothing if not conservative, and will probably follow the example of the audience at Woolwich, which was heartily pleased with and cordially applauded The Scilly Girl from start to finish.

As has been hinted, the story is not of vital importance, and a slight sketch of the plot, which was worked out somewhat on the following lines, will suffice. After an absence of many years in Uganda, Cecil Trevelyan returns to London, and, at a charity bazaar held at the Duchess of Ayrshire's house, meets Muriel, the girl whom he has loved since childhood. They immediately rush into each other's arms, but their prospects of happiness are blighted by the appearance on the scene of Endora, a society fortune-teller, who, for her own ends, attempts by several devices to part the lovers. What these ends are it is somewhat difficult to discover, but presumably Endora is acting in furtherance of the plans of her associate, Hiero, a "mystic manipulator" and imposer in various shady ways on a credulous public. One of this scoundrel's precious schemes is a "matrimonial agency," and it is apparently with the idea of getting one or both of the lovers into its clutches that their marriage is to be prevented. As a last resort Endora declares herself to be Muriel's mother, and this plan is for the moment successful, for the story is believed, and in the forcible abduction of Muriel by her supposed mother a dramatic curtain is found for the first act.

In the second act the whole of the characters have been transported to the Scilly Isles—the birthplace of the hero, the heroine, and, indeed, apparently, of most of the other dramatis personæ. Hither Silas Warner, Muriel's guardian, has returned home, and is soon joined by Cecil Trevelyan, who brings with him Muriel herself, just rescued from the clutches of her self-appointed mother, Endora. The latter soon follows, and with the help of Hiero again plots to prevent the marriage, but is foiled by Silas Warner, and all ends as happily as could be wished for all concerned.

Such in brief is the story told by Mr Athol Mayhew in crisp and pointed dialogue. The music, written entirely by Mr William Neale, is quite adequate and sufficiently original; for if it is occasionally reminiscent of the work of others, it must be borne in mind that the composer's field is so strictly circumscribed and the ground has been gone over and over so often that absolute originality has become a thing impossible. One of Mr Neale's happiest efforts is the peculiarly haunting music accompanying the snake-charmer's first song and dance, while the spirited finale to the first act also deserves special mention. The music for some of the lyrics—these, by-the-way, also the work of Mr Athol Mayhew—is singularly appropriate. The composer himself conducted on the night of the production.

Miss Bessie Pellissier was charmingly easy and natural as Muriel, acting this ingénue part with a winsome gaiety, and singing with an expressive simplicity which made her portrayal of the character one of the successes of the evening. Her best songs were, perhaps, "Kiss your mammy dear good-night," with chorus off, and a couple of pretty love duets, with Mr Charles Cantley as Trevelyan. Mr Cautley played the last-mentioned character in straightforward, manly fashion, looking the beau-ideal of the "clean-limbed" young Englishman. He has a rich strong voice, which he has perfectly under control, and with which, besides being heard to effect in the above-mentioned duets, he fairly brought down the house with a spirited patriotic song entitled "The Pioneer," one of the most stirring numbers in the play. Miss Dorothy Vernon was delightfully vivacious as Patty Pepperjoy, acting in the highest of high spirits, and dancing and singing as if determined that the piece should be a success through her efforts alone. Her dancing especially was much appreciated, and her song and dance, "I'm so giddy," was loudly encored. A very successful impersonation of Madame Endora came from Miss Ella Kitson, whose dignified movements and rhythmic dancing were admirably in keeping with the character, while her forceful acting in the more dramatic scenes showed her possessed of considerable power. Mr Alfred Donohoe was genuinely amusing as Hiero, and will be more so when he has had time to work the part up a little. He has some very funny patter and business as it is, which were received with roars of laughter. His scarecrow song with Miss Vernon and his song, "Then the figure works," with full chorus, were a couple of the cleverest numbers of the evening. As the Hon. Adolphus Delaware Mr H. E. Garden has, at present, not a great deal to do except look fatuous and make inane remarks, but he did this with an inimitably comic air which was irresistible. He was also very successful with a clever song, "Things have altered." Miss Blondin will be funnier as Miss Katharine Wheeler when her dialogue has been polished up a bit, for at present she has to rely on the not very comical device of stuttering, transposing her words, &c. Miss Susie Oak was a dignified and capable Duchess of Ayrshire, and made the most of her rather slender opportunities. The name of the actor who played Silas Warner was not discoverable from the programme, but he was responsible for an excellent interpretation of the part, and sang a topical song, "That's what the people say," to such good effect that he was twice encored.

AT the Brixton Theatre Mr E Stevens has arranged for the production of a grand spectacular pantomime of Aladdin on Boxing Day, with new and magnificent dresses and scenery. An exceptionally strong company has been engaged, and an entertainment of unusual brilliance is promised.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES.—All suffering from irritation of the throat and hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of Brown's Bronchial Troches. People troubled with a hacking cough, a slight cold, or bronchial affections cannot try them too soon, as similar troubles, if allowed to progress, result in serious pulmonary and asthmatic affections. See that the words "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are on the Government stamp around each box. Sold by Chemists everywhere, 1s. 1½d. per Box.—[ADVT.]

"THE GARRICK CLUB."

It is a luxury to possess this beautifully illustrated volume, which has just been published by Elliot Stock. Mr Percy Fitzgerald, a veteran littérateur and clubbist, was the "very man" to compile an account of the historic "Garrick." He has done his work admirably. "Parlons-nous de lui, grand' mère!" cried the French lads and lasses in Bérenger's ballad; and there will always be to the rising generation an irresistible charm in cosy chat about celebrities of the past. "The Garrick Club" is so full of good things that we are only troubled with an embarras de richesses in our task of selection. We have to pass over a great deal of most interesting literary reminiscence and come to the chapter on "Managers," in which Mr Fitzgerald remarks, à propos of a member of the club, "Sam Arnold":—

"The Arnolds—like the Harrises—were a regular family of managers, father succeeding son. One was lessee of the English Opera House, later the Lyceum, and a shrewd man of business. Mrs Mathews had left a sad account of his treatment of her husband, who, she insists, was decoyed into an agreement, the purport of which he did not understand, and the result of which was to make him for a number of years a sort of bond-slave, when he had to coin money, as it is called, for his task-maker, on a pittance. This is a serious charge, but I have gone carefully into the whole question, and can say, conscientiously, that there is little foundation for it. No doubt, the profits were much greater than Mathews dreamed of, but it was a fair agreement, and he understood perfectly what he was to receive. The sort of 'Corney Grain' entertainment that Mathews was to supply was an experiment, and might not have answered at all, and in that case Arnold would have been bound to Mathews. It was, in fact, the common case in the profession, of the performer at a fixed salary unexpectedly bringing large gains to the managerial treasury, a situation which always gives rise to grumbling and discontent. The judicious manager will, if he be prudent, revise the terms. As it happened, Arnold eventually released Mathews. The present Mr Arnold, so long Sir Henry Irving's landlord, is of this family, and the actor has often taken occasion to acknowledge the liberal treatment he has received from him. On the other hand, there have been few such improving tenants, and the great success and vogue of the performances must have doubled the value of the property."

Here and there we come upon bits of information which touch strangely on "up-to-date' history. That enterprising author-manager, Mr George Dance, will be interested to read—

"Another theatrical limner was George Dance. The Dances were in truth an extraordinary family for talent. There was George, the architect, who built the Mansion House; his son, who built Newgate; George, an actor; Nathaniel, a distinguished naval officer; and Charles, a prolific dramatist, collaborator with Planché, and a familiar member of the Garrick Club, where he was long recollected. He wrote innumerable farces and burlesques, most of which enjoyed considerable success. There is nowadays a dramatic writer of this name, no doubt one of the family. Another of the family was Holland Dance, afterwards knighted. He was born in 1735, and lived till the year 1811. He was said to have conceived a romantic, but unrequited, attachment for the fascinating Angelica Kauffman. It is not common to find a painter a Member of Parliament, as he was. His talents in this way were more than respectable, but he is best known by the engraving from his picture of Garrick in Richard III., depicted as starting from his couch when exclaiming, 'My horse! My horse!' according to the Cibberian version. As I have stated, a copy of this picture is here, done by Morland the elder. The work is valuable as showing Garrick's method. Horror and terror are well expressed, and the attitude is a striking one."

Alluding to Fechter, Mr Fitzgerald says:—"'Boz' took a violent fancy to the interesting Frenchman, and I recall his bringing me with him to the Lyceum one night when Edgar of Ravenswood was being played to a thin house. He had a private key which admitted us to the stage, and we stood at the wing watching the actor's love agonies addressed to one of the interesting Leclercqs. Fechter—who, as 'Boz' explained to me, always desired to be styled 'Feshter'—later, suffered from a strange affection, his chest and stomach swelling violently under strong emotions. 'Boz' assured me that he has been near him on the stage when the buttons on his jerkin would fly off into the pit under the tension! The well-known Gads-hill Chalet, now in Lord Darnley's Park, was his gift—a costly present. He was then flush of cash, but in his later days, 'he hung like the rusted mail, quite out of fashion' and forgotten. He went to America, and had ill success there; was unfortunate in his wedded life; and died, I believe, in disease and distress. Such was the fate of the gay, gallant Fechter, the original hero of the Dame aux Camélias, and once the lion of Paris and London! The bust here is a very excellent likeness, both showy and pleasing. It is by a well-known French sculptor Carrier, and is one of the life-like works full of spirit and expression. Not distasteful is the smooth ivory or yellow tone imparted to the surface, and which has a better effect than the common chilling white plaster."

As for the way in which the book is printed, bound, and illustrated, we can only say that it is "delightful." The portraits are reproduced in first-rate style, their variety, both in spirit and technical execution, being echoed in adroit interpretation by means of engraving and process. Mr Eliot Stock is to be congratulated on having turned out such a "treat" in the way of chatty books; and Mr Fitzgerald is fortunate in having the work of his pen assisted so artistically and so sumptuously by his publisher.

MR JOHN DENTON'S company is appearing this week at the Elephant and Castle Theatre, in Wealth, Women, and Wickedness. The drama was fully noticed in our last issue. The author takes a leading character in the play, and in the part of Elkanah Pearce develops a strong trait of unctuous humour. Mr Denton is ably assisted in his efforts by the clever acting of Miss Ada Palmer, who depicts Miss Agatha Pearce in quite an artistic manner. Mr Harry Browne acts the part of Mr James Rivers in a natural fashion, and as Inspector Goodheart Mr Louie Hector is a dignified member of the police force. Mr Willie Scott and Miss Dolly Harcourt act the respective parts of Tommy Hopkins and Polly Hopkins, and the warm approval of the house is quickly bestowed upon the twain for their cheering representations of the characters. As Jack Vavasour Mr Frank Beresford is eminently suited, and Mr Percy Rhodes, who delineates Captain Melbourne, is as polished a scoundrel as one could possibly meet. Mr Harry M'Clelland is effective as Captain Melbourne's factotum, Bennett, and Moucher is capably played by Mr Fred Bell. Miss Violet King looks charming as Claire Rivers, and her acting is skilful throughout, and Miss Kate Walbran does full justice to the part of Elsie Melbourne. The numerous minor characters are all carefully treated, and the general ensemble of the drama reflects great credit upon the producer, whilst the scenery is in every way excellent.

COUNCILLOR TAYLOR organised a splendid entertainment, and lent the Lyceum Theatre, Crewe, entirely without charge on Tuesday night, to aid the fund organised by the Mayor and Mayoress of Crewe for providing poor children with meals and clothing during the cold winter months. There was an overflowing house, and a handsome sum was realised. Mr Taylor being publicly thanked by his Worship for this substantial addition to the fund.

THE O.P. CLUB.

The annual ladies' dinner of the O.P. Club was given on Sunday night at the Criterion Restaurant. Miss Lily Brayton occupied the chair, and among those present were Mr Algernon L. Collins, Mr and Mrs J. M. Freshwater, Sir J. Linton, Mr and Mrs Cecil Raleigh, Miss Dorothea Baird, Mr Oscar Asche, Mr A. F. Robbins, Miss Pamela Gaythorne, Mr H. B. Irving, Mr Walter Hampden, Mr Carl Hentschel, Mr Clement Shorter, Captain Tomalin, Mr J. Bannister Howard, Miss E. Wynne Matthison, Sir W. Quayle Jones, General Hale Wortham, and Mr Jerome K. Jerome. The usual loyal toasts having been drunk,

MR A. L. COLLINS, the president of the Club, in proposing "Our Guests (the Ladies)," said that they extended a very hearty and cordial welcome to the members of the fair sex who were present that evening. He associated with the toast the name of the lady who presided over that gathering. Miss Lily Brayton came to them from a company of actors which, he ventured to think, was a real school of acting, and which had given them some of the best exponents of the later day. From the moment she appeared in the Metropolis her genius was recognised. She had appeared in Twelfth Night, Richard II., The Resurrection, and The Prayer of the Sword. Her part in The Taming of the Shrew he thought to be one of the best artistic impersonations seen in modern times, and they looked with confidence to a still more distinguished future for her in her art. He then, on behalf of the O.P. Club, presented Miss Brayton with a white ostrich feather fan, with an inscription, as a reminder of that evening, and as a token of the admiration and regard in which she was held.

MR OSCAR ASCHE, replying on behalf of his wife, said that if he could exercise the same power over her that he did on the boards of the Adelphi, he would not allow her a morsel of food at that dinner until she had done her duty—afterwards she might have what she liked, bread and milk for preference—and thanked them for the hospitality which had been accorded her that evening. Unfortunately, his influence over her evaporated at the stage-door. He was sure that she would cherish always the souvenir of a pleasant and memorable evening in her career, and that the appreciation of so representative a body of playgoers would encourage her to try and do better in the future. Somebody had accused him of lacking humour, but it was evident that, if he had any sense of humour, he would not be in his present position; but he could only thank them, on behalf of his wife, for the hospitality to them that evening.

The evening concluded with a musical entertainment of varied excellence.

MR. RICHARD TEMPLE'S RECITALS.

On Saturday, the 10th, Mr Richard Temple gave the last of his present series of recitals at Steinway Hall, a very large audience being attracted. The recent experiment of this popular reciter in reading the 94th and 137th Psalm again caused no little surprise, and we may add admiration, for Mr Temple's idea of reading these grand and impressive examples of the majestic poetry of the Scriptures is something so different from the ordinary droning and intoning of the average curate as to be almost startling. The stately, poetic phrases came to many ears with a new significance, given as they were in the reciter's masterly and musical tones. As to the feeling of irreverence which certain provincial critics have brought against Mr Temple, owing to his bold and novel experiment, it is simply absurd, and we can honestly advise any clergyman, no matter of what denomination, to take Mr Temple as his model without delay. We should possibly hesitate to recommend the practice of reading from the Scriptures to every reciter, for few would display the same earnest and dignified spirit that is so marked a feature in Mr Temple's recital. A striking contrast was afforded in the "Chant-Pagan" of Rudyard Kipling, which, written in the most brilliant style of the author, is supposed to chronicle the regrets of "Tommy Atkins" when he compares the humdrum tasks allotted him in the old country with his heroic doings in past days, for, spite of his homely barrack-room language, the true British warrior can be detected throughout, and Mr Temple has absolutely mastered the manner and matter of the British fighter who has faced the foe in many a stubborn encounter. The delight of the audience at the truth and humour of the recital found expression in plaudits loud and long. A sketch, Things in General, written by Mr Temple, was warmly appreciated, and the song "Nothing new" met with great favour. "The Ballad of Oriana," by Tennyson, one of the earlier poems of the great Victorian bard, was recited so as to do the fullest justice to this weird composition. Nor must we overlook the tragic power imparted by the reciter to a scene from the second act of King Lear. In a less striking school may be named "Gone with a handsomer man," by Will Carlton, and "Nell," by Gerald Hayward, given for the first time in public. After Christmas Mr Temple will resume his recitals, and will introduce some graphic studies of character from The Pirates of Penzance, The Pinafore, &c. Other new and interesting features will add to the attractiveness of these deservedly popular recitals. Miss Grace Philippa played with the utmost grace and fluency solos of Chopin, Nicodé, and Barnett on the pianoforte.

MR GEORGE ALEXANDER has engaged Miss Frances Wetherall to play the part of Linda, Lady Hudspeth, in A Decree Nisi, when Miss Madge M'Intosh leaves for America on the 24th.—Mr Alfred Martin has again been engaged by Mr Edward Compton as advance manager for the forthcoming tour of the Compton comedy company. Mr Martin concludes to-day as business-manager for Messrs Polini and Melford's Silver King company, it being the termination of the North company tour.—The services of Mr Charles H. Bowmaker, the late popular manager at the Surrey Theatre, have been secured by Mr Ernest E. Norris to assist in the front of the house during the run of the forthcoming pantomime, Puss-in-Boots, at the Elephant and Castle Theatre.

MR F. B. WOULFE, who has been so successful as Marcus Superbus in Mr William Greet's Sign of the Cross company, concludes to-night his fifth tour with the piece. By arrangement with Messrs Preston and Doherty Mr Woulfe has been touring a répertoire of Max Goldberg's plays since last Whit week. On Monday at the Prince's Theatre, Portsmouth, Mr Woulfe adds himself to an already strong cast, which includes Miss Grace Lester, Miss Marcella Hudson (the late Wilson Barrett's last Stephanus), and Mr Dan F. Roe. Mr Woulfe contemplates adding to the répertoire several of the most popular Shakespearian plays and a modern drama from his own pen.

A COPYRIGHT performance of a romantic drama, in one act, entitled The King's Mantle, written by Miss Edith Halford-Thompson, was given on the 8th inst., at the Opera House, Torquay.

THE directors of the Great Eastern Railway have appointed Mr R. P. Ellis superintendent of the line from Jan. 1, in succession to Mr H. G. Drury, who retires from the company's service.

PRESENTATION.—Miss Violet St. Clair has, unfortunately, had to leave Messrs Polini and Melford's Silver King company, in which she has successfully and ably rendered the rôle of Cissy Denver during the last six months, owing to her mother, Miss Sinna St. Clair having previously been engaged for this year's pantomime. To express the friendly admiration which the company had for the little actress, they presented her with a gold bracelet before she bade them farewell.

NEW ENGLISH & FOREIGN PLAYS.

In order to assist managers and others in the selection of pieces for production and adaptation, we shall publish from time to time synopses of likely English and Continental plays, so that dramatic speculators may judge for themselves of the suitability of the plots for their purposes. Authors wishing for this publicity should forward synopses to "Playrights," care of The Era, from whom further particulars can be obtained.

"COLLEGE CRAMPTON."

Komödie, in Five Akten, von Gerhart Hauptmann.

ACT I.

Scene: Crampton's Studio in the Academy of a middle-size Silesian town. Crampton is an artist of commanding talent, but his position is not equal to that which his gifts would entitle him to hold, for he is far too free-thinking, unconventional and easy-going, to put up with the somewhat narrow rules of the Academy, and both his health and his financial position have been hopelessly undermined by his excessive drinking habits. So badly of late has the craving for intoxicating stimulants got hold of him that in order to make both ends meet and to save his wife and children from starvation he has to do work far beneath his dignity, and to borrow money of Loeffler, his factotum. At one of their nightly excursions Crampton has met Max Straehler, a young man of independent means, which he does his best to squander in Bohemian feast giving. Straehler has come to acquaint the Professor with the fact that he has been dismissed from the Academy, and to hear whether Crampton thinks him sufficiently talented to continue in his artistic career. Crampton, who at once takes a fancy to the open-hearted and open-minded boy, encourages him to remain faithful to his profession, but to study henceforth in one of the art-centres where there is more scope for an original artist. But his bitterness on the pettifogging of his colleagues quickly gives way to abundant joy when he hears that some Duke, once his friend and a man renowned for patronage of art, is about to pay a visit to the Academy. Crampton thinks that the visit is really meant for himself, and he hopes that the Duke will not only buy some of his pictures, but will distinguish him before his students and the Director, whom he hates like poison. So great is his optimism that Straehler and Gertrude, his lovable and loving daughter, are inflamed by his own joy. Gertrude confides to Max her constant fear about her father, and fervently entreats him to dissuade the Professor from continuing his ruinous mode of living.

ACT II.

Adolf Straehler has come to thank Crampton for the encouragement he has given to his brother. Max Crampton, however, is far too nervous, on account of the impending visit of the Duke, to take much notice of him. So excited is he, indeed, that he insults a man who comes to inspect the poster which the professor had painted for him, and who ventures to criticise it. He then leaves the room in order to make preparations for the reception of the distinguished visitor, and during his absence Gertrude discloses to Max that a letter has just been delivered at their house calling on Crampton to resign his position as Professor at the Academy. She is in utter despair and does not know how to break the news to her father. Shortly afterwards Crampton enters, and with him the attendant. The latter announces that the Duke, after a visit to the studio of one of Crampton's colleagues, has left the academy. Crampton, whose hopes are thus rudely shattered and whose pride has received a deadly blow, is in despair. Max and Gertrude's attempts to console him are futile. Crampton is so exhausted by his rage against those whom he thinks to be responsible for the slight that the news of his dismissal leaves him at first unmoved, but it gradually dawns upon him that he and his family are now left penniless, and that his weakness for intoxicants is solely responsible for their misfortune. He also realises that there is no hope for him, and that only drink can now afford him any temporary relief. He therefore begs Gertrude to leave him, and to follow her mother and sisters, who have already joined some well-to-do relatives. He also makes Max promise to see to the fulfilment of his wish. Gertrude's passionate entreaties to be allowed to stand by her father are of no avail; so deeply he has not yet fallen as to drag his darling into the sordid atmosphere which he feels he must henceforth live in.

ACT III.

Scene: The sitting-room in Adolf Straehler's house. Adolf and Max, for whom their sister Agnes is keeping house, have succeeded in getting Gertrude to stay with them, anyway till her father's whereabouts have been traced. Gertrude confides to Agnes—like herself a most sweet-natured woman—that she will not live with her mother, whose want of kindliness and affection she asserts to be greatly responsible for her father's fall. She is, of course, full of anxiety, all endeavours to find Crampton ever since they parted having been unsuccessful. Adolf cheers her, but cannot conceal his own uneasiness when Loeffler is announced. He elicits from Loeffler that Crampton has not, as they feared, committed suicide, but that he is living a dog's life, and will not in any circumstances allow his faithful companion to betray to Gertrude his present sojourn. Adolf arranges, however, an appointment with Loeffler, and makes him then promise to let him know the professor's address. Loeffler leaves just before Max returns from his fruitless errand to discover Crampton's whereabouts. Adolf blames Max for spending vast amounts on buying up Crampton's property, and tries to disillusion Max in his hope to save the doctor, for Max has bought the furniture and the statues solely because he knows that they will be an inducement to Crampton to reside with him. Max, on the other hand, feels sanguine that if only he can find Crampton he will be successful in his work of salvation. He cannot, however, deny that he is not solely prompted by charitable motives, but that love for the professor's daughter has something to do with his generous plans. His joy on hearing that Adolf has practically discovered where Crampton is living is unbounded and full of youthfull exuberance.

ACT IV.

Scene: Crampton's room in a low-class lodging-house. Crampton receives the visit of some of his former colleagues. He has his "beau jour," and impresses them by his sound judgment on various artistic and literary questions. After they have left some artisans from the adjoining "saloon bar" enter, asking him to give them the honour of his company. He treats them very haughtily, but does not refuse to do some hall decorations for one of them at a paltry price. Whilst he is drinking with the plebeians Max enters. Loeffler had acquainted his brother with their new address, and now tells Max that Crampton, whom he still looks up to no less than he pities him, is as proud and stubborn as ever. Crampton now comes back, none the better for the hospitable courtesy extended to him, and does not at first recognise Max. He, however, severely reprimands the latter on hearing his daughter's name, for "her very name is too spotless to be spoken of in this filthy abode." He cannot hide his profound anxiety for her, and is deeply touched on hearing how desirous she is of seeing and living again with her father. He does not, however, know that she is now in the town, and not seeing through Max's scheme, is greatly delighted and highly flattered when Max proposes to him to come to his flat in order to paint a portrait of his sister. Max had previously given to Loeffler sufficient money to pay the landlord, and the trio thus leave the dingy hole without experiencing any difficulty from that quarter.

ACT V.

Max has preceded the Professor in order to prepare Gertrude, to whom in spite of his youth he has become engaged. A most charming love scene between the brave little girl and the good-hearted and high-spirited boy ensues. Gertrude is delighted that her fiancée should have bought all Crampton's furniture, which had been put up to auction, but Crampton on entering does not at all appreciate this thoughtful action. On the contrary, he thinks the "snobs" had bought and exhibited his old possessions here to mock and humiliate him. However his rage gives way to ill-concealed satisfaction when Adolf tells him that they hoped this might induce him to share the studio with Max, naturally—he adds, knowing how touchy Crampton is—on adequate payment. Gertrude now enters, and neither of them can conceal their deep emotion at a meeting which was quite unexpected on his part. So happy is Crampton on learning that his darling is engaged to Max, to whom he is deeply attached, that in order to repress the outburst of his heartfelt gratitude he cannot but utter the words "what a stupid boy he is."

DRAMATIC PUPILS MATINEE.

The little theatre of the School of Musical and Dramatic Art, 77, New Oxford-street, was uncomfortably crowded on Thursday, when a pupils' matinée was given. The principals of this new school of acting are Mr Cairns James and Mr Ernest D'Auban; and already a number of their pupils have been successful in obtaining engagements with well-known companies and at leading theatres. The programme opened with the first act of H. V. Esmond's play One Summer's Day, in which good work was done by Mr Fred Leighton as Major Dick Rudyard, Mr Howard Trentham as Phil Marsden, Mr R. N. Adams as Theodore Bendyshe, and Mr James R. Sinclair as Robert Hoddesden and Seth, and Mr Vincent Erne as Tom. Miss Dorothea Clarke, a very charming girl, who has won the George Edwardes Scholarship, was bright and piquant as Maysie, and Miss Esther Zicklin was a dainty Irene. Miss Alice Ellis scored as the irrepressible Urchin, Miss Juana Hudson was a fascinating gipsy, and Miss Gertrude Pitt as Mrs Theodore Bendyshe and Miss Hilda Gerald-Poel as Bess completed the cast. Next came some varieties. Miss Nancie Wood sang Ada Reeve's ditty, "Woman;" Miss Daphne Wheeler as Lady Bessie Montague and Miss Violet Vaughan as Gladys Frere distinguished themselves in the amusing duologue entitled, A Secret; Miss Burrell sang "The Garden of Love" in excellent style; and Miss Hobson recited "A Royal Princess" with admirable effect. Mrs Hugh Bell's duologue, Last Words, was well done by Miss Brockman (Pamela) and Miss C. Brockman (Laura), and Miss Welsh gave a graceful pas seul. The programme concluded with the second act of Veronique, a performance which reflected the highest credit both upon the teachers and the pupils, some of whom, it should be added, have already made their appearance upon the boards. Miss Molly M'Intyre as Hélène De Solanges played the part with much charm of manner, and Mr F. Aubrey Millward proved to be a thoroughly capable exponent of Florestan. Both possess good voices, and the Swing duet was most artistically rendered. The comedy business, in the hands of Mr R. N. Adams as Mons. Coquenard, Mr Fred Leighton as Mons. Loustot, and Mr Vincent Erne as Seraphin, was briskly sustained, Miss Irene Carrington doing well as the Countess, and Miss Daphne Wheeler as Madame Coquenard, and Miss Nancie Wood as Aunt Benoit being decidedly creditable. Miss Winsome Etherington was good as Denise, and able assistance was given by Mr J. R. Sinclair and Mr Howard Trentham. The chorus deserves a word of praise. Mr Cairns James, in thanking the audience for their attendance, mentioned that this was the first public performance given by the students of the school. They had all worked very hard, and the list of pupils fulfilling engagements showed what degree of success had been attained.

TRINITY COLLEGE CONCERT.

An important concert was given at the Portman Rooms on Wednesday evening, reflecting equal credit on the students and professors. In particular we may commend the singing of the choir conducted by Dr. Pringner. The voices were well balanced, and the tone sweet and expressive in Dr. Elgar's "My love dwelt in a northern land" and Dr. Parry's "Come, pretty wag." In Wilby's madrigal, "Sweet Honey-sucking Bees," the vocalists were not quite so steady, but the effect was satisfactory as a whole. The part-songs were brightly sung. Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 23, for piano and violin was played with no little grace by Miss Evelyn Withycombe and Miss Annie Godfrey. The Hindoo song of Bamberg taxed Miss Ethel Jackson's resources severely, but she met the difficulties bravely, and Miss Lilian Marshall played the obbligato for the violin with good effect. Rossini's duet, "Dunque io son," is more fitted for the opera, where accompanied by appropriate action, but Miss Large and Mr Robert Dawson acquitted themselves well. Miss Eve Trudell sang "Ombra mai fu" in excellent style, and Miss Marshall was loudly applauded in Hubay's violin solo, "Hejre Kati." Miss Winifred Palfreman displayed talent in "Charmant Oiseau," by David. A little more finish in the execution of the florid passages would have increased the effect. Miss Edith Withycombe would have been wise to select a less hackneyed song than "My heart is weary," which, however, she sang fairly well. Several other students took part in the concert, some of them choosing pieces and songs rather too difficult—for example, "L'Extase de la Vierge," by Massenet, set down for Miss Coffyn, a vocal study only fitted for an experienced artiste. Generally the concert gave great pleasure, and the professors and accompanists performed their duties most admirably.

OLD OPERAS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Notwithstanding the vast number of letters that have appeared in the various theatrical journals in reference to the non-success of English opera in this city, I venture to ask you to kindly ventilate my opinion and suggestions.

I am inclined to think that the managers of English opera companies credit the general London public with a taste and knowledge of high-class music to which it has not yet attained. Many go to hear Wagner's operas, not that they are really entertained, but that it is the fashion; for I think it must be admitted that melody in most cases is somewhat obscure. Nothing more clearly demonstrates this than the continued popularity of Maritana and The Bohemian Girl. This being the case, why not produce in English the following:—Les Huguenots, Robert le Diable, La Juive, and Lucrezia Borgia? These operas are full of melody, and, depend upon it, melody is what is wanted by the general London public.

I have witnessed all these operas in English in the fifties at Drury-lane (manager, A. Bunn); also at the Surrey (manageress and prima donna, Emma Romer, who, for some years produced them there during the summer months, Herr Meyer Lutz being her conductor). Italian opera was afterwards tried at the Surrey by Mr Willet Beale (Alfred Mellon being conductor), but it was a failure, for you may rely that the public like to hear the music rendered in a language they know, even if they only catch a word here and there.

I shall feel obliged if you can find space for this in your next issue, and beg to subscribe myself,

Yours faithfully, L. F. CHAPUY.

Clarisse	MISS MADGE BERESFORD
Madame Chabot	MISS ALICE LANGLEY
Jacqueline Fitzmaurice	MRS LEWIS WALLER

The only information about the origin of Miss Jack to be gathered from the programme is that the piece is produced by arrangement with the Smart Set Publishing Company, Limited. This is the second venture of Mrs Lewis Waller within the space of a few weeks' time. Miss Jack is, in fact, quite different in aim and texture from any other play in which Mrs Waller has been seen for some time, and Wednesday's audience as a whole seemed vastly pleased to see her in a rôle which afforded her such opportunities for an entirely light and charming exercise of her gifts.

Miss Jack can hardly be described as a comedy of manners, unless the term be meant to imply ill manners, for at least one prominent and representative character, no less than a duchess, is made to descend to quite low levels of vituperation, and the rest are not peculiarly distinguished in their style of deportment and address; it may rather be regarded as a sentimental story, the sentiment of which is subordinated to the lesser interests, entertaining in themselves, of a society environment. This repression of the sentimental does not depreciate the play; it is rather strong, in fact, by virtue of a certain depth of suggestion, which as a rule is preferable to expression in this kind. It serves also to create a secondary interest round Miss Jack—the heroine of the story—who is loved in this temperate style by a man who watches what, for the audience as well as for the other personages of the play, is the development of her character from an original motive of revenge to a pleasing issue. In fine, the character and fortunes of Miss Jack are the pith and pivot of the piece.

This young lady, Jacqueline Fitzmaurice, arrives in London from Colorado. She has lived there with one Colonel Ralston, her guardian, on whose death she finds herself in possession of a bundle of love letters from a great English lady, who had wrecked his life. Being in possession of some thousands of dollars of her own, she resolves to foist herself, armed with the letters, on the lady in question for the pleasures of a London season in the best society. On the vessel which brings her to England she encounters the Duke and Duchess of St. Aubyn and young Gerald Tenby, between whom and the youthful Duchess, who has married the grey old Duke for his money, a tender feeling exists. The antipathy of the Duchess for Miss Jack begins with the preference of Gerald Tenby for the charms of the adventurous American girl, whose quarry in London, the Countess of Desborough, is a friend of this interesting trio. Miss Jack's first visit to the Countess, the opening scene of the play, is exceedingly well managed. Two arguments are employed to force the Countess to accept the situation—there are the letters, which must not be otherwise manœuvred, and almost equally potent is the unwelcome visitor's offer to add her four thousand pounds to the very slender resources of the Countess. Already Miss Jack has taken upon herself to secure a Press announcement of her arrival as "the copper princess," an American lady of fabulous wealth, whom the Countess of Desborough is to chaperone; and, of course, visits occur to the house, including those of the Duke and Duchess of St. Aubyn, Gerald Tenby, and a fatuous Lord Leighton, the subsequent refusal of whom by Miss Jack induces in him a posture of bitter and foolish contempt. Tenby also she listens to but lightly; she is more tolerant of Captain Ralph Alderson, who has ventured about the world, and knows Colorado—can even tell tales of daring and heroism in Colorado which stir her blood. He tells her one story of a young girl who has saved men's lives; he has her photo. in his pocket—she is the girl he will marry some day. It is obvious that the heroine of his thoughts is identical with the heroine of the play. But what he brings home to her most pointedly is his contempt for any person who could hold a threat over another person's head; no heroism is in that. On his departure Miss Jack hands to the Countess of Desborough her bundle of love-letters. The latter does not thrust the girl forth, however; she is so pleased with her impulse and her personality that she begs her to stay.

The persistency of Gerald Tenby in his proposals of marriage to Miss Jack; the sneering hostility of the Duchess of St. Aubyn toward the woman who has unwittingly diverted from her the love of Tenby, the man she ought to have married five years ago, but for her ambition; the growing affection between the Countess of Desborough and her protégée; and the good-humoured reserve of Captain Alderson in the furtherance of his friendship with Miss Jack—these are the staple threads of interest until the incident of the breaking of Stringer's bank occurs. "Jack's" money is involved; and, in spite of her pretence of untold millions in America, she feels that an ignominious end of her adventure is here. The Duchess of St. Aubyn finds a half-written confession of Miss Jack to Captain Alderson, and the story of the American girl's imposture immediately goes round London. Alderson, however, comes to the rescue in clever style. At his dictation, Miss Jack completes a second epistle in terms which qualify the confession into a triumphant reinstatement; and upon this confounding of her enemies he is enabled to arrive at the consummation of his suit. With all her faults, Alderson is glad to win the young American for the sake of her beauty, her generosity, and her past heroism. A sense of the improbabilities of the plot is now and then overcome by excellences of dialogue and situation. An incident especially worthy of note is the Duke of St. Aubyn's discovery of his wife and Gerald Tenby in a compromising situation—an incident which is made curiously convincing by tactful dialogue, added to the fact that the infatuated old Duke is in a state of senile decay. The extremely light and engaging style in which Mrs Lewis Waller plays the part of "Jack" Fitzmaurice is, however, chiefly responsible for the agreeable effect of the whole. Her lines are smart, and she has a ready instinct for the innumerable trifling details of by-play which go to make up the perfect exposition of a part. Above all, the play contains nothing offensive. Wednesday's audience certainly found it entertaining, and Mrs Waller had reason to congratulate herself upon at least a personal success.

Mr Eric Mayne's depiction of Captain Alderson, if rather languid, was marked by a pleasing delicacy and reserve. As the Countess of Desborough Miss Rosemary Rees acted with capital tact and grace, and Miss Ethel Warwick gave a bold and successful rendering of the ill-natured and disappointed Duchess of St. Aubyn. Mr Gomer May's Duke of St. Aubyn was a really good impersonation, and the moody Gerald Tenby was well portrayed by Mr T. Edmunds. Other parts of note were satisfactorily rendered by Miss Madge Beresford, Mr J. Henessey, Miss Minnie Rayner, and Mr Percy Baverstock.

A novel and pleasing innovation at this theatre, under the new management, is the permanent installation of an orchestra of ladies in Russo-Turkish costume.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

THE new theatre in Tottenham-street and Charlotte-street—the principal entrance being in the latter thoroughfare—is due to the enterprise of the Chevalier E. Distin-Maddick, the distinguished surgeon. It is to be called La Scala, and it takes the place of the old Prince of Wales's, brought into prominence by the ever-memorable reign of the Bancrofts. It would be difficult to imagine a lovelier interior than that planned by Mr Frank Verity, the architect, from the ideas submitted to him by Dr. Maddick. It is entirely of marble, and a beautiful feature of the auditorium is to be found in two fine boxes—one on each side of the house. These are built square, with marble columns, and harmonise admirably with the architectural details of the proscenium. There are two magnificent staircases, and the visitor upon entering the theatre cannot fail to be at once impressed with the complete departure, both in architecture and decoration, that has been made from the methods hitherto pursued in theatre building.

THE La Scala has been a long-cherished idea of the Doctor's, and amongst those friends he took into his confidence he became an object of wonder. One rallied him on his rashness in dreaming of the resuscitation of the "Queen's Dust Hole," as the ancient theatre once used to be called, which had even been tried and abandoned by the Salvation Army. He was not to be deterred from his project, however. His ideal theatre is now an accomplished fact, and its beauties will be revealed on Monday to invited guests, who will be received by Lady Bancroft after that distinguished actress has let herself into the house with a golden key. Sir Squire Bancroft will then say a few words about the future plans of London's latest theatre proprietor. The small colonnade that formed the chief entrance to the old Prince of Wales's Theatre is for sentimental reasons retained, and through it we now reach the stage-door of the new house.

SIGNOR LEONCAVALLO'S new opera Der Roland von Berlin was produced at Berlin on Tuesday evening. The "book" deals with the struggle between the Elector Frederick and the rival towns of Berlin and Koellin. The picture of life in Berlin in the fifteenth century given in the first act was very striking, the crowds being admirably drilled, and the stage-pictures being full of life and colour. In the scenes in which Berlin is captured by the Elector the military note predominated, and the handsome figures of the Elector and his knights on horseback in the centre of the stage, surrounded by a crowd of men-at-arms and archers, made a most effective picture. The music is melodious and effective. The Emperor was delighted with the opera. He decorated Signor Leoncavallo with the Order of the Crown of the Second Class, and gave Signora Leoncavallo a magnificent necklace. Fräulein Destinn, who played the principal part, received a bracelet with the Emperor's initials in sapphires, and Dr. Muck, the conductor, obtained the Order of the Red Eagle. The principal male singers were given rings and scarfpins by the Emperor, each bearing his monogram.

MR BEERBOHM TREE'S recent benefit performances at His Majesty's Theatre resulted in £262 4s. being handed over to the Actors' Benevolent Fund, and £432 0s. 6d. to Mrs Edmund Phelps.

MR AND MRS KENDAL concluded their autumn tour on Saturday night at the Theatre Royal, Brighton, with a performance of their latest success, The Housekeeper. Their next spring tour will commence on Feb. 6 at Leamington.

MR LAWIS WALLER, who sent the Actors' Benevolent Fund £6 on the 26th of last October, has again sent to the secretary the sum of £4 15s. 3d., both these amounts having been collected by the sale of his autographs. The secretary informs us that Sir Henry Irving, Mr Tree, Mr Alexander, Mr Welch, and several others are daily sending him postal orders for the Fund.

MR FRITZ ZOBN, who has written the new farcical comedy The Designers, to be produced at the Brixton Theatre on Feb. 13, is a well-known man on 'Change. He has several works to his credit, the most popular, perhaps, being his holiday novel, "Bunce, the Bobby, and the Broads," which has run into several editions. Another well-known figure on 'Change, Mr W. F. Downing, has written a special one-act piece to be put on in front of The Designers, and has named it The Happiest Day of His Life. Mr Downing will be remembered as the author of Hearts and Coronets, produced at the Grand, Fulham, in May last, and Lady Tetley's Divorce, which was brought out by Mrs Patrick Campbell. This play was translated and introduced into the répertoire of the German Stage Society.

THE dramatised version of Ian MacLaren's famous Scottish story, Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush, has had considerable success in the United States and Canada, having kept the stage for five years on the other side of the Atlantic. The entire rights of production in Great Britain and Ireland have, we hear, been acquired by Mr Durward Lely, the famous Scottish tenor, and Mr William Mollison, his coadjutor in many Scottish dramatic productions. It is intended to put the piece on the stage next spring, when a specially organised company will open its tour in Liverpool in April.

MR EDWARD COMPTON, who has just returned from the Mediterranean cruise quite well and strong, will start for a six months' tour on Boxing Night. Provincial audiences will warmly welcome back the popular manager, who has given them so much pleasure in the past.

MR EDWARD TERRY left Southampton on Saturday last in the American Line mail steamer St. Paul for New York, where he will make his first appearance in the United States, beginning a tour with his company at the Princess Theatre in that city on Christmas Eve. Accompanying Mr Terry were Mrs Terry, his daughter Miss Beatrice Terry, Mrs Charles Terry, and twelve members of his company. A large number of friends gave the party hearty "send-offs" from Waterloo Station and Southampton.

MR JOHN LE HAY, the popular comedian and ventriloquist, has taken up the part of Coquenard in Messager's opera Véronique, still running with uninterrupted success at the Apollo. Mr Graves, the original representative of the part, has had to leave London in order to fill his engagement as principal comedian at the Shakespeare, Liverpool. Mr Le Hay was also engaged for pantomime at Glasgow, but was kindly released by Mr Wyndham.

A JUVENILE poster-designer is somewhat of a novelty. The artist to whom is due the credit for the design for a pictorial advertisement of Mr J. M. Barrie's forthcoming Christmas play is Master Ben Nicholson. He is only ten years of age, and is the son of Mr William Nicholson, who has designed the dresses for the production. The drawing from which the poster has been made was done by Master Nicholson when seven years of age.

THE directors' report of the Gaiety Theatre Company, Limited, for the year ended June 30 states that the profit amounts to £13,811. This, with the amount brought forward, makes a total of £14,053, out of which an interim dividend has already been paid. It is now proposed to pay a further dividend of 3s. per share, free of income-tax, making a total distribution of 20 per cent. for the year, and leaving £2,053 to be carried forward

THE matinée on behalf of the Fresh Air Fund, which will be given at the St. James's Theatre, on Jan. 10, has certainly a full programme. The opening piece will be a fairy play, written by Miss Netta Syrett. Miss Sybil Keymer, the little violin pupil of M. Wilhelmj; Miss Myra Hess, a thirteen-year-old pianist from the Royal Academy of Music (who has been given special permission to appear by Sir A. C. Mackenzie); and Miss Dorothy Neville, whose success at the Æolian Hall was a feature of the past season, will give a concert; and Miss Barbara Tate, a child reciter, will deliver a characteristic monologue in French, called "La Visite." Twenty-four boys from Mr James Bates's College for Choristers will sing, and a variety entertainment will be provided by children, two of whom will join in Mr Paul Rubens' quaint "gollywog" duet from The Cingalee; another juvenile contributing Miss Gertie Millar's new song in The Orchid, "The Little Sweep;" twenty young dancers from Mrs Wordsworth's dancing academy will take part in a set of Mr Wakeling Dry's charming action songs; and Mr Richard Speaight is arranging some interesting tableaux of child life. Mr Webster, who puzzled everyone with "Phroso," will substitute his small son for his doll, and Mr Tree has given permission for some of the children in the company at His Majesty's to enact scenes from The Tempest, and has also undertaken to supervise this part of the programme and to allow his little daughter Felicité to make her first public appearance on the stage and to sing. He has also given permission for a company of children from the training school attached to His Majesty's to perform a sketch, entitled A Christmas Party, under the direction of Mr Alfred Bellew and Mr Cecil Stock. The St. James's Theatre has been kindly lent for the occasion by Mr George Alexander.

"CHARLEY'S AUNT" seems to have taken a new lease of life. The advance booking at the Comedy promises well, and the audiences take the good points of the play as freshly every evening as if "Donna Lucia" and "the place where the nuts come from" had never been heard of before. Mr Stanley Cooke formerly played Babs on tour 1,460 times—a record that exactly tallied with the number of performances given in London—and he has returned to his old part with all his old enthusiasm. It is seven years since he gave it up. Seven and five, by the way, are his lucky numbers. He was born on the 15th of the month, married on a 15th, and his only daughter was born on a 5th. She has always been called the pretty little pet-name "Babs," in honour of Charley's Aunt, and Mr Cooke's son, who is only ten weeks old, is named Cyril, after the clever comedian's favourite part, Lord Cyril Garston, in The New Clown.

MISS MARIE STUDHOLME, who is always working in the interests of the Actors' Benevolent Fund, has just forwarded to the secretary a further sum of £5, which she has collected by making a small charge for her autograph.

THE collaboration of Captain Basil Hood and Mr Leslie Stuart as librettist and composer is a union of very happy augury, and a most promising combination of wit and melody. This "joining of forces" is not merely for the moment, and we look forward to the result with great interest. Captain Hood is the son of the late Sir Charles Hood, and was educated at Wellington College and at the Military College, Sandhurst. Mr Leslie Stuart became organist to St. John's Cathedral, Salford, at the age of fifteen, and was organist for seven years to the Church of the Holy Name, Manchester.

ANTIPHOLUS OF SYRACUSE, in The Comedy of Errors, produced by the Elizabethan Stage Society at Terry's Theatre, is played by Mr Hubert Carter, who is a Yorkshireman, and Antipholus of Ephesus is in the hands of Mr John M. Troughton, who comes from Westmoreland. They make up so effectively that it is almost impossible to distinguish them from one another, but off the stage the resemblance is only to be found in height and build, their faces and colouring being very dissimilar. Mr Troughton is one of the many actors who could, if he chose, make his way in the world as an artist. He passed his boyhood at Kendal, in his native county, and was apprenticed at fourteen to a firm of carpet designers, little expecting that he would ultimately take to the boards instead.

HE afterwards studied at South Kensington, and gained his teacher's certificate, but finally relinquished the possibilities of art work for the possibilities of the stage about five years ago. Mr Troughton has had his share of small tours in fit-up towns, but even at the beginning of his comparatively short theatrical career he was fortunate enough to play good parts in several sterling melodramas, including Two Little Vagabonds and Sporting Life. When The Merry Wives of Windsor was revived at Manchester some time back he was cast for the part of John Rugby. His other Shakespearian experiences have been in the rarely acted plays, Timon of Athens and The Comedy of Errors. Mr Troughton has been a member of the Elizabethans for the last seven weeks.

MR JOHN COATES returns home from Germany on Sunday. The popular tenor has been meeting with great success on the Continent, singing in oratorio and grand opera. He was presented with a silver laurel wreath by some of the prominent citizens at Mainz. Mr Coates is engaged to sing at the London Ballad Concerts in February.

THE return match between a team of actors, representing the George Edwardes Golfing Society, and a team of cricketers, captained by Mr G. L. Jessop, was to have taken place on Wednesday on the links of the Manor Golf Club, at Ashford (Middlesex). The actors won the first match at Northwood a few weeks ago by one point, and another interesting day's golf was expected on Wednesday. Unfortunately, however, the weather proved very wet, and, although all the couples started, the match was not completed. In the matches which were finished the play was fairly close. For the actors, Mr Herbert Ross, playing level, beat Mr G. W. Beldam by 2 holes up and 1 to play; Mr Lawrence Rea, receiving 3 strokes, beat Mr George Brann by 2 and 1; Mr Lawrence Grossmith beat Mr Mornington Cannon on the home green; and Mr Arthur Hatherton defeated Mr R. P. Hamilton. For the cricketers, Mr H. H. Hilton, giving a third, beat Mr Rutland Barrington by 4 and 3; and Mr S. Drysdale beat Mr H. Thorley. Several of the other cricketers were in winning positions when, owing to the rain, their matches were by mutual arrangement abandoned. Foursomes were to have been decided in the afternoon, but, although a few friendly matches took place, there was no play in the inter-team contest, which was abandoned as unfinished.

MADAME SARAH BERNHARDT has achieved a triumph by her performance of L'Aiglon at Athens. The French actress paid a visit on Tuesday to the grave of her husband, the late M. Damala, and placed flowers upon it. She then visited the Akropolis, which excited her intense admiration.

THE Queen has graciously accepted a copy of the important work on historic gloves and shoes which Mr W. B. Redfern has been engaged upon for some time. The full title of the book is "Royal and Historic Gloves and Ancient Shoes." It is profusely illustrated by large plate reproductions of photographs and water-colour drawings, taken from the actual existing articles, lent by the various owners or by the curators of the museums in which they are treasured. The letterpress matter is ample and descriptive. The work will be published early in the new year.

IN the Court of Chancery, on Saturday, before Mr Justice Farwell, Mr Angus Robert Grant asked his lordship to say that the Gaiety Bars and Restaurant Company, Limited, and certain shareholders in the Company were liable to him to the extent of £1,000. Mr Jenkins said that the Gaiety Bars and Restaurant Company were the owners of the old Gaiety Restaurant. There were only eight shareholders in the company. As trustee for a Mr Layton, the plaintiff held 1,000 shares. In 1899 the site of the Restaurant was taken over by the London County Council for the Strand improvement. Another restaurant and hotel were to be erected, close to the old Gaiety, and worked by a new company. Further capital being required for the new company, the shareholders were asked to subscribe. Plaintiff declined to do so, and some of the other shareholders, calling themselves the Syndicate, took over plaintiff's 1,000 shares, agreeing to pay him £1,000 out of the first available assets of the company, after certain prior claims had been paid. What was contemplated by the parties was that the scheme should be carried out, the old company ultimately wound up, and the surplus assets distributed. When the plaintiff asked for his money, he was told that trade debts had to be paid off. Nevertheless, he believed money had been distributed among the shareholders. He was offered 1,000 shares in the new company, but declined to take them. Plaintiff also asked for an injunction on the ground that the defendants were dealing with the assets without regard to his claim. The hearing was adjourned till Monday, when a declaration was made in favour of the plaintiff against all the defendants, except a Mr Bloomfield.

THE professional musicians of Sydney recently organised themselves into a trades union, and, as such, are affiliated to the Trades and Labour Council of that city. At the last meeting of this Council, which is the central supervising body of delegates from all the affiliated unions, the professional musicians submitted a grievance. They protested against other unions "springing" on them requests for gratuitous services at "smoking socials and concerts." It seems to be a case of out of the frying-pan into the fire with the Sydney professional musicians. They thought they would improve their position and maintain a living wage by becoming trade unionists, but they find themselves called upon to give their services without payment to brother unionists.

THE cast of Peggy Machree, the new play with music, by Patrick Bidwell, which will be produced by Charles E. Hamilton at Wyndham's Theatre on the evening of Boxing Day, will include Miss Marie Dainton, Miss Dorothy Drake, Mrs E. H. Brooke, Miss Agnes Thomas, Miss Nancy Malone, Miss Kathleen Dawn, Miss Bertha Seaton, Miss Nessie Walker, Mr E. H. Kelly, Mr Stanley Pringle, Mr J. Græme Campbell, Mr Shiel Barry, Mr Chris Walker, Mr William Wilson, Mr A. S. Barber, Mr Ernest Bryant, Mr John Morley, and Mr Denis O'Sullivan.

MR WILLIAM MACLAREN, who will take over Claudian, with all the magnificent costumes and scenery used by the late Mr Wilson Barrett in his last revival of that play, has been steadily making a reputation in the part of Pierre Lorance, in Proof, which he is now touring for the fifth consecutive year. He will be supported, in Claudian, by Miss Lily C. Bandmann and a strong cast, and will commence his tour with the drama in August next. Mr Maclaren will wear the same costumes which Mr Barrett wore in the last revival of the play.

MR BEERBOHM TREE has received an offer from Mr Oscar Asche to contribute to Mr Tree's Shakespearian festival in April. It can scarcely be doubted that the proposal will be accepted with eagerness.

MR BENSON'S Shakespearian Theatrical Company will leave England in the Imperial Direct West India steamer Port Kingston for Jamaica on the 31st inst., the Elder, Dempster Company taking them out free in order to assist in popularising the island as a pleasure resort.

THE King and Queen and suite visited the Criterion Theatre on Saturday evening, and witnessed the performance of The Freedom of Suzanne; the Prince and Princess of Wales were present at the performance of Beauty and the Barge, at the New Theatre; and the Duke and Duchess of Fife witnessed Mrs Brown-Potter's production of the two "music-dramas," Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci, at the Savoy.

A GRAND special matinée is billed for to-day at Her Majesty's Theatre, Walsall, for the benefit of Mr W. H. Westwood, when the programme will be contributed to by ladies and gentlemen from all the principal theatres and music halls of Birmingham and district.

A READING of King Henry VIII., under the auspices of the British Empire Shakespeare Society, will be given in the hall of the Passmore Edwards Institute to-morrow evening. The following ladies and gentlemen have kindly consented to read:—Miss Maud Milton, Miss Hazel Thompson, Miss Kelly; and Messrs Acton Bond, Lyn Harding, Ernest Leicester, A. E. Drinkwater, John Macfarlane, Clive Currie, and Spencer Geach.

DURING a temporary indisposition of Miss Laura Walker, the part of Cigarette, in Under Two Flags, was recently played for three nights by Miss Bertha Kingston. So pleased was Mr Mark Blow with her performance that he offered her the part for his spring tour. Having, however, been engaged as far back as last summer by Messrs Alfred Northway and W. V. Garrod to play the leading rôle in their tour of The Sledge-Hammer, Miss Kingston was unable to accept Mr Blow's offer.

MR FRED R. HAMLIN, of the firm of Hamlin, Mitchell, and Fields, died suddenly at his home in New York on the 27th ult. He was the son of John A. Hamlin, well known in Chicago theatrical circles as the manager of the Grand Opera House, and a brother of Harry A. Hamlin, also connected with theatrical business. Mr Hamlin leaves a widow. His theatrical career began about five years ago with the production of Arizona. Recently he produced The Wizard of Oz and Babes in Toyland.

MR LESTER COLLINGWOOD, who has now entered on the third year of his reign at the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, held his second anniversary on Friday, Dec. 9, when he appeared as Captain Rodney Haynes, in When London Sleeps. The occasion afforded his numerous friends and the members of his company, as well as the general public, an opportunity of displaying their admiration; and a diamond stud and an illuminated address were given to Mr Collingwood, on behalf of the subscribers, by Mr A. W. Matcham, and an illuminated address was presented on behalf of the When London Sleeps company by Mr Fred Bernardo. Mr Collingwood responded with sincerity and taste, the audience acclaiming the presentations with ardour.

AT the Theatre Royal, Chatham, to-night, Mr Henry Swinerd's company, in Dare-Devil Dorothy, will terminate an unbroken tour of seventy-two weeks. There will be one week's vacation, during which time all the scenery will be repainted by Charles G. Cooke and assistants. The next tour opens at the Victoria Theatre, Broughton, on Boxing Day, being a return visit in eight months. The piece has bookings as far ahead as May 14, 1906, is still under the direction of J. W. Cordiner, and will soon enter on its sixth year of tour.

MR ARTHUR BOUSCHIER will produce on Wednesday afternoon, at the Garrick Theatre, his annual children's entertainment. Lady Jane's Christmas Party, an old-fashioned episode, in one act, by Tom Gallon, will be played by a cast including Mr Charles Goodhart, Mr Webb Darleigh, Mr Edward Rigby, Miss Kate Bishop, and Miss Nellie Bowman. This will be followed by a musical medley, entitled Little Black Sambo and Little White Barbara, adapted by Rutland Barrington from the "Dumpy Books," with music by Wilfred Bendall and Frederick Rosse. In the cast of this will be Miss Nellie Bowman, Mr Frank Lawton, Mr Edward Rigby, Mr John Crooke, Mr Fred Neeri, Mr D. Imbert, Miss Iris Hawkins, and Miss Kate Bishop.

THE Playgoers' Club's Ladies' Christmas dinner, with Miss Ellis Jeffreys in the chair, will take place to-morrow in the Grand Hall of the Hotel Cecil.

MR GEORGE EDWARDES'S cast for the production of Lady Madcap at the Prince of Wales's Theatre this evening includes Mr Maurice Farkoa, Mr Aubrey Fitzgerald, Mr Fred Emney, Mr Leedham Bantock, Mr Dennis Eadie, Mr J. Edward Fraser, Mr Spencer Trevor, Mr Herbert Sparling, Mr George Carroll, Mr R. St. George, Mr Richard Kavanagh, Mr G. P. Huntley, Miss Delia Mason, Miss Eva Sandford, Miss Nellie Massey, and Miss Adrienne Augarde.

MR TREE wishes it to be distinctly understood that there will be no evening performances of The Tempest next week. Only three matinées—on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday—will be given, after which the theatre will be closed till Boxing Night, when The Tempest will begin its final three weeks before it gives place to Much Ado About Nothing, in which Miss Winifred Emery and Miss Tree will play Beatrice and Hero and Mr Tree Benedick.

THE news that Mr Robert Brough is returning to Australia with a new comedy company, of which Mr G. S. Titheradge is to be a leading member, is a theme of congratulatory comment in the Melbourne and Sydney papers brought by this week's mail. In these two chief cities of the Commonwealth both Mr Brough and Mr Titheradge were exceedingly popular with playgoers in bygone years, and the prospect of a renewal of the old acquaintance is evidently regarded with the liveliest satisfaction. Mr Brough was for a long time in partnership with Mr Dion Boucicault as lessees and managers of the Melbourne Bijou Theatre, when Mr Titheradge was playing under the management of Messrs Williamson and Musgrove.

MISS KATE VOLLAIRE, daughter of the late John Vollaire, has been seriously ill, but has now happily recovered, and is ready for work again.

THE book of Mr Robert Arthur's seventh operatic pantomime, Aladdin, which he will produce at his Kennington Theatre on Christmas Eve, will be by Mr Frank Dix, and the music by Mr Julian H. Wilson. The ballets will be arranged by Miss Dolly Bell, and the scenery will be by Messrs J. Fowler Hogg and Charles Helmsley. The superb costumes will be designed by Comelli. The cast will include Miss Rachel Lowe, Miss Georgina Middleton, Mr Andre Caine, Mr Joseph Wilson, Mr Lyndon Wyatt, the Brothers Redmond, Miss Woolgar Mellon, Miss Dorie Deane, Miss Natalie Grant, and Mr Harry Brayne. The Celeste Troupe of dancers and the trained chorus and ballet is also engaged, and the able stage-manager will be Mr Walter M'Ewan.

THE programme of the German company at the Great Queen-street Theatre next week will be as follows:—Monday and Tuesday, Die Goldene Spinne, a favourite farce by Franz V. Schoenthan, author of Im Bunten Rock; and Wednesday and Thursday, two performances of Traumulus. On Boxing Day a special performance will be given of Alt Heidelberg, the original of Mr George Alexander's Old Heidelberg.

THE Sainton-Dolby prize (contraltos) at the Royal Academy of Music, has been awarded to Esther Jane Hill, a native of Cheddleton, and the Rutson memorial prize (sopranos) to Caroline Hatchard, a native of Portsmouth.

MR F. R. BENSON, during his Shakespearian season at the Coronet Theatre, from Feb. 20 to March 18, will present a varied repertory, including seven plays of Shakespeare, two Old English comedies, and the Orestean Trilogy of Æschylus, Agamemnon, The Libation Bearers, and The Furies, an English version of which, by E. D. A. Morshead, will be produced during the season.

MR CLARENCE SOUNES will produce on Christmas Eve, at the Woolwich Grand Theatre, his fifth annual Christmas pantomime, entitled Beauty and the Beast. The book is by Mr J. Hickory Wood, and the music is composed and arranged by Messrs J. Rogers, Herr Blomé, and others. The fine scenery is by Messrs Tritschler, Dodson, Dunn, M'Cleery, Glover, and Harker, and the production will be stage-managed by Mr Chas. E. Paton, the ballets being arranged by Mr J. A. Collins. The parts of principal boy and principal girl will be in the able hands of Miss Maude Danks and Miss Gladys Huxley respectively, and the comedians of the cast include Mr Tom Conway and Mr Edwin Adeler as dame and baron. The demon king will be Mr C. Hinchliff. Other artistes engaged are Misses Lilian Stanley, Mavis Hope, Audrey Stafford, Connie Glenabyn, Florence May, Emily Taylor, Elsie Griffiss, and Nora Layton; Messrs C. Darrell, J. Wilkinson, Alf Maynall, R. Lomas, and the Brothers Harrison. The Stella Troupe of Dancers will appear, and specialities will be supplied by the Sisters Edwardes, Brothers Harrison, Wilkinson and Layton, Lomas, the Collins Troupe of Dancers, and the Orpheus Glee Singers. Among the principal scenes may be mentioned the Enchanted Garden, the Fairy Rose Bower, the Beast's Palace, and a grand Tableau of the Seasons. A great feature of the Rose Bower scene will be the electric lighting, with thousands of crystal lamps, a fairy fountain, and myriads of roses, and the lavish effect will be further enhanced by the collection of dresses and stage jewels recently purchased by Mr and Mrs Sounes at the Anglesey sale. The pantomime will be produced by Mr Clarence Sounes, assisted by Mr Chas. E. Paton.

THE "William Archer" prize for "the most beautiful speaking of a piece of blank verse" by a pupil of the Academy of Dramatic Art, has been won by Mr Basil Watt, Mr Joseph Goggin, and Miss Agnes Bartholomew being honourably mentioned. The examiners, Lady Bancroft, Mr H. B. Irving, and Mr Norman Forbes, state that the recitations they had heard reflected the highest credit on the school.

MR REGINALD DANCE AND MISS MARY ALLESTREE will play Jerry and a Sunbeam in aid of the Bolingbroke Hospital at the Shakespeare Theatre, on Monday.—Mr J. Henry Twyford, who has been playing at the Royalty Theatre in the six weeks' season of old English plays, has been re-engaged by Mr Philip Carr to sustain his original part of Humphrey in the revival of The Knight of the Burning Pestle.—Messrs Trevor Lowe, Leonard Pagden, and Lewis Gilbert's tour with Alice in Wonderland is fully booked, and starts at Hastings Dec. 26. Messrs Pagden and Gilbert will, in February, commence their tour with A Woman of Impulse, which is already consecutively booked up to June.

MISS MAY HENDERSON will leave Dover to-morrow night for Vienna, opening at the Apollo Theatre there on the following Sunday.

REHEARSALS of the children's pantomime The White Cat, by J. Hickory Wood and Arthur Collins, with music by J. M. Glover, due at Drury-lane Theatre at Christmas, are proceeding daily on the new stage. The principal parts in the Christmas annual will be taken by Harry Randall, Fred Eastman, Hugh J. Ward, Tom Hearn, Johnny Danvers, Tom Woottwell, and James Welch; Marie George, Jeannie Macdonald, May Gurney, and Queenie Leighton. Then there are those old favourites the Grigolatis, Queen and Le Brun as funny quadrupeds, and Whimsical Walker as clown.

THE cast of Mr J. M. Barrie's new three-act play for children, which is shortly to be produced at the Duke of York's Theatre, under the title of Peter Pan; or, The Boy Who Wouldn't Grow Up, includes Miss Nina Boucicault, Mr Gerald Du Maurier, Miss Dorothea Baird, Miss Hilda Trevelyan, Master George Hersee, Miss Winifred Geoghegan, Mr Arthur Lupino, Miss Jane Wren, Miss Joan Burnett, Miss Christine Silver, Mr A. W. Baskcomb, Miss Alice Dubarry, Miss Pauline Chase, Miss Phyllis Beadon, Mr Gerald Du Maurier, Mr George Shelton, Mr Sidney Harcourt, Mr Charles Trevor, Mr F. Annerley, Mr Hubert Willis, Mr J. English, Mr John Kelt, Mr Philip Darwin, Miss Miriam Nesbitt, and Miss Ella Q. May.

MISS LAURA BURT, who has been a member of Sir Henry Irving's company for some time, sailed for America a month ago, having been specially engaged as leading lady in the stock company of the Odéon Theatre, St. Louis. She opened on Dec. 6, playing Miss Viola Allen's part in The Palace of the King. Miss Burt, who will be remembered as Helen of Swabia, in Dante, is very popular in the United States.

THE sixth annual benefit in aid of the funds of the Bolingbroke Hospital, Wandsworth Common, will be held on Monday evening at the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham. Miss Mabel Love, Little Miss Marie Louise, Mr Lionel Brough, Mr G. Chirgwin, and Mr Gus Elen are among the many artists to appear. Messrs J. W. Hemming and Gaston G. Johnson will act as joint stage-managers.

AT the conclusion of the Christmas term of the Royal College of Music on Wednesday, Dec. 14, the following awards were made by the director and Board of Professors:—Council Exhibitions:—Composition, Geoffrey M. Palmer, £12; organ, Henry Gibson, £8; singing, Christian I. Keay, £9; violin, Adina J. Newton, £6, Janet C. Macfie, £6; violoncello, Maude Scruby, £9. The annual amount bequeathed by the late Edwin S. Dove (£13) for pupils who have distinguished themselves was awarded to Nannie Tout (singing).

WHEN M. Auguste Van Biene takes his Broken Melody to Australia in January his business-manager, Mr Edward Van Biene, will remain in England, but will continue to represent Mr Van Biene and transact all business during his absence.

MISS MARIE AUCKLAND (Mrs Charles Herrick) concludes to-night twelve months' starring tour in her original part in The Triumph of Truth.—Mr Cecil Clayton, who returned from South Africa early this year after a long engagement with Mr Leonard Rayne, has been engaged by Mr Arthur Carlton for the part of Wishee-Washee in the Ealing pantomime of Aladdin.—Mr Gordon Bailey has been re-engaged by Mr Lewis Waller to play the parts in Henry V. which he—Mr Bailey—sustained when Henry V. was produced by Mr Lewis Waller and Mr William Mollison at the Lyceum.

THE Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein and suite visited the Avenue Theatre on Thursday night to see the comic opera Ladyland.—Prince and Princess Christian witnessed the performance of The Walls of Jericho at the Garrick Theatre on Thursday evening.

AT the Royal Court Theatre, Liverpool, on Christmas Eve Mr Robert Arthur will produce Dick Whittington. Mr Frank Dix has written the "book," and the music is by Messrs J. O. Shepherd (leader of the orchestra of the theatre) and Jullien H. Wilson. Included in the company are Horace Mills, Walter Groves, Edward Lewis, E. W. Avery, Millar Anderson, Fred Storey, and Alexandre and Hughes; Hetty King, Fanny Dango, Amy Height, and Mabel Wainwaring

SIR PHILIP BURNE-JONES AND MR W. B. SPONG were appointed the sub committee to undertake the preliminary arrangements for the first public dinner of the Association, to be held on Sunday evening, Feb. 19. It was arranged to hold a special committee meeting for the election of new members at 8 0 on Wednesday week, the 28th inst. The annual general meeting was fixed for Monday, Jan. 9, 1905, at the Caledonian Hotel, Robert-street, and the secretary was instructed to provide a smoking concert to follow the business of the evening. Owners of sketches or paintings by Absolom, Bolena, W. E. Beverley, Bough Chambers, David Cox, Sidney Cooper, R A, Calcott, Gates, Grieves, Hunt, Leitch, Loutherbourg, Marinare, Mulready, R.A., Marshall, Naesmith, David Roberts, Clarkson-Stanfield, W. Telbin, sen., or other deceased scenic painters, and managers of theatres possessing models of their auditoriums or stages, or other articles of scenic or theatrical interest willing to lend them to the Scenic Artists' Association for their exhibition at the Grafton Galleries in April next are invited to communicate with the secretary, Mr H. Lawrence Harris, 5, Robert-street, Adelphi, W.C. Messrs George Edwardes, Fred Harrison, Cyril Maude, George Alexander, Martin Harvey, Forbes Robertson, and H. Beerbohm Tree have already signified their willingness to lend models, sketches, &c., and have graciously given permission to the artistes under their respective managements to volunteer their services to entertain at the exhibition.

THE Committee of the Scenic Artists' Association met for the fourteenth time at their offices, 5, Robert-street, on Monday evening last, the 12th inst., under the presidentship of Mr Walter Hann. There were present Messrs Edmund G. Banks, J. J. Markwell Davis, Richard Douglass, Wm. Harford, W. T. Hemsley, W. H. Owen, Harry Potts, W. H. Robinson, W. B. Spong, and George Tweddell, Sir Philip Burne-Jones, Bart., and Mr H. Lawrence Harris, secretary. The following new members were elected—viz., Messrs T. Clark-Lockett, of the New Court Theatre, Bacup; Ernest Howard, of the Opera House, Northampton, and Chas. J. Sayer, of Croydon. A letter was read from Mr Dion Boucicault on behalf of Mr Chas. Frohman, of the Duke of York's Theatre offering the loan of photographs to the forthcoming Exhibition. Sir James D. Linton, R.I., was elected an honorary member of the Association on the nomination of Mr Harry Potts, seconded by Mr W. B. Spong. Sir Philip Burne-Jones reported that he would ask Mr E. A. Abbey, R.A., to be the third member of the Hanging Committee of the Association's Exhibition. The Secretary reported that he had received additional promises to the Guarantee Fund, including ten guineas from Mr Hawes Craven. Mr Richard Douglass and Mr Harry Potts having presented a report of their visits to the West-end galleries under offer, it was unanimously resolved that Mr Walter Hann and Mr Harry Potts be authorised to negotiate for the rental of the Grafton Galleries, Grafton-street, Bond-street, for the exhibition of the association for the week of April 10 to 15, and to make all other necessary arrangements for the holding of the exhibition, and we are informed that since the meeting the galleries have been duly taken for that week.

THE NEW LA SCALA.

The Chevalier E. Distin-Maddick's new theatre on the site of the old Prince of Wales's is one of the most beautiful in London. From the gallery, distinctly the finest in any theatre, one has a free view of the whole stage from every seat.

The balcony—equivalent to the dress circle of most theatres—accommodates 250 people. Here the passage room between the rows of seats allows of complete freedom in moving about. At the back of this balcony is the magnificent saloon reserved for the balcony alone. The balcony is just above the street level, and all its doors lead at once into the street through broad passages. On the street level is a fine feature of the theatre, viz., the staircase. This, with a gentle decline, breaks away on either side into a magnificent flight of ivory-veined marble steps, leading to the orchestra stalls. Passing down the one side of the staircase we find a smoking saloon and lounge for gentlemen, and upon the other side a reception room for ladies. The foyer is clearly visible from the auditorium, and, moreover, each foyer affords another direct means of exit to the street. Upon the main staircase are arranged eight rows of armchairs spaced three feet apart. The staircase forms a fine architectural addition to the building, and unites the stalls with the street level. It makes a pleasant lounge and promenade, and adds another important means of exit from the theatre. The orchestra has been architecturally designed in unison with the rest of the house, and is sunk after the fashion of that in the Wagner theatre. The pit is entered direct from the street. It has a magnificent saloon, a grand reception hall, and a cloakroom The seating of the house is divided into stalls, staircase stalls, balcony, pit, and gallery.

Every seat in the house is numbered, and each seat booked or paid for will belong to the owner for the performance for which it is numbered. A book for each day and each performance, plainly described on the face of each ticket, will be issued.

If a person calls on Monday, let us say, requesting two pit seats, or two gallery seats for the following Friday, the box-office keeper will extract from his pit or gallery book, dated for that Friday, the first two tickets from the book. The same rule will apply to those paying at the doors at night, or at the time of a performance. The first come will be the first served.

The dressing-rooms, all light and airy, look on to the street, and are numerous and commodious, being supplied with hot and cold water and every requisite for the comfort and convenience of the company. There is a delightful and airy green room immediately off the stage for the use of the principal artists, and also a secondary one for the use of minor artists. The stage is adaptable to any kind of drama, opera, pantomime, or comedy. It has exits direct into streets on either side.

The old Prince of Wales's was first named the West London, then the Regency, afterwards the West London, and with the accession of William the Fourth, the Queen's, in compliment to Queen Adelaide. On a subsequent change of management it was called the Fitzroy, then again the Queen's. Lastly it was christened by Miss Marie Wilton (now Lady Bancroft) the Prince of Wales' Royal Theatre.

The old house came into existence 144 years ago, when, in 1760, it was erected on a portion of this site by Signor Pasquali. It was comparatively a band-box, and even in the flourishing days of the Bancrofts its money capacity was £150; to-day it is £350.

By the courtesy of the London County Council the proprietor has been allowed to retain the old porch, once the main entrance of the Prince of Wales's Theatre, under which men distinguished as statesmen and in almost every branch of science, art, and literature have passed. This porch will henceforth be the stage entrance. Messrs Allen and Son are the builders of the La Scala Theatre.

The timber used in the construction of the stage and gridiron is hard wood, which has been dressed by the fire-resisting process. There is an iron bridge connecting the two flies on the back wall, and the outlet from either gridiron or flies is easy, with exits on either side direct to the street. The execution of this work was placed in the hands of Mr E. A. Taylor, for twenty-one years at Drury-lane Theatre, for eleven of which he was master carpenter, and was responsible for many alterations at old Drury. Mr Taylor occupied a position as carpenter during the lesseeship of Mr James in the pre-Bancroft days, when the old house was known as the "Queen's."

The finest feature in the new building is the staircase. The most renowned theatre in Italy is "La Scala;" translated into English "La Scala" means the "staircase," hence the name chosen for the new house. There has been no attempt at beautifying the exterior of the house, but as far as the interior is concerned the most artistic and scholarly taste has been displayed, and the comfort of every class of playgoer has been studied and provided for.

"SERGEANT BRUE" is "going strong" at the Strand Theatre. When Miss Madge Lessing resigns the rôle of Aurora in order to take up her engagement at the Coliseum, that part will be played by Miss Alice Hollander, a young Australian who has successfully appeared on London concert platforms.

AT the Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpool, on Christmas Eve the pantomime of Aladdin will be presented. The authors are Messrs A. M. Thompson and R. Courtneidge. Mr Charles H. Taylor is responsible for the lyrics; Messrs Alfred and Herbert E. Haines the music; and Messrs Conrad Tritschler, R. M'Cleary, and Thomas Holmes the scenery. The artistes engaged include Carrie Moore, Billie Burke, Katie Vesey, Rosie Begarnie, Maggie Moore, George Graves, Fred Allandale, Arthur Reynolds, and Frank Danby.

PRINCESS CHRISTIAN and suite were present at the performances of The Decree Nisi and Lady Windermere's Fan at the St. James's Theatre on the 9th inst.; and on the same evening Princess Louise, Duchess of Fife, and the Duke of Fife attended the performance of Miss Eleanor Robson, in Merely Mary Ann, at the Duke of York's Theatre and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught visited the Gaiety Theatre and saw the performance of The Orchid.

MR WATKIN MILLS, the popular basso, is coming "home" by the incoming Australian mail steamer. He has had a highly successful tour through the Australian Commonwealth and New Zealand. In a farewell interview at Fremantle, Western Australia, he said he hoped to organise a complete concert company and return to Australia next year

THE usual weekly meeting of the council of the Actors' Association was held on Tuesday last. The hon. solicitors reported progress in several matters. The report of the Finance and General Purposes Committee was received. The secretary reported receipt of particulars in a case of alleged bogus management, and he was instructed to file same for future reference, and to advise the complainer to place the matter in the hands of the police.

A COMPLIMENTARY benefit has been organised for the benefit of Mr W. E. Barnett, business-manager of the County Theatre, Reading, and will take place on Monday. All who have had the opportunity of meeting Mr Barnett are agreed as to his sterling qualities as a business man and a manager. During his reign at the County Theatre he has made many friends. An attractive programme has been arranged.

"LADYLAND."

A New and Original Comic Opera,
in Two Acts and Three Scenes,
Written by Eustace Ponsonby, Music by Frank Lambert,
Produced at the Avenue Theatre, on Monday, Dec. 12.

Professor Puddle ..... Mr AUSTIN MELFORD
Harry Sartorys..... Mr RICHARD GREEN
Sir Geo. Pembroke, Bart. . Mr JOHN TRESAHAR
Peter ..... Mr ALFRED MAYFIELD
Max Moggins..... Mr WINDHAM GUISE
Roy ..... Mr GEORGE GIDDENS
Geraldine ..... Miss ALINE MAY
Jane Jingle ..... Miss GERALDINE ULMAR
Charity ..... Miss GURNEY DELAPORTE
Nina Weasel ..... Miss NANCY GIRLING
Susan ..... Miss MARGARET COOPER
Sally ..... Miss KITTY LINDLEY
Junona ..... Miss NONIE TREFUSIS
Alma Molyneux ..... Miss ETHEL IRVING

The dominant note of the production of Ladyland at the Avenue Theatre on Monday evening was one of pathos. It was sad to see so much liberal expenditure, hard work, and ability entirely wasted. The book of the piece is "simply impossible." There is an elaboration of dulness in it which only aggravates its inanity. It is absolutely deficient in humour; and some of it is completely incomprehensible. "Ladyland" is a colony where females "rule the roast," and men are of secondary importance. It is governed by a "great lady" named Geraldine. In order to preserve her sovereignty, she must marry one of the men of the colony; and she selects Roy, the oafish son of a miller. Alma Molyneaux, Geraldine's rival, is determined that the latter shall not wed the young miller, who is secretly betrothed to Charity Jingle, a village lass. At the suggestion of Alma, Roy disguises himself as a female gipsy; and Professor Puddle, one of a trio of aëronauts who have descended on the soil of "Ladyland," is dressed up in Roy's clothes and presented to Geraldine as her future husband. In the second act the story becomes still more inconsequent and bewildering. There is a conspirators' chorus, a surprise, and a quick change from black coats to dancing dress. A female detective, with a camera that goes off like a saloon pistol, startles people by taking "snaps" of them. Alma plans to blow up the palace in which the second scene of the act is laid, and is thwarted by Roy, who blacks his face, appears in the character of a nigger footman, is told by Alma to be ready to blow a trumpet as a signal to fire the mine, and refuses, at the critical moment, to do so. In the end, Geraldine and Alma pair off with the two younger aëronauts, and Roy gets his Charity Jingle. We defy the most sleuth-hound-like analyst of scenarios to unravel the mysteries of Mr Eustace Ponsonby's plot. The audience was mirthful but merciful, and contented itself with gently "guying" the more absurd details of the entertainment.

This leniency was greatly owing to the fact that there were so many favourite artistes in the cast. It was not their fault that the piece was not a success; for each and all worked most bravely and loyally to the last. Mr Austin Melford was especially active and alert as Professor Puddle. He looked extremely quaint and eccentric, and acted with his usual acuteness, individuality, and dry humour. That admirable vocalist Mr Richard Green sang two rather pleasing ballads with his wonted skill and accomplishment; Mr John Tresahar played an easy-going aristocrat unimpeachably, and Mr George Giddens gave a "truly rural" rendering of the "hopeless" rôle of the miller's son, Roy Moggins. Miss Aline May was a dainty and agreeable exponent of the character of Geraldine; and Miss Geraldine Ulmar depicted an irritable ex-nurse effectively, Miss Gurney Delaporte being a light and artless Charity. Miss Nancy Girling did what was possible with the part of Nina Weasel; and that charming comedienne, Miss Ethel Irving, though utterly thrown away as Alma Molyneux, nevertheless "saw the thing through" to the end, and introduced into her hopeless part some pretty, mock-masculine "airs and graces." The music was reminiscent and commonplace, but lively, smooth, and pleasant. The stage-management was excellent, and the mounting very tasteful and effective, the dresses, designed by Mr Robert Crafter, being equally artistic and sumptuous. The chorus was capital, both in appearance and ability. Mr W. Harford and Mr Bruce Smith deserved great credit for the three pretty sets they had painted; and Mr E. Dagnall must be praised for his work of "production." The audience called all the principal artists at the close, and endeavoured to induce the author of the "book" to put in an appearance, but he did not do so.

"A LITTLE BROWN BRANCH."

Comedy, in Three Acts, by Berte Thomas,
Produced at a Matinée at the Court Theatre,
on Wednesday, Dec. 14.

Simon Harwood ..... Mr BERTE THOMAS
John Brown ..... Mr GRAHAM BROWNE
Mr Farquharson ..... Mr SLAINE MILLS
Rev. Noel Sylvester..... Mr CHARLES ALLAN
Mr Peppercorn ..... Mr W. FARREN, Jun.
Mrs Peppercorn..... Miss AGNES THOMAS
Mrs Sylvester..... Miss BESSIE PAGE
Mrs Levy..... Miss KATE MILLS
Mrs Bell ..... Miss MARY STUART
Priscilla Farquharson.... Miss WINIFRED FRASER
Margaret Granger ..... Miss FRANCES IVOR

A Little Brown Branch is a simple, sentimental, and unimportant piece, the chief merit of which is the unaffected sincerity of the author's treatment of a well-worn and familiar theme. Margaret Granger, finding it impossible to live with her stepmother, has run away from home, and has "gone wrong." After many years—this is the point at which Mr Berte Thomas's play begins—she is found living in a country cottage, the proprietress of a kind of moral sanatorium, where people with bad nerves or imperfect tempers are "cured" by the process of making them perform manual labour. Her manager, Simon Harwood, is a handsome, middle-aged man, and she falls in love with him. He proposes to her, and she accepts his offer of marriage. All might yet be well, in spite of Margaret's "past," did not her father turn up at the cottage, bringing with him her younger sister Priscilla, whom he leaves with Margaret to be taken care of for a time. Priscilla is unaware of Margaret's relationship to herself, but they become very fond of each other. Harwood is fascinated by Priscilla, and makes love to her passionately, confessing that he is engaged to another woman. Priscilla tells him to sacrifice himself to his duty and to marry this other woman, and he acquiesces in her decision. But Margaret discovers that Harwood has ceased to care for her, and loves Priscilla; so she (Margaret) releases him from his engagement to her. She is, however, somewhat consoled by the affection which she has inspired in a young man named John Brown, who presses his suit so perseveringly that, in the end, he gets Margaret to consent to their being bethrothed.

The action of A Little Brown Branch is hardly enough to carry its three acts of duologue, but the piece was nicely played, and gave at the Court Theatre on Wednesday afternoon last a mild and temperate satisfaction. Mr Berte Thomas acted with tact, discretion, and firmness as Simon Harwood, and Mr Graham Browne played John Brown with a delicacy of touch and a quiet humour which were very commendable. Miss Winifred Fraser was agreeably sweet and simple as Priscilla Farquharson. The patients at the sanatorium were amusingly embodied by Mr Charles Allan as the Rev. Noel Sylvester, Mr W. Farren, jun., as an irritable Mr Peppercorn, Miss Agnes Thomas as Mrs Peppercorn, Miss Bessie Page as Mrs Sylvester, Miss Kate Mills as Mrs Levy, and Miss Mary Stuart as Mrs Bell. We are obliged to bracket these artists, as they had little opportunity of individual distinction, and in most cases their tasks were far beneath their abilities; but they each and all worked carefully and conscientiously. Mr Slaine Mills was stern but subdued as Margaret's father, Mr Farquharson. A Little Brown Branch is a pretty piece, but is quite outside the range of the practical politics of the playhouse.

"THE ACTORS' BENEVOLENT FUND."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I have read the letters from Mr Willard and Mr Mouillot in your issue of the 12th inst., and I must certainly protest against their system of taxing the smaller-salaried members of our profession one night's salary in the year—even for the A.B.F. Do either of these gentlemen realise what that would mean to the man earning £3 a week, to say nothing of those at 25*s.* and a guinea?

The average annual salary of the £3-a-week actor is not more than £70 to £80 a year after he has paid for his wardrobe, wigs, &c., and at times fares to join his company and agents' commissions. Out of that £70 or £80 some have ties and calls upon their purses that are thicker than water.

No, if you must tax, tax the salary of £5 and upwards, and urge the others to give all they can. Do not tax on a stated day in the year, as that might and would hit hard those who were playing a special week or a fortnight, but out of each and every fifteenth week's salary (all salaries to be full weeks' and no breaks in the engagements except Holy Week and the week before Christmas) tax one half-a-night's salary. I never knew the A.B.F. made any calls except at its annual dinner, the kindly matinée, and Actors' Saturday. I think if the workings of the Fund could be made a little more known, the number of people assisted monthly, and the amount, it would stir actors to greater energy.

I have taxed myself one sixth of my best English salary, which I am mailing to Mr Coltson.

I have thought of another scheme which I do not think would be felt as a hardship by those earning the smallest salary: tax all actors one penny in the pound at each treasury. This would mean that the actor working forty weeks in the year would pay a tax of one full night's salary; if only ten weeks, one quarter of a night. This tax could be borne by the smallest salaried man, and the income to the A.B.F., would, I feel sure, be as great as taxing on one special night in the year. To collect this tax, I would suggest the Fund issuing books of stamps or tickets as the Actors' Home in America does for it tax on free admissions to the theatres.

Yours faithfully, Q. M'PHERSON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I approve of Mr Cecil Raleigh's scheme, and am willing to support it.

Yours faithfully, IRENE VANBRUGH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I should like to reply to Mr Frank Liston's letter of last week and his rather rude allusion to me, but as this is a discussion on the "Actors' Benevolent Fund, and How to help it," I pass his remarks by with the silence they deserve. Mr Cecil Raleigh's scheme seems the one most favoured, and I hope to see it carried through.

Yours faithfully, CHARLES BOULT.
Rosslyn, Waldegrave-road, Teddington, Dec. 12.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I sincerely think the penny-a-week tax from actors and actresses, to be collected by the acting-manager, the most feasible suggestion. Hundreds of our profession could not afford one night's salary, especially if they had been out of an engagement for some weeks or months previously. The modest copper per week would not be missed.

Yours faithfully, C. P. AMALIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Miss E. Wynne Matthison, in her letter regarding the Actors' Benevolent Fund, seems to think because it is a charitable institution that the clergy may help, but the clergy have already enough poor to see after and enough sins to answer for without mixing themselves up in the affairs of broken-down actors, who ought to know the risks they are taking when they enter into the theatrical profession. Thanking you in anticipation,

Yours faithfully, THOMAS P. ASHBY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—May I add a few lines to the correspondence in your columns headed "The Actors' Benevolent Fund, and How to Help It," and say that I am most heartily in accord with Mr Cecil Raleigh's suggestions? I have not heard or read of any suggestion that is so likely to embrace the assistance of the majority of the members of the theatrical profession and at the same time enable them to contribute, through their services, to the funds of this most admirable institution. I was on the committee of this Fund for many years, and it amazes me to find there are still people who write and speak of "not believing in the Actors' Benevolent Fund." As I have said with regard to other institutions connected with our profession, "any stick is good enought to beat a dog with," and those who do not wish to subscribe—and, indeed, my experience is they are those who never subscribe to anything in the world—when asked to subscribe to this Fund say "they do not believe in the Actors' Benevolent Fund," not because they know anything about it, or have tried to know anything about it, but because it is an excuse which no one can refute. I have never met any of them giving any reasons, because, of course, they have no reasons to give, never having endeavoured to find out anything about the wonderful work this institution does, and, further, in my experience as a committeeman I would like to say that of those who are relieved I feel sure I am right in saying that 90 per cent. have never subscribed one shilling towards the Fund in their lives. There is another reason why the Actors' Benevolent Fund should be supported, and that is its cost of administration is so small compared with the amount of work and the amount of money it deals with. I remember Mr Burdett Coutts, who presided at one of our annual dinners, said that before consenting to preside he had made every inquiry and gone into the matters connected with the Fund, and he, believing that he knew as much as anybody in this city with regard to the administration of charitable funds, fearlessly said that he believed the Actors' Benevolent Fund to be one of the most economically conducted of all; therefore, seeing the great good it does to my certain knowledge, despite those who do not believe in it; seeing its great needs to meet the great calls it has upon its funds; and knowing full well that apart from those who won't give, there are many who from the exigencies of this precarious profession cannot give, or feel more justified honestly that their charity shall begin at home, it seems that Mr Cecil Raleigh's scheme of a performance, more especially a matinée, on a given day throughout the kingdom, cheerfully given by the actors, is the one way to set this and other funds on their feet, and to avoid going to the public and begging for our charities, which I agree with Mr Raleigh is derogatory to the theatrical profession and to the esprit de corps of the members composing it. There are, of course, great difficulties in concreting such a scheme, but I should think that some of the willing workers who have organising abilities—and I should think here some of our business managers might be asked to co-operate—and certainly embracing Mr Raleigh's ideas that individual contributions from companies should not be public, I shall hope to hear in the near future that this scheme has had such support that it is likely to become an accomplished fact.

Yours faithfully, W. LESTOCQ.

"MARGOT" AT THE COURT.

Play, in Three Acts, adapted by May Pardoe, from La Menteuse of Alphonse Daudet.

Georges De Beaumont .. Mr W. GRAHAM BROWNE
Colonel Bourget ..... Mr F. PERCIVAL STEVENS
Paul Chartran ..... Mr ROBERT FARQUHARSON
Doctor..... Mr ERIC SCOTT
Jacques Sylvestre ..... Mr NORMAN M'KINNEL
Servant ..... Mr CARLTON BROUGH
Comtesse De Beaumont.. Miss MARY RORKE
Marie Bourget ..... Miss GERTRUDE BURNETT
Celestine..... Miss ADA MELLON
Margot Le Gros ..... Miss DARRAGH

M. Alphonse Daudet to the present generation of English playgoers is well known by his Sapho, in which character Miss Olga Nethersole has gained a high reputation. Margot, another play from his pen, without being quite as powerful or as interesting, is just as morbid. The heroine is mean and degraded. She has an ugly past—a past beyond redemption. She is still tied legally to the husband she has basely deceived, when by lies, cajolery, and a bewitching manner she becomes the fiancée of Georges De Beaumont, the scion of a noble family. Georges' mother, the Countess, will not countenance the mésalliance, and in an angry interview drives the young couple from her door. Georges' hand is thus forced, and, his romantic infatuation being allied to honourable intention, he marries Margot. By the irony of fate, she herself falls passionately in love with the man she has deceived, and in the second act the pair in their simple ménage momentarily rejoice in the good fortune that has brought them together. Their prospects are brightened, too, by the forgiveness of the mother. Nemesis, however, is near. Georges receives a letter from Jacques Sylvestre, the former husband, announcing his intention of calling. On hearing this, Margot has a violent fit of hysteria, and the dreaded exposure is postponed by Georges hastily putting his visitor off. But Margot's deceptions are so continuous—she is such a persistant and unblushing liar—that there can be no way of escape for her from the inevitable catastrophe. Pitiful heart searchings, useless longings, and utter despair are her lot, and she ends it all by taking poison. She does not die, however, before the man she has so cruelly and basely deceived curses her. The play, which is mostly a duologue—in the last act it is little more than a monologue—once more shows how pitiless fate is to the seductive adulteress—a theme that has been treated so powerfully by many French dramatists—notably by the younger Dumas. It is a phase of human nature that will be as keenly alive a century hence as it is to-day, and Daudet has handled the subject with artistic restraint and dramatic skill. The character of the Phryne whose heart pulsates to the dictates of pure affection must always be a favourite one with actresses, and on Monday afternoon it was satisfactory to find that Miss Darragh, who played Margot, brought to her heavy task power, sensibility, and delicacy of perception. We are asked by the dramatist to sympathise with a woman who is a mass of deceit, and the actress quite won all hearts by Margot's pathetic communings with herself. In the second act the sudden and passionate grief made a deep impression upon the house, and the remorse and ever-haunting fear of the last act were very real and convincing. Miss Darragh, we should add, is no stranger to the part, as she played it on the production of Margot at the Metropole, Camberwell, on May 25, 1903. On that occasion Mr Graham Browne was seen in the rôle of the young priest. On Monday he played Georges de Beaumont, and the performance throughout gave much pleasure to the crowded and critical house. The by-play in the second act was strong and expressive, and the love and tenderness of the young husband were admirably depicted. One was hardly prepared, perhaps, for the power and restraint for which Mr Browne was responsible in the last act. It would be difficult to discover among our younger actors one who could have played the part with such a sure touch. He certainly shared the honours of the matinée with Miss Darragh. Miss Mary Rorke as the Comtesse De Beaumont gave one of her charming embodiments of affectionate and distinguished motherhood; Miss Gertrude Burnett, the original representative of Maria Bourget, repeated her success in a sweet and maidenly impersonation; and Miss Ada Mellon was a bonnie and light-hearted Célestine. Mr Robert Farquharson did extremely well as Paul Chartran, the young priest; and other characters were adequately played by Mr Eric Scott, Mr Norman M'Kinnel, and Mr Carlton Brough. The play was produced under the direction of Mr A. E. George, and Mr Arthur Bowyer stage managed.

"THE COMEDIE OF ERRORS."

Revival of Shakespeare's Farce at Terry's Theatre, by the Elizabethan Society,
on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 10.

The faithful few that follow with such interest the proceedings and performances of the Elizabethan Stage Society assembled on Saturday afternoon at Terry's Theatre to witness a representation of The Comedie of Errors. The stage was made as much as possible to resemble that of the historic Fortune Theatre, though the first production of the piece was "by the players" at Gray's Inn in 1594. It is therefore no violent hypothesis that Shakespeare could and did read the Menæchmi of Plautus, from which he borrowed the plot, in the original Latin, as we have no record of any translation of the comedy until 1595. The piece has not been produced at a London theatre for many years. It had a sort of popularity forty years ago, when the Brothers Webb gave very realistic studies of the Dromios. We remember these parts being played by the late Mr John S. Clarke and Mr Harry Paulton, who, if they did not resemble each other, were responsible for exceedingly droll embodiments. The Dromios of Saturday afternoon were Mr Arthur Curtis and Mr Norman Page. Their likeness to each other was really capital, and the crude humour of the situations gained largely by this happy chance. The fun is rudimentary, but it was none the less appreciated on that account, and both actors in expression, gesture, and business were so diverting that the scenes went to a continual accompaniment of laughter. As Antipholus of Syracuse Mr Hubert Carter acted with great liveliness and brio, putting a rare amount of amusing expressiveness into the predicaments in which "Syracuse" finds himself, and giving the text with admirable clearness. Mr John M. Troughton as the Antipholus of Ephesus, who has a much less rollicking time than his twin brother, took a more serious view of his responsibilities and gave valuable help, his declamation being excellent. Miss Ernita Lascelles distinguished herself by her portraiture of Adriana, whose distress of mind at the absence of her lord she depicted very naturally. The Luciana of Miss Cora Busch was another impersonation of considerable cleverness; and the courtesan of Miss Hilda Fletcher had plenty of sprightliness and vitality, her treatment of the part being bold. Mr Nugent Monck cut a grotesque figure as Pinch; the part of Angelo was effectively handled by Mr H. Cellier, jun., and the merchant was presented with tact and discretion by Mr E. Stidwell. The comedy was played continuously, without division into acts, except for a short interval at the end of the third act. Mr Arnold Dolmetsch's orchestra of ancient instruments played a selection of early English music as an overture to the play, which was followed by six of the players speaking most impressively, "The Queen's Prayer" from Ralph Roister Doister. The Comedie of Errors was repeated on the afternoons of Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, and Marlowe's Doctor Faustus, given on Saturday evening, has been presented every evening during the week.

MRS LANGTRY has decided to commence her season at Terry's Theatre on Jan. 18 with Mrs Dering's Divorce.

CHURCH AND STAGE.

At a meeting of the Playgoers' Club last Sunday, in the Victoria Hall of the Hotel Cecil,

The Rev. FORBES PHILLIPS, Vicar of Gorleston, the author of For Church and Stage, the play recently produced by Mrs Brown Potter at the Savoy Theatre, read a paper on "Church and Stage." He discussed the question from two standpoints—was a closer union between Church and stage possible, and was it desirable? There were, he said, a number of people who described the doors of a theatre as the gates of hell, and they declared that there was an inherent antagonism between the stage and religion. God, however, never meant life to be one monotonous round of work and prayer, but rather that piety should control all other influences. There was something wrong in life if man did not get his due share of the lighter side of things. The world, he was sorry to admit, was governed more by prejudice than principle. He reminded his hearers that plays had their earlier origin in the churches at Christmas and Easter. The Church at that age had a true hint of a great truth—that laughter was as much at the heart of things as tears. They wanted the Church and the religious sects to make up their minds on the subject of amusement. They asked, "What is your warrant for thinking there is sin in amusement when it takes the form of a visit to the theatre?" That was not the Christ view of life. Talking to an eminent bishop, Sir Henry Irving asked, "Why is it, with your knowledge of the drama of life and your wise sympathy with all that is noble, that you never go to the theatre?" "Well," said the bishop, "I am afraid of the Rock and the Record." The bishop was a particularly nervous man. The Church, however, did not hold itself as such a censor of the stage as the Dissenters, and it would be a bad day for England if people took Nonconformists too seriously. The stage must be more aggressive. They must go out into the open and defend themselves. Why not have stage lectures? Life was made miserable by narrow, jaundiced theology. Man must have vent for his feelings, instincts, and passions. Let the stage speak. It had a good cause, and let it make its standard the philosophy of thought. With regard to the question of closer union, he said emphatically "Yes." The Church and the stage were the two great schools of the people—each a tremendous factor, educationally, socially, and morally. The theatre supplied the social wants of man, and from his experience as a clergyman he maintained that it had an influence for good. It was not marvellous to him that more men did not attend church when they considered the dulness of the one and the sensationalism of the dissenting rostrum. This reminded him of a dissenting advertisement he once saw. It ran thus:—"On Sunday morning the discourse will be 'Should girls giggle?' and the evening 'Tea-cups, brandy-cups, and hiccoughs—which?'" The great body of men who did not go to church found their lessons of morality, beauty, and honourable conduct in the theatre. He spoke of what he knew. The hearts of those men were naturally generous and susceptible, and their appreciation of the drama was shown by the way in which they hissed the vice and applauded the virtue. Here the stage got hold of the heart which the minister could not reach, and anything which touched the heart was a victory for good. It was for the Church to realise that the stage was educating the soul like the Church, art, music, science, and all the nobler arts. Each had need of the other. At present the Church went too much to the study and the stage to the streets for the experience of life. The result was that they were both often too inhuman. Christ taught the human problems of life and surrounded them with dramatic interest. As to whether closer union was possible, he adjured the clergy to treat men more as men. They should show a little extra courtesy to the profession, and the bishops should be taken in hand. They were not really so stiff and starchy as they were made out to be. There was a good heart beneath—their gaiters he was going to say. They were nervous, but of late curates had been known to joke with bishops, and they had not been confounded. He thought managers might with advantage sometimes put a box at their disposal. They had many subjects discussed at the Church Congress. Why not have a paper read on the drama? There were thousands of Church-going old ladies in the land who would rush to the theatre if they received their information from the Church Congress, and their lonely lives would be cheered by one touch of nature at least. In conclusion the rev. gentleman maintained that there was a close bond of union between the Church and stage which was only waiting development.

There was only a short discussion, and the Rev. Forbes Phillips was warmly thanked for his address.

MR PURCELL for the second annual pantomime at the Marlborough Theatre has chosen the popular story of "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp." The book has been prepared by Mr J. Hickory Wood, and the cast includes Mr Harry Tate, Mr George Brooks, Messrs Rich and Rich, Miss Nancy Langtyre, Miss Elsie Roby, and Miss Simeta Marsden. Specialities by Charlene and Charlene. The pantomime will be produced on Boxing Day.

MR ARTHUR BOURCHIER has let the African rights of The Walls of Jericho to Messrs B. and F. Wheeler.

"GREIFENSTEIN; OR, UNDER THE BLACK SHADOW," a new drama, in four acts, by Reginald H. Curtis, was produced for copyright purposes on Wednesday, at the Theatre Royal, Leicester.

MISS KEITH LYTTON has been engaged by Mrs Langtry for her season at Terry's Theatre.—Mr Frank Weatherby will be Mrs Langtry's stage director for her forthcoming season at Terry's Theatre.—Mr George Dudley has been engaged by Miss Julia Neilson and Mr Fred Terry for their forthcoming production at the New Theatre in January.—Mr G. Moreton-Williams, who concluded on Saturday last a seventeen weeks' tour with The Convict's Daughter, playing the heavy lead, has been re-engaged by Mr Eugene Bertram for the spring tour of the same piece.

OPENING OF THE NEW PALACE THEATRE, GRIMSBY.

More favourable auguries for the success of a new venture could not be desired by the most exacting than was experienced in connection with the opening of the New Palace Theatre at Grimsby. Both at the reception, held on Saturday evening last, and at the public opening on Monday there was every cause for gratification on the part of the management.

The new theatre, which is built on the site of the old Theatre Royal, was fully described in last week's Era. It has been erected by a syndicate of local gentlemen, who have been fortunate in securing the co-operation of Mr Frank Macnaghten, the well-known vaudeville theatre manager. Under this arrangement the bookings for the Palace will be made in connection with the Macnaghten circuit. The popular system of giving two performances each evening has been adopted.

At the reception, admission to which was by invitation, the assemblage was representative of the most influential and fashionable circles of the locality. The greater part of the evening was taken up by a high-class musical programme, but during an interval opportunity was taken to perform the interesting ceremony of cutting the Palace birthday cake. These proceedings were presided over by Mr Joseph Chapman, one of the directors, he being supported by the Mayor and Mayoress of Grimsby (Councillor and Mrs Joseph Hewson), Sir George Doughty (member of Parliament for Grimsby), Colonel Bannister (Deputy Mayor), the Misses Hewson, Mrs Sutcliffe, Councillor F. Moss (chairman of Grimsby Public Buildings Inspection Committee), Mr Ward (the architect), and Mr Frank Macnaghten.

Mr Chapman introduced Mr Macnaghten to the gathering, remarking that the theatre had been established to provide a high-class variety entertainment in the town.

Mr Macnaghten, in a happily phrased speech, defined the distinction between the old music hall and the modern vaudeville theatre. The latter he described as a place where ladies and children might frequent, which could not be said of the music hall of a few years ago. He promised his audience he should take care that clean, wholesome, and healthy entertainments would invariably be seen at the Palace. Said he, "I make you this promise—That you shall not at any time see anything here to offend the eye or ear of the most fastidious." He added it was always his custom to provide a birthday cake when opening a new theatre, and he asked the Mayoress to cut the huge Palace birthday cake.

This Mrs Hewson gracefully accomplished, being presented with a handsome knife by Mr Joseph Chapman. Pieces of the cake were afterwards handed to the guests.

Sir George Doughty, in seconding a vote of thanks to the Mayoress, spoke very highly of the acoustic properties of the buildings, of which, being a prominent political orator, he is certainly a judge.

The Mayor of Grimsby and the architect (Mr Ward) also addressed the gathering, the latter remarking that there was not a blind seat in the house.

The musical arrangements were in the hands of Mr T. Murgatroyed, musical director of the Palace. A most enjoyable programme was gone through, including songs by Miss Sybil Montague, Miss Dorothy L. Clark, and Mr Ian Colquhoun; a cornet solo by Miss Alice Raymond, a xylophone solo by Mr Murgatroyd, a humorous interlude by Paddy-whiski (Mr Will H. Fox), and selections by the orchestra.

Two large audiences assembled on Monday evening, when the first public performances were given. To Frank Sylvo a comedy juggler, fell the distinction of being the first artist to amuse the public in the new building, though Mr Ian Colquhoun was really the first to tread the stage in a professional capacity, he having sung the National Anthem at the commencement of the private function on the Saturday evening. Frank Sylvo's turn combined some really smart juggling with a good deal of humorous business. An acrobatic performance of a truly classic character was that given by the Four Skandias. They are a quartet of gymnasts who exhibit great strength, besides neatness of accomplishment, in their various feats, the whole of which are performed on trapezes and other apparati supported by a lady member of the troupe. The Sisters Caselli are two charming ladies who told the audience, in song, that it is entirely unnecessary to visit the "Continong" to see good dancing, and proceed to prove their declaration by going through a series of graceful and pretty dances. Mr Ian Colquhoun, a robust baritone vocalist, displayed his magnificent voice to full advantage in singing "A True Born Englishman" and "Off to Philadelphia." Sam Redfern, Negro comedian, greatly amused the audience with his musical description of Saturday night, whilst his daringly original philosophy, particularly that portion relating to matrimony, was also entertaining. Ella Shields, a lady vocalist with a remarkably deep voice, pleased the audience with her songs. Roars of laughter were caused by Mr Harry Tate's company in the comedy sketch Motoring. In this the enthusiastic motorist's troubles with a refractory engine, an erratic "sparking plug," an absent-minded chauffeur, the inevitable and inquisitive small boy, and finally the police were cleverly burlesqued. The Caledonian Boys' Orchestral and Concert Combination provided a most popular turn. Their playing of Suppé's beautiful overture to Poet and Peasant was excellent, the 'cello solo at the commencement being especially worthy of notice. Capital piccolo and vocal solos were also introduced by various members of the combination. The turn which occasioned most interest and which occupied pride of place in the programme was the marvellous performance of Captain Woodward's educated seals and sea-lions. Until one has actually seen what the latter can accomplish a detailed account of their feats would seem incredible.

Altogether the programme submitted this week at the Palace has been of a most attractive nature, and visitors have expressed complete satisfaction with the opening performances.

The World's Fair, under the management of Messrs T. and T. E. Read, will open at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, on Christmas Eve with a wonderful programme of popular amusements. The following are some of its leading features:—The grand free circus, including the famous troupe of Bedouin Arabs, who have been re-engaged owing to their great success last year; Menotti, on the high telephone wire (his first appearance here) twice daily over the grand Continental menagerie, including White Wings, the long-mane and long-tail horse; and the ever-popular and amusing monkey house; and the Herbert Troupe of six aerial gymnasts. Also the latest American novelty, "Slipping the Slip." Intending visitors should take note that the noise caused by the barrel organs will be further reduced, and during the circus and other performances entirely stopped.

Miss Gladys Archbutt, who made her first appearance this week at the Oxford, is a pretty girl, who will not celebrate her sixteenth birthday until next June. She is a pupil of Miss Crompton, dances neatly, and sings a song called "Now, go away, Mr Crocodile," in a self-possessed manner. Young as she is, Miss Archbutt has already figured, at Bristol and Kennington, as the youthful hero and heroine of The Babes in the Wood. Last Christmas she was at the Vaudeville. Another little comedienne who is well received is Miss Katie Marsh, sister of the Harvey Boys, who gives imitations of a serio, an operatic soprano, a coon dancer, and an old-fashioned heroine of melodrama. She wears a pretty turquoise blue satin coat over a simple little white silk frock, with chiffon flounces.

STROLLING PLAYERS ORCHESTRA.

Singularly interesting was the concert of the Strolling Players at Queen's Hall on Thursday night, for it was the hundredth concert given by the society, the members having reasonable grounds for pride in a fact so creditable to amateur performers. It is absurd for foreigners to speak of "unmusical England" when we have a body of amateurs like these interpreting the works of great musicians in a style few professional orchestras could surpass. The first item was the brilliant Overture to Masaniello, performed at the first concert, Dec. 13, 1882, and it was played on this occasion with all the dash and vigour required. The suite, "Casse Noisette" also displayed to the greatest advantage the executive skill of the players. The dance of the "Sugar Plum Fairy" and the quaint march could hardly have had a better rendering and a selection from Sullivan's opera, Patience, showed the appreciation of our native composer. A march, called "Welcome," by Mr Norfolk Megone, was included in the programme, and we may mention that Mr Megone had a greeting of the most enthusiastic character. Owing to indisposition, Mr Dalton Baker was unable to appear, his place being taken by Mr George Ridgwell, who sang Tito Mattei's "Love is Life" and "A Fond Kiss," by Scott Gatty. Miss Carmen Hill was very successful in a song of Tschaikowsky and "The Butterfly and the Rose," by Garnet Cox. The same young artist sang melodies by Lambert and Del Riego with much grace. A great success may be chronicled by Mr Tom Clare, who treated the now familiar "Bill Bailey" in a manner that convulsed the audience, who demanded a repetition in the most vehement way. Mr Clare came forward with a placard on which was inscribed "No encores allowed," and the singer adhered to his text. Mr Clare is certainly one of the most genuine humourists of the day, and his reception could not have been more flattering. He recalls in no slight degree the late Corney Grain. The members who took part in the original performance of the "Ave Maria" of Gounod and Bach at the first concert again played this item. The presence of Miss Fanny Davies, who performed the Concerto of Liszt in E flat, added not a little to the attraction of the concert, and gave the orchestra another opportunity of winning distinction. The services of Mr William Shakespeare as conductor deserve acknowledgment, and Mr Harold Garstin was an efficient accompanist.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

Caban.—In loving memory of Rose Caban, née Meers, daughter of Hubert and Adele Meers, who passed away Dec. 31, 1902

Never forgotten.
R.I.P.

O'Grady.—In loving and affectionate remembrance of my dear husband, Hubert O'Grady, who died Dec. 19. 1899, and who is ever present in my thoughts. Mrs Hubert O'Grady, Rhyl, N. Wales.

The friends of Mr and Mrs Will Johnson will be grieved to hear that they have lost their little baby, who died on Dec. 9, aged three years nine months. She was buried on Thursday at Forest-hill. Mr Will Johnson, by the way, is in no way connected with the person of the same name who brought an action for assault last week.

At the Marylebone Police-court, on Thursday, Mr Philip Rutland, solicitor, attended before Mr Curtis Bennett with reference to the prosecution by the Theatrical Managers' Association against the Metropolitan and Mr Henri Gros, its managing-director, on Oct. 28, when the company was fined £180 and Mr Gros was bound over to come up if called upon, in regard to the production of the stage play The Fighting Parson. The decision against the company, he said, was being appealed against, and the appeal was fixed for Jan. 6. It was, however, with respect to the proceedings against Mr Gros that he wished to make an application. Mr Gros took a very strong personal view of the matter, and was exceedingly desirous that the summons should be restored to the list and disposed of. Mr Curtis-Bennett said he should not do that until the appeal had been decided. He might possibly impose a fine if the matter was pressed very much. Mr Rutland replied that in that event Mr Gros would pay. Mr Curtis-Bennett declined, however, declined to deal with the summons until the appeal had been heard.

Mr Willie Freear, who has been so successful in his three tours round the world with his three hours' monologue entertainment "Freear's Frivolities," and has appeared before so many crowned heads, including King Edward, the King of Siam, the Sultan of Turkey, &c, has been engaged by Mr Frank Curzon to play the part of Sergeant Brue on tour.

Mr Hyram Travers, whose "Pearly King" has found many loyal subjects on the Rand, returns to England in time for his birthday party on Boxing Day, loaded with good wishes and presents from his South African admirers.

Miss Margaret Radcliffe, who has just finished a tour of the Moss Empires, where she has met with most flattering receptions, goes to play Eric, a special second boy's part in Mother Goose, at the Royal, Manchester.

Mr Robert Arthur has secured the M'Kays' "Magic Kettle" for pantomime.—Carl and Carr, comedians, are specially engaged to play the Chinese policemen, in Arthur Carlton's Aladdin pantomime at Ealing Theatre.—Clyo and Rochelle, now on a five weeks' provincial tour, return to town on Jan. 16 to the South London.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

(SPECIAL TO THE ERA.)

The series of accidents that have occurred at the Coliseum are, fortunately, not so serious as was supposed. Two of the stage hands and four "supers" have been injured. Mr Frank Ballard is master carpenter, Mr Warwick Buckland the property master, Mr H. Pemberton the chief engineer, and Mr Flanagan the foreman of the limelight department in this establishment.

Mr C. Squires is now master carpenter at the Comedy Theatre with the Charley's Aunt company.

There will be a meeting of the Society of Theatrical Carpenters in the Salisbury Hotel on Sunday evening, at 8·30, for the purpose of electing the officers for the ensuing year and the consideration of other business.

At the general meeting of the Theatrical Operatives Sick and Benevolent Society, held on Sunday last, the officers for the ensuing year were elected. Mr A. E. Wood, who has held office during the past ten years, resigned the position of secretary, and Mr Kenyon, of the electric department, Royalty Theatre, was elected to that office. Mr George Montgomary, of the Alhambra Theatre, was elected treasurer in place of Mr W. Kessell, jun. The other office bearers were re-elected.

Voting papers have been issued to the members of the National Union Theatrical Stage Employees with reference to alterations of rules and other matters. Any member who has not received a voting paper is requested to apply to the secretary, Mr Wm. Johnson, who would also be glad if Mr Harry Couzens, whose arrival from Australia was announced in this column last week, would call on him at 29, Wellington-street, Strand.

Notices and reports of meetings, &c., are invited from the various societies with which stage employees are connected.

The Coliseum, St. Martin's-lane, where preparations are being rapidly pushed forward by a large number of men for the opening on Monday next, was the scene of a serious accident on Tuesday evening. Between six and seven o'clock, while many men were engaged at work on the stage, a large piece of scenery fell over, from some unexplained cause, and four men who failed to get out of the way in time were pinned beneath it. With all possible dispatch the scenery was lifted, and the men released. Ambulances were sent for, and the men were removed to Charing-cross Hospital, where they were detained. The four men were employed as scene-shifters. Two of them—Frederick Long, of 429A, King's-road, Chelsea, and John Blake, of 22, Bedfordbury—were only slightly injured, and, after remaining in the hospital about an hour, were sent home. Another man, Henry Hazell, of 106, Laburnum-street, Kingsland-road, had his leg broken. The fourth man, who refused to give his name, is suffering from a slight concussion.

Mr Eric Graham, composer and comedian, has been confined to bed with acute gastritis. One great consolation to his friends is that the greatest possible care of him is being taken by Mr Alf Wallis, an old school chum, at the Grapes Hotel, Kirkdale, Liverpool. We sincerely wish Mr Graham a speedy recovery.

Little Clarisse Henry is now singing at all her engagements that pretty love song "Baby Mine," by Leo Freidman, which recently delighted the patrons of the Granville, Walham-green. Mr Eustace Jay has engaged Clarisse to appear at the Palace, Croydon, for one week, commencing Monday, Dec. 19. Her very pretty coon dress, by Mr Willie Clarkson, is greatly admired.

Mr Frank Hilbert, who originally appeared at the Royal Standard, Pimlico, under the management of Mr T. S. Dickie, has been a success at the Empires, Leeds, Newcastle, South Shields, and Palace, Hull. He is rebooked by Mr Frank Allen. On Monday he opened at the Canterbury, and was immediately secured by Mr Geo. Adney Payne for the Oxford. He admits that his success is due to the efforts of his agent, Mr H. Burrows Smith.

The flowing tide of success which Messrs Francis, Day, and Hunter are experiencing was again exemplified on Thursday night at the Theatre Royal, Edinburgh, no fewer than seven gigantic hits occurring in the sixth pantomime of the year. They are "Bluebell," "Navaho," "Under a Panama." "Stop your tickling, Jock," "If I had a girl as nice as you," "A B C D," and "Walking home with Angeline."

NEWPORT.

Lyceum. — Lessee and Manager, Mr Sidney Cooper.—Mr John Tully's company in Uncle Tom's Cabin is occupying the boards here. Mr W. H. Cecil Pierpont cleverly impersonates Phineas Fletcher; Kora Deanrajah sustains the part of Uncle Tom with pathos; and Aunt Chloe is admirably portrayed by Miss Lilian Danty, Miss Kitty Wood making an inimitable Topsy. Miss Ada Lewis represents Emeline creditably, and Miss Marie Lyndon as Aunt Ophelia is prim and exact. The comedy element is sustained by Mr S. Vincent Beechy as Mark, the lawyer. George Harris and his wife are well represented by Mr Chas. Macdonald and Miss Florence Vennimore respectively.

Empire.—Moss Empires, Limited; Managing-Director, Mr O. Stoll.—Crowded houses welcome Carl Hertz, who, with the assistance of Mdlle. D'Alton, performs some extraordinary illusions. The Berowsky Trio in a gymnastic scena, In the Woods, give an excellent display; the Troubadour Quartette keeps the house in roars with their comedy, Who's Got that Thing? the Sisters Trentanovi are graceful trapezists; Leonard and François, e ccentric acrobats, introduce a burlesque that causes much merriment; and the Passparts dance very gracefully. Kitty Bell sings in good style; Childie Stuart, comedienne, is popular; and the American Bioscope shows some interesting pictures.

NORWICH.

Theatre Royal —Sole Manager, Mr Fred Morgan.—An excellent company is here this week with A Fatal Crown. Mr Ian Maclaren as Lord Guilford Dudley is most successful; Mr J. M. Rome is equally so as the Earl of Northumberland; Mr Ernest Godge does well as Herne; and Mr Henry Howard is good as Simon Reynard. Mr Miller Wilson is remarkable as Xit, and Mr S. C. Hill, who is 6ft. 10in., and Mr C. O. Scott, 7ft. 2in., appear as Goz, Tower giant, and Magog, Tower priest. Mr Johnny Fisher is very capable as Izzod Clay; Miss Augusta Tullock acts charmingly as Lady Jane Grey; Miss Maude Anderson gives a capital representation of Mary Tudor; Miss Kythe Mackenzie deserves praise as Dorcas Dossitt; and Miss Dorothy Mackenzie scores as Barbara.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Captain Selby.—The Mannings' entertainers are very funny in their convulsing carnival A Turkish Bath Rubber; Will Lytton is a clever comedian; the Du Gros Trio are clever gymnasts; Mdlle. Yvette, the lady clown, and her miniature hippodrome of trained ponies and performing dogs are very interesting; Bert Oakley and Polly James are great favourites in their singing, dancing, and juggling; Downes and Langford are amusing in their patter and dancing; whilst Belle Davis and her three piccaninnies are quite an attraction, and Maud Courtney deserves praise for her song and story.

NORTHAMPTON.

Opera House —Proprietors, Messrs Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr W. J. Andrews.—Mr Albert E. Cross is appearing here this week as Pete, in The Manxman, a part that he plays carefully and consistently. He is well supported by Miss Minnie Watersford as Kate Cregeen and Mr Richard Vane as Philip Christian. Miss Lesley Adair as Miss Christian, Miss Kitty Livesey as Bella Kelly, and Miss Rosie Kearns as Nancy are good. Mr Henry Heller is highly effective as Cæsar Cregeen; Mr Edward M'Lean is a capital Ross Christian; Mr Erskholme E Clive gives a clever character sketch of Professor Mawley; Mr Ed. Cartell ably renders the part of Monty Missitt; and Mr John Allen as Tom, the postman; Mr W. Horgan as John, the constable; and Mr H. E. Morton as Jonique Jelly give effective support.

Palace of Varieties.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Fred H. Anderson; Acting-Manager, Mr Robert Barton.—Heading the programme is Claude Ginnett's equestrian sketch entitled Rejected Remounts, which is full of clever fun and merriment. Jessie Reed gives a couple of songs in a highly refined style; George Globe is a quaint comedian; Kate Lynd is pleasing; Charley Dixon possesses ability; the Morrison Girls entertain with song and dance; and Charles Rooney is versatile.

NORTH SHIELDS.

Theatre Royal. — Lessee and Manager, Mr Arthur Jefferson; General Manager, Mr Horace Lee; Secretary, Mr Gordon Jefferson.—Mr Wentworth Croke's company is here with The Christian, and proving a great attraction. As Glory Quayle Miss Grace Chalmers is responsible for a satisfactory portrayal of the character, and Mr Hilliard Vox scores a decided success as the Hon. John Storm. Mr Charles B. Bedells is a capable Lord Robert Ure, and Mr Jackson Wilcox gives a capital interpretation of Horatio Drake. Mr Stanley Radcliffe as Father Lamplugh plays with conspicuous ability; Mr Charles Hill makes the most of Parson Quayle; Mr Oswald Marshall gives a good rendering of Mr Lorimer; and Miss Clara Nichols is a pleasing Mrs Callander.

New Central Palace.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Wm. Mould.—Topping the bill here is Mr Billy Farrell, comedian, who has been accorded a hearty reception; Selbo, club manipulator, remains from last week, and is again meeting with much success; Kennie's Fantoches give an interesting entertainment; Mr Charles Danton, character comedian, is well received; and Miss Lue Lord, serio-comic; Messrs Duncan and Morton, comedy artistes; and the Bio-Photoscope are also received with favour.

NOTTINGHAM.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr Howard Finney.—The Never-Never Land, which makes a welcome return visit here, is being played by Messrs John Hart and Harold Armitage's company. The part of Nat Rudder is now exploited by Mr Edward Rochelle, whose drunken desperado is not without the saving grace of humour. Mr Edmund F. Kennedy gives a manly portrayal of Jack Mowbray; Jack Landale has a pleasant exponent in Mr Geo. Mackenzie; Mr Eric Longley plays the Chinese servant with care; and Mr Benson North shows the villainy of Wolff with consummate skill. Mr Cecil Elgar is convincing as Lord Thurland; Mr Simon D. Ord aptly assumes the Poet; Miss Margaret Parker essays the part of Smudgee with success; Miss Marion Fawcett gives the requisite touch of dignity to the part of Lady Walgrove; and Miss Julie Kennard offers a carefully drawn picture of Sal Berker. Misses Caroline and Kathleen Barrett look and act charmingly as Sybil and Lorna.

Grand Theatre. — Manager, Mr Charles P. Cooke.—An amateur operatic society occupies the boards this week in Les Cloches de Corneville, in aid of local charities. Excellent performances have been given, especially that of Gaspard by Mr Harry Middleton. The help and advice of Mr Charles P. Cooke, the manager of the theatre, have been invaluable to all concerned in the production.

King's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr A. W. Bull.—The Mysteries of the Thames, which contains the full complement of sensation, is being played here by Mr F. Brooke Warren's company. Mr Roy Fortescue realises his opportunities in the character of the unfortunate Richard Brandon. Mr Warren was unable to fill the rôle of the rascally Captain James Denbigh owing to indisposition, but his place was capably taken by Mr Gilbert Hall. Mr Elton Morgan adds to the interest of the representation as Bill Bosco; Miss Gwynne Warren shows excellent capabilities in the dual-rôle of Helen and Grace Rochdale, depicting the two dissimilar characters with skill and care; Miss Lallah Shelton embodies Kate Brandon is a sympathetic manner; and the lighter vein is capitally shown by Miss Clare O'Sullivan as Bertie Fitzgerald and Mr Dan Hardie as Peter Wiggles.

Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Managing Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Hatton Wharton.—Joe Elvin and company are presenting Over the Sticks here to the running accompaniment of uproarious laughter. Mr Elvin is well suited in the character of a jockey, finding abundant opportunities for his resourceful humour, and the production is elaborately staged and dressed. Miss Vinona Winter gives a delightful entertainment, being assisted by Mr W. H. Banks, their singing patter, and ventriloquism gaining an enthusiastic reception; the Trapnell Family demonstrate their skill in acrobatic feats; and Les Burnellys offer a gymnastic act that is at once novel and clever; a musical item by Werner and Reider is received with every indication of pleasure; and Post Mason appears as an Arab, singing with gusto the song "Son of the Desert am I." Jennie Belmore contributes a bright song with animation; and the efforts of Harry Lawson and Victor Travers, comedians, are thoroughly appreciated.

OLDHAM.

Empire, Limited.—Manager, Mr Ernest Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr Hulme.—Mr William Greet's principal company is occupying the boards here with that popular play, The Sign of the Cross. As Mercia Miss Evelyn D'Alroy presents an artistic rendering, and receives the hearty approval of a crowded audience. Mr F. B. Woulfe is powerful as Marcus Superbus, and Mr A. Bernhardt Turner does well as Nero.

Royal, Limited.—Manager, Mr Ernest Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr George Knowles.—An attractive programme submitted here this week includes the American Comedy Four, eccentric vocalists. The Sakers are successful comedy artistes; A. C. Revell is well received for a unique electric juggling performance; G. H. Elliott, the chocolate coloured coon, receives a hearty approval; as comedy acrobats Lantes and Montes are duly appreciated for some clever work; Little Uno is a clever comedian; the Three Sisters Macarte receive a hearty welcome; and the Bioscope is a successful item.

Gaiety (Limited).—Manager, Mr E. J. Dexter.—The programme submitted here this week includes Oswald, the marvellous hand balancer and pyramidist. Victor Newman is successful in Shakespearian sketches. Duncan, club juggler, is well received. A capital turn is submitted by Will Hall with his animal imitations. Bob Vokes is a favourite here. Miss Molly Doon, comedienne; Will Bell, comedian and dancer; the Bransbys, and the Bioscope add greatly to the success of the entertainment. Mr Bull, the first violinist, has succeeded Mr Beaumont as conductor of the orchestra.

OXFORD.

New Theatre.—Managing Director, Mr Thomas Lucas, J.P.; Acting-Manager, Mr C. C. Dorrill.—Miss Hutchison and Mr Percy Hutchison's company is here this week giving an excellent representation of The Ticket-of-Leave Man, with that veteran artist Mr Henry Neville in his original character of Bob Brierley. Mr Neville gives a fine performance, and receives admirable support from Mr W. Devereux as James Dalton, Mr L. Cory-Thomas as Hawkshaw, Mr Thurstans as Moss, and Mr Mallalieu as Mr Gibson. Miss Adie Boyne is a bright and natural Sam Willoughby; Miss Emma Victor a thoroughly satisfactory Mrs Willoughby; and Miss Emily Weeden gives a powerful and sympathetic rendering of May Edwardes

Empire Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Albany Ward; Acting-Manager, Mr H. G. P. Wells Miss Maggie Stanton and Mr T. Gilbert Perry's company is here with The Sporting Girl. Mr T. Gilbert Perry gives a vigorous portrayal of Mr Penton Hook; Mr Chas. Saunders is robust as Jack Gosling; and Mr Marcus Grey is decidedly good as Marco Castellino. Mr Horace Moseley makes a humorous Rev. John Bonyan, whilst Mr James Sterling is restrained as George Drewett. Miss Maggie Stanton is versatile as Kitty Fitzroy; Miss Marjorie Tennant scores as Mrs Owen; and Miss Clara Knowles is effective as Amy Beddoe.

Town Hall.—Managers, Messrs Sydney Acott Harris, and Co.—On Thursday and Friday last week the Elizabethan Stage Society, under the direction of Mr William Poel, gave very interesting performances of The Tragical History of Dr. Faustus and The Comedie of Errors, which had a very sympathetic reception from evidently appreciative houses.

PAISLEY.

Paisley Theatre.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr J. H. Savile.—Mr Alexander Loftus's company is occupying the boards here this week in The New Barmaid. Mr Joseph B. Montague is irresistibly funny as Bertie White, and keeps the house in continual merriment; as William White Mr Alexander Loftus scores a success, being lively, amusing, and agile; Mr Leslie Austin is efficient in his interpretation of Captain Lovebury, and sing well; Mr Arthur Rodney admirably portrays Colonel Claymore; Mr Frank Melroyd is responsible for much merriment in depicting Mons. Bonsor; and clever assumptions are the Gussie of Mr Norman Bower and the Inspector of Mr George Roslyn. Miss Violet Osmund makes a vivacious Dora Heather, and dances well; Miss Jean Gilmour is dignified as Lady Moulton; Brenda Louth is admirably sustained by Miss Hilda Blanche; Miss O'Neil pleasingly acts Ethel Joy; and Miss Ethel Kenyon is smart and bright as Braddy.

Empire.—Lessee, Mr J. H. Savile; Manager, Mr Delno Fritz.—Here this week are the following, who all submit excellent turns:—The Three Martinettes, in their knockabout absurdity The Trainer and Two Tramps; Flo Chevalier, refined burlesque artiste; Alf Walker, Negro comedian, banjoist, and dancer; Tom Hulme, eccentric comedian; France and Francis, knockabouts and grotesque acrobats; and W. E. Hilton, ventriloquist.

PENTRE.

Lyceum Theatre.—Sole Owners, Messrs Carlton and Duckworth; Manager, Mr Sam Duckworth; Resident-Manager, Mr Eugene Hardie.—Miss Winnifold Chalmers' company was here the first portion of the week, in A Woman's Revenge. The piece is full of interesting situations, which were admirably portrayed by a strong cast. On Thursday and Friday the Moody-Manners company paid its annual visit to this theatre, the répertoire including Faust, Lohengrin, and Carmen.

PLYMOUTH.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr C. F. Williams; Acting-Manager, Mr J. Langdon Lee.—The return visit this week of The Marriage of Kitty is achieving another success. That clever actress Miss Vera Fordyce provides a finished study of Miss Katherine Silverton, whilst Miss Kate Harwood's acting as the young widow is remarkably good. Owing to the illness of Mr Sidney Orton, the character of Sir Reginald Belsize was entrusted to Mr Leslie Tyler, who sustains the part in a very capable manner. Mr Frank Wilson, Mr J. F. Leighton, and Miss Elsie Saville are also deserving of commendation.

Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr C. F. Williams; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy Williams.—Miss Lilian Dundas and company are appearing here in East Lynne, which is capitally mounted. As an emotional actress Miss Dundas adds to her laurels in the part of Lady Isabel Carlyle. Mr Henry Dundas essays the difficult rôle of Archibald Carlyle in a powerful manner, and no less to the fore is Mr M. Cole as Captain Francis Levison. A decided hit is scored by Miss Mabel Evelyn as Barbara Hare, and a very humorous impersonation is provided by Miss Kathleen O'Connor, who appears as Miss Corney Carlyle. Mr Henry J. Barrett represents Justice Hare. Mr Sidney Young and Mr C. Klein as Lawyer Dill and Richard Hare respectively acquit themselves creditably.

Palace of Varieties. — Managing-Directors, Messrs Livermore; Manager, Mr J. Field.—This week

Mr and Mrs Litchfield top the bill with their funny sketch, Down at Brook Farm, which evokes hearty laughter. The Vivians provide a smart and entertaining turn in, Life's Reverie. Funny songs are forthcoming from James Kurry, and topical songs from Walter Stockwell. Devere and Kenwick are smart dancers and mirth-provokers, and a slack-wire exhibition by Celeste is a feature of the show. The Little Charwoman, a musical mélange by Nannie Goldman and Willie Holles and company, is a very acceptable item, and The Call Boy, by Kisbey, is a unique speciality. Animated pictures conclude an attractive programme.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Arthur Carlton.—The Seal of Silence is being played here by Miss M. B. Buckstone and Mr J. Th. Cox's company. Mr George Langdon impersonates the hero in clever fashion, and Mr C. Arrol-Alderayde is equally successful as the villain. Mr Reginald Payne, Miss Lucy Coventry, Miss M. B. Buckstone, Miss D. Cook, Miss G. Hunt, and others distinguish themselves in minor parts.

PORTSMOUTH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr Armstrong Bell.—Miss Olga Nethersole and her able company are presenting Sapho here this week. Miss Nethersole in the name-part presents a fine, emotional, and well-sustained impersonation, and is warmly applauded. The Jean of Mr Arthur Royston is also a capable and masterly piece of work. Mr A. T. Hendon is amusing as Uncle Césaire. Déchélette by Mr George Norman Burt and Caoudal of Mr John Barnum are well acted. Miss Winifred Pearson is a pleasing Divonne, and Miss Jessie Melville is a successful Madame Hettema.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr T. E. Agate.—The powerful and interesting play East Lynne is being produced here for the week by Mr Ernest R. Abbott and company, Mr Abbott playing the part of Archibald Carlyle in a manly style that is greatly appreciated by all parts of the house. Miss Ada Abbott's portrayal of the unfortunate Lady Isabel is a capable and successful piece of acting. Mr W. T. Garbois scores as the villain, Francis Levison, and Mr William T. Riley as Lord Mountsevern is good. Mr Edwin Keene as P.-C Mutton is most amusing. Barbara is convincingly played by Miss Linda Riley, and Little Willie Carlyle is intelligently played Miss Elsie Jones.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Secretary, Mr W. Pratt.—This popular resort is being well patronised this week. Miss Katie Lawrence, star comedienne, is well received, her piquant style being much appreciated. Conway and Leland, the merry monopedes, are highly diverting in their novel turn; George Penn, quaint raconteur and eccentric musician, is smart; Charles Lilburn, vocal comedian, is very quaint; Frank and Free, comedy artistes and specialty dancers (a turn in lieu of George D'Albert, who is indisposed), contribute a clever act; and the Rozells, in their comedy bar act, are well received. The programme also includes Marie Santoi, soubrette; Jubal and Joyce, eccentric comedians; George Bernard, actor-vocalist; and Alf Levarni, wire walker.

RADCLIFFE.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr Geo. T. Sante; Acting-Manager, Mr Jas. Boothman.—As a pleasant change a variety entertainment holds away here for two weeks, the artists including the Testo Brothers, a couple of skilful musical acrobats; Miss Winnie Scott, a good comedienne and dancer; Harry Sutton, a well-known Lancashire humorist; Marie Winsome, male impersonator; Allen and White, hand-balancers and knockabouts; the Brothers Lander, knockabout comedians; Albert Ventor, a quaint comedian; and the Bowery Boys.

RAMSGATE.

AMPHITHEATRE. — Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; General Manager, Mr Henry Bowman.—Mr Joseph Poole's well-known Myriorama is being exhibited to good audiences here this week. The pictures, which are quite up to date, prove very attractive. Capital variety turns are sandwiched into the show. They include Mdlle Orbasany, with her educated cockatoos; Miss May Finch, vocalist; Felix Somers, facial wonder; and the Veronas, lady dancers.

RAWTENSTALL.

GRAND THEATRE.—Co-Proprietors and Lessees, Messrs W. Johnson and J. Potter; General Manager, Mr J. Potter; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr J. Ellis Miller.—Miss Cissie Moxon's company is this week paying us a second return visit with A Trip to Rum-Fum. Miss Moxon gives as good an interpretation as ever of Flossie Kixle, and Miss Lilly Mayfield makes a graceful and charming Peggy O'Hooligar, whilst Miss Rosie Stewart's impersonation of Angelina Toft is good. Mr Fred Alberto and Mr W. S. Hutchinson as Larry O'Hooligan and Biddy O'Hooligan respectively do excellent work. Mr Dick Tubb and Mr C. Russell as Van Swanck and Cecil Toft are also responsible for smart business.

READING.

ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Milton Bode; Acting-Manager, Mr W. E. Barnett; Secretary, Mr Reginald Taylor.—Mr and Mrs Fred Benton's company is here this week with A Marriage of Vengeance. Miss A. Harrison Tate is specially engaged for her original part of Stella Burgon, which she plays in powerful style; and all the other characters are well sustained.

ROCHDALE.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr W. Robinson; General Manager, Mr Otto C. Culling; Resident Manager, Mr Charles Clucas.—Otto the Outcast is in possession of the boards here this week. Mr Harry Starr again appears in the title-rôle with his usual success; Mr Richard Harris cleverly depicts the various disguises assumed by Roderique D'Estalier; Mr Wm. Miller justifies his selection in the part of Daddy Bruneau; Mr Conrad Clerke is effective in his portrayal of the Marquis De Laporte; and Mr J. Turner creates much amusement as Augustine Carrotte, being ably assisted by Miss Edma Lester as Susette. Miss Rita Rosslyn enacts with skill the part of Corinne Jarbeau, and Miss Queenie Fraser-Brunner makes a favourable impression as Lara.

CIRCUS AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs Smith and Lee; Business-Manager, Mr S. L. Lee.—Will Onda's company in A Quiet Night and Servants Wanted creates roars of laughter; Fred Bendella is a clever contortionist and hand balancer; Dave Hallie is an amusing comic singer; Gillin submits a capital exhibition of ventriloquism; the Bioscope shows capital pictures, introducing "A Soldier's Romance;" and Bob Stephenson, Irish comedian and dancer; Mdlle. Alencon, mystifier and magician; and Eva Reed, comedienne and dancer, complete the list.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Thomas Hargreaves; Acting-Manager, Mr Frank Hargreaves.—One of the best companies of variety artistes we have seen is here this week. The demon kettle introduced by Mr Fred Carlton and Prof. Lundi astonishes the audience. Mons. Slippere and Miss Ramsay gave a refined turn of piano-playing and vocalism; Wieland, juggler, convulses the house with laughter with his comic yet clever feats; and R. C. Note, character comedian; Harry Wenburn, comedian; Sisters Huls, vocalists and expert dancers; and the Empire Bioscope, with a series of animated pictures, are amongst the other attractions.

RUNCORN.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr H. W. Caddick.—Another variety combination holds the boards this week, and includes Mr C. Bostock, who has a host of risible topical songs; Will Percival, the eminent clog dancer; Miss Nellie Elliene, a taking vocalist; Mr Fred Charles, laughing comedian; Wayne and Wallace, comedians and statue dancers; Dunville, in a musical act; M'Gowan, vocalist; and last, but not least, the Four Arizonas, acrobats and jugglers.

ROTHERHAM.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr W. Manning.—Mr William A. Armour and company are here this week in the musical drama What a Woman Did. Mr Will Simpson is seen to advantage as Fritz Von Hœgitheim, and Mr W. A. Armour is a manly Conrad De L'Orme. Mr Percy E. Wright as Raffaelle Duroe is a typical villain, and is ably seconded by Mr Owen Edwin as Pitou. Mr Cyril Dundas is very humorous as Perfect Peter Pippin and Mr J. H. Stewart is worthy of mention as Audre Lafonte. Miss Violette Vivienne is smart as Marie Brisson and Miss Lcuie Lonora is chic as Fanchon. Miss Amy Maitland is a sprightly Nanette and Miss Alice Raymer gives a careful portrayal of the part of La Papillon. Miss Dora Price as Elsie De L'Orme gives a pleasing and sympathetic rendering of a difficult rôle.

RUGBY.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr E. Parker Royston.—Messrs Carson and Granville's company is here this week with The Heart of a Hero. Mr Fred W. Goddard as Jem Resdale is excellent, and has the approval of the audience throughout. Mr A. B. Mackay is good as Mark Marl, and as Wilfred Marl Mr Chas. E. Johnson gives a performance full of merit. Mr Allan Carruthers as Timothy Helghno is amusing, and Miss Ida Mackay as Susie Slack is also very successful in her rendering. Mr Eric Forth as Dave Pritchard is good, and Mr J. Harold as Henry Barker is worthy of commendation. In the very opposite rôles of Mrs Barker, Mrs Ryder, and May Ryder Miss Beatrice Hudson achieves conspicuous success, and as Nell Resdale Miss Cissy St. Elmo gives an excellent interpretation.

SALFORD.

PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr Harold Goulden.—Mr and Mrs William Giffard and company are cleverly presenting the remarkable play The World's Desire before good houses. The piece is excellently staged. Mr Wm. Giffard's portrayal of the scoundrel known as the Hon Ellis Tridley is masterly; Miss Giffard is no less successful as Dora Mutley; Nathaniel Mutley is well placed in the hands of Mr George Child; Miss Ella Seton as Helen Berkshaw and Little Miss Alberte as Ragged Jack are charming; Miss Frances Bruce as Justerina Hook causes roars with her clever business; Mr C. Rean effectively represents the twin brothers, Robert and Kenry Selkirk; and Mr H. Light as Godstone Clair and Mr Charles Roge,s as Washington Dobbs also give good support.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Director, Mr Thomas Barrasford; Licensee, Mr James M. Hardie; Secretary and Manager, Mr C. Shayler.—The Freydos, two clever athletes and hand balancers, head a very attractive bill this week. Edward and Netie Masse give an amusing juggling act entitled "Frolics in a Dining-room;" the Eight Lancashire Lads, expert clog dancers, gain much applause; Martin Conway, comedian, keeps the house in roars; and other good turns include Patty O'Brien, comedienne; Bros. Wedburn, amusing comedians; Brown and Wally, acrobatic and strong teeth performers; Reilly and Taylor, American Dutch comedians; the Wallonells, in a triple bar act; Harry Meir, amusing juggler; and the Two Gems, comediennes.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy B. Broadhead.—A diverting entertainment is given here this week. Auto-Atlas is seen in some extraordinary feats of strength; Abadaroffs, prehistoric acrobats, are good; trick and comedy cycling is done by Cyclo; Nancy Renshaw's song and bone performance is well received; Les Belles Americaines are expert dancers; and Mike Cary, comedy juggler, and his acrobatic dog; Harry Taft, whistling comedian; the Lyons Trio of pantomimists; the Wallys, comedy jugglers; and Nellie Amphill, comedienne, also give good turns.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr A. C. Harrison.—The Stolen Birthright is here, the play being presented by Messrs Chas. Draycott and H. B. Peppin's company. Marco is depicted in admirable style by Mr Draycott; a powerful portrayal of Andrea is given by Mr Robert Watson; Prince Antonio finds a careful exponent in Mr Pippin; as Stefano Mr Henry Mont acts with realistic effect; Miranda is artistically embodied by Miss Lilian Watson Loyde; Miss Maud Hetherington is a sprightly Nita; and Miss Alma Henson is good as Zudelia. East Lynne was staged on Wednesday.

SHEFFIELD.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr F. W. Purcell; Acting-Manager, Mr T. S. Carter.—A new musical comedy called Miss Mischief was played on Monday by Mr Godfrey Lamplugh's company. As Private Harris Mr T. E. Conover had a fine chance of showing his abilities as a comedian, and he provided abundant excuses for hearty laughter. Mr J. C. Bland did well as a typical stage Yankee, and the fun was kept going by Mr Harold Stanley, Mr Cecil Curtiss, Mr G. H. Llot, and Mr H. Ellesmere. Miss Evelyn Hughes was a graceful and vivacious representative of Kitty Malone. Miss Chrissie Frances was a captivating maid, and Miss Eileen Guilbert was dignified as Lady Orrery.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr John Hart; General Manager and Treasurer, Mr J. E. B. Beaumont.—There was a well-filled house on Monday, when The Lady's Maid was performed for the first time in Sheffield by Mr Gore Ouseley's company. That old local favourite, Mr Harry Fischer, received a cordial greeting, and his Josiah Biffin proved a capital bit of comic portraiture. That dainty and popular artist Miss Isa Bowman was a pretty and lively Mary Jane; Mr Tom Morton revelled in the opportunities for laugh manufacture provided by the congenial part of Spriggins; and amusing impersonations were the landlord of Mr H. Askam, the detective of Mr Frank Randall, the Petro Conti of Mr Joseph Wilson, and the Charlie Marchmont of Mr Dennis Drew. The feminine interest was well maintained by the Misses Geraldine Bruce, Pauline Hague, Amelia Rosemary, Freda Vaughan, Mollie Bailey, Vera Gordon, Iris St. Clare, and other pretty and talented ladies.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr C. W. Ramsay.—That big Alexandra favourite Mr Sam Livesey opened on Monday in the interesting domestic drama The Village Blacksmith. Mr Livesey physically realised the character of the manly hero of the piece, and acted with power and virile force. Mr Joseph Carter was well suited with the rôle of the villain, Captain Leo; and Miss Ethel Kay was excellent as Kate.

EMPIRE PALACE.—General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr A. W. Young.—The following performers are here this week:—Morris and Morris, American acrobatic grotesques; the Sisters Neilson, duettists and dancers; Brown and Robinson, musical comedians; Rastus and Banks, comic duettists; the Three Donals, Continental aerial performers; Geoffrey and Benson in a funny interlude; Mdlle. Emmy with her pets; Ford and Hanson, "the American musical millionaires;" the Tourbillon Troupe in a wonderful display of cycling acrobatism; and Julius Seeth's forest-bred lions.

MONTGOMERY HALL.—The successful season of the Maskelyne and Cooke entertainment comes to a finish to-night. Mr David Devant's extraordinary conjuring, the marvellous second-sight of Mdlle. Adela, the "Mystic Kettle" and the mystical sketch, Will, the Witch, and the Watchman, have been loudly applauded at every performance.

GRAND PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten. A good company is engaged here and business is excellent.

MR JOSEPH LEWIS, the popular manager of the Public Hall, Woking, offered a special attraction last week in the shape of Mr Albert Chevalier, whose undiminished popularity was testified to by a large and highly appreciative audience. Mr Chevalier gave some nine items, perhaps the best of which was "The Workhouse Man." Other specially popular items were "Wot fur do 'ee luv 'oi," "The Veteran," "Hemmer," "Our Bazaar," "My Country Cousin," and "Mafekin' Night." Miss Tresilian Davy, a highly finished soprano; Miss Flossie Behrens, a siffleuse of no mean order; and Mr Alfred H. West at the piano completed a most enjoyable programme.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).
Chapter I.
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.
Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

Mr A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes" which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette, Aug. 2d, 1901

Those who are interested in "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" will derive much valuable intelligence by reading Mr Albert Strong's book bearing the title above, published at "The Era" Office.—Pelican, 901 Aug. 3d, 1

Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr Albert A. Strong's new work entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his text-book on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases, what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee, July 28th, 1901

THE ERA

SHAKESPEARE AND THE "SHREW."

The Taming of the Shrew is a most interesting study to the practical playwright. Here we have SHAKESPEARE not selecting an old story or legend and moulding it into a drama, but taking an existent piece bodily, and "writing it up" into a work of literary merit. The question of divided authorship has always been a difficult one; and how many people "tinkered" at the "notion" of The Taming of the Shrew before it appeared in its Shakespearian shape is immaterial. No one knows who was the author of The pleasant conceited history of the taming of a shrew, which was published in 1594. As the late Mr F. A. MARSHALL observed, "nothing can be more weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable than the old play which SHAKESPEARE so ingeniously adapted. One cannot help asking oneself, after reading carefully The Taming of a Shrew, and then reading with equal care The Taming of the Shrew, whether the creative power shown by SHAKESPEARE in such an adaptation is not almost greater than that which in many cases belongs to originality in the accepted sense of the term. The dramatist who could take The Taming of a Shrew, with its commonplace dialogue, its shallow characters, and its ill-managed story, and could produce from such poor material the lively and lifelike comedy before us, need not be ashamed of acknowledging that he was indebted to something else than his own observation and invention."

The present production of The Taming of the Shrew at the Adelphi Theatre is a "revival" indeed. It was wittily remarked of certain recent performances of CONGREVE that his well-meaning exponents had not "revived" but "exhumed" him; but this cannot be said of Mr OSCAR ASCHE'S production. Since PLANCHE'S revival of the play in 1846, there has, we believe, been no adequate interpretation of it. We have usually seen it played in GARRICK'S version, "full of noise and fury, and signifying"—little. About thirty years since, The Taming of the Shrew used to be put on as a "front piece" or a concluding item at provincial theatres. Not only was the comic business exaggerated till it became exasperating; the humour and literary excellence which exist in the piece, in company with a liberal amount of "practical fun," were subordinated, neglected, and undeveloped. It was played, indeed, as a farce and nothing more.

The Taming of the Shrew is a comedy in the best sense of the word, and requires a certain subtlety of treatment only to be found in the best casts. All SHAKESPEARE'S characters will bear analysis. They are real and possible; they are flesh and blood; and they have souls, too—they are not mere pasteboard effigies. Katharine is, apparently, the victim of temperament and circumstances, combined with immense possibilities in the way of energy and feeling; with her fine physique, overstrung activity, and passionate nature, she is "cabined, cribbed," and "confined" in the monotonous life of a Paduan maiden. It is a common saying amongst horsemen that the colt who gives the most trouble to break in makes the best horse in the end. Katharine, in her father's household, is "matter out of place." She rebels against her condition of life, and the result is nervous irritability. Like Mr Eccles, she suffers from want of "scope." But, whatever she is, she is not really "shrewish," i.e., malevolent, mean, and spiteful. She is a fine exuberant sample of female humanity; and Petruchio, with keen penetration, discerns her excellence, just as Benedict discerned the excellence of Beatrice. Petruchio's character has its intricacies, too. He is an intellectual humourist, a natural philosopher. He regards the prospect of "taming" the handsome shrew with the agreeable anticipation with which a roughrider prepares to break some splendid thoroughbred mare to the saddle. "What a beauty!" he says to himself; "how she snorts and lashes out, and lays back her ears, and shows the whites of her eyes! What a task to wear her down by handling, by punishment, and by sheer superiority, till she bends her proud neck, and mouths the bit, and lets herself be turned hither and thither, obedient and yet not cowed; subservient but not servile!" It would seem hardly necessary to mention—if we had not so often had proofs to the contrary—that Petruchio is not a bully or a "swashbuckler." There is, however, a little bit of the "born actor" in him. He enjoys a masquerade. He is acute, but inexperienced; and he knows it. His cynical brag in the first act about being willing to marry any woman for money is the exaggeration of a novice half ashamed of his honesty. He learns, however, from Hortensio that Katharine is "young and beauteous," and that her "only fault" is her temper. One cannot help fancying that Petruchio felt himself just a trifle provincial, if not parvenu, on his arrival in Padua. His house is "in the country." He wants to show these fine town gentlemen what a countryman can do, and he undertakes a task from which they all shrink appalled. "Having thrust myself into this maze," he says, referring to Padua, "I am come abroad to see the world." In representing Petruchio, the actor has to show us "a play within a play"—to hint, aside, that Petruchio's "bounce" and bluster are only put on for the purpose of "outfacing" Katharine, and that at bottom he is a very kind and gallant gentleman. We owe a very deep debt of gratitude to Mr OSCAR ASCHE and Miss LILY BRAYTON for showing us all this so plainly in their admirable performances at the Adelphi, and for redeeming one of the most excellent comedies that SHAKESPEARE ever wrote from its undeserved reputation as a "noisy farce." The Adelphi revival is not emasculated. Katharine's violence is not watered down, nor is Petruchio's "swasherbucklering" extravagance underdone. And we get SHAKESPEARE'S text, SHAKESPEARE'S spirit, and SHAKESPEARE'S characters. We are not put off with a mangled "version," and the whole production is instinct with appreciation, with discernment, and with reverent admiration for the author. This, indeed, is the actor's and the manager's noblest work; to see further than purblind, parrot-like opinion, and go deeper than superficial, "slap-dash" estimate; and to hang a work of genius in a "good light."

MR HAYDEN COFFIN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Referring to our letter to you on behalf of Mr Hayden Coffin complaining of your having published the untrue statement that after studying his part in Veronique he had decided not to play, and to our second complaint that, instead of correcting your own error you expected an explanation to come from him, we must say that we regard your paragraph of 10th inst. as an aggravation of the position, for it infers that a request on our side was received by you, whereas no such request has ever been made.

It seems to be assumed that a newspaper can publish any unfounded and detrimental paragraph at pleasure until the person assailed explains. Nobody, of course, has any right to publish what is untrue, and although you shield yourself behind the journalistic practice of not disclosing an author, it is the editor's business, we submit, to voluntarily acknowledge an error and express regret for its publication, especially as other papers have reproduced the report.

The least we can ask is that you will publish this letter in next Saturday's issue in as prominent a place as the untrue matter appeared.

Your obedient servants,
MUNTON and MORRIS,
Solicitors.

Dec. 15.

The following are all the paragraphs complained of that have appeared in this paper:—

Mr Hayden Coffin is about to leave his position in The Cingalee at Daly's Theatre, where he now has been appearing for seven years. He will take up Mr Lawrence Rea's part in Veronique at the Apollo, and will be a very valuable addition to the cast of that dainty "opera comique."—The Era, Nov. 12.

Mr Hayden Coffin is an excellent judge of what suits him and what does not; and, after carefully studying the part of Florestan De Valiancourt, in Veronique, he has decided not to take Mr Lawrence Rea's place in the cast of that opera after all.—The Era, Nov. 19.

Mr Hayden Coffin wishes us to mention that there is not the slightest truth in the statement that he will not go to the Apollo Theatre and play the part of Florestan De Valiancourt, in Véronique, at present sustained by Mr Lawrence Rea.—The Era, Nov. 26.

Mr Hayden Coffin desires us to correct a paragraph which appeared in our issue of Nov. 19 stating that he would not appear at the Apollo Theatre. This was not correct, as Mr Coffin always intended to appear at the Apollo, and will do so very shortly.—The Era, Dec. 10.

FROM Drury-lane Theatre has been issued a neat little book for children, which tells the story of "The White Cat," the subject of this year's pantomime. On the cover is a picture of the hero of the legend caressing a pretty white cat wearing a large bow, and underneath is a portrait of Mr Arthur Collins. The booklet is illustrated by Mr T. Mackenzie, and the tale of the white cat, which is unknown to most children, is duly set forth in these pages. We learn that as a pantomime it has not been done at Drury-lane for five and twenty years; and as a fairy tale it originally came into being 220 years ago. Even in those remote times the Countess D'Aunoy, who included it in her fairy stories, was accused of having taken it from a fable that in many forms was as old as the hills. Little boys and little girls should not omit to write to Mr Arthur Collins for one of these interesting little booklets.

MUSIC HALL SICK FUND.

A special performance in aid of this Fund—the oldest provident society connected with the music hall profession—was given at Collins's on the evening of the 9th inst. The society was founded in 1867; its main object being to promote thrift amongst the members of the profession. By the payment of a small monthly subscription each member is entitled, while disabled by sickness, to a substantial grant in proportion to the sum subscribed, and at death the widow or widower receives a grant of £10. For upwards of thirty years the late Mr G. W. Hunt, the well-known song writer, held the position of secretary to the Fund; and the late much-esteemed Mr Herbert Campbell was the president. The membership has always been small; rendering it necessary that some special effort should be made to provide the expenses of management. In past years cricket matches and sports were the means by which these expenses were met, but more recently the necessary amount was raised by an annual performance at Collins's Music Hall. Friday night's programme was contributed to by a number of clever artistes. Amongst the early arrivals was Mr Gus Elen, who gave his new "Cabman" song, another of his admirable character sketches. Mr Edwin Boyde scored with "She's my old woman;" and Mr Tom Carney sang in good style "Somebody's Sailor Boy." Messrs Brown and Williams did well with their highly amusing patter and dance. Another comical couple were Jordan and Harvey, who, representing two Jewish gentlemen, caused abundant laughter and applause. Mr Fred Russell with his Coster Joe was in excellent form, and Mr George Mozart delighted the audience with his racecourse sketch, and the comic business which hinges upon a front door and a knocker. The Two Bees appeared in their latest version of "Hiawatha," and made a big hit; Mr Arthur Stacey introduced a clever step dance; and Mr Pat Carey had a big reception for his ditty in praise of the Irish and the neat dance which followed. Miss Lily Langtry sang with her usual spirit and dash concerning a Bank Holiday at Hampstead Heath; Mr R. H. Douglass, arrayed in barrister's wig and gown, gave his amusing address on behalf of the lady suing for damages for breach of promise; and Mr Dan Thomas contributed a dame song with capital results. The acrobatic feats performed by Messrs Hector and Paulus were much appreciated, and Mr Pat Doherty as the "Irish M.P." had a most enthusiastic reception. His dancing was as brisk as ever. Others who contributed included:—Joe Barry, Harry King-Lloyd, Sisters Clements, Francis and Francis, the Four Herberts in an acrobat sketch, Will Driscoll, Ernest Rees, Miss Howell, Mr Sinclair, Herbert Madden, Ruth Lytton, Arthur Reece, Gracie Taylor, and George Bastow. The pictures shown by Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope, which were of an interesting character, brought the performance to a conclusion.

In the course of the evening Mr Pat Carey (president), accompanied by the hon. treasurer (Mr Frank Heath), the secretary (Mr R. T. Baines), and members of the committee (Messrs Tom Carney, W. Wainratta, Arthur Stacey and Williams), appeared upon the stage and addressed the audience. Mr CAREY said that, having succeeded their late much-esteemed friend, Mr Herbert Campbell, as president of the Music Hall Sick Fund, he had to thank them most sincerely for their generous support and their presence that night. The expenses of management of the society, according to Act of Parliament, could only be defrayed by a special fund, and it was to provide for those expenses that the entertainment that night was given. The subscriptions of members could only be applied to their relief at times of sickness and the grant made to the widow or widower on the death of a member. He had to thank the proprietors of Collins's—Messrs Richards, Burney, and Co.—for so kindly granting the use of the hall, and Mr Chas. Hector, the manager, for his valuable assistance; also the artists who had given their services, the orchestra, and staff. Mr Carey mentioned that the members of the Canonbury Club had responded most generously to the invitation of a fellow member, the secretary of the Fund, Mr R. T. Baines, and had taken the first two rows of stalls. Their hearty thanks were due to them, also to the Terriers' Association, who had sent along a deputation and a guinea, and to Mr Leopold De Rothschild, who had, with his usual generosity in a good cause, forwarded a cheque for £5. Mr Carey said in conclusion that the late Mr Herbert Campbell was the president of the society for many years, and that they missed his genial presence very much indeed.

Messrs Will Oliver and George Lawrence were the stage managers; and Messrs Harry Lyons and Mills, acting managers, gave much appreciated assistance in front of the house, the whole being under the able superintendence of Mr Chas. Hector. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr G. S. Thomas, did excellent work. A souvenir of the late Mr Herbert Campbell, containing his portrait and an account of his career, was given with every programme.

"MY JERSEY LILY," the charming number recently published by Messrs Hopwood and Crew, Limited, and sung by Miss Maud Esmond, is being much sought after by principal boys and others for forthcoming pantomimes. Artistes in search of assured successes should lose no time in securing this pretty song. The words and music are by Messrs Alf. J. Lawrance and Harry Gifford.

MISS DAISY MORELL has just produced two clever songs entitled "She had a reason," by George Arthurs and Maurice Scott, and "The lady and the packet of pins," by Albert Hall. Miss Morell, in spite of tempting offers, is not playing in pantomime this year.

MR ROWLAND HILL, the curious comedian, is engaged by Mr H. A Jordison to play dame in his pantomime, The Babes in the Wood, which will be produced Boxing Day at the Osborne Theatre, Manchester, afterwards going on tour for twelve weeks.

MADAME ELLA and her lions usually provide an exciting turn, but an added interest was given to it on Friday evening, the 9th, at the Eastbourne Hippodrome, when two local gentlemen, Mr E. A. Foster and Mr E. T. Cook, entered the lion's den in company with Madame Ella and the lions. Mr Cook in the coolest manner opened a bottle of champagne and drank the health of the lady tamer and of the audience. The gentlemen were enthusiastically applauded on making their safe exit from the den of lions.

MR G. H. ELLIOTT, the chocolate-coloured coon, is producing shortly at the Tivoli a new and original song-scena by Messrs Lawrance and Gifford, entitled, "De Only One Without a Gal." The same authors are responsible for his already popular songs, "Havana Queen" and "Lazy Masie," published by Francis and Day.

MR FRANK COYLE has quite recovered from his very severe illness. After undergoing a very serious operation at the hands of Dr. Browne, the clever physician from the General Hospital, Leeds, he was for seven weeks in the nursing home at 22, Clarendon-road, Leeds, but is now convalescent. He will most probably resume business on Jan. 2 at the syndicate halls.

THE Dunedin Troupe of cyclists are a great success at the Casino Theatre of Varieties, Buenos Aires, and Mr Jas. E. Donegan, their manager, teacher, and trainer, has a book full of return dates to reappear in South America. The troupe open in London next February, and in Paris on March 1 for ten weeks.

SOUTHAMPTON.

GRAND THEATRE.—Resident-Manager, Mr Sydney Paxton.—The farcical comedy, Jones's Jaunt, is being played here by Mr Lilford Arthur's company, the principal interest centring around Mr Charles Collette's impersonation of the title-rôle. This favourite comedian achieves a great success, and is deserving of the highest praise for the energy and resource with which he undertakes what is undeniably an arduous task. Both Mr J. R. Crauford (Catesby Duff) and Mr D. Sellar (Tom Breeze) are admirably cast and responsible for sound work. A capital character sketch is given by Mr Ernest Wintour as Smith, Jones's valet; and Miss Ruby Chester and Miss Rosamund Bury both look charming and act well as Dolly and Kate respectively. Capable support is also afforded by the Misses Irene Ross and Mabel Luxmore and Mr Edmond Beresford, all of whom act with notable finish. Seymour Hicks's Lady Wrangler makes a delightful curtain-raiser.

PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs J. W. Gordon.—Miss Grace Hawthorne and her répertoire company are appearing here in a capital selection of plays. On Monday and Tuesday Camille was presented with success, Miss Hawthorne acting admirably and proving herself to be an actress of great power. She received excellent support from Mr Cecil Wynne and Mr Harry Hillier. On Wednesday and Thursday Sapho was given, and Frou-Frou was booked for Friday.

PALACE.—Manager, Mr Chas. Marte.—A capital musical turn is given by Messrs Norman and Leonard, who win tumultuous applause. Guy Rider is a clever youthful artiste, and Robert Gilbert's troupe of dogs and cats go through a wonderful performance. Maggie Rimmer and Nora Emerald are a couple of dainty comediennes; and the Donaldson Bros. and Ardel's Zoological sketch evokes continuous laughter and uproarious applause. Others entertainers are Jack Lane, the Yorkshire rustic, and Chas. Craston, comedian.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr W. Marlow, sen.; Manager, Mr W. Marlow, jun.—This week's attraction is the ever-popular play Called Back, presented by Mr Harry Marlow and supported by a powerful company. Mr Harry Marlow gives an excellent and realistic impersonation of Gilbert Vaughan; the three Italian patriots, Poolo Macari, Dr. Ceneri, and Petroff, are well taken by Messrs Leslie K. Manton, Richard Morton, and Tom Macfarlane respectively; Anthony March finds a capital exponent in Mr Harry Newman; Mr David G. Noble is exceedingly good as Captain Kenyon; Miss Grace Heywood gives a capital portrayal of Pauline March; Ellen Vaughan is gracefully characterised by Miss Nellie Lucas; and Miss May Mulvey is a winsome Priscilla.

SOUTHPORT.

OPERA HOUSE, WINTER GARDENS.—General Manager, Mr Alfred Hemming.—The Mikado was presented on Monday by the D'Oyly Carte opera company. With such well-known and accomplished artistes as Mr C. H. Workman, Mr Fred Billington, Mr Albert Kavanagh, Miss Nora Maguire, and Miss Theresa Rassam in the cast it goes without saying that the representation was excellent. The répertoire for the week includes Iolanthe, The Gondoliers, The Pirates of Penzance, Trial by Jury, and The Yeomen of the Guard.

HIPPODROME, WINTER GARDENS.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs Murray King and Clark; General Manager, Mr A. Cuthbert.—Through the enterprise of the lessees this popular place of entertainment, which has been refitted and beautified, was reopened on Monday under the patronage and presence of the Mayor and Mayoress. A large and representative audience witnessed the initial performance, a capital all-round programme being submitted. The turns included popular and national airs by the ladies' orchestra (conductress, Miss Zette Handel); Musical Stidder, the pierrot instrumentalist; the Jansons, pot-pourri novelty act; Babette, with her white stallion and black pony; Richard Lomas, the man-monkey; Alfred Barker, assisted by Miss Roylska, with their comic equestrian dogs, monkeys, donkey, and pony; Kellino and Pope, tumbling and patter clowns; Gus Barra, the comic musical motorist; Max Gruber, in his Indian sporting act with elephant and horse; and Ulric, in an excellent balancing act. A pleasing feature of the the opening performance was the presentation to the Mayoress of a handsome bouquet by the pretty young daughter of the genial manager of the Winter Gardens and Opera House, Mr Alfred Hemming.

SOUTH SHIELDS.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs J. and F. Coulson.—Mrs Henry Mayhew and Mr Charles Herrick's capable company is presenting the melodrama, The Triumph of Truth. Miss Marie Auckland secures first honours by her capable portrayal of the Twin Sisters, Violet and Lilian Anstruthers respectively; Miss Rosabel Dodd submits a telling representation of Blanche De Croix; Miss Lilian Ramsdale is a charming Coralie; Miss Lily Rogers also possesses charm as Katie Bright; and an artistic little character sketch of Little Lena is presented by Little Nellie Kenneth. Messrs Johnny Clegg (Tommy) and Frank Radcliffe (Pierre Choppard) submit sketches of character in the lighter vein; Mr C. W. Standing is a striking and manly Capt. Jack Eversleigh; and Mr T. Renaud Lockwood is a sinister Count Raoul D'Orville.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr Richard Thornton; General Manager, Mr Frank Allen.—The clever Karno Troupe is staying here another week with The Mumming Birds. The sketch, which is screamingly funny, is loudly applauded. Alex. Gay, the bricklayer conjuror, introduces a box trick, which succeeds completely in mystifying the audience. Mr Gay is local, and the box is entirely his own invention and manufacture. Emma Don and company, in a vocal scena, are favourably received; Rosie Archer submits some capital imitations of well-known music hall artistes; and amusement is caused by Professor Vox, ventriloquist. Others appearing are Fred Lincoln, versatile comedian; Marie Joyce, comedienne; J. D. Pedley, comedian; and Rosie Cass, vocalist.

TIVOLI.—Proprietors and Managers, Councillor J. K. Hall and Mr Jos. Sweeney.—An excellent programme here is headed by Mr Dennis J. M'Carthy, whose reception is extremely flattering in his speciality sketch entitled The Coastguard. The Danbys provides a laughter-provoking trifle, and Grace Merton, billed as "the original street-singer," is popular. Miss Lena Page, vocalist, has many admirers, and the remaining good turns are furnished by Sam Dalton, Lilian Travellie, Thos. Johnstone, and Minnie Moran.

ST. HELENS.

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr M'Leod Loader.—The melodrama A Noble Brother is the attraction here this week, supplied by Mr Charles Carte's excellent company. Mr Carte undertakes the rôle of Jerry, the Tramp, and is supported by Miss Doris Brooks, Miss N. Faithful, Miss Gertrude Holmes, and Messrs Kenneth Smith, Howard Thorne, R. Bosco, and J. Ansdell Wilson. Mr C. Carte scores well in his song, "The Follies of the Day," and Miss N. Faithful is a vocalist of no mean merit.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs T. Barrasford, Will Sley, and F. Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr A. V. Carnell.—The bill-of-fare for the week is again very strong, the artists including the Belmont Troupe of track and motor cyclists; the Electrones, trick cyclists; Elias B. Seener's troupe of Russian singers and dancers; Miss Alma Obrey, a clever comedienne; Carney Brothers, who, as locals, create a favourable impression; Moretta and Alice give a clever and unique equilibrist act; the Sisters Dorrell are deservedly applauded as duettists and dancers; and the New Macs keep the house in roars of laughter with their knockabout business, clever dancing, and boxing scene.

STOCKPORT.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr Wm. Revill.—Lucky Durham is being played here by Mr William Greet's company. The impersonation of John Durham by Mr Wm. F. Grant was admirable, and Mr Henry De Solla acted ably as Lord Mountfallon; Mr Daniel M'Carthy was acceptable as Richard Vallerton, and Mr Paul Belmore exceedingly clever and amusing as the Hon. Reginald Steighton. Miss Phyllis Relph acted with delightful charm as Helen Vallerton, and the part of Mrs Durham was pleasingly filled by Miss Nellie Bonsor. Miss Mary Relph displayed merit as Lady Mountfallon, and Miss Jessie Winter acted with ability as the Hon. Margaret Steighton.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietress, Mrs Weldon Watts; General Manager, Mr Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr R. G. Elder.—Mr Lawrence Brough and company in The Lady of Ostend are here. Mr Brough as Le Baron De Longueville gives a refined, laughable impersonation of his rôle; Mr Percy Marshall is clever as Joseph Carbury; Mr Harry Hampson does admirably as Dick Whortles, and causes much fun; Toby Krockitt by Mr Edmund Gurney is one of the successes of the piece; Miss Eleanor Gilbart's Matilda Carbury is full of realistic humour; Miss Doris Vane's Millie Grace is ably done; and Miss Kate Milford's Dorothy Whortles is played with great refinement and charm. On Thursday night The Saucy Sally, by the same author, was played. Margaret's Stratagem by the curtain-raiser.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr J. Batty; Manager, Mr W. Batty.—Plenty of variety is given in this week's bill, which is topped by the Scottish Meisters, whose singing is nicely balanced and sweet. Mons. Francis, "the cannon ball king;" Harry Nelson, dialect comic, who is a great favourite; Lu'aine Darrell Troupe, on the Roman rings; Cheevers and Kennedy, in clever speciality songs; Harry Attwood, comic; new Biograph pictures, and Payne's Little Vagabonds contribute to a very entertaining show.

STOKE.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr P. Collins; Manager, Mr Frank Egerton.—The premier position in the bill is held by Bert Clark and Venie Hamilton, who contribute a really clever turn, the piano playing, the patter, singing, and dancing all being excellent. Denby and Dent are seen in an exceptionally funny sketch, which meets with much appreciation; Max Merlin is a contortionist with but very few rivals; Cora Gray, ballad vocalist, is excellent; Ida Heath dances in her usual clever manner, which is deservedly applauded; Harry Brett is most entertaining in his items; Nita and Paul are seen in a clever trapeze performance; Marie Sinnett is a comedienne of merit; and the animated pictures are, as usual, excellent.

STOURBRIDGE.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—An attractive engagement is being fulfilled by Mr J. K. Reynolds and company. On the opening night three pieces were presented, the most effective being Conscience. Messrs J. K. Reynolds, Max Coutts, and Miss Adele Rhead were the principal performers, and too much praise cannot be bestowed upon them for a powerful and realistic rendition of their various parts. In addition Messrs Frank Aylmer, the Two Frissoes, and Belle Dinmont provide special turns, which are much enjoyed.

SUNDERLAND.

ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Chas. E. Machin; Business-Manager, Mr Percival Craig.—Messrs Carson and Granville's company, in the romantic drama Napoleon the Great, occupies the boards here this week. Mr Hugh Montgomery in the title-rôle gives an excellent interpretation of the part. He is well supported by Miss Chrissie Dunbar, who gives a capital portrayal of Marie Walewska. Mr J. G. Maine's Laczinska is a fine study. Mr Phil Harper as Colonel Mouron and Miss Maud Russell as his sweetheart are equally good in their respective parts. Mr L. Esmonde as M. Fouché; Mr H. Earlsmere as Colonel Laverennes; Messrs C. W. Spencer and F. M. Thorne, and the Misses Marie Harcourt and Florence Thorne are all worthy of mention.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Managing-Directors, Messrs Livermore Bros.; Acting-Manager, Mr George V. Wybrow; Treasurer, Mr Alfred Browne.—Abrensmeyer, who is described as the 'cow-boy hypnotist," is the great attraction this week. The Miles-Stavordale Quintet give with musical instruments clever imitations of human voices. Spry and Monti, up-to-date variety entertainers, are a capital turn. Florence Cecil; Chas. Paver, comedian; Lee and Arden, dialogue artists; Cecil Blanchard, comedian; and Vernon's animated pictures complete the bill.

SWANSEA.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs David Allen and Sons; Lessees, Mr Fred Mocillot; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter Bellian.—The attraction at this house during the week has been Charles Windermere's farcical comedy The New Housemaid, presented by Mr E. Oswald Brooke's No. 1 company. Mr Ralph Roberts (Hon. Bertie Rashleigh) is an excellent comedian, and won much hearty applause; Mr Charles L. Calvert (Rev. Stephen Stingles) was also very amusing; Mr Theodore Jones (Peter Pinkerton, J.P.), Mr Howard Brenan (Arthur), Mr Pan E. Draco (Marmsbury Doom), and Mr Campbell Goldsmid (Rosebery) were all good, and added much to the success. Miss Ada Mansfield did extremely well as Caroline, and caused much laughter; and Miss Ethel L. Caryllon (Dulcie), Miss Pattie Elliott (Agnes), Miss Mabel Vere (Nellie Haddock), and Miss Ella Burney (Lettice) gave valuable support. Buffo; the Story of a Broken Heart—a one-act play—was the curtain-raiser. Mr Walter Bellian, the present acting-manager, was given a farewell complimentary benefit on Friday night.

NEW STAR.—Lessee and Manager, Mr T. Morton Powell; Acting-Manager, Mr William Coutts.—The well-known drama Driven from Home has been the attraction here, played by Messrs J. K. Murray and J. M. Dawson's company, including Miss Lydia Donovan. On Thursday a complimentary benefit was given Mr J. K. Murray, who, for this night, appeared as Mathias, in The Sleigh Bells.

NEW EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Albert Mitchell.—An excellent programme here this week includes Geo. Gray and company, in the dramatic sketch The Fighting Parson; Little Nelusco, an exceedingly clever little conjuror; the Bostons, novelty showmen, with their imitation bull fight; Miss Alice Maydue, a pleasing character comedienne; L. B. Athol, a good comedian; the Labakans, a smart pair of acrobatic grotesques, with their cleverly trained little dog, Folly; and Harry Champion, popular vocal comedian, very quaint, who was loudly applauded.

PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr T. W. Grantham.—The engagements at this house for the current week are as follows:—Gilbert Gerard, mimic; Louis Leamore, character comedian; Mabel Kessler, soprano vocalist; Brothers Teviotdales, Scottish athletes, in an equilibristic act; Harry Howe, comedian and dancer; Clarke and Gold, banjo duettists and wooden shoe dancers; Irene Meldon, comedienne and dancer; Payne's Palace pictures; and the Wyffs (George and May), in the farcical absurdity The Parson's Mishap in a London Flat.

MUSIC HALL GOSSIP.

A MEETING of directors of the Moss Empires, Limited, was held in London on Wednesday, at which a letter was read from Mr H. E. Moss, who, since the formation of the company five years ago, has acted as its chairman and one of its managing directors. Mr Moss states that he has been medically advised to spend at least a portion of each winter in a milder climate, and that accordingly he desires, while retaining his seat on the board and his position as chairman, to give up the position of managing director, continuing to take an active interest in the affairs of the company.

THE directors have accepted this intimation with regret, and have, at the same time, with Mr Moss's approval, unanimously resolved to appoint Mr Oswald Stoll, heretofore Mr Moss' colleague as manager-director, to be sole managing-director. In this capacity Mr Stoll will have the assistance of Mr Frank Allen as assistant-director and chief of the staff, which is being reorganised on a system of district and departmental management to meet the requirements of the additional properties of the company in course of erection.

INTO Mr Oswald Stoll's hands, therefore, comes the direction of the largest music hall combine in the world, with a capital of nearly two millions. Of course, he has a marvellous head for business, and his ideas of the scope of the variety entertainment are unlimited. His early career was associated with the Parthenon, Liverpool, a people's music hall run by his father Mr J. C. Stoll in the early eighties, and by that gentleman's widow later on. The Empire, Cardiff, was established in 1889, under the direction of Stoll and Sons, and in 1899 Mr Oswald Stoll became managing-director.

HE speedily established a Welsh circuit by adding the Swansea and Newport Empires, and afterwards turned his attention to the London suburbs, where the Empires at New-cross, Holloway, Stratford, Hackney, and Shepherd's-bush stand as monuments of his enterprise. When the Moss Empires Company was formed in 1899 Mr Oswald Stoll became a director of the company of which he will now be the head, in succession to Mr Horace Edward Moss. Mr Stoll is a teetotaller and non-smoker; is never seen at public dinners, and the greater part of his life is spent at his office or in watching performers at his music halls. Yet in the midst of his enormous responsibilities and immense labours he has found time to write a book on the immortality of the soul.

BEFORE completing the scheme of the London Coliseum Mr Stoll and Mr Frank Matcham paid a visit to the United States to ascertain whether any ideas could be gleaned from the largest buildings in the greatest cities on the "other side." Neither in New York, however, nor in Chicago, nor in Boston, "the hub of the universe," did they discover anything which, in their own words, "came up to their idea of what London's latest place of entertainment ought to be." From the Coliseum, indeed, our cousins from across the water may gleam many novel ideas, and we may expect some up-to-date American caterer to establish a similar colossal enterprise in New York.

ALL who visited the new Coliseum in St. Martin's-lane before the private view on Thursday must have noticed, the large, over-arched recesses on each side of the stage. At the private view the rows of seats at the foot of these were tenanted by male and female choristers, dressed in white, who sang most melodiously at intervals during the afternoon. While the ears of the visitors were solaced by the performances of the fine orchestra a number of thoroughbreds ridden by jockeys galloped round a circle of grass carpet on the stage, the "cloth" at the back representing the grand stand and booths at Epsom on Derby Day.

THE majority of the seats in the Coliseum have been installed by the celebrated firm of Messrs H. Lazarus and Son, of 21, Great Eastern-street, London, E.C. In the balcony 500 independent seats with arms and curved backs have been provided, upholstered in bright red velvet with a gold embroidered number worked in each back. On the grand tier there are 543 tip-up seats, the standards being faced with wood, so that the iron is not seen, and the backs in Sheraton style of inlaid mahogany. These seats are upholstered in red-striped satin, and have Messrs Lazarus's new patent automatic action (approved by the L.C.C.). The seats do not spring flat back when released, but project sufficiently to be pressed down by the sitter, thus avoiding accidents which may be caused by the would-be sitter's forgetfulness were the seats to rise completely. All seats are numbered and lettered, so that they can be booked. The balcony has the finest sixpenny seats in the world.

"THE DANCING DOLL" is the name of the new divertissement that Mr George Edwardes will produce at the Empire at Christmas, and we hasten to assure the reader that no imitation of Mr Pinero's "comedy in disguise" at Wyndham's has been attempted. The new production, indeed, has been freely adapted from Puppenfee, which has been very popular in Vienna. Madame Katti Lanner has arranged the dances rendered necessary by the new scenario, thought out by Wilhelm, and Mr Cuthbert Clarke has also rearranged Herr Bayer's music and written in special numbers. Mr Harker is responsible for the capital toy-shop scene. Mdlle. Adelina Genée, of course, plays the chief part—that of Bébé, a mechanical doll, which is the pride of its inventor, Professor Marvel. In the character of the doll, the incomparable prima-donna assoluta will assume the garb of different types of puppets with characteristic dances.

THE doll's mainspring is unfortunately broken, but repaired by Noeline, a Christmas fairy, who has the power every Christmas Eve of animating the denizens of doll-land for that one night. This idea was illustrated in one of Mr and Mrs German Reed's productions at St. George's Hall some fifteen years since. There will be dolls of various nationalities. Madame Zanfretta will represent Mariquita, from Spain; M. Paul Sundberg, who will be remembered as Pan, in High Jinks, will be a Polichinelle; and Fred Vokes and Miss Clere will have a comic interlude as two Dutch dolls in a motor car.

LETTERS of administration have been granted of the estate of Mr George Wild Galvin, better known as Dan Leno, who died intestate at his residence, Springfield, Atkins-road, Clapham-park, on Oct. 31. His estate has been returned as of the gross value of £10,994, of which the net personalty has been sworn at £10,738 by his widow, Mrs Sarah Lydia Galvin.

THE Islington Empire was opened during the Cattle Show from 11·0 a.m. to 6·0 p.m., during which time a series of pictures was shown by the Bioscope. Some thousands of visitors enjoyed the exhibitions, which included about sixty of the very latest subjects. The experiment was first tried by Mr Walter Gibbons in December, 1903, and it proved so successful that it will be continued in future years.

MR FRED W. MILLIS will be leaving England for the land of the Southern Cross on Friday next, and his departure will be much regretted by the large number of friends he has made in this country. Australia and New Zealand both hold many of the chums that the artistic ventriloquist made in the early years of his stage career when he was a member of a troupe playing Gilbert and Sullivan's operas. Mr Millis will be heartily welcomed down under. Coo-ee

MRS BONEHILL, mother of the late Miss Bessie Bonehill, passed away on Wednesday morning at her residence, Alexandra-road, Landport.

THE Roscommon Music Hall, in Roscommon-street, Liverpool, is being considerably altered and improved. On Boxing Day it will commence a new lease of life under the title of "The King's," the manager being Mr A. H. Waterhouse.

MR T. HADYN REANO, who has been Mr Frank Macnaghten's conductor at the Palace, Bath, during the autumn season, finishes there to-night to take up a similar position at Nottingham under the same management for pantomime, the musical numbers of which Mr Reano has written and arranged.

MR THOMAS BARRASFORD lent the use of the Hippodrome, Liverpool, on Saturday last, for the holding of a matinée in aid of the Hot-Pot Fund, an important feature of the extensive charitable work carried on in the Mersey city. The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress were present, and the vast programme, sustained by many leading artistes from local theatres, was thoroughly enjoyed. As a result of the effort the sum of £240 was sent to the fund.

CLOG DANCING may not be considered the most fashionable or entertaining form of the terpsichorean art in London, but it is always a welcome feature of any variety programme in Lancashire, and the keenest interest was evinced last week in a competition for the championship of Lancashire, held at the Olympic Circus of Varieties, Bury. The chief prize was a beautiful solid silver belt designed and supplied by Mr F. A. Smith, of Manchester.

THE decisions rested with such competent judges as J. G. Burns, retired champion clog-dancer of the world; George M'Intosh, present holder of the world's championship and belt; and Arthur Thatcher, for many years with Sam Hague's Minstrels. It is worthy of mention that their decisions were in every case endorsed by the crowded audience each evening. So much excellence was shown by the various competitors that the judges must have had quite an anxious time. Their final verdict was as follows:—1, T. W. Royol, Manchester, championship and belt; 2, Jack Keene, Rochdale, gold medal; 3, F. J. Sterling, Liverpool, gold centre medal; 4, J. Jones, Salford, special prize. Consolation prizes were given to Jack Grice, Stockport (cup presented by Mr Will Lannon); J. Ward, Salford (pair of dancing clogs, presented by Mr J. Moffat, Glasgow); Young Igo, Bolton (silver medal); — Rawlinson, special medal given by Mr J. G. Burns; and J. Allen Price, Horwich (special medal given by Mr G. MacIntosh).

THE management of the Newcastle Empire is arranging a sacred concert on a gigantic scale for Christmas night, to benefit the relatives of the Newbiggin fishermen, who recently lost their lives while gallantly attempting a rescue at sea, and also in support of the fund for providing poor local children with breakfasts. The popular resident-manager, Mr E. Leslie Conroy, is working up the affair, and under his able and energetic direction the concert is sure to prove a great success. Already Lord Ridley has kindly extended his patronage and support to the undertaking.

MR W. C. BURNS, the hustling pilot for Bostock and Wombwell's Royal No. 1 aggregation, is busy booming "the show" for its opening in the Grass-market, Edinburgh, upon Christmas Eve. Mr Burns will be remembered in the music hall world in connection with his plucky management of the Grand, Sheffield, which, by the way, he quitted to return to his present situation at the end of August last. Mr Burns during his stay made many friends in the cutlery city. He will pilot Bostock and Wombwell's show (which, by the way, is 100 years old next February) up as far as Thurso and back again into England during the ensuing season. This is Mr Burns's third engagement with Mr Bostock.

MR GEORGE OSCAR STARR presided at the annual meeting of Barnum and Bailey, Limited, on Monday. The gross profits amounted to £322,780, which showed a reduction in takings of £78,827. This considerable decrease, the chairman said, was very largely met by the decrease in general expenses which, under the usual adjustment of provisions for wintering expenses, amounted to £262,820, or a net decrease of £64,113 on last year. The net profit was £76,247. The season in Great Britain, so far as weather was concerned, was admirable. Not a single performance was lost during the season.

IN speaking of "The Barnum and Bailey's Greatest Show on Earth" in America, Mr Starr stated that during the tour several entertainments were lost through bad weather and other causes. The most severe storm was at Iowa city, Iowa, where, with hardly a minute's warning, a cyclone struck the great canvas city. Fortunately, the doors had not been opened for the evening's entertainment, and not an animal or person was injured. In spite of this catastrophe, the entertainment was given as usual the following day in a city many miles distant. In conclusion, he moved the adoption of the report and accounts, and the payment of a dividend of 6 per cent. on the ordinary shares. In reply to a shareholder, the Chairman stated that, considering the state of affairs in England, he did not think it would be advisable to bring the show over to this country.

THE proprietors of the Regent Theatre of Varieties, Salford, on Wednesday last were defendants in a case of some importance at the Salford County Court. The plaintiff had occupied a seat in the dress circle, when her coat and fur were damaged by fire, as was alleged through a light falling from the gallery, where persons were smoking, and the contention was that the proprietors made themselves liable by permitting smoking at the performance and not taking proper precautions for the plaintiff's protection. Mr C. Shayler, the secretary and manager, proved that every possible precaution had been taken, and the judge held that the defendants had taken every reasonable precaution by putting up the wire-netting in front of the gallery, and that if a person wilfully put a lighted cigarette through the net he, and not the company, was liable for any damage which might result. He (the judge) gave judgment in favour of the defendants.

MR HERBERT NICHOLLS, the popular manager of the Empire, Wrexham, had his second annual complimentary benefit on Friday, the 9th inst. There were two crowded houses, and, in addition to the artistes engaged at the Hall (including Joe Hastings, the champion jumper; Giacomo, eccentric chapeaugraphist; and the Two Gems, comediennes and dancers), there was quite a galaxy of local talent, the most prominent being Mr Walter Roberts, comedian; and Mr Hugh Gillespie, elocutionist. The beneficiaire had a great reception, and was loudly cheered at the conclusion of each of his contributions to a lengthy and interesting programme.

MESSRS CHARLES SOLOMON AND CO., upholsterers, were summoned by the Town Council of Chatham on Monday for causing an obstruction in the High-street. The defendants exhibited in their windows Phroso, who was giving demonstrations as a mechanical doll at a local music hall, and who caused such an immense crowd to assemble that the street was rendered impassable. The defendants, who pleaded that the exhibition was simply a novel advertisement, were ordered to pay a fine.

THE Metropolitan anniversary, the seventh of the series, on Thursday evening attracted the customary large attendance, and there was an excellent programme. The birthday celebration lost something of its brightness in the regrettable absence through illness of Mr Henri Gros, who, we were given to understand, had intended making a speech on the vexed question of sketches in the halls. Mr Gros has been connected with the Metropolitan as an enterprise since 1892, when he took the old hall from Mr Lake. With its reconstruction by a company Mr Gros became managing-director, and has been a popular figure in music hall circles ever since.

THERE were many capital entertainers in a programme of inordinate length. Mr Arthur Roberts and Miss Ruby Celeste appeared by permission of the Palace directors in the amusing trifle, Packing Up; the M'Connell Trio played cleverly in the sketch, The Music Lesson; Mr Charles Coborn aroused the house to enthusiasm in "The Coster's Friendly Lead;" Miss Marie Lloyd was heard at her very best in two of her daintiest songs; Mr John Lawson and company chilled the marrow with the blood-thirsty and lamp-throwing quarrel in Humanity; Henry A. Moore gave us a reminiscence of the lamented Herbert Campbell, in the song "No show to-night;" Mr Gus Elen philosophised as a "cabby," and other turns included Hal Chapter, Kittie Neville, George Cazman, the Bohemians, Edie King, Fred Poplar, Kitty Wager, Amy Clevere, Queenie May, Dolly M'Callab, Kittie Rayburn, Nina Martino, Leo Dryden, Mdlle. Martha, Albert Christian, the Brothers Horne, the Bohemian Twins, Harriet Vernon, Lulu Evans, Sid Bandon, Victoria Monks, Joe Archer, Marguerite Broadfoote, and Jake Friedman.

MR TONY PASTOR, the great variety manager of America, writes:—"I enclose postal order for renewal of my subscriptions to The Era, which has grown to be a necessity to my comfort and a factor to my enjoyment." We hope that every American variety manager and every artiste in the world attaches the same importance to his copy of The Era.

MR TONY PASTOR also sends the following message of goodwill across the Atlantic:—"Once more we are at the season when custom and inclination prompt us to send greeting throughout the world to our friends. I have so many in England—commencing with The Era and running through all branches of the amusement profession—I must ask you to be my spokesman, and say to all my friends in England, and to my fellow American artistes, that I wish to stretch forth the hand of fellowship, and wish them all a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year. I am pleased to say that everything in the music hall line in this country is prosperous. Vaudeville is growing into greater popularity every day, and the English and European artistes over here are all doing well.

THE Duke and Duchess of Connaught were present at the Alhambra on Monday night to see the Entente Cordiale and the same programme as that which the Queen, the Duke and Duchess of Fife, and the King of Portugal have within the last fortnight witnessed.

MISS CISSIE FARRELL, who has given the transpontine folk so many enjoyable performances as heroine both of Surrey melodrama or pantomime, will play on Monday at that house the title-rôle in a new sketch of a highly-emotional character, entitled Jim's Wife, written by Victor C. Rolfe. The popular actress will be supported by a powerful company, and will no doubt meet with the heartiest of Surrey welcomes.

PROFESSOR HOBART, the latest exponent of the healing art, comes from America, and he has just concluded a successful tour of that continent, having also visited Australia and South Africa, where his applications of electricity as a therapeutic agency and his scientific exhibitions have packed the largest buildings. The professor takes the phenomenal charge of 5,000 volts through the body, and he is responsible for a unique performance which has excited both wonder and speculation among the medical profession, by whom he has been complimented.

MR CHARLES COBORN, who has returned from his trip to Canada, opened at the Oxford on Monday, and repeated the success that he scored on its boards when he sang "The man who broke the bank at Monte Carlo." His ability as an actor of character was displayed to the greatest advantage in his excellent song, "The Friendly Lead," a sketch that he endows with life, colour, and humour.

A GRAND matinée concert will be given at the Chelsea Palace to-day, by the permission of the directors, in aid of the Victoria Hospital for Children, under the distinguished patronage of the Earl and Countess of Cadogan. The following artistes are kindly giving their services:—Madame Belle Cole, Mr Richard Temple, Mr Arthur Helmore, Miss Marion Iceton, Miss Louise Zeitlin, Miss Florence Barber, Miss Margaret Layton, Miss Julia Leslie, Miss Sidney Keith, Madame Berta Foresta, Herr Josef Claus, Mr Ernest Pike, Master Farquharson, Mr Julien Henry, Mr Percy French, and others.

THE 385th meeting of the Executive Committee of the M.H.A.R.A. was held on Tuesday afternoon, Mr Joe O'Gorman, chairman of the committee, presiding. The secretary reported that thirty-two new members had joined during the past week, making the total number enrolled since the commencement 10,926. The names were submitted and confirmed by the committee. The hon. treasurer's financial statement for November was submitted and passed as read. The sums of £10 10s. respectively were sent as Christmas gifts to the Railway Benevolent Institution, the Railway Servants' Orphanage, the Music Hall Benevolent Fund, and the Music Hall Home Fund.

MR DAN CRAWLEY'S quaint methods and lively style are fast placing him in the very first ranks of music hall comedians. At the Tivoli on Tuesday last he was an object of interest to one of the greatest theatrical managers of the time, and there, as at the other four halls at which he has appeared during the week, his songs "I know how to settle it" and "Now you're married I wish you joy," caused some of the heartiest laughter of each evening. He has been secured by Mr Charles Hector till 1910.

"THE AIRSHIP AND THE SWALLOW," published by Messrs Charles Sheard and Co., of 196, Shaftesbury-avenue, is the song that is making a tremendous hit in The Forty Thieves pantomime at the Theatre Royal, Glasgow. It is being sung by Miss Annie Purcell, the fascinating Ganem, whose excellent vocal abilities do the pretty number complete justice, which has a specially arranged scene devoted to it. The scene and the song are most enthusiastically received.

MR HARRY WRIGHT, MISS NELLIE GANNON, and their daughter, MISS PEGGIE FAME, were the unfortunate victims of a collision that happened at Doncaster on Sunday. Mr Wright unhappily was severely hurt in the head and back, Miss Gannon is also suffering from bruises and contusions on her neck and back, and Miss Peggy, with a bruised instep, is prostrated by the shock. Mr George Bohee and Mr Charles Vincent witnessed the collision, and were very kind in at once administering to the wants of the injured.

THE Lyceum, it is now definitely announced, will open on the now popular two-houses-a-night plan on Boxing Day, under the direction of Mr Tom Barrasford, who at present is the only Englishman running an English music hall entertainment in Paris, where his enterprise at the Alhambra—late the Château d'Eau—has made his Parisian confrères sit up. Mr Barrasford believes in large buildings and cheap prices, and he has an ideal house in the transformed Lyceum, which is the largest variety theatre in London.

THE Christmas attraction at the Oxford will be Joe Elvin in his latest, Fares, Please! A special tramcar is in course of construction, and Mr Elvin will, it is needless to say, be seen as the conductor. Mr George Womack, the energetic young stage-manager, first took up his duties at the Oxford on the night of the production of 'Appy 'Ampstead, and since that time, nearly three years ago, he has successfully superintended the appearance and stage setting of all sorts and conditions of turns, from performing elephants to wrestling matches. He himself was formerly an actor, having toured with Miss Kate Tyndal in Two Little Vagabonds, afterwards being promoted by Mr Glenister to assistant stage-management at the Oxford.

THE management of the Alhambra has made an engagement of exceptional interest, by which on Monday, Jan. 2, a company of Chunchuses will be seen for the first time in this country. These remarkable people, who were formerly active members of a fighting band hailing from Liao-yang, have in later years perfected themselves in the peaceful art of jugglery. Six in number, they have been "showing" in the Russian camps and along the Sha-ho lines. Their passport for safe conduct to Europe is signed by General Kuropatkin, who permitted the "Tchin-Man" company of Chunchuses to proceed from Mukden to Austria, Germany, and England.

MR H. H. WELLS, one of the directors of the Oxford, who is working very hard for the poor in the St. George's-in-the-East district, will give a grand matinée performance on Thursday, Jan. 12, at the Paragon, Mile-end-road, when many of the best-known artistes have promised to appear. Application for tickets should be made early, and can be had of Mr Fred Miller at the Canterbury, or of Mr Charles Beecham at the Paragon.

MISS LOUIE FREEAR is by way of returning to the variety stage at Christmas, having been secured by the Tivoli for the festive season. Miss Freear is about the quaintest little actress we possess, and her amusing oddities of manner were never better displayed than when she first delighted London playgoers at the Duke of York's with "Mary Jane's top note," in the character of the slavey, Ruth, in The Gay Parisienne. The part was a small one, but Miss Freear gave it the cachet of a comedy manner so genuinely droll that Ruth's opportunities expanded each evening until she became the principal personage of the piece. Another of her most excellent impersonations was the working man's wife, condemned by her husband to wear the costume of Mercia, in The Sign of the Cross, because he had been to see Wilson Barrett in that play. This was once given at the Lyceum, and was watched from the wings by the late actor-manager and Miss Maud Jeffries with great amusement.

THE Britannia pantomime, which will be produced by Mr John M. East, will be entitled The Goblin of the Sea, and will be founded on the story of "Sinbad." The cast will include Mr George Lupino, who has been a favourite with Hoxtonians for a number of years; Miss Daisy James, Mr Alf. Passmore, Miss Gracie Taylor, the Two Graces, Mr Charles Jerome, Mr Tom Wallace, Mr Leonard Russell, Miss Inez Clough, Miss Rosie Humphries, Mr Charles Jerome, and the Three Phydoras.

MISS DECIMA MOORE, whose Irish scena Barney is one of the features of the Coliseum programme, is the youngest member of a singularly gifted family. One of her sisters, Madame Bertha Moore, has recently made a success with a series of song-lectures, perhaps the best being her sketch of the life of Sir Arthur Sullivan, illustrated with selections from the works of the famous "melody maker." Miss Jessie Moore was formerly a Savoyard, and is the wife of Mr Cairns James. She takes an active interest in the School of Dramatic Art opened some months ago by her husband and Mr Ernest D'Auban. Miss Eva Moore's stage career is too well known to need describing. Miss Decima made her début in The Gondoliers at the Savoy, and was last seen in London in My Lady Molly at Terry's. She and her sisters are not related to Miss Mary Moore.

MR R. A. ROBERTS, another of the Coliseum attractions, was born in Liverpool, and made his first appearance at the old Theatre Royal when he was a boy of fourteen His first protean sketch, called Lucinda's Elopement, was produced at the Palace Theatre, and ran for over 300 nights. About three years ago he turned his attention to the study of Dick Turpin and other "gentlemen of the road," poring over old books and prints in the British Museum, and racking his brains to solve the apparently insurmountable difficulties, for a quick-change artiste, of high boots and tight-fitting clothes. His longest change of costume is made in exactly four seconds, and his shortest in literally the snap of a finger. Dick Turpin's entrance alone took him nine months to perfect. A few people, including the Maharajah of Mysore, have watched Mr Roberts's turn from the back of the stage, but not one of them has been able to describe in detail how it is done. The distinguished Indian expressed his opinion that R. A. Roberts must be the devil!

MISS EDITH COURTNEY, who commences on Boxing night her fourteenth return engagement at the Palace Theatre, is one of the many young "old Savoyards" to be found doing good work in London. She made her stage début in the late Mr D'Oyly Carte's American company, playing Lady Sophie in Utopia, Limited, having previously appeared as a child singer. She has toured in Australia and South Africa, and met with the most exciting experience of her professional life last winter in Johannesburg. There was a great fire at the Empire, where she was engaged, the whole of the stage being burnt. It happened at night, after the performance, and the news was taken to Miss Courtney at her hotel. All her private baggage and stage costumes were at the theatre, but she heard that everything was gone with calm and cheerful resignation. Hurrying to the spot she discovered, however, that the first report was greatly exaggerated, for many of the artistes' possessions had been saved, and her own trunks were untouched by fire or water.

MISS COURTNEY has often received letters from unknown admirers in front of the house. A couple of weeks ago a note was left at the stage door of a suburban hall, with instructions that it should be delivered directly after her turn. Miss Courtney found that it contained the usual compliments, and half a sovereign. The evident sincerity of the writer, added to her own amusement and curiosity, induced her to see him for a minute before she went away. He raved about her charming songs—"But why the half sovereign?" she asked. "I really can't give a reason for sending it," was the answer. "It was done on the spur of the minute. I felt that I must send you something for the sake of 'Eileen Alannah.'" As this impulsive admirer was positively hurt at the idea of her returning his gift, Miss Courtney has had it hung on one of her bracelets.

MISS VESTA TILLEY was unable, in consequence of a bad cold, to appear at the Hackney Empire last Friday and Saturday, her place being taken by Fred Keeton, eccentric character comedian, who proved himself a great favourite with the audience. Miss Tilley will be at the Tivoli on Boxing Day.

AS a recipe for driving dull care away go to the Collseum, take the nimble sixpence, book in advance the right to occupy one of Lazarus' luxurious armchairs in the balcony of Mr Oswald Stoll's magnificent temple of amusement, and there, gazing upon an excellent entertainment, puffing the soothing weed, and listening to the strains of ravishing music performed by a splendid orchestra, you will come to the conclusion that life, after all, is worth living.

DR. WALFORD BODIE who has just crossed the Border after a phenomenal run in Scotland, opened last week at the Metropole, Gateshead-on-Tyne. Owing to his huge success Mr Sidney Bacon arranged for a special matinée at he Olympia, Newcastle-on-Tyne. The Doctor introduced his latest sensation, Mystic Marie, the Real Trilby. The performance was under the patronage of the Sheriff of Newcastle, the doctors, and clergy. Mystic Marie's performance created quite a furore, and owing to her enormous success she was presented publicly on the stage with a costly gold medallion by the Sheriff of Newcastle, who, in a neat speech, complimented Miss Marie and the Doctor.

AHRENSMEYER created a sensation at Sunderland on Monday by his wonderful blindfolded drive through the streets of the town. Every day the Palace has been besieged by the curious to watch the trance lady in the lobby of the theatre, and naturally enough crowded houses at night have been the result.

MRS ALLAN M'ASKELL, after an illness extending to eighty-nine days, was conveyed to her home in West Hartlepool last Tuesday, Mr M'Askell's sister travelling specially from Sunderland to Scarborough for that purpose. The doctors regard her recovery as little short of a miracle.

MISS ELLA KELLEWEY, an Australian, will shortly appear at the halls in a novel entertainment. This young lady has been connected with the Royal Australian opera company, and has toured through the New Republic, Tasmania, New Zealand, and South Africa. She possesses an extraordinary voice, in the compass of a dramatic soprano, embracing three octaves, and has just arrived in England.

MR REMBGES, who is so well known to visitors of the Middlesex, was the recipient on Thursday evening, the 8th inst., of two very handsome presentations in the shape of a valuable gold watch and chain, a heavy silver-plated salver, and a handsome tea and coffee service as wedding gifts. The first was a present from professional and private friends, and the last from the habitués of the hall. Mr J. L. Graydon, who made the presentations in a few felicitous sentences, referred to the amiability and geniality of Mr Rembges, and congratulated him. The staff of the Middlesex presented Mr Rembges with a tantalus spirit stand.

MR CHARLES CONWAY is busily engaged in preparing a new pot-pourri entertainment of an entirely original nature. In this new act Miss Nita Clavering will play the leading part, and have ample opportunity therein of displaying her great versatility.

MISS VICTORIA MONKS opens at the Palace Theatre on Monday. She will introduce two new numbers to the Palace patrons, one a tuneful ditty, entitled "There's a girl inside," and a new rag-time coon song, "I ain't gwine to leave home in the rain." Both songs are from the prolific pen of William Hargreaves, and have been acquired for publication by Charles Sheard and Co.

MR DAN ROLYAT, who has been playing Sergeant Lightning in His Majesty's Guests, is making a hit in the Grand Theatre pantomime, Glasgow, with a song called "Odds and Ends," specially written for him by William Hargreaves. Mr Rolyat is taking five and six encores every evening for this number, and has commissioned the author to write extra verses to meet the demand.

MESSRS JOHN P. HARRINGTON AND GEORGE LE BRUNN have, during the past week, been specially commissioned to write and compose original numbers for the forthcoming Christmas pantomime at the Crown Theatre, Peckham; and Mr Isaac Cohen has expressed his approval of a new duet for Miss Alice Lloyd and Mr Arthur Lawrence, entitled "Poor Cinderella," also of a humorous trio, "Dumble dum, derry; dumble dum, day," both of which are from the pens of this busy firm.

MISS KITTY WAGER'S powerful song, "Marching with the unemployed," which has caused something like a furore nightly at the Metropolitan and the London, is from the pen of Mark Lorne.

MISS MAUD ROSS, who has been appearing during the week at the Holloway Empire, relates with pride how she acquired the beautiful earrings she wears, and which were a present from the late Miss Bessie Bonehill. The great artist, delighted with Miss Ross's talent, promised her a gift on one occasion, and gave her the ornaments referred to the very next time they met. The point of the story is that eleven years elapsed before the two ladies again set eyes on each other, but Miss Bonehill had not forgotten her promise, and triumphantly produced the earrings.

MRS A. J. MILLS presented her husband on Friday in last week with a daughter, and now the popular author and composer is merrily chanting his own song, "Have you seen my girl?" instead of the other famous ditty for which he also was partly responsible, "There's a girl wanted there!" A comic song, "They all walked into the shop," by Mills and Castling, has been secured by over a dozen leading pantomime theatres in town and country.

SOME time since it was reported in the newspaper press, and vouched for, that a gentleman, through dreaming he was lying in a field beneath a blazing sun, woke up actually sunburnt and with the skin of his face peeling off through the effects of his vision. This was seized upon by Fred Leigh as the basis of the song, "When I woke up in the morning," now being sung by Mr Sam Mayo, who promptly secured it, and the numerous verses, each embodying a curious dream and a disastrous awakening, have provoked yells of laughter, and the report of its success has spread like wildfire among the pantomime folk. It will be issued immediately, Messrs Francis, Day, and Hunter having secured it.

AT the Crystal Palace, as usual during the Christmas holidays, there will be a daily round of amusements, and the chief attractions will again be a pantomime and a circus, the arrangements being entrusted to Mr Humphrey E. Brammall. The story of the pantomime will be "The Babes in the Wood," which will be treated from the modern standpoint of farcical development and spectacular beauty. The leading comedian will be Mr Will Poluski, jun., who will be supported by Miss Connie Leor, Miss Kathleen Grey, Miss Mignon Tremaine, the Kimberley Boys, Master Cruwys, the boy vocalist; Mr T. Walford, and Miss Wee Mona. The circus, which will be fixed up in the centre transept, will have no fewer than three separate stages, each of which will be independently illuminated and decorated, and this arrangement will render possible many novel features which it would otherwise not be able to properly present.

THE LONDON MUSIC HALLS.

THE TIVOLI.

The music halls may be said to be marking time in preparation for the Christmas festival, and, therefore, business generally is not at its best. Messrs James Howell and Arthur Yates, however, are presenting a very attractive list of entertainers, and though the ranks of comedians are considerably depleted by the Yuletide demand for their services, there is consolation for the laughter-lover in such turns as Little Tich, Dan Crawley, and Ryder Slone, the last-mentioned a gentleman who has made a name in the provinces, and who is likely to be seen a good deal in London. Mr Slone is heard to very great advantage in a burglar impersonation, in which he asks the question "Are you asleep?" Little Tich is particularly happy in his selection, "The Idol of London Town," which is set to the popular tune of "Whistling Rufus," and his big boot dance, as usual, brings down the house. Mr Dan Crawley was being watched one evening during the week with critical interest by an eminent theatrical manager, who duly marked and inwardly digested his method of promoting fun in his songs, "Now you're married I wish you joy" and "There you are." An interlude of a very lively character is the duologue presented by Miss Gracie Whiteford and Mr Fred Sinclair. It relates to the ever interesting subject of matrimonial squabbles, which originated, so we are told by a monkish playwright, in the Ark. Harold, one of the ordinary sort of husbands, returns home a little bit the worse for liquor, and Mary, in none too amiable a mood, rouses his dander. One word leads to another, and the demon jealousy is unloosed. In the course of a scheme of mild revenge Harold impersonates a certain Arabella, and Mary retaliates by appearing as Mr Fitznoodle. Of course, it is only a storm in a teacup, after all, and when the audience has been thoroughly amused the curtain is rung down on reconciliation and rehabilitation. Miss Whiteford, who has so often delighted us at the theatre, returns to her old love, the music hall, in the character of Mary, which she plays with real spirit and vivacity; and Mr Sinclair is responsible for many mirthful moments in the part of Harold. The sketch is an agreeable change from song and dance, though one would not willingly miss the pleasant terpsichorean exercises of Miss Edie King, who trips it daintily in the limelight, and sings with much vim. Mr Edgar Romaine chants of "Pennies" in a number that has a swinging refrain; and Mr W. H. Clemart, a smart ventriloquist, makes his lady figure warble 'The lover and the bird," an ancient ballad of the drawing-room pattern. Mr Clemart's best effort, however, is his imitation of a baby in distress, the crying being most naturally reproduced. The Eight Biseras are particularly attractive girl instrumentalists, who play selections on brass instruments, from which they produce a sweet tone. They choose such popular melodies as "Hiawatha," "There's a girl wanted there," &c., and are received with genuine heartiness. Miss Lily Langtry gives some of her experiences during a visit to the Zoo, and the account is most entertaining. She catches the comedy of a Cockney crowd exceedingly well, and is evidently a keen observer of the ways of the people during a Bank Holiday. Starr and Leslie present a very pretty show of club juggling, in which the lady, an excellent vocalist, joins. The ever-changing light of the street lamp, which is an important feature of the act, causes much speculation as to how it is done. Kopski, who calls himself a classical pianist, plays selections that are difficult, though never dry. Classics in pianoforte music are not necessarily dull, and Kopski is making the public aware of this by his artistic work on the keyboard. The Mayvilles wind up an excellent bill as Liliputian artistes, their Irish and other duets being quite to the taste of the house. Other turns in the scheme of amusement are Miss Rosie Lloyd, the Borghetti Troupe of acrobats, Miss Eileen Douglas, and Mr Dutch Daly.

GATTI'S (ROAD).

Knowledge of the needs of the neighbourhood has enabled Mr Tom Tinsley to secure an enduring prosperity for the "family resort" in the Westminster-bridge-road, where the certainty of finding a generous provision for their entertainment is the chief cause of attraction to variety lovers who dwell within sight of "Big Ben." Excellent specimens of talent figure in the current bill, which is rich in variety, and mingles with song and dance the exploits of the practised athlete. A very fair exponent of muscular training is found in Luis Hardt, who boasts a chest measurement of 45in., and who, standing on a pedestal under a powerful light, gives a display of physical culture similar to that of a celebrated professor of the art, the biceps of the arm and the muscles of the back and chest being abnormally developed. Descending from his perch, he gives specimens of strength of finger and limb, raising a half-dozen cues together with two fingers, thereby claiming a world's record. Gigantic barbells are held up, occasionally with the addition of several persons on his chest, as he reclines on the stage, the combined weight at one time being a quarter of a ton. It is a breathless moment for the audience when Hardt essays to raise a 171lb. barbell aloft at arm's length, a roar of applause denoting its successful accomplishment. A thrilling display of strength is also given by the Leopolds, whose somersaults and top-mounting attain the height of acrobatic skill, and evoke appreciative cheers. The ladies of the troupe are especially expert, the somersault from the top of the living column on to the shoulders of the performer at the base being a marvel of feminine intrepidity. The house is roused to hearty merriment by the quaint eccentricities of Athas and Collins, whose business with a scarecrow gains roar upon roar of laughter. Miss Collins becomes very fascinating in her songs and dances, while her partner supplies a running accompaniment of fun that wins a hearty recall, an odd and novel dance being given in response. The Sisters Clive sing the praises of an English maid, and also indulge in a couple of love duets. One dresses as a naval officer, and woos a maiden who looks comely enough in the flowing robe of a bygone period. Their three duets are well received, and the dance with which they conclude reveals a skill and grace which are very acceptable. Recollections of the lion comique arise at the appearance of Mr Leslie Race, who is nevertheless well up to date with his effusions, which he renders in good style. His song "Girls are not wanted there" contains some scathing references to the fair sex, though he is immediately afterwards found advocating "A honeymoon every year," while in his ditty of "Down below" he deals with the depths of the ocean and the nymphs that abound therein. Rossi and Vaughan enact a comic scene between a countryman and a London lass, who is given to singing "On the banks of the Ohio" and "The girl in the panama hat," their impersonation of a Japanese couple, with a characteristic dance, forming a well-applauded item of their contribution. Miss Daisy Silcott sings effectively of a lad's devotion to father and mother—a sentiment which is sure of appreciation—and later has some mordant satire to bestow on "What men call love," which, however, has a verse at the last which saves the sterner sex from utter despair. With a pleasing lack of preference, Miss Silcott also sends some well-aimed shafts at "Woman," a fine vein of satire running through the song, of which the fair vocalist makes the utmost. Mr Mark Leslie as a coon comedian puts in some excellent step-dancing; the Mutograph affords a view of passing events of serious and comic interest; Mr Johnny Holland and company are seen in their amusing sketch, A Comfortable Couple; Mr Chris Richards, Canadian comedian, sings a "tumbling" song, suiting the action to the word with exceedingly comical results; and others who help in the scheme of amusement are the San Remo Girls, comediennes and dancers; Norah Noble, comedienne; and Mr Charles Rutland, comedian. Mr I. W. Baker keeps his musical forces in a creditable state of efficiency, and Mr Cattaneo exercises a courteous control at the front of the house.

HACKNEY EMPIRE

On Monday, Dec. 12, a New Sketch, by Charles Cunningham, entitled "THE KING'S HAT."

Sir Reginald Delauney, Bart.	Mr CHAS. CUNNINGHAM
King Charles II.	Mr C. E. BROOKES
Colonel Digby	Mr H. STEWART
Captain Meers	Mr W. FRANCE
Ferrier	Mr H. FITZGERALD
Lady Delauney	Mrs CHAS. CUNNINGHAM

There is much merit in this new production, which is distinctly superior to the average music hall sketch. The events are supposed to happen—for the author is careful to guard himself against being held responsible for the historical accuracy of the episode—just previous to the Restoration, a period which lends itself to picturesque treatment. Then, too, the romantic adventures of Charles Stuart have always formed a tempting subject for the dramatist in search of an effective plot, and Mr Cunningham has done well to revert to so interesting an era in the history of England. The scene is the ancient hall at Thursby Manor, the residence of Sir Reginald Delauney. This gallant cavalier has a weakness for gambling, and this has led to a crisis in his affairs. He has been entertaining Colonel Digby and Captain Meers, and the night has been spent in playing cards for high stakes. These two men are no better than common card-sharpers, and foolish Sir Reginald, ignorant of their true character, has no chance against them. He recklessly stakes the family estates and loses. There is still the famous necklace of emeralds, but, alas, this valuable heirloom follows in the wake of the family estates. Digby and Meers discover in the house a plumed hat, which they recognise as belonging to King Charles, and they rightly surmising that the monarch is not far away, resolve to give him up to his enemies at the first favourable opportunity. Ferrier, an old family retainer, has his suspicions aroused and communicates them to his mistress, Lady Delauney. King Charles, who is concealed in the mansion, is made their confident, and he resolves to watch, secreting himself behind a screen. The card-sharpers are detected and denounced. The sound of horses galloping at full-speed is heard, and a party of Royalists make their appearance. They bring the glad tidings that the King's cause has triumphed. Charles rewards Sir Reginald with a peerage and accuses Digby and Meers of being traitors to their King. Mr Charles Cunningham as Sir Reginald Delauney succeeded in presenting a very natural and wholly effective portrayal of a gay cavalier of the period. Success also attended Mr C. E. Brookes in his admirable delineation of King Charles. Mr H. Stewart was well placed as Colonel Digby, and Mr W. France was equally satisfactory as Captain Meers. Mr H. Fitzgerald deserves every credit for his capital sketch of the faithful old butler. Mrs Charles Cunningham proved a charming representative of Lady Delauney. Mention should be made of the massive oak set, with its fine ceiling and parquet floor, which was specially built and painted by Mr Francis H. Bull. The new sketch was received with such demonstrative approval as to leave no doubt whatever as to its success. The other portion of the Empire programme this week is exceedingly attractive, the artistes including the Five Delevines, in their musical mélange "Flirtation;" Clown Zertho and his dogs; Alexandra Dagmar, in the burlesque scena Duchess of Dantzic; Lotto, Lilo, and Otto, trick cyclists; Syd May, in a burlesque on the great Hackenschmidt; Cabby and Shirker, in their eccentric bar act; Ike Scott and Son, comedians; Ada Cerito, comedienne; and the Three Sisters Kloe, athletic wonders.

ISLINGTON EMPIRE.

A special feature of the programme at the Islington Empire is an overture appropriately entitled "Islingtonia," specially composed and arranged by Mr Alfred Petersen, the musical director. Into this many of the popular melodies of the day are introduced, at one point the players of the brass instruments standing up and facing the audience. The new piece, which was publicly played for the first time on Monday, was greeted with loud applause at both houses, and Mr Petersen bowed his acknowledgments. In consequence of the illness of Miss Hetty Chattell her place in the bill has been taken by Miss Daisy James, who is a great favourite in Islington. She gives an admirable embodiment of the "Gibson girl." Probably an Islington audience may have had only an extremely vague knowledge of this young lady, but Miss James has introduced her to them in the guise of a very lively damsel who wears a charming costume, has a peculiar walk of her own, and sports a "Gibson" feather. Miss James next appears in the character of a very different type, that of the maid who has fallen in love with the man who carries the red flag in front of the steam roller. Both ditties are sung with much spirit, and are received with manifest favour. The Black and White Zouaves go through their lightning drill with remarkable precision under the command of their leader, performing a series of complicated exercises in a manner that affords conclusive evidence of the strict training they have received. They conclude with a realistic wall-scaling exhibition entitled "Attacking the Forts." Those who first reach the summit of the wall assist their less active comrades by catching hold of their hands and pulling them up. The top gained, the attackers, uttering warlike cries, disappear on the other side; and eventually the forts are seized. The whole performance is one of much merit, and reflects great credit upon the leader of the troupe. Mr Charles Williams, known as the "handcuff king," has been performing some remarkable feats here this week, freeing himself from handcuffs and heavy chains in a marvellous manner. The genuineness of the achievements is testified to by a number of people who accept an invitation to go upon the stage. Mr Alix Lukos is successful in "How a song should be sung," giving imitations of the comic singer, the bass, and others. He also contributes a topical ditty most effectively. Mr Will Driscoll, an Islingtonian, who has only recently joined the ranks of music hall comedians, has a good style, and is likely to make headway in the profession. Mr Rex Fox's wire act is well worth watching. He can walk the wire while smoking and also on stilts, his achievements eliciting warm applause. My Fancy as a speciality dancer has few rivals, and she appears in a special illuminated scena from the brush of the late lamented Dan Leno. Bonnie Goodwin and her Apollo piccaninnies are responsible for a smart performance, one of the youngsters particularly distinguishing himself. Mr Hal Chapter, comedian, does well with "Keep your opinion to yourself." The pictures depicting the "Capture of the Yegg Bank Robbers" are highly interesting. The first reveals the robbers' encampment. Then they are seen entering the bank and at work on the safe. They are surprised by the watchman, who, however, is killed, and the robbers escape. They are pursued and take to the river, and then to the woods. After various adventures they are trapped and shot. Mr Will Spearman, the manager, is active and alert in front of the house, and Mr Walter Gibbons occasionally looks in to see that all is going well.

ROYAL ALBERT.

Constant care is exercised by Mr Charles Relf that the entertainments at Canning-town, while presented at prices that do not unduly tax the monetary resources of a humble community, shall be invariably excellent, and as a consequence loyal patronage is always accorded him. Large audiences have this week been attracted by a bill-of-fare of a specially interesting character, a favourite item being the sketch played by Mr Fred Southern and company entitled The Private Hotel, a trifle of an extremely farcical nature. The head of the combination excites the wildest merriment by his funny impersonation of a burglar who breaks into what he supposes is an hotel, but which is in reality a private lunatic asylum. Caught in the act of purloining the silver and other valuables, he is persuaded by the proprietor at the point of a revolver to accept a situation, his principal duties being to prevent the four or five lunatics from escaping. His encounters with these eccentric individuals are the principal cause of the mirth, and all who take part in the playlet work hard and with complete success. Early in the programme Mr Frank Jester arouses some hilarity with a couple of comic ditties, "They all run round the table" and "I fancy I can manage that myself;" and he has a greatly appreciated ditty in "I'm as happy as the king," a number in which he impersonates a humble toiler who declares that an honest British working man whose castle is his little cottage is quite as much to be envied as any bloated aristocrat. Miss Lily Pender gives a refined and amusing little interlude wherein she impersonates different performers she encountered at an impromptu concert given on board an Atlantic liner. Her imitation of a child is very realistic, and her Nigger, Irish, and German songs are all acceptable renderings. She also gives a humorous song quite out of the beaten track descriptive of the first visit of an elderly Irish couple to the theatre, and her entertaining turn is completely successful. Mr Bob Pearson's song, wherein he portrays the mannerisms of a porter and a showman, is an enjoyable item, and a clever laughing ditty and a well-rendered coon song and dance are also included in his enjoyable turn. Miss Daisy Meadows' first number, "Isn't it nice, boys?" greatly pleases her auditors, and her two other songs, "Why should a girl say 'No'?" and "Molly," also enable her to display her talents as a comedienne, a pleasing appearance and some pretty costumes also aiding in her success. One of the most amusing items in the bill is that for which Fyne and Hurley are responsible. One of them gives a ludicrous impersonation of a dude, and his companion takes the part of a burly coster with some humorous repartee that is quite refreshing. Very laughable is their description of a journey to the Derby, and their boxing bout evokes screams of merriment, the ludicrous appearance of the "masher" being of itself enough to make the most solemn smile audibly. The Sisters Edwards, a couple of exceptionally agile and enthusiastic duettists and dancers, are received with as much approval at Canning-town as they have recently encountered at halls further West, their dainty appearance, tuneful songs, and smart dancing combining to make a most attractive and interesting turn; and Mr Harry Gold works a novel and appreciated idea in his song, "Gold, Gold, Gold," in which six or eight local children impersonate some animated sovereigns, their vocalism being loudly cheered. Mr Gold also secures applause with "Bold Robert Emmett" and another number. The Two Bees (Harry and Flora Blake) are giving with all their usual success their popular and beautiful scena "Hiawatha;" and Nash and Noel, comedians and dancers, also figure in the long and entertaining programme, which includes some interesting and amusing films shown by Walter Payne's Bio-Photoscope. Mention must be made of the admirable work done by Mr Walter Leaver, the courteous and tactful chairman.

DR. BODIE AT RICHMOND.

Dr. Walford Bodie, "The Great Healer," to give him only one of his numerous titles, is amazing the theatre-goers of Richmond this week. Dr. Bodie, assisted by a charming medium or subject, Miss Marie Walford, first gives a remarkable performance of hypnotism pure and simple, and the control he exercises over the actions of Miss Walford is little short of marvellous. This portion of Dr. Bodie's programme, extraordinary as it is, is followed by a performance, if it can justly be so called, which arouses the keenest interest. The doctor announces that he will cure persons suffering from paralysis, and proves as good as his word. On Monday night a little boy aged ten years, living in Richmond, and personally known to a large proportion of the audience, was the first patient to be treated. The lad had been paralysed since birth in his left arm and leg, and was treated in full view of the audience. After placing him under hypnotic influence, the doctor of bloodless surgery, as he called it, gave liberty and action to the patient's left hand and foot, and then treated him with powerful electric currents. Removing the electric wires, the doctor brought the patient back to his senses, and handed him a three-pound weight, which he proceeded to hold and lift above his head by means of the arm and hand that for ten years had been worse than useless to him. Afterwards the lad walked easily about the stage waving his cured arm to his friends in the gallery, who roared with delight. Following this patient came a girl aged seventeen years, announced to be the daughter of a porter at the Chelsea Hospital. This unfortunate girl had been paralysed in both legs for several years, but after treatment by the wonderful doctor got up and walked about the stage and finished by walking away with the fearsome-looking leg-irons she had up to that evening been obliged to wear—one iron in each hand. Both these cases were genuine beyond a doubt, and it was stated that both had been to our best London hospitals, and had been discharged as incurable.

HERBERT CAMPBELL MEMORIAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—A memorial to the late Mr Herbert Campbell in the shape of a bust, either in marble or bronze, is to be obtained, and placed, if possible, in the vestibule of the Theatre Royal, Drury-lane, the scene of so many of his triumphs. Mr Harry Randall has kindly consented to act as president and Mr Edward Ledger, of The Era, as treasurer to the fund.

It is the intention of the committee to engage an artist of repute to execute this work to the memory of the above-mentioned generous and genial comedian. The committee will esteem it a great favour if his old friends and admirers will assist in making this memorial a success. All subscriptions will be duly acknowledged in The Era.

Yours faithfully, FRANK HEATH, (Secretary).

THE PALACE ANNIVERSARY.

The Palace anniversary is always considered one of the pleasantest functions of the year and Mr Alfred Butt was evidently determined that in the twelfth celebration should be preserved the brilliant traditions of past annuals. The fine programme submitted on Tuesday evening contained the names of celebrities of both stages, and whatever the Theatrical Managers' Association may think or do, they cannot in any way disturb the entente cordiale that has always existed—and will continue to exist—between entertainers from the legitimate and variety theatres. The chief novelty of the special programme was the unnamed wordless tragedy by Hugh J. Ward, music by Julian Jones, in which the author and Mr Harry B. Warner appeared. These gentlemen have the reputation of being excellent fencers, and the piece had been invented for the purpose of giving both of them an opportunity of showing their skill with foils. The scene is a club-room. In strolls Mr Hugh Ward. He has apparently been to a performance of Rigoletto. The air sung by the Duke, "La donna è Mobile," haunts him. He must whistle it, and, to give him his due, he does so quite correctly—even after a whiskey and soda, supplied by a waiter. Mr H. B. Warner, who also comes to the club, has likewise returned from the opera, and is just as much struck with the melody, which he persists in whistling in the minor. The two men are soon in dispute, and Mr Ward strikes Mr Warner with his glove, which, as we are supposed to be in Paris, means a duel. The foils are handy, and it is soon discovered that the affair is serious, the combatants being corps à corps continually. At length Mr Ward's weapon reaches his opponent's lungs, but even then he can still whistle faintly the melody that has been his undoing. The playlet finishes with Mr Warner's death, Mr Ward strolling away in a mood of complete indifference as to the unfortunate end of his musical rival. As the curtain falls Mr Ward celebrates his triumph by still whistling his favourite air in the orthodox key. The fencing was exceedingly good, and both Mr Warner and Mr Ward were heartily applauded for their clever display and their excellent acting. This was the only tragedy that disturbed the imperious reign of comedy during the evening. Some fun was caused in the first hour of the carnival by Professor Cross examining the bumps of Mr Arthur Roberts and other gentlemen. From Mr Cross's felicitous remarks we learnt that Arthur would live to a good old age, but that it would be a mistake for him to retire from "business." Arthur was duly grateful, and felt in his pocket for coin, but the precise reward given by him to the phrenologist was kept a profound secret. Later in the evening the comedian joined the Follies, and sang with Mr H. G. Pélissier a topical duet, "That will be a very nice change," by the latter gentleman and Mr Wimperis. This caused considerable diversion, as Arthur, dressed in the pierrot costume of his companion, was evidently amused to see the latter garbed in a huge red dress coat, and when Pélissier mimicked Roberts the latter retorted with an excellent skit of his imitator, which caused roars of laughter. It was excellent fooling. Mr Charles Warner was one of the extra turns, and his elocution in the "Queen Mab" speech of Mercutio made an excellent impression. Miss Ada Reeve, looking very charming in a white gown, came specially to sing 'Born, not made," adding "Only a Penny" as an encore; Marguerite Cornille, another Palace favourite, sang "Te souviens tu?" Mr R. Michaelis, choosing the melody, "Eyes of blue and eyes of brown," put much artistic expression into a refrain beloved of the masses; Miss Adelina Genée enchanted everyone with her dancing; and Mdlle. Zizi Papillon's toe dancing was admired. Mr Gus Elen must have been delighted with the hearty reception given to him in his cabby number, which he followed with his "ale" ditty; Mr Esmond and Miss Evelyn brought out the comedy of a little duologue after the pattern of Uncle's Will, the gentleman singing charmingly to his own pianoforte accompaniment; Mr Morris Harvey mimicked Mr Tree, Mr Alexander, and Sir Charles Wyndham with success; Mr Nelson Jackson was responsible for some unusual imitations at the piano; Miss Camille Clifford made an agreeable impression as the "Gibson girl;" and Miss Winifred Hare sang very artistically one of her favourite solos. A pretty novelty that took the fancy of the audience was discovered in the A Ba-Be Picture Postcards, which disclosed a number of artistic reproductions of domestic scenes and heroines of nursery lore, such as Red Riding Hood and Cinderella. The most artistic card was, perhaps, the blind girl in a prettily painted confield listening to the song of the skylark. Little Tich, who came late, had a rousing reception in his song and big-boot dance; Miss Ruth Lincoln sang "April Morn;" Miss Alice Pierce gave her impressions of favourite actresses; the Palace girls danced in dainty style; Mr G. H. Chirgwin entertained in his own original way—which is just the way Palace audiences most highly appreciate; and other turns included the Ameen-Aboun-Hamed Arab acrobatic troupe in some wonderful pyramids; Yamamoto and Koyoshi, in their great Japanese balancing act; De Gracia's baby elephants; Miss Daisy Jerome, comedienne; Miss Nina Martine, vocalist; the Bioscope; and Alf Arnesen, equilibrist. Mr Herman Finck's excellent orchestra played with fine effect the overture from William Tell; Mr F. R. Kinkee was at the piano; and Mr Alfred Butt received capital assistance in the front of the house from Mr Fitzroy Gardiner and Mr Thomas Miller. Mr Frank Damer stage-managed.

A SEQUEL TO "HIAWATHA."

The Two Bees have been busy at the London Music Hall this week with a new chapter in the history of Longfellow's Indian hero, who has been perpetuated in two hemispheres by the jingling tune to which his love ballad has been fitted. In the new version the melody has been dispensed with, but the romance of the story has been preserved, the one scene showing the forest home of Hiawatha and the wigwam where he dwells with Minnehaha. The birds sing melodiously on all sides, and the distant canoe speeds it way along the Mississippi. It is twilight, and beneath the changing rays of the setting sun Minnehaha sings her babe to sleep. Scarce has the last note died away when the crack of a rifle is heard, followed by a warwhoop, and Hiawatha bounds on with the spoils of the chase, which he lays at the feet of his dusky bride. Minnehaha is timid of the white man, and warns her spouse that he may be punished for stealing, whereupon Hiawatha breaks out into a fierce invective against the pale-face, who had robbed him of his ancestral home, declaring that the fruits of the earth were meant not for the few, but for all. The lines are poetic, dignified, and in complete agreement with the views of a popular audience, whose sympathy with the economic principle so forcibly expounded is complete. Mr Harry Blake makes a noble red man, and delivers the recitation impressively and with such vehemence as to win frequent cheers, and Miss Fiora Blake sings with tender feeling as the Indian squaw in the pretty lullaby with which the piece opens, her voice also blending admirably with that of her partner in a short duet at the conclusion.

In the notice of the opening performance at the Eastbourne Hippodrome last week, the smart dancing turn given by the Sisters Le Graham was inadvertently omitted.

Mr Percy Honri concludes to-night a most successful seven weeks' engagement at the London Pavilion. After a short provincial tour he will return to the Stoll Empires on Feb. 6.

THE LONDON COLISEUM.

Our lengthy account of the beauties and luxury of the London Coliseum had scarcely prepared our readers for the revelation of architectural magnificence that was seen by a large invited crowd at the private view on Thursday afternoon of Mr Oswald Stoll's latest and most important enterprise. The house is practically complete. The theatre has a frontage of over 100ft. to St. Martin's-lane, the style adopted is Italian Renaissance, and at one end the façade is carried up terminating with a warm-coloured tiled roof, with a cupola over; from here dark granite columns and arches form three openings, one containing windows lighting the typist room, the other exits from the salon, and the other being the royal entry. Over these openings are rows of windows lighting the managerial offices, and over these again are semi-headed openings, divided by columns, and having balconies between with casement windows opening out to same. These form the front of the large refreshment room or roof garden, containing a domed roof formed of glass and iron, and constitute quite a unique feature, and one that will be greatly patronised.

In the centre of the block, which contains the principal entrances, arises a large square tower, most artistically designed, and of noble proportions. It is carried up over the bold archway containing the entrances in square, rusticated work, with a heavy, bold cornice, which forms a base for the more elaborate treatment over. This consists of heavy column pilasters, with bold carved figures at the corners, representing Art, Music, Science, and Architecture. From here the tower assumes different outlines, formed by trusses and niches, and the introduction of sculptured lions; the whole is carried up, getting less in diameter as the top is approached, when eight figures in the shape of cupids support a large iron revolving globe about 12ft. in diameter, to which is attached large electric letters spelling the word "Coliseum." The globe is made to revolve, and this artistic advertisement can be seen for many miles. A further novelty in advertising this building is the electric device along the front, which gives the nature of the performance taking place at the time during the evening. A verandah covers the pavement in front of the principal entrance, formed of glass and iron, a feature being the way in which the glass is curved in shapes, and the handsome panelled glass in the fascia, the whole, when lighted up by electricity, forming a very attractive feature in St. Martin's-lane.

The comfort of the public has been considered in every way. The Coliseum provides what no other theatre in Europe supplies—lifts to take the audience to the upper parts of the building. From the grand salon ascend and descend two lifts or elevators, which will convey the visitor to the smoking lounge in the basement and to the foyers on the first and second floors, and to the roof garden over, also enabling the audience to ascend to the different levels of their seats. These lifts are identical with those supplied for the use of H.M. the King at Epsom and Doncaster. Each holds eleven people, is electric, and possesses six independent safety services. An attractive feature off the salon is the ladies' sitting-room. This is approached through two draped archways, and is fitted up in the most recherché style, with couches, writing tables, pedestals with ferns and flowers, mirrors, electric reading lamps and shades, &c. The floor is richly carpeted, and the walls panelled and filled with red brocade. The whole of this room will be exposed to the salon, and will be a decidedly useful feature of the theatre. From it a corridor leads to the ladies' cloak-rooms, lavatories, &c., all fitted up and furnished in the most comfortable style, with every convenience and luxury.

From the salon two wide corridors lead to a long, wide foyer, running the whole width of the building, and serve as a lounge for the patrons of the stalls and boxes. It has a domed ceiling divided with ribs, and a bold cornice is carried by pilasters dividing the wall space, which in some cases are decorated in panelled work, and others containing recesses and fitted with counters from which confectionery, American drinks, ices, coffee, tea, and other refreshments can be obtained. All the boxes are approached from the foyer through quaintly designed doors, fitted partly with plush velvet and copper nailing. Large handsomely draped openings divide the grand salon from the grand staircase, which is undoubtedly a feature in this vast establishment. This staircase is of great width and easy ascent, the steps being wide, and the balustrading, ceiling, and walls are all covered or built of different coloured Italian marbles, alabaster, &c. Iron handrails and pillars are introduced, terminating with flambeaus; marble columns and arches divide the staircase from the foyers on the first and second floors. The staircase is completed at the top with a carved ceiling, containing an ornamental glass roof, which gives light and completes the whole scheme.

From the ground floor, or entrance level, the marble staircase is continued down to a large baronial smoking-hall, for the use of all parts of the house. It is most quaint in its arrangement, being carried out in heavy oak timbering, the walls being covered with tapestry and the floors laid with thick rugs on polished wood block flooring. The room is furnished with settees, tables, and lounges, the whole being specially designed to carry out the baronial style adopted.

Large cloak-rooms are provided at the most convenient positions, fitted with racks for the careful removal of hats and cloaks, with attendants to take care of them, and there will be no fees. The roof tea and refreshment room, which will be reached by elevators, is an apartment that occupies the whole frontage of St. Martin's-lane, being 100ft. long. It is furnished with oak green-stained tables and chairs, and with writing-tables in convenient places. Here the visitor can easily spend the hour between the two performances, if so desired, listening to the orchestra, which is accommodated at a cave and rockery at one end of the building, surrounded with nooks and corners containing palms and ferns.

AN OLD COMIC SINGER

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—In a recent issue of a contemporary I came across an allusion to the once-popular singer John Read, who is in great distress. I have known Mr John Read for about thirty years, and am, therefore, in a position to recommend his case to your readers. He must have been well-known to the vast majority of the music hall artists who fulfilled engagements at Collins's Music Hall in the seventies, eighties, and nineties, and I venture to hope that his pitiful case has only to be prominently brought to the notice of an ever-generous profession through the medium of your valuable columns in order to find him some monetary help to avoid what I know would be to him a most odious final result, viz., seeking parochial assistance. I should not venture to trouble you on this subject did I not know from nearly forty years' experience that your columns are ever open to assist the truly needy, especially when that need is coupled with a deserving past. Mr John Read in his time has written several very popular songs for such artists as Herbert Campbell, G. H. Macdermott, George Leybourne, Fred Coyne, Harry Rickards, with other ditties, which, in the hands of Nellie Farren, Edward Terry, and Teddy Royce, have helped to brighten many a Gaiety burlesque.

Yours faithfully, C. H. SHEARD.

Miss Ruby Bijou, after successfully touring the provinces for five months, returns to town, and will rest for a week. On her resumption of business at Christmas she will introduce some new dances.

(FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

CONCERNING the Elliott children, for whose benefit a handsome sum was raised a year ago, the vicar of Nether Stowey, Bridgwater, writes:—"One of the two children left orphans by the late E. Elliott, who with his wife was killed by the storm over a year ago, the girl Emily, aged about twelve years, died suddenly last week at her uncle's home on Rye-common, Hertfordshire." The Rev. R. Hasland, the gentleman sending us the news, is vicar where the calamity occurred, and interested himself a good deal in raising a local fund to benefit the children.

AT Holloway's New Empire Theatre, Astwood Bank, a new play by a local gentleman, entitled, The Needlemakers, has been produced, and a variety entertainment has been given by the Astwood Bank black-and-white minstrels.

MESSRS BARKER AND THURSTON opened at the Agricultural Hall, Norwich, on Thursday, for the Christmas fair, and will remain there till after the holidays. Their popular gondolas and other attractive amusements have been extensively patronised. The hall has rarely been closed, the circus having occupied it since its opening in 1882, but this year is an exception.

THE interesting letter from Lion we gladly insert this week. Any historic reminiscences of lions not embodied in Frost's, Van Hare's, George Sanger's, and Wallett's books and pamphlets would be welcomed by our readers. The Rev. T. Horne remembers Whittington's Wild Beast well. It was "John Whittington," not "Richard Whittington." Johnny Whittington was—and may yet be—a live fact. Mr Horne saw him some ten years ago with coker sheets at Rotherham Statutes Fair.

Bostock and Wombwell's mammoth show paid a visit to Blyth on the 9th inst. exhibiting on the market-square afternoon and evening to large audiences.

HANCOCK'S WINTER GARDENS, Plymouth, this week retain the services of Miss Ray Maig, a popular and clever coon vocalist and dancer. Miss Ada Fossett sings serio-comic songs with ability Will Beecham appears with much success in sketch, and up-to-date animated pictures are presented.

CHRISTMAS and New Year fairs and carnivals are a most interesting development of the travelling show business. Within the memory of the writer of these notes they were almost unknown, yet such is their rapid and phenomenal rise and progress that this coming Christmas it is true to say that no centres of life within the United Kingdom are without their well-organised and successful Christmas and New Year fairs and carnival.

LOOK at the large array of centres of show life this coming Christmas. The list we give is only the ascertained list—there will be a score or more other places where a few outside entertainers gather to winter, and to refil for the coming year; and they open and do a little business whenever the rigour of our climte permits.

IN London, in addition to the Christmas carnival par excellence, "the World's Fair at Islington," under the management of Messrs Read, there are fairs under Messrs P. Collins Limited, Fulham way, Biddall, Woolwich way; Mrs Wetherhead, at Deptford; Davies, at Dorking, and probably one under the management of Andrew Purchase in one of the industrial or residential suburbs.

IN Manchester show settlements will open for the holiday fortnight and Saturdays, at Ordsal-lane, Trafford-road, Ardwick (Hyde-road), Hillkirk-street), Beswick, Trinity Market, Salford, and Banock-street, Hulme. At Liverpool Christmas Fairs, at Scotland-road, the North Haymarket and pitches, under the Wallis and Berry management. The Birkenhead grounds must be divided into two pitches—John Collins and Chas. Farrell's. At Birmingham, two grounds, under the banner of P. Collins, Limited; at Leeds and Bradford, two or three grounds; at Sheffield, with which we link Attercliffe, will be a big crowd of shows; Oldham, two pitches; Bolton, two; Farnworth, one; Rochdale, Preston, Southport, Lancaster, Nantwich, Leek, Wolverhampton, Southampton, Bristol, Portsmouth, Ryde I.O.W., and Northampton.

IN the north fairs for the Christmas holidays at Newcastle and Gateshead, the Hartlepools, North and South Shields, and Sunderland, with a half-dozen small places not yet tabulated. In Scotland Glasgow, three grounds; Edinburgh, two; Greenock, Paisley, Govan, Leith, Motherwell, and Renfrew. In Wales Cardiff, Swansea, Barry Dock, Merthyr Tydvil, Newport, Carnarvon, Carmarther, Dowlais, Morriston, Pontypridd, Ton-y-Pandy, and two or three other and smaller pitches. In Ireland, we know of two only—Dublin and Belfast.

WE ask showmen who find that the above list does not include their winter pitch to write to "Showman World" Editor, The Era, and send particulars, and we gladly add to or correct the above list.

WITH reference to the lists of fixtures we publish for the showmen month by month, we should like to repeat that we should welcome corrections either by addition or by crossing off the lists in the future, fixtures of no use and trade value. The writer of these notes has spent years of patient toil and investigation in the endeavour to issue for the use of showmen really accurate fair lists. He is convinced that it is for the benefit of the whole body of itinerant showfolk that all fixtures should be known, and that our fairs should have greater attraction in the public eye by a more frequent change of show novelties. The same big show and the same big roundabout in the same position year after year is not conducive to the real interests of the business of the fair. "The dog-in-the-manger" policy of keeping the good things and the good places in a few hands is a wrong one, and ought to be done away with.

WHAT we set out to do last week has been accomplished. The discussion we desired to provoke has been engaged in by such well-known showmen as Mr T. Hurst, the well-known roundabout proprietor, inventor, and patentee of merry-go-round novelties, fair ground lessee, and—besides the activities—the hon. secretary (its greatest and its best) of the Showmen's Guild, and organising secretary and agent of the now successfully floated British Roundabout Proprietors' and Showmen's Union. This man of many pursuits and boundless energies writes to "The Showman World" editor as follows:—"Dear Sir,—Re the British Roundabout Proprietors' and Showmen's Union and the Parliamentary Defence Fund, I write as secretary to above society, and in its name most decidedly object to the tone of your remarks in last Saturday's issue of The Era. I think that our union has a perfect right to spend its funds as we think fit and wise.

"OUR members have already subscribed this year between £70 and £80, and we have a substantial balance yet to come in. If the much-belauded North of England Society of Stall-Holders and Showmen will do as much as our society has done for the Van-Dwellers' Association, followed up by the other societies of stall-holders and amusement caterers, I think you would not have occasion again to write in the strain of last week's lucubration. I write strongly, because I feel that the observations and reflections you made were uncalled for; that is, as far as this Union is concerned."

OUR reply is that H. M. Horne's remarks were admitted into The Era, just as we gladly give Mr Hurst a place this week. We desire, above all things, to have a clear understanding, and to rally such support to the Parliamentary Defence Fund as shall make it effective and strong for its necessary purpose. Now, we accepted in good faith H. M. Horne's communication. Mr Hurst knows as well as we do that last year's balance-sheet disclosed a serious deficit in the funds of the old society. Mr Hurst knows why the Parliamentary Defence Work Expenses Fund was started. In fact, he was one of its promoters. He knows that at least £200 a-year is needed in order to be ready for every emergency—on this one count alone of Parliamentary agency, scrutiny, petition, and Parliamentary counsel and solicitor's accounts—that is the minimum amount. His society (we repeat it) might and ought to have met the situation in full by a sufficient grant in aid from its funds. Don't let it be forgotten—this Parliamentary defence is the society's defence work first, as lessees and proprietors, and the stall holders next come in proportion to each man's interest and stake in the business.

NOW, Mr Hurst is too clear-headed a man of business to have any doubts about this. He stands to lose, and every proprietor and lessee stands to lose, much more than the rank and file. In the words of common-sense, we say "Each man to his corner." At the King's Lynn committee meeting of the Union the Rev. T. Horne made an explanatory appeal, and a handsome response was the result. The same thing happened at Treorchy, in Wales. But both at Lynn and Treorchy it was two big subscriptions rather than many moderate ones that made the sum collected a handsome one. We still hold that the situation demands a substantial grant in aid to the expenses of Parliamentary defence. We still adhere to our view of last week, that if the funds of the other societies are tied up the sooner they are set free and used the better. We are confident that Mr Hurst will be amongst the first to recognise the supreme importance of facing the enemy ready for the fight. He knows that the big purse is a good thing in every battle. It is supplies to the front that determines the victory, and we say now that leaving the Parliamentary Defence Fund to go begging subscriptions is a sign of weakness that the enemy will inevitably notice. Even on Mr Hurst's own showing, £80, or even £180, will not meet the position, and the humiliating thing is that whilst the fund is waiting for the substantial balance to come people who have done their work months ago cannot get their accounts settled for lack of funds.

NOW we turn to a matter in which we are in full agreement with Mr Hurst. He further writes and we agree:—"There is another matter to which I would draw your attention. I refer to the annual showmen ball at the close of the season of the World's Fair at the Royal Agricultural Hall, Islington. Could it not be utilised as a means of helping the fund for Parliamentary defence? For the past two years this has been successfully done at Bolton New Year Fair. Last year over £18 was the profit handed over to the Guild treasury. Why should not London emulate, or at least imitate, a first-rate Lancashire town? I have again secured the hearty co-operation of the market superintendent, Pike (a host in himself), and the goodwill and support of the market tenants of the borough. The ball is fixed for Jan. 4, 1905, and will be held on the evening of the day I have called a meeting of my society. I was on the London committee of the ball, but was not able to ascertain why no profits were handed over to the Guild. I trust now that Mr Horne is settled in London that he will inquire into this matter and see what can be done by London along the lines of helping the work of defence as is done at Bolton. Surely London showmen will remember that most of the money spent on Parliamentary work was spent directly for their benefit. East Ham and Acton are notable examples of this. We men of the north give you a good lead—follow."

TO all of which we say "Hear, hear." Good business, Mr Secretary Hurst. What has Mr Alf Reeves to say to this? Now we have also satisfaction and pleasure in giving Mr Thos. Hartshorn, of the Northern "Amalgamation," a fair field and no favour. Mr Hurst says that "the Amalgamation" is a "much-belauded society." Well, we give our honest opinion, and are not thin-skinned enough to object to a hard knock or two in return. The Era endeavours, and we are proud enough to say it succeeds, in fairly representing all sides of a question. That, we know, is quite taken for granted. So now, please, with these remarks, hear Mr Hartshorn, whose life story we told last week:—"Mr Editor.—Dear Sir," he writes, "please allow me space in your valuable paper to express my view on the subject of most vital moment to every showman, roundabout proprietor, stallholder, market trader, and amusement caterer, whether they live in movable dwellings or are fixed, immovable in towns—viz., the financial position of the Showmen's Guild and its Parliamentary Defence Work Fund. I have read with great interest the informing paragraphs in recent issues of The Era week by week. I gather from last week's letter by H. M. Horne that a certain society shelved the direct appeal, and relegated the matter of support back to its members in their individual capacity, recommending a minimum subscription of two guineas each. This, I take it, was because the rules did not allow a lump sum being granted for that purpose. With other secretaries, I have been asked my opinion. First, then, I claim (as a member of the Guild) that I have voiced its claims from a score of platforms."

"YET—I suppose not for want of will, but from want of knowledge—"the support I longed for was not given. Why is it? Well, you must never forget that show life is a busy one. Our people have little time for reading or quiet study of intricate problems. Now, Parliamentary work is a technical business all through, and the ordinary man, busy at the fair, can have but little time to master its intricacies. Hence from ignorance of these technical details (not at all culpable ignorance) the man of the busy fair ground knows not how serious the matter stands. Now, we who do know must stand for those who have not time to master the subject. Now, to be practical, why not summon at a convenient centre (say Derby) a conference of delegates from all the known societies to discuss ways and means of maintaining in the highest possible efficiency Parliamentary defence work? What says Mr Hurst to this?

"THERE is also Mr Wm. Gibson, of the Lancashire and Cheshire stallholders; Messrs. Thomas and Burgin, of the Yorkshire Society; and Mr Burns, of the Society in the Birmingham and Midland district. Why not these experts meet and discuss the whole Parliamentary business? It would be a step in the right direction. A conference, beginning with a common object about which we are all agreed, would lead on to other meetings to deal with other questions from time to time. A Mr W. M. A. wrote last week suggesting possible pressure being brought on non-subscribing tenants by lesseer. I doubt not that W. M. A. has the highest interests of the Guild at heart, but I fear that coercion in any form or shape would defeat its own purpose. Besides, there is the practical difficulty: proprietors and lessees of ground have no time to go round and to see about a matter that would need both time and great tact. The fair-ground business is too full of work that must be done to give any spare time to such important work. I look forward with great hopes, now that your columns are more fully thrown open to our business than before, and our page is a feature of The Era, like the other great branches of the greater world of shows, theatrical and musical. In conclusion, sir, these fugitive remarks are not official—although our treasurer and one of our founders, Mr Geo. Gray, with one or two others, have already talked it out with me."

WE only comment on the above excellent letter to say with both hands down we accept Mr Hartshorn's proposal for a conference of accredited delegates. It is the way to really interest and to bring together people at present meeting but seldom in friendly council. Yet another correspondent—this one from Scotland—sends in a curious letter, a comment on W. M. A.'s letter. He says, amongst other things. "That hobby horse men ought to send, when letting ground, a price list of their fixtures for publication in The Era. There is another interesting point in the letter—it is signed J. B., K.C.—about correcting inaccuracies in the Scotch fairs lists as we publish them every month. Yes, J. B., send us a correct list, and we will publish it in The Era month by month. Will J. B. send us his home address? He writes from a Rechabite Lodge, District 35, Edinburgh.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—With reference to Mr Child's letter re our missing the good old shows, such as Wombwell's No. 1 Menagerie, with its famous band; Edmond's Windsor Castle Menagerie, Sanger's, I would remind your readers that we have still with us Bostock and Wombwell's No. 1 Menagerie with its famous band as of yore. Then we have Bostock and Wombwell's No. 2 Windsor Castle Menagerie. The last named has certainly been touring the Continent for some years, but so recently as September last returned to old England, and will, I understand, be at the Agricultural Hall, London, for Christmas and New Year, and for six weeks, while No. 1 will be in Scotland's capital, Edinburgh, for a like period. Then we have George Sanger touring the country every year, also John Sanger and Sons, Ginnett, Fossett, and many other smaller ones, without taking into consideration the Yankee innovation Barnum and Bailey, and Buffalo Bill's periodical visits.

During almost sixty years there have only occurred five deaths from animal performances in this country, notwithstanding the many blood-curdling stories which have been told. The first, quite fifty years ago, was that of Helen Blight; then came M'Carthy, a white man with one arm, at Bolton, New Year, 1871; afterwards Deller, a coloured man, killed by a bear; fourth, Tom Bridgeman, professional name, Captain Cardownie, a white man; and fifth and last, Beaumont, a coloured man—not a great percentage of risk, considering the number of performances taking place every year.

Yours faithfully, LION.

Fulham-road, N.W., Dec. 12.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Re the proposal for a special grant from the roundabouts and showmen's combine to the Guild funds, may I suggest the following solution of the difficulty:—That each member of the combine shall subscribe a certain fixed sum for each and every show or riding machine which he may be proprietor of, or be a responsible manager of? Should he be a lessee of fairgrounds he shall pay, in addition, a small fixed sum for every ground he shall lease and let as a fairground. By this means those who have the greatest amount of interest at stake will be justly called upon to subscribe according to the amount of interest protected by the Guild. May I also suggest that lessees should see that all their tenants possess a receipt for their subscription to the Guild for the year 1905? For it is nothing less than dishonesty to enjoy the protection of the Guild without subscribing one's mite towards its maintenance. May I ask you to accept and publish signatures to this proposal or amendments thereto?

Yours faithfully, NOBODY.

SHOWMEN SOCIETIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I am deeply grieved to read the remarks of the Rev. T. Horne with reference to the decline and decay of the parent society of showmen, viz., the U.K. Van-Dwellers' Association. It is a thousand pities that after the good work it certainly has achieved the present-day showmen should allow it to pass into oblivion. If the interests of showmen, Parliamentary, protective, or otherwise, are not watched and safeguarded where will showmen drift to?

Showmen, one and all! It is perfectly obvious that you are in peril of being pushed out from the centres of cities and towns, and driven from pillar to post. Conversation like this has been frequently heard on a fair-ground, one showman speaking to another:—"Oh, the Association has not done me any good, it does not affect me, and besides, I'm all right." It has been suggested in an article that appeared some time ago in the columns of The Era that the decline of the U.K. Vandwellers' Association was due to the coming into existence of new societies. I attribute it solely to the neglect of self-interest amongst showmen.

Cannot a day be given or fixed for a general voluntary collection run on similar lines to a "Hospital Saturday," when each showman can give not a fixed sum, but what he can afford? Taking the showmen census as computed at 70,000, what a splendid result would ensue if every showman gave sixpence each! The Stallholders and Roundabout Proprietors' Society have done a great deal of good. A better understanding has been arrived at between lessee and tenant, and rents to first party landlords have been reduced, other rents being reduced to tenants thereby. The days of "tober sharping" are numbered. To meet the requirements of this ever-changing world of ours we must move with the times and be progressive, and I hope the time is not far distant when the bonds of unity will be drawn still closer between the various societies.

Yours faithfully,
UNA VIAGGIATORE FRATELLO.

A SPECIAL committee meeting of the Music Hall Sick Fund will be held at the York Hotel on Wednesday next at 2 0 o'clock, when a financial statement respecting the benefit performance at Collins's Music Hall will be submitted.

MDLLE. ROZA, with her canine hippodrome, finishes this week a provincial tour, and opens at the Foresters' on Monday. The show has also been secured for the Christmas week at the New Surrey Varieties. There has been a large addition lately to the troupe, and the electric scene over the garden walls has been greatly enlarged and made more effective, so much so that the last item is finished by the light given from this scene alone.

"TALES OF THE RAIL," published on behalf of the Railway Benevolent Institution, is still on sale at the railway bookstalls throughout the country. At this season of the year hardly anything of the kind would be found more enjoyable as a travelling companion than this entertaining shilling booklet, which, it is gratifying to know, has scored a first-rate success. Readers investing in a copy would secure for themselves a volume of excellent light reading, while they would at the same time have the satisfaction of knowing that they were benefiting a deserving charity.

GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

The orchestral concert given at the City of London School on Wednesday last had some interesting features, and the orchestra, conducted with great care and efficiency by Dr. Cummings, did excellent work, particularly in Grieg's "Peer Gynt" suite, the last movement awakening the enthusiasm of the audience owing to the spirit and brilliancy of the performance. In accompanying the solos the band, in one or two instances, showed that a little more rehearsal would have been well bestowed. But we are too familiar with the difficulties of the task to lay much stress on slight shortcomings, nor should we refer to the matter save in justice to the gifted student, Miss Alice Dyer, who needed a little more support in Weber's Concerto. The second and most difficult pianoforte concerto of Weber, who used to play it frequently on his artistic tours when in the full maturity of his genius, was a bold venture for a student, but Miss Alice M. Dyer came out of the ordeal with infinite credit to herself, and played the lovely adagio like an artiste. The final movement, one of the most brilliant Weber has written, received ample justice also from the clever performer. The concerto is in E flat, Op 32, and was first published in 1812 at Berlin by Schlesinger. It is rarely heard in these days, although many portions are exquisite examples of Weber's genius. Miss M. Willby somewhat overtaxed her physical resources in Mendelssohn's scena "Infelice," a vocal piece requiring great dramatic force and passionate expression. We do not say that Miss Willby failed. Her natural ability was quite sufficient to overcome the chief difficulties of Mendelssohn's exacting scena. Miss Veronica L. Webb, who recited Savile Clarke's "Siege of Lucknow," has decided gifts as a reciter, but the large and lofty hall was not altogether favourable to her task, demanding, as it did, no slight physical power. Tennyson's poem on the same subject would have proved more effective. The Russian Suite, by Wüerst, which concluded the concert, was for string orchestra, with Miss Dorothy Brill, violin obbligato, and was well rendered. The young ladies on the platform were attended by Mrs Charles P. Smith with her usual care.

"THE POWER OF PRAYER."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Some years ago I was engaging artists for my husband, who was agent in advance with a circus abroad, and I had also to take out some lions and wardrobe. I had a code to telegraph for more money if I required it for expenses, and finding I was short of £150 I wired that a remittance was urgent, as there was only a week or two for the steamer. Finding no reply came to the message, I became very anxious. I was then lodging in Alfred-place, Bedford-square, with my sister, my baby, and nurse. On going to bed one Saturday night, I prayed earnestly that I might have the money sent in time; and that night I dreamed that a telegram was waiting for me at Paravicini's Agency, 49, Duke-street, St. James's, and distinctly saw the red lettering and form of telegram used by the company for cable, and read plainly, "You will find £200 at the bank of India and China; also bring me a pair of shoes;" and drawn at the bottom of the telegram was an outline of the size. On Sunday morning I felt quite convinced by that dream that God had answered my prayer. On Monday morning I went to the office. It was closed, so I knocked at the side door; and the housekeeper came to it and exclaimed, "Oh, madame, I am so glad you have come. There is a telegram that has been here for you nearly a whole week! Mr Paravicini's clerk has gone away on his honeymoon, and Mr Paravicini is on the Continent; and I did not know where to find you." I told her my dream, and took the telegram. It was as I had expected.

Yours faithfully, NELLIE REID.

[The above letter emphasises the importance of artists always keeping their addresses in our advertisement columns. It is much safer to trust to this than to lucky dreams, which cannot be relied upon.—ED. OF THE ERA.]

AT this time of the year a mouth wash which is also a prompt remedy for coughs and colds will be warmly welcomed by everyone, and Barnägen's Vademecum "Fuo," the British depôt of which is at 12, Little Britain, is certain to prove a friend in need to all who use it. This valuable preparation is primarily an antiseptic, immediately destroying any germs or bacteria collected about the teeth or in the mucous membranes of the mouth and throat. It is also an excellent anæsthetic, allaying pain and checking inflammation. "Fuo," therefore, while the best of mouth-washes and dentifrices, is also a powerful aid to health, and may be used to advantage in many ways. A drop undiluted will relieve an aching tooth; while in diphtheria its early use will often destroy the undeveloped germs in the throat, which are the foundation of the disease. The powerful concentration of "Fuo" is demonstrated in the fact that it produces a good effect by inhalation. For coughs, colds, and hoarseness, it is often sufficient to pour a few drops on a handkerchief and inhale often from it. It is, however, more desirable to use an inhaling apparatus, if available, using about one part of "Fuo" to forty parts of water, inhaling through the mouth and passing through the nose. In an atomizer, "Fuo" also proves an excellent sick room disinfectant; in fact, its uses are as many as they are beneficial.

THE World's Fair entertainment opens at the Royal Agricultural Hall, Islington, on Christmas Eve, with a huge programme of popular amusements, including a free circus, a fine menagerie, gymnastic performances by the Herbert Troupe, Menotti, the Stockholm Wonder; and other "turns." The noise caused by the barrel-organs, the management intimates, has now been greatly modified.

MR AND MRS RONALD BAYNE (Miss Evelyn Hope) are just concluding a twenty-one months' engagement with Mr Charles March's Priest of the Temple company, and will shortly produce an historical dramatic scena in the London halls.

A LIST of the hon. medical officers in London and the provinces who have kindly consented to give free medical advice to members of the M.H.A.R.A. will be forwarded to any member sending stamped addressed envelope to the secretary.

AT the Empire, Wrexham, Mr J. J. Scott, the proprietor, has submitted the following attractions:—Mr Marcus Boyle, character comedian; Newcombe and Sullivan, comedians and dancers; Miss Ada Whitton, refined male impersonator; the Bros. Jean, the original handymen, in their boxing act; and the Royal Bioscope.

MAIER AND MORA open at the Paris Alhambra for Mr Barrasford next month, and at the Lyceum, London, for the month of February.—The Rozells (Alf and Tom) dissolve partnership (by mutual consent) on Jan. 14, 1905. Mr Alf Rozell will continue the same two acts with a new partner.—The competition at Sadler's Wells for the best impersonation of Mr Dan Thomas in his various successes there was won by a promising youth named W. Daniels.—The Kyasyas, the well known bantam athletes, are specially engaged for next week by Mr Dan Godfrey, Esq., for his concerts at Winter Gardens, Bournemouth.

ADVERTISERS and SUBSCRIBERS who are moving about, and who have their Copy of "THE ERA" sent direct from this Office, 49, Wellington-street, Strand, are requested to forward the Addresses for their Papers [not later] than the Tuesday in each Week.

STORIES OF SHOWMAN LIFE.

(COPYRIGHT.)

By the REV. T. HORNE
(Hon. Chaplain, Showmen's Guild.)

"JUST LIKE LIFE."

Many years ago Jackson's waxworks were well-known, and always welcomed in the great provincial towns. The Jacksons had great success and stayed for long seasons, sometimes stretching into years, in towns like Manchester, in the old Bazaar Assembly Rooms, Smithydoor Market; or in large shop buildings in the "Bull Ring," Birmingham; Bold-street, Liverpool, and St. Mary-street, Cardiff.

Although a travelling waxwork exhibition it always had a tendency to fix itself down and become a permanency.

The story of risk and danger (to a nephew of Mr Jackson's) I am now relating has reference to an important time in the political history of our country. The show was located in Rochdale-road, Manchester, in a commodious block of buildings built for a big drapery concern, which somehow did not succeed, and so the shop came into the market.

Jackson's waxworks did capital business, for all England was in a firment over the anticipated Fenian rising. I speak of the years 1866 8.

The Jacksons were Roman Catholics, and always made a strong point of their Irish national character in the show, and especially attractive were the capital models of the Pope—Pio Nono—and Cardinal Wiseman. The appeal to Nationalist sentiment was particularly shown in the crêpe hangings, and in the "in memoriam" cards of the Manchester "Martyrs," Allen, Larkin, and Gould.

The great attraction of the moment was a fine portrait model of Stephens, the Fenian No. 1, or head-centre. This was heightened by the contrast right and left of capital figures of Robert Emmett, Dan O'Connell, Shamus O'Brien, and the then Irish leader in the House of Commons, Mr Butt, member for Cork.

It is universally conceded that young blood is hot and youth is rash, and besides all these commonplaces, youth loves adventure, and the smack of adventure or mystery is like wine to a young and romantic man largely endowed with the poetic and artistic temerament.

So it was with Bernard Boyle, Jackson's nephew and the artist in wax attached to the show. We need not linger on the why and wherefore. The fact material to our story is that Boyle had become entangled with the Fenian conspiracy. He was initiated in a young men's club which flourished in the neighbourhood of the show. Thus much to introduce our principal character.

The hue and cry was ringing through the land. Stephens, the Fenian head-centre, was still at large; the secret police had evidence more than sufficient to hang him; but they could not catch him. The search for Stephens was the one absorbing topic of daily talk and anxiety; the failure of the police to capture him got on the nerve of the nation. Every stranger, however innocent, was a "suspect," and blunder after blunder on the part of the authorities only served to feed the national wrath and to swell the popular clamour for the head-centre's arrest.

One day he would be heard of as being in Dublin; the day after Stephens had been traced to Glasgow, would be the story; and so on until there grew up a weird legend of a being so "protean" in his disguises that no skill of man could hope to unmask him. Of course we know now that all the time the police were tracking him down and drawing the cordon closer around him, until, like a hunted animal, his one thought was to find a means of escape.

We have said that Bernard Boyle was a Fenian, but even in his wildest moments of excess as a conspirator he never guessed at the all-important part he would be called upon to play in the stirring life drama of Stephens' escape.

Late one Saturday night three men lingered in the show until all the other visitors had gone. Young Bernard was covering up the figures and turning out the lights in the Irish Senate House, as the room was called, where the Nationalist group was shown. One of the three lingering visitors spoke a few excited words to the artist, and oh! the change that came over him—he trembled with excess of fear.

"What am I to do?" "You will be told yourself by No. 1," was the terse answer. "Good Heavens, man, is he here?" "Judge," was the reply, and going under the barrier, he quickly took his stand by the side of the wax model of the Fenian hero, and throwing off hat, wig, and beard, stood revealed the original of the capital wax model Bernard had made.

"Just like life" was the surprised and involuntary comment of the astonished modeller.

"Well, not exactly so," was Stephens' reply; the humour of the situation causing him to smile, even in that critical moment. "What you have to do is to make me like the figure, rather than make the figure a copy of me, see!"

Now the two companions of Stephens had been equally and quite as dramatically busy. Old Mr Jackson thought at first that the men meant plunder, and intended "holding him up" for the day's takings (no mean sum), and it took a few minutes for the real aspect of affairs to sink down in his mind, though in nosense dull of comprehension.

Whilst the "head-centre" Stephens was unfolding his carefully thought-out plan of escape, his brother conspirators were showing old Jackson the dangers of his position.

"Here you are, sir, in the centre of an Irish population. Your nephew is a known member of the 'Irish National Brotherhood,' pledged on forfeit of his life to venture all for the cause, if need arise. The need has arisen; so urgent is it that to save him you must help us."

"What do you mean?" the old showman, in rising anger, demanded. "I mean that a friend of the Irish is now in hiding from the police, and that his friends have concocted a plan whereby you may help him to clear out of this country, where he is being hunted down like a wild beast."

"You ask me to assist in the escape of a criminal?" "No, no," the man replied, with fine scorn, "Not a criminal, but a patriot fighting the enemies of his country." "I can't do it, I will not do it." The reply was a staggerer.

"If you won't do it, say good-bye for ever to your nephew, Bernard Boyle. Your nephew is a ——." Here the man of decision and mystery whispered a word in old Jackson's ear. "The young fool," was the showman's reply; then, after a moment's hurried thought, Jackson said, "I shall not join in your plot; I don't want to know anything about it; it's enough for me that Bernard stands in a dangerous position. Straight away now I will clear out. My eldest daughter is settled here in Manchester, I'll vamp up some story to blind her. Tell Bernard I want him." The second man brought the modeller and he stood shame-faced before his uncle. No rebuke was given; the matter, the old showman realised, was too big and serious for words. The uncle, after a searching look into his nephew's guilt-marked face, shook his head in sadness, and said loud enough for the three Fenian conspirators to hear:—

"Bernard, my lad, I promised Harriet to stay a week with them at their place at Rusholme. I'll get a cab and go straight there."

"You? to-night?" gasped Bernard. "Yes I may not be back for a week. You know what to do in my absence. Then, turning to the three visitors, he said "My nephew, Mr Bernard Boyle has full authority in all matters until I return. With a hearty hand grasp he parted with his nephew, got his cab, and was taken to his son-in-law's house right away at the other end of the city, and was soon in the peace of home with his own people.

Jackson's waxworks announced on Monday the last fortnight of its stay. Large posters said: "Positively the last two weeks." The Irish Senate Group with its portrait models (it was further announced) could be seen six days longer only, Barnum (so it was billed) having purchased the entire Nationalist group for his museum at New York. "Saturday next positively the last day of the Senate of Irish Statesmen and National Heroes."

This sudden determination to leave the town caused a flutter of excitement in the most immediate neighbourhood.

But the decision to go was not made a moment too soon. Chief Inspector Costigan, of the Detective Department, had received from the Secret Service Bureau of Scotland-yard a note of suspicion concerning the Waxworks and Fenians.

The information was that the young showman, Bernard Boyle, had been seen at patriotic and political clubs, and was even thought to belong to the Fenian Brotherhood. Costigan got his information within six hours of the final closing of the "side show" rooms (an extra charge), the Irish Senate House.

The detective thought he was smart, and that his get-up was a great success, but the Fenians were much smarter, and Costigan was recognised before he had crossed over from Shudehill to Rochdale-road. The signal was passed along, and sped from spy to spy, until it reached the bodyguard of Stephens at the show. Hurried counsel was taken, and when the detective arrived they were ready for the emergency.

Deeply interested in the show, yet keenly alert, Costigan got his chance with Bernard, the modeller.

Only a few visitors were in the Senate House Room. The modeller was apparently occupied in a series of "touching up" experiments. When the detective's opportunity came to begin "pumping" Bernard it was when the artist was engaged in "faking up" with fresh pigments the face of the notorious Fenian, "head centre" Stephens.

Costigan began by saying, "What a capital model. Just like life. Who modelled it?"

"Well," replied Bernard, "I'm the guilty party; most of the figures here are from my studio, and I hold a contract with Mr Jackson to keep the figures in thorough repair and order."

"Oh, indeed! So you are the artist, eh! You must feel flattered that the great showman Barnum has bought the entire group."

"Yes, yes, it is a big thing for me;" while he was speaking he was dexterously placing his body between the detective and the model as much as possible.

Costigan gave Bernard a startler when he said "let me have a good long stare at Stephens. I have his photo. here, but your model has something about it uncanny. I feel a sort of second sense about it that the whole Chamber of Horrors in the next room fails to give me."

Bernard was glad of a well-timed diversion; the brother-conspirator, whose interview with Jackson we have already chronicled, sauntered in, and, pretending to be in the noisy first stage of intoxication, began a voluble talk with Bernard, who, of course, played into his hands, and so the situation, intensely critical, was saved.

The detective said to himself as he went downstairs, "It is a capital model, what a pity a young fellow with his talents should get entangled with Fenian conspirators, I'll come again and give him a bit of friendly advice."

"Phew," said the model of Stephens, when the signal was sent up to the room by the third man below, "Phew, I sweat with fear. I should have managed all right, Boyle, but your touching up brush tickled my nose so I nearly screamed with the irritation of it."

"Begorra," said No. 2, dropping into the brogue, "It was a narrow squeak for the 'tec.;' my fingers itched as I clutched me shooter in me hip pocket; it was nearly farewell 'me bould melisha man' for Costigan. Not a moment was he out of my sight, and when Bernard began to feel alarmed I just came in and played the goat."

"Melee Murther, me honey, Costigan was nearly being another Manchester martyr." "Thank Heaven!" sighed Stephens, "it's all over and clear sailing now. How soon, Boyle, can we be sailing for America?" The irrepressible No 2 here gave a decent step or two by way of an Irish gig, and sang

Och, me true love, Dan,
Is an Irishman,
And he sails for Ameriky.

Whereat the nervous strain of the other two was broken, and the humour of the situation came full upon them, the three men bursting into peals of laughter.

"Just like life, true for you, O, Costigan the wise! Costigan, the 'cute tec' of the world!"

"How near to the live truth he was, eh! my boys?" said Stephens between the shouts of laughter. "Yes, yes," answered No. 2, "as wise as the blind old bat in 'Mother Mulligan's Meal House,' who always looked at you with a face that said as plain as a bald sixpence, 'Ten shillings fine, or seven days to get wisdom in. Next case sergeant.'"

With many a joke the three Fenians worked like navvies in packing up the wax effigies of Irish statesmen past and present, Irish patriots, ancient and modern. The big Barnum order was, of course, a "flam," and the end of this strange eventful story is that though every port and railway station were watched night and day for No. 1, Stephens, the head centre, was cribbed, cabined, and confined à la "Box Brown" inside the heroic papier maché figure of Dan O'Connell.

Mr Bernard Boyle, with two assistants, passed the barrier at Liverpool, and after a speedy journey, Stephens was at last liberated and safe on American soil.

That was the end of Jackson's waxworks. Old Jackson secured a handsome cheque from the New York committee of Irish American sympathisers with the I. N. B. Feeling sure that his nephew would not risk any return to England, he determined to retire. This he did, spending the rest of his days in the peaceful harbourage of his daughter's home in Manchester.

NOT GOOD ENOUGH.

A young lady vocalist was sued by Mr Cook, musical instructor, at the Westminster County Court on Wednesday, for the balance of a £20 fee for singing lessons.

Plaintiff said the lady signed a contract for taking singing lessons. Part of the contract provided that she should have operatic and concert singing engagements. Through the witness she secured an engagement in pantomime at Glasgow.

Defendant—Yes, in a chorus at £2 a-week, and I had to pay my railway expenses and your 12½ per cent. commission out of it. You have never done my voice any good.

Plaintiff—But you had offers for pantomime choruses.

Defendant—My voice is too heavy. I've been taken in. To my mind you have swindled me.

Plaintiff—My experience is that you have swindled me.

Defendant—You ought to have more experience than to let a girl just come to London swindle you.

His Honour—Why didn't you accept the engagements offered?

Plaintiff—Because they were not good enough.

Judge Woodfall gave the plaintiff judgment, and remarked that, reading the contract, he did not think she could turn up her nose at pantomime.

A LETTER is lying at this office for Mr W. Alcock.

THE Oxford University Dramatic Society will produce the Clouds of Aristophanes on March 1 and following evenings. The music for the revival has been composed by Sir Hubert Parry.

SWINDON.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Responsible Manager, Mr Alfred Manners; Musical Director, Mr F. H. Lucas.—Miss Lole Esmond's company has occupied this house during the week, opening on Monday with the sensational drama The Anarchist Terror to a very good house. The piece is adequately staged under the direction of Mr Edward Neville, who must be highly commended for his clever and powerful embodiment of Ravagoon. Another meritorious performance was Mr Gus Bowerman's Ishmael. Mr C. T. E. O'Connor achieved a distinct success as Lieut. Armstrong, and Mr J. Nelson-Turner must be awarded every credit for his Silas W. Goldstraw. The comedy element was safely entrusted to Mr Will White as Mickey Doolan and Miss Lole Esmond as Kitty Malone. The part of Columbia Goldstraw was pleasingly sustained by Miss Violet Hammersley; Miss Annie Brunette submitted an effective study of Marita; and Miss Kate Parr and Miss Cicele Bryne did well in their respective parts. The drama was repeated on Tuesday. On Wednesday and two following nights The Sorrows of Satan was presented, with Mr Edward Neville as Prince Lucio Rimanez.

TON-Y-PANDY.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, Messrs Arthur Carlton and Sam Duckworth; General Manager, Mr Sam Duckworth; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry Connsell.—The Moody-Manners opera company is this week paying a return visit. On Monday Tannhäuser was produced. Mr Edward Arthur, in the title-rôle, sang with pleasing effect, and was warmly applauded. Mr Charles Tilbury as Hermann charmed the audience with his really fine voice; Mr David Fuller was successful as Biterolf; and Mr Walter Barrett, who took the part of Wolfram, sang with taste. Miss M. Wilcocks was good as a young Shepherd; Miss Grace Nicoll as Venus sang with power and a nice comprehension of the requirements of the part; and the Elizabeth of Miss Enriqueta Crichton was a delightful study. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr Harrison Frewin, was excellent. On Tuesday night Carmen was produced, and on Wednesday Il Trovatore.

WAKEFIELD.

ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Sherwood and Co.—Messrs W. T. Elworthy and J. Buckley's company are here this week in the play, Liberty Hall. Mr W. T. Elworthy gives an excellent rendering of William Todman, Mr F. Crogan ably undertakes the rôle of Mr Owen; Mr Harold Standing is efficient as Mr Gerald Harringay; Miss Beth Elliott gives a charming portrayal as Blanche Chilworth; Miss Kathleen Maitland is pleasing as Amy Chilworth; Miss F. Winn deserves mention as Crafer, the servant. Other characters are well filled by Mr T. Narray, Mr C. Weldon, and Miss P. Davies.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Wakefield Hippodrome Company, Limited; Manager, Mr D. G. Mooney.—The Judges perform some clever acrobatic feats; Bliss and Bliss are amusing comedians; Handel, boy instrumentalist, is a talented musician; Lord, Murray, and Lord, boxing artistes, win applause. Other items are the Great Counteer, duettists; George Antil, comedian; and Miss Lilian Lovell, male impersonator.

WALSALL.

GRAND THEATRE, LIMITED.—General Manager and Secretary, Mr W. H. Westwood.—Mr T. Arthur Jones and company occupy the boards here this week with Life's Sweetest Sins. Captain Harold Marston is taken by Mr T. A. Jones in capital style; Mr A. Bartlett Garth does well as Dr. Colbrooke; as Ernie Woodstone Mr Charles Sewell is very successful; and Miss Madge Morley gives a charming portrayal of Doreen Rivers.

WALTHAMSTOW.

KING'S THEATRE.—If any picturesque melodrama of modern times deserves to lay claim to the distinction of being a classic surely the right may be accorded to The Two Orphans. This stirring play is the attraction here this week, and, capitally played by Mr Arthur St. John and the Britannia Dramatic company, fully merits its nightly reception. Mr St. John himself gives a vigorous and effective picture of the bullying braggart Jacques. Mr Edwin Furgusson presents a fine contrast as the poor, crippled Pierre, his sonorous voice making the pathetic speeches with which the part is studded tell with astonishing force. A powerful rendering of La Frochard is supplied by Mr Marmaduke Langdale, who, if he does not efface memories of Mrs Huntley and George Conquest, succeeds in making the repulsive hag an impressive picture. The two orphans are both capitally played, Miss Patey Trounsell being dignified and courageous as Henriette, and Miss Ida St. John very pathetic as the blind Louise. The Marquis De Presles is capably played by Mr A. Ferne, and Mr W. Foster is a good Chevalier De Vaudry. The other parts are all played admirably by Messrs C. Brand, Archie Grant, A. Dobell, James Dunlop, E. Leigh, and J. Valentine; Miss Lilian Burns and Miss E. Heathcote.

PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr G. Adney Payne; Manager, Mr Arthur J. Barclay; Acting-Manager, Mr Geo. F. Slatter.—In point of popularity the appearance of Mr Will Evans may be described as the leading feature of the programme this week, and the whimsical comedian, with his irresistibly funny face, receives a tremendous welcome on his appearance. Mr Harry Pleon and the Collinson Combination, in A Club Raid, repeat a striking sketch, which is no stranger in Walthamstow, and is received with much favour. Mr Pleon gives a telling delineation of Monty Trevor, who comes out so heroically in the end. Mr Jack Collinson is a strong representative of Fergus Didget. Mr Charles Wragg is a capital Arthur Playfair. The knuckle-fight between these two is highly exciting. Miss Selina Seaforth makes a striking figure as Madame Judas, and the other parts are all in good keeping. Loud laughter rewards the comicalities of Mr James Stewart, who, as a tramp at the piano, is equally successful at the instrument and with his tongue and his toes. Miss Myra Stansfield is a charming comedienne; Kelly and Gillette, in "Fun on a Billiard Table," are, to say the least, vigorous, their jumping feats on the table being truly astonishing. Miss Jessica Grace sings with great dash and spirit, besides looking superb. Tray and Rich, black and white-faced comedy team, are possessed of more drollery than many of the artistes in the same line, and their dancing is extremely neat. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr H. Petersen, renders Suppé's overture, "Banditenstreiche" with fine effect.

WARRINGTON.

ROYAL COURT.—Proprietors, Messrs W. Johnson and J. Potter; General Manager, Mr J. Potter.—Mr F. R. Benson's Shakespearian company is here in a round of famous plays. On Monday night The Taming of the Shrew was staged. As Petruchio Mr Henry Herbert scored a big success. Mr F. O. Chambers was well pleased as Baptista, Mr B. Limpus acted naturally the part of Lucentio, and Mr Arthur Fayne as Gremio and Mr G. Wallace Johnston as Hortensio gave careful readings of their respective rôles. Messrs A. A. Harris and B. Forsyth as Tranio and Biondello, the servants of Lucentio, were good, and Mr Arthur Phillips scored well in the humorous part of Grumio. Miss Dorothy Green as Katharine soon established himself a favourite, and a characteristic study of the part was given. Miss Christie Laus was a graceful Bianca, and Miss Maud Garth an acceptable widow. On Tuesday evening Romeo and Juliet drew an appreciative audience. Mr B. Limpus was an ideal Romeo, whilst there was a tenderness and gracefulness associated with Miss Dorothy Green's rendering of Juliet which won for this talented actress high encomiums. For the remaining nights The Merry Wives of Widsor, As You Like It, School for Scandal, The Merchant of Venice, and Hamlet were billed.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs W. Johnson and J. Potter; General Manager, Mr J. Potter; Director of Amusements, Mr F. Willmot.—Increased business is being done here this week. The Moxons head the bill and provide an excellent turn as foot equilibrists. Barrett and Knowles are clever comedians, and Professor M'Cann's performing dogs maintain their popularity. Chris. Masters and George Prince are smart comedians, and Vera Mayne is a refined burlesque actress. Satsuma is a wonderful conjuror, and the Royal Bioscope shows a series of interesting pictures.

WEDNESBURY.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Harry Battersby; Acting-Manager, Mr W. J. Cranston.—This week Colonel Cody with his up-to-date Biograph, giving a full description of the life of Buffalo Bill and his rough riders, is creating great interest here. In between the pictures some excellent artists appear, and add greatly to the success of the show. A change of programme is provided each evening.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.

GRAND.—General Manager (for Mrs Weldon Watts), Mr Sidney Bacon; Resident Manager, Mr Fred Conneaux.—The Fatal Wedding is being played to appreciative audiences this week by Mr Bert Coote's company. Mr Wilfred Payne gives a capable interpretation of Howard Wilson; Miss Marie Housley as the wronged wife, Mabel Wilson, enlists the sympathy of her audience; the adventuress, Cora Williams, has an admirable exponent in Miss Gertrude Harrison; Miss Gladys Rose-Jones as Jessie, the little mother, is highly intelligent; Miss Harriet Clifton is a typical Irish lady cook, and in conjunction with Mr Charles Kenny as Toto, the French butler, provokes much merriment. Other characters having able exponents are Robert Curtis, by Mr Wallace Stranack; Peter Schwartz, by Mr Victor Widdicombe; and Rev. Dr. Lanceford by Mr Arthur Law Raynor.

PALACE.—Director-General, Mr Frank Macnaghten.—A much-appreciated scheme of amusement is being given here. Charlene and Charlene exhibit skill and dexterity in juggling, a special feature of their performance being the wonderful manipulation of the xylophone by the lady. Mr and Mrs Clifford Bronte provoke unbounded laughter with their sketch Saucy Maud; the graceful dancing of the Four Trees has a most gratifying reception; Henry F. Wilson gives a pleasing rendering of favourite ballads; the instrumental performance of Orpheus, and the banjo playing by Edwards and Espinosa create something like a sensation; the electrical and gasometer performance of the Marconis is followed with the keenest of interest; and a film of exceptional length and clearness, "Whirling the World," is also an attraction.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

GRAND PIER PAVILION.—The Æolian Opera Singers are paying a return visit here this week. Miss Florence Ray sang "The Twilight Hour" with much expression; Miss Jennie Johns was well received for her singing of "On the Pier;" and Miss Rose Alderman gave a delightful rendering of Pether's "For Ever." Mr Vivian Munro was successful in his song and dance "My English Maid;" Mr Charles Parker was loudly applauded for his artistic singing of "A Jovial Monk," and that extremely clever comedian, Mr J. P. Ling, provoked loud laughter with his humorous sketch.

KNIGHTSTONE PAVILION AND OPERA HOUSE.—An entirely new series of pictures of Buffalo Bill's Wild West and Congress of Rough Riders is being shown here this week on the Biograph. To vary the entertainment Gilroy, ventriloquist, gives a decidedly clever turn, and Mr Somerville Ellis gains approbation for his sketches and humorous songs.

WHITEHAVEN.

WIGAN.

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Company; Managing-Director, Mr John Worswick.—This theatre during the week has been in the possession of the Wigan and Districts Amateur Operatic Society, the members of which have given a very capable representation of Messrs Hood and German's opera, Merrie England. The performances are in aid of local charities.

GRAND THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Company; Managing-Director, Mr J. Worswick.—The Ergotti and King Luis Troupe gives a very fine risley act, and the performance is vociferously applauded each evening; the Wigan pantomime favourites, the Sisters Phillips and the Brothers Lorenz, excel in the very amusing absurdity entitled In a Terrible Storm; George Formby, the popular entertainer, is a great attraction this week; Marie Weston, vocalist, banjoist, and dancer; Henderson, the clever blind musician; and Dezmonti and More, in a triple bar performance, are highly appreciated. Clyo and Rochelle, the St. Johns, in a musical act and speciality dance; Ada Seale, the Lancashire singing mill girl; and Young Igo, the boy dancer and comedian, complete a lengthy list of first-rate artistes.

EMPIRE MUSIC HALL.—Manager, Mr W. Birchall.—Shawlene, the popular mimic and whistler; Mr James Bowman, comedian and dancer; and Van Gelder, humorous musician, are very entertaining. Miss Lillie Hustler, dainty serio and dancer; Mr Harry Tomlinson, vocal comedian; Miss Maud Barney, comedienne; and the Brothers Kingsley, comedians and capital clog dancers, also give acceptable performances.

WORCESTER.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr Arthur Carlton; Manager, Mr Louis Karpe; Assistant Manager, Mr Le Warde.—Nell Gwynne is the attraction here this week, Miss Grace Lester giving a capital impersonation of this notable character of the Restoration period. She is well supported by Mr J. F. Preston's company.

WORTHING.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—A variety entertainment, a new departure, is the attraction here this week. Sid Stanto, comedian and big boot dancer, is well received; Miss E. Rozel is a successful descriptive vocalist; the Two Balzens, Japanese jugglers, give a highly diverting turn; Miss May Geraldine sings and dances well; the Daintons in their comedy act are pleasing; the Swift Trio introduce a clever trick cyclist show; the original Kyoto causes laughter in his excellent comedy act, "The Mysterious Japanese Box;" Rex Carvell deserves praise for his ventriloquial turn; Edie Cameron sings and dances well; Arthur Gilmore and Messrs Denton and Dale also contribute to a good programme, the whole concluding with the Walturdaw animated pictures.

YORK.

ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr T. H. Barrow.—Amateurs are occupying this theatre, appearing with success in Haddon Hall.

OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Sidney Brooke.—Lady Mansell and her clever juveniles are the principal attraction, and are well received. Boswell's ponies and dogs and donkeys give a clever show, and the Sisters Russell, E. J. Sheldon, Ted Cowan, Wirson, Lea and Lovell, the Freans and Harry Bent complete the company.

"THE SCILLY GIRL,"
a Tale of the Scilly Isles,
Book by Athol Mayhew; Music, William Neale.
A New and Original
Musical Comedy.
A First-class Company of Artists,
Chorus, and Dancers.
Entirely New Costumes and
Two New Sets.
Everything carried.
Produced with great success at
THE GRAND THEATRE, WOOLWICH.
London Daily Telegraph, Dec. 13, says:—
Hitherto, as a rule, the suburban theatres in their competition with those that are more central, and claim to be more fashionable, have been content to imitate. But now the ambition to create has been aroused, and had its development last night, at the Grand Theatre, Woolwich, of a new musical comedy. And there is no reason to believe that after the five performances to be given there this week of "The Scilly Girl" it will be heard of no more except in the provinces, and it may be that, by way of gratitude, the suburbs may give to London one such play in return for the scores which have gone forth from London to the suburbs in a performance which was received with great favour.

WANTED, Jan. 16, 23, and on, with Exceptions.
Wire, FRANK NELSON, 9, Claverton-street, London, S.W.

WE DO FIND THEM!

for
THE QUEEN OF CHORUS SINGERS,

TESSIE.
TESSIE.
TESSIE.

Leicester Daily Mercury, Dec. 6, 1904, says:—
. . . And in response to an encore, unanimous and hearty, she sang "Tessie," in the chorus of which was represented some original effects, much to the amusement of the house. She was warmly called on to come back, and had to bow her thanks many times, and finally repeat the chorus before the house would let her go.

The Original Singer of
and
MAH MOONLIGHT LOU,
MISS MADGE LESSING,
has found another equally Popular Number in

THE GENUINE PANTOMIME HIT OF SEASON 1904-5 IN GLASGOW IS

"THE AIRSHIP AND THE SWALLOW."

The SCOTSMAN, reviewing the Pantomime at the Theatre Royal, Glasgow, says:—

A very pretty setting is given for Miss Annie Purcell's song, "THE AIRSHIP AND THE SWALLOW." It is a simple arrangement, depicting a flying machine in mid-air, surrounded by seven or eight lady members of the company winged to represent swallows, and shown against the blue of the sky. The scene has its special value by way of contrast to the gorgeousness of the other settings.

The GLASGOW EVENING NEWS says:—

Among the ladies, first place is taken, naturally, by Miss Annie Purcell, as "Ganem." A very attractive and spirited "Ganem" she is, and her songs, particularly "THE SWALLOW AND THE AIRSHIP," were vociferously applauded, and chorussed by last night's audience.

The GLASGOW DAILY RECORD says:—

One cannot but admire the discretion of Mr. Wyndham in his choice of Miss Annie Purcell as the principal boy. Her charming presence heightens the enjoyment of her excellent singing and graceful acting. One of her songs, "THE AIRSHIP AND THE SWALLOW," has the distinction of having a specially-arranged scene devoted to it. The scene and the song were most enthusiastically received.

Other Panto Managers should follow suit.

(SPECIALLY REPORTED FOR THE ERA.)

The usual weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday at the County Hall, Spring-gardens.

LONDON COLISEUM.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee reported that the Council on July 14, 1903, approved plans of the London Coliseum, St. Martin's-lane, and on Nov. 25, 1904, granted a provisional licence for music and dancing in respect of the premises. The building was rapidly approaching completion and the committee had been informed that it was desired to open it on Dec. 19. They recommended "(a) That a certificate, under section 12 of the Metropolis Management and Building Acts Amendment Act, 1878, be sealed in respect of the London Coliseum, and that it be issued to the owner of the premises as soon as the chairman of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee is satisfied that the work has been satisfactorily completed. (b) That the provisional licence for music and dancing in respect of the London Coliseum be confirmed."

In reply to Sir A. WEST, Mr GREENWOOD said the certificate for the Coliseum would be ready for the opening of that building on Saturday. The delay which had taken place was not due to the Council, but to other matters connected with the scenery. Mr Stoll had endeavoured to meet the wishes of the Council in every way.

LYCEUM THEATRE.

The Council on March 29, 1904, approved plans showing the reconstruction of the Lyceum Theatre, Wellington-street, Strand, and on Nov. 25 granted a provisional licence for music and dancing in respect of the premises. The work was now approaching completion, and the committee had been informed that it was desired to open the premises on Dec 26. They recommended "(a) That a certificate in respect of the Lyceum Theatre be sealed, and that it be issued to the owner of the premises as soon as the chairman of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee is satisfied that the work has been satisfactorily completed. (b) That the provisional licence for music and dancing in respect of the Lyceum Theatre be confirmed."

NEW THEATRE, SHAFTESBURY-AVENUE.

The committee reported that they had considered plans, submitted by Mr W. G. R Sprague, of a theatre proposed to be erected at the junction of Shaftesbury-avenue and Rupert-street. The site does not strictly comply with the regulations, as only one-tenth abuts on to a street of 40ft. in width instead of one-sixth as required, but in other respects the site is a good one. The proposed building is shown to have seating accommodation for 1,144 persons, and the exit accommodation is sufficient according to the present regulations of the Council for a certain number of persons to stand. The committee had, however, under consideration, at the present time, the question of standing in places of public entertainment, and they thought that for the present the number of persons which this theatre should be regarded as accommodating should be the number for which seats have been provided. The committee recommended "That Mr W. G. R. Sprague be informed that, provided the work shown on the eleven plans, dated Nov. 30, submitted by him with regard to a building to be erected at the junction of Shaftesbury-avenue and Rupert-street is commenced within six months, the Council will be prepared to grant a certificate under section 12 of 41 and 42 Vict., cap. 32, to the owner of such building, on being satisfied that the premises have been completed in accordance with the plans referred to and the regulations of the Council, and that the following conditions have been complied with:—That the ventilation be so arranged that in case of fire on the stage the products of combustion would be drawn away from the audience. That a 2in. pipe connected to the hydrants, shown on both sides of the stage, be carried up into the flies to hydrants provided with 1½in. outlets and all necessary hose and fittings. That all hydrants with the exception of those in the flies be fitted with bib-cocks for filling buckets. That a drawing showing the construction and gearing of the fire curtain be submitted for the Council's approval. That all check boxes be recessed. That the Council's regulations with regard to notices, door fastenings, gas fittings, lighting, heating, &c., be complied with."

OLYMPIA.

The Council on July 12, 1904, approved plans of the arrangements proposed for an exhibition of motor cars to be held at Olympia, Hammersmith, in February, 1905. The committee had since considered plans submitted by Mr F. H. Payne, and a letter, dated Dec. 7, 1904, from Mr T. F. Woodfine, secretary of the society promoting the exhibition, showing certain alterations proposed to be made in the arrangements. They recommended "That Mr F. H. Payne be informed that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the two plans, dated Nov. 15, 1904, submitted by him as amended by the proposals contained in the letter, dated Dec. 7, 1904, from Mr T. F. Woodfine, with regard to the proposed alterations to the stands in connection with the motor exhibition to be held at Olympia, provided the conditions attached to the approval of the plans on July 12, 1904, be carried out.

ROYAL MUSIC HALL.

The committee had considered plans, submitted by Messrs F. Matcham and Co., showing alterations proposed to be made at the Royal Music Hall, Holborn, in order to give effect to the Council's suggestions for the improvement of the premises. The plans show almost an entire replanning and reconstruction of the premises. The arrangements appeared to be satisfactory, and the committee recommended "That Messrs F. Matcham and Co., be informed that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the six plans, dated Oct. 25, 1904, as amended by the plan, dated Dec. 5, 1904, submitted by them with regard to the proposed alterations at the Royal Music Hall, provided the following conditions be complied with:—(1) That a suitable exhaust cowl be provided in connection with the ventilation of the stage. (2) That the proposed means of escape from the flies, which are unsatisfactory, be altered to the satisfaction of the Council."

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

The committee had considered plans, submitted by Mr C. T. Helmsley, showing the conversion of the stalls lavatory at St. James Theatre into a refreshment bar, and recommended "That Mr C. T. Helmsley be informed that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the two plans, dated Nov. 25th, 1904, submitted by him with regard to the proposed alteration, provided the door to the lavatory in question be rehung on the exit side of the passage, be made to close with the outgoing stream of traffic, and be made self-closing."

TERRY'S THEATRE.

The committee had considered plans submitted by Messrs Fladgate and Co., showing how it is proposed to give effect to the Council's suggestions for the improvement of Terry's Theatre, Strand, and recommended "That Messrs Fladgate and Co. be informed that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on three plans, dated Oct. 26, 1904, submitted by them with regard to the proposed alterations, provided the Council's regulations with regard to heating and electric lighting be complied with."

All the above recommendations were agreed to.

The Council at its rising adjourned for the Christmas recess.

IN the Court of Appeal, on Tuesday, the plaintiff in the case Hickman v. Seal and Hoffman appealed from a decision of the Lord Chief Justice. The facts were, shortly, that the defendant Hoffman entered into an agreement with the Brighton Marine Palace and Pier Company to take the theatre at the end of the pier for one year. In that venture he was financed by the defendant Seal. The season proved unsuccessful, and as the rent for the second half of the year was not forthcoming, the Company entered and took possession of the theatre. The Company alleged that under the agreement the defendant Hoffman was liable to them to pay for extra electric light, gas, and water, which had been used over and above a standard quantity in the theatre, which they said amounted to £46 11s., and while the question of Hoffman's liability to pay this was being discussed, the theatre was re-let to the plaintiff Hickman, and, for reasons not here material, it was agreed that Hickman should discharge the debt owed by Hoffman to the Pier Company, and should take an assignment of it from them. This was done, and the plaintiff gave notice of the assignment both to Hoffman and to Seal, who declined to recognise their liability. The action was then brought against both defendants, it being alleged that they were partners in the venture. To the claim Seal denied that there was any partnership between himself and Hoffman, and it was further contended that, as in the document purporting to be an assignment the debt was described as being due from Hoffman without reference to Seal, the plaintiff's right to recover was against Hoffman only. In the court below the Lord Chief Justice held that the assignment was invalid as failing to meet the requirements of Section 97 of the Companies Clauses Act 1845. He, therefore, entered judgment for the defendants. The Court held that the action was not maintainable on the assignment, and they dismissed the appeal with costs.

"FROM THE LAND OF SILENCE."

A Spiritualistic Play, in Four Acts, by Lloyd Clarance and Dugald Moore, for the First Time on any Stage, at the New Theatre, Consett, on Monday, Dec. 19.

Squire Burton	Mr J. T. SYMINGTON
Dr. Smalley	Mr H. M'NAIR
Jack Hillaby	Mr J. B. ROBSON
Selwyn Towers	Mr JAMES DAVIS
Dr. Julius Marx	Dr. DUGALD MOORE
Peter Popple	Mr JOHN HESLINGTON
Timothy Trout	Mr TOM BELL
Polly	Mrs LLOYD CLARANCE
Grace Burton	Miss ADA COULTHARD
Blanche Herriott	Miss MELENE DARE

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The Land of Silence, produced on Monday night on the occasion of the eighth annual benefit of Mr and Mrs Lloyd Clarance, is a drama of intense interest. The plot hinges on a solemn compact entered into by two firm friends, Lieut. Hillaby and Selwyn Towers. "We promise that whichever of us two be called from earth into that unknown Land of Silence shall, if it be within his power, listen for the call of his comrade in great peril, and aid him in his hour of need." These two friends have each withheld one secret from the other, and that is their love for Grace Burton, the daughter of Squire Burton. The squire is dangerously ill, and is being attended by Dr. Marx, who is also a professed hypnotist and spiritualist, and when Hillaby tells Selwyn that he is going to ask Grace to become his wife, Selwyn's honour to his friend makes him resolve that Hillaby shall never know that he also loved her. Dr. Marx has gained a thorough power over Squire Burton by his hypnotic influence, and is also hastening his death by means of a deadly poison in his medicine, his intention being to compel the squire to consent to his marriage with Grace, and then by the squire's death gain command over his wealth. Grace, however, really loves Selwyn Towers, but, as he does not speak—to save herself from a union with Dr. Marx—she consents to marry Lieut. Hillaby. Dr. Marx now tries to incite the jealousy of Hillaby against Selwyn and Grace, but without success. The doctor's spiritualistic medium, Miss Blanche Herriott, with the assistance of Peter, a page in service of the doctor, substitutes a harmless decoction for the poisoned medicine, and, to the surprise of Dr. Marx, the squire speedily recovers. Lieut. Hillaby meets with a severe accident whilst hunting. Dr. Marx informs Grace there is only one way of saving his life—by hypnotic means—and that, owing to the lieutenant's weak state, can only be conveyed through a medium. It must be tried immediately, or it will be too late. The doctor persuades Grace to consent to act as the medium, and hypnotises her, although he feels his power over her is not thoroughly complete. He then gives her a bottle of poison, the contents of which she pours into a glass at his request, and is about to give it to Lieut. Hillaby, when she is startled by the loud ringing of a bell. She partially recovers herself, puts the poison on the table, and hastily leaves the room. The doctor, however, immediately gives Hillaby the poison, and retires behind the curtains of the French windows as Selwyn Towers enters. He has noticed the strange, dazed appearance of Grace, who has just left the room. He goes to speak to Hillaby, but to his horror finds him dead. Towers discovers the poison bottle on the table, and hastily puts it in his pocket as Dr. Marx enters from behind the curtains. A scene of most absorbing interest follows, in which the doctor manages to weave a chain of circumstantial evidence around Selwyn Towers, whom he accuses of the murder of Lieut. Hillaby. In this predicament Selwyn Towers remembers his compact with his friend, and calls on him for its fulfillment, and in a breathless silence, which could almost be felt, the vision of Lieut. Hillaby appears, and points out Dr. Marx as his murderer.

As Dr. Marx Dr. Dugald Moore gave a masterly interpretation of the part, which is an especially strong character study; Mr Jas. Davis as Selwyn Towers was also most excellent; Squire Burton was capably presented by Mr J. T. Symington; Mr J. B. Robson as Lieut. Hillaby played with admirable taste and skill; and Mr M'Nair was also most successful as Dr Smalley. As Grace Burton Miss Ada Coulthard displayed great histrionic ability, playing with much charm. Miss Melene Dare as the spiritualistic medium, Blanche Herriott, was responsible for a clever and forcible delineation. There is plenty of comedy in the play. Mrs Lloyd Clarance proved herself thoroughly at home in the part of Polly, and succeeded, in conjunction with Timothy (Mr Tom Bell) and Peter (Mr John Heslington), in evoking much laughter. The piece was finely staged, Mr John Preston providing the capital new scenery and the spectral effects were admirably carried out. The play was produced by Mr Lloyd Clarance. Mr Conrad Klee wrote the incidental music.

SCENIC ARTISTS' ASSOCIATION.

A special meeting of the council management of the Scenic Artists' Association has been convened for Wednesday evening next, the 28th inst., at eight o'clock, at the offices, 5, Robert-street, Adelphi, for the purposes of considering:—

(a) The offer of the American scene painters to contribute to the Scenic Artists' Association's Exhibition at the Grafton Galleries in April next, and also an offer to transfer the London exhibition to New York at a later date.

(b) For the election as honorary members of London theatrical managers who have promised to support the exhibition by loans of models, sketches, and photographs of scenes, and have graciously given their permission to artistes under their management to appear at the exhibition.

(c) For the election of new ordinary members.

(d) To consider the report of Sir Philip Burne-Jones, Bart., the honorary secretary to the Benevolent Fund Dinner, as regards the arrangements made for holding the same and the advertising thereof, &c.

(e) To consider the question of opening the exhibition on the evenings of April 10 to 15, and also of taking the Grafton Galleries for a longer period than at present arranged.

The annual general meeting of the members of the association will take place at the Caledonian Hotel, Robert-street, Adelphi, at 8·0 o'clock on Monday, Jan. 9, and the meeting will be followed by a smoking concert, under the direction of Mr Denham Harrison, and the following well-known artistes have already promised to appear, viz:—Kopski, the celebrated classical pianist, now at the Tivoli Music Hall; Mr Lewis Blackburn, the vocalist; Mr Joe Willis, in character songs; Mr Vernon Cowper, baritone; Mr Geo. R. Hemsley, Mr J. H. Bentham, raconteur; and Miss Adelene Votieri, in a sketch at the pianoforte, and Miss Daphne De Roban, mandoline solos. Mr J. Athel Collings has been engaged as accompanist.

The first annual dinner of the association in aid of the Benevolent Fund will be held at the Imperial Restaurant, Regent-street, at 8·0 o'clock on Sunday evening, Feb. 19, 1905, when the chair will be taken by Sir Lawrence Alma Tadema, R.A. In compliance with the request of the Dinner Sub-Committee Sir Philip Burne-Jones, Bart., has kindly consented to act as honorary secretary to the Benevolent Fund dinner, and he is securing a long list of gentlemen well known in artistic and theatrical circles to act as stewards on this occasion.

We are asked to state that a limited number of season tickets for the association's exhibition at the Grafton Galleries, Bond-street, April 10 to 15, 1905, will be issued at 5s. each, to include admission to the private Press view, the opening ceremony and daily thereafter, and can now be obtained from the secretary of the association, Mr H. Lawrence Harris, at 5, Robert-street, Adelphi, W.C.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

NOTICE.—Our Correspondents are requested to note that Next Week their Reports must reach this Office AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE. Plots of Pantomimes must be kept short.

ABERDEEN.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr H. C. Cavanah.—Mr Milton Bode's pantomime, Babes in the Wood, has now successfully entered on its second week. All the rough corners have been smoothed away, and the performance runs with dispatch from start to finish. A good deal of new and attractive "business" has been introduced by the principal players. Miss Ernestine Desborough sings with much charm a Japanese song, "Little Yo-San," which possesses a very pretty chorus. Miss Veronica Brady continues a prime favourite with the audiences, her acting and singing alike being most artistic and enjoyable. Mr Ernest Sefton (the Baron) has a new song, "Seven and sixpence," which is exceedingly amusing, and Mr Frank Couch (Buttons) and Mr W. P. Sheen (the Dame) score with a clever topical duet. Messrs Woodhouse and Wells (Gentle George and Cheerful Charles) show themselves to be comedians of infinite resource, and Mr Harry Douglas's Village Beadle is an exceptionally humorous presentation. The dancing of the Sisters Morgan continues to be a main attraction of the pantomime, and it should be added that Miss Mabel Murray sings most pleasantly in the part of the Good Fairy. All the members of the company work hard to make the performance a success, and that they do so is testified by the crowded houses. Mr Wellings skilfully conducts the orchestra, with Mr Loseby as leader. Mr Hugh Nolan, for Mr Milton Bode, and Mr Cavanagh are the courteous and capable "men on the spot."

PALACE THEATRE, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Ernest Sheldon.—The Dayton Family make a great sensation with their feet and hand-balancing turn, and Mdlle. Magna appears in a number of striking classical statuary poses. Messrs Vasey and Ramsey contribute some very good dancing, in particular a very cleverly performed duo-cake-walk on a sand-mat; and the Laurets provide an exceptionally smart exhibition of acrobatic feats. Allis and Cassatti, as usual, appear with unqualified success, and Clarke's clever nippers are as popular as on former appearances. The other artists, who are all appreciated by the large audiences, are Mr Leslie, descriptive vocalist; Vendome and Chase, dancers and duettists; and Roden, trick cyclist. The popular Bioscope exhibition of pictures winds up the programme.

ACCRINGTON.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr J. E. Barnes.—The Priest of the Temple is the attraction here. Mr Charlet March, the author, is effective in the part of Valerius. An excellent performance is that of Mr Ronald Byne as Decus Fronto; Appius Herdonius is a clever impersonation by Mr Henry Moxon; Mr Whit Rogerson as Alertious is full of humour; the Polita of Miss Evelyn Hope is a clever performance; and Miss North, an old favourite here, gives a scholarly reading of Præstantia.

ALDERSHOT.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr George E. Williams.—Joseph Poole's Myriorama is the attraction here this week, the performance having been brought up to date with new pictures of recent events, Mr Nat Abbatt being lecturer. There are many special attractions, too, in the side-show line, one of the foremost being the clever expert cycle riding of the Westwoods. Mdlle. Orbasany's performing cockatoos are also wonderfully good, and their work reflects high praise on the trainer. Others who help materially are the Veronas, lady dancers; Mr Felix Somers, facial king; and Miss May Finch, vocalist. A series of animated picture, is also shown. Joseph Poole's band, under Mr Hilton, performs a good selection of music.

ALTRINCHAM.

NEW PAVILION OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs Budd, Howe, and Taylor; Acting-Manager, Mr Arthur Gilman.—The bill of this week is headed by Mdlle. Sarti, in her statue act. Fred and Florence Budd, the vaudeville artists, receive a popular welcome after a lengthy absence. The other turns are the Toy Trio, comedy sketch artistes, with dog Rover; Godfrey Pariss, Frank Zara, Eddie Howe, comedians; Katie Kemp, comedienne and dancer; and Clair Ingham, comedienne.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr Armstrong Fairbairn.—Mr T. Arthur Jones and a cleverly selected company of dramatic artistes are filling in the final week before the revels of the Christmas pantomime are introduced. The drama being presented is entitled Life's Sweetest Sins, by W. A. Brabner. Mr T. Arthur Jones's Captain Marston is an excellent study, courageous and finished to a high degree; Mr A. Bartlett Garth as Dr. Colbrooke is the cunning, self-contained, and bold man of the world; Messrs Geo. R. J. Austin and C. Vernon Proctor are well cast as the minor villains. Miss Madge Morley sustains the part of the heiress, Doreen Rivers, with much charm; Miss Amy Rudd as the doctor's daughter plays the part of a guardian angel with rare sweetness and admirable spirit; and the undercurrent of humour is supplied by Mr Fred Russell and Miss Sara Dudley.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr Charles Revill; Director of Entertainments, Mr F. Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr L. Campkin.—This week's bill is headed by the world-renowned handcuff king and jail breaker, Hanco, the modern Jack Sheppard. He astounds his audience by the facility with which he escapes from the policeman's wrist-fetters. Another turn of exceptional merit is that of the Belmont Troupe of champion trick and motor cyclists racing round an eleven feet track, a wonderful and daring feat. Other notable engagements for the week are Fred Melton, the droll comedian and expert dancer; Sandy and Carl, acrobatic knockabouts and burlesque boxers; Guy Rider, the boy whistler; the Jetneys, the dainty coloured comedians and dancers, in eccentric Negro melodies; the Elktrones, comedy cyclists; Lottie Siegenburg, a vocalist of skill; and Baker Belphor, the favourite baritone, in descriptive songs. Some up-to-date pictures are shown on the canvas by the Bioscope.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, W. H. Broadhead and Sons; Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy B. Broadhead; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr W. Leech.—The new Empire, a brilliantly lighted and cosily cushioned hall, continues to be an attraction to pleasure seekers. This week's programme includes the astounding feats of Brinn, which he terms "Pastimes on a Battleship." One of his startling feats of strength is balancing on his chin a complete carriage and gun while firing. Special scenery and effects are used in the performance of Brinn. This nerve-tingling performance is followed by other clever feats by Valosky, in his acrobatic skating act, a remarkable expert and nimble wheeler. The Herslebs are wonder-working aerial comedians; Amy Anderson and Company appeal to lovers of serio-comic ditties, accompanied and illustrated by character sketch impersonations; Louis Murray takes the crowd with patter and songs; George Edney is a good character comedian; Otto and Olga perform cleverly in a novel musical act; Percy Farrimond challenges attention as the Lancashire singing collier; Max Gruber with his trained elephant and horse gives a good animal exhibition of sports in the Indian fashion; and Mdlle. Florence, the Queen of the Globe, shows her expert footing of the rolling ball. The pictures of animated nature conclude the entertainment.

ATTERCLIFFE.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr T. Allan Edwards; Acting-Manager, Mr J. Lacy Lyne; Assistant-Manager, Mr W. Massey Baker.—The appointment of Mr J. Lacy Lyne as manager here is, by reason of his long and varied experience, a sufficient guarantee that the patrons of this popular house will be well catered for and their comfort studied in every way. An excellent array of talent is provided this week. The Seltina Troupe of lady and gentlemen acrobats go through a very pleasing show; Lilian Travellie is an acceptable ballad vocalist; Bessie Travis, lady ventriloquist, manipulates several figures with skill; the Livettes are a couple of smart chair vaulters and tumblers; the Two Countees (Charlie and Marion), humorous duettists, receive well-merited applause for their singing; Sam Dalton causes much laughter by his quaint character songs; Cribb and Cribb introduce amusing patter, singing and dancing in their burlesque, After the Ball. The programme is completed by the Sylvester Brothers, who do some clever work as hand-balaacers and equilibrists.

AYR.

NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry W. Day.—Messrs Little and Darcy opened their pantomime season here on Saturday evening with The Forty Thieves, written by Mr Frank Ayrton, music composed and arranged by Mr Geo. D. Fox. The entire pantomime was produced by Mr Fred J. Little, and when it is said that the opening performance went without a hitch, we give no mean praise to Mr Little. There are several very clever people in the pantomime, and they enter into the spirit of the thing with great gusto, and so long as that spirit is kept up the pantomime is bound to succeed. Abdallah, the captain of the "Forty," has a gallant and shapely representative in Miss Minnie Silcott, while her sisters, Violet and Marie, take the parts of Ganem, Ali Baba's son, and Morgiana, Ali's slave, respectively, and to this gifted trio is due a great measure of the success of the pantomime. Their singing was much appreciated and vigorously encored. Ali Baba had a nimble exponent in Mr Dan Edgar, who extracted a good deal of fun out of the part, but the palm was carried off by Mr James Ferguson as Ali's wife Cogia, who was particularly happy in the character, and danced and sang with great vim. Mr Ted Wootton as Cassim acted well, but sang a deal better, for he possesses a fine and carefully-trained voice, which was heard to advantage in his cave song. The fun and frolics of Hasarac and Hasadric, Ali's lieutenants, were excellent, and caused no end of amusement; while Bossi, the donkey of Mr Ernest Brown, was most appropriately ludicrous. The dancing of the Tivoli Quartet; and the burlesque acrobatic act by the Three Woodbee Wonders were very clever and provocative of much merriment. The dresses were pretty, and reflect nothing but credit on Miss M. Bramley and Miss Ada M'Donald; while the scenery from the brush of Mr Alfred Wyatt was admirable.

BACUP.

NEW COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Frank Denman-Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr Richard Nightingale.—There is an excellent combination of variety talent here this week. Miss Ella heads the list with her performing lions, and gives an exciting performance. Rice and Rudge, trick cyclists, do some amusing and skilful feats. Messrs Dwight and Son are responsible for some expert dancing. Miss Sivado proves herself a clever gymnast. Miss Florrie Claribell gives a good exhibition as a top-boot dancer. Spangeletti's circus of trained dogs and ponies meets with a favourable reception, and some good pictures are given on the New Court Bioscope.

BARNSLEY.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr A. C. Mitchell.—This week Messrs Dottridre and Longden's company in A Woman's Pluck occupies the boards here. Mr James Willard plays with effect as Dick Darrell; Sir Noel Fordyce is well presented by Mr Charles P. Wentworth; Mr J. P. Dryden acquits himself with distinction in the double rôle of Mark Scanlan and Jim Daremont; Matthew Pope is a capital impersonation by Mr William Hayward; Mr Cecil Raymond is a clever Sir John Daredevil; and Winston Dale is made the most of by Mr Edward E. Ashby. Miss East Robertson gives a powerful impersonation of Grace Daremont; Jessie Pope is excellently portrayed by Miss Jessie Yatman; and minor parts are well taken by Mr Harry Emmerson, Miss Tina Shaw, Miss Agnese D'Aragon, and Miss Sarah Smith.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.

ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr George Stone.—The Mitchell and Belton company in The Conscript is here this week. The rôle of Karl Truevitch is admirably presented by Mr George Mitchell, who plays with great dramatic effect. Mr Howell Travis makes a capital Ivan Manloff. Mr John Belton puts some quaint humour into the part of Dor Doggervitch. Mr Harry Tilbury is good as Tretch Torloff, and Miss Mary Dawson scores as Nadia Truevitch.

TIVOLI THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Stage-Manager, Mr Tom Whiting.—Signor Pepi, who is here this week, is always well received, and his performances are applauded to the echo. Serra is something quite new as an equilibrist. Casselli and James, the banjoists, give a successful turn, and receive a well merited encore. The Lorrisons have some exceedingly funny patter. Hannah and Jones give a very good show as foot equilibrists. Mr George Hartshorn has made a great hit with his topical songs. Four Jolly Boys, clog dancers, give promise of a very successful future. The Baron Comedy Four are well received.

BATH.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr W. Trussell.—An important item in the current programme is the latest Biograph film, "Whirling the Worlds." Madame Collard's highly trained boarhounds, made up to represent lions and tigers, present a clever act. Chas. Coverdale, a really sound comedian, scores his usual success, his new songs and gags proving quite as good as anything he has previously done. Frank Sylvo, the quaint comedy juggler, remains as mirth-provoking and smart as ever. The Wynford Brothers jump in and out of barrels with surprising skill, their efforts meeting with loud applause. R. W. Russell, in his impersonation of Dickens's characters, commands attention. Billy Hubbard, comedian, rattles off some new and jokes. Mr Fred Leslie again occupies his old position as conductor in succession to Mr Reano, and pilots the band through a couple of lively selections with good results.

BEDFORD.

ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter R. Wilson.—This week the boards are occupied by Mr and Mrs William Giffard's company in The World's Desire, by Barry Williams. Mr William Giffard as the Hon. Ellis Tridley undertook his difficult rôle in a clever manner; Mrs William Giffard is well suited to the part of Dora Mutley; Mr Clifford Rean displays histrionic ability in the dual rôle of the twin brothers; Mr George Child submits a clever impersonation of the solicitor, Nathaniel Mutley; Mr Herbert Light realistically portrays the character of Godstone Clair; Mr Charles Rogers and Miss Frances Bruce are responsible for the humour in the representations of Washington Dobbs and Justerina Hook respectively; a sweet portrayal of Helen Buckshaw is given by Miss Ella Seton; and Miss Alberte impersonates Ragged Jack with due understanding.

BELFAST.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing Director, Mr Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr John P. Beardmore.—Mr Paul Martinetti's American pantomime company repeat their immense success of last week with A Terrible Night. Paul as Benjamin Roque keeps the audience in roars of laughter with his irresistibly humorous impersonation, and a character sketch which is certainly very clever is that of Michel, the waiter, by Mr John Heard. Other rôles are finely sustained, and the piece has been a great draw. The wire-walking display of Hector is remarkably smart, and his unique hoop manipulation is loudly and deservedly applauded. Grant and Grant, the "American Octoroons," sing and dance in the best possible style, and their reception has been extremely flattering. Grant and Allen are an accomplished comedy duo, and the new Palace Pictures are a great attraction. Mr Walter Black, comedian, completes the programme.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Brock.—Mr Herman Melot is the star here this week, and his clever conjuring feats have been enthusiastically received. The comedy act supplied by Gallagher and Hild, which is always entertaining, has met with a deserved reception, and prolonged applause greets the dancing display of Miss Bijou Russell. Mr Tom Stuart is a character actor of exceptional ability, his impersonations being splendidly realised. A warm greeting has been extended to Mr Walter Munroe, the favourite Irish comedian, whose songs and witticisms are always up to date. Mr Munroe is in his best form. The harp solos of Pia Caroxzi command success, and the sweet ballad vocalism of that gifted songstress Miss Sybil St. Elmo delights all. Also appearing are Sid Doody and Miss Edie Wright, comedians, who made a big hit on Monday; and Cline and Clark, the favourite comedy duo, whose dancing is very smart.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General Manager, Mr Henry T. Downs.—Barton and Ashley are paying a return visit here, and this exceedingly humorous and versatile duo are accorded a warm reception nightly. Mr Barney Stuart is wonderfully clever in his various realistic impersonations. The comedy cycling act by the Walter Arleys is one of the features of the bill, and the surprisingly realistic impersonations of stars by Mr Harry Bent gain him deserved encores. A capital ventriloquial act is furnished by Mr Bert Williams, and the talented eccentric comedians and dancers, Hart and Rudd, take immensely. Miss Ethel Yorke is a good comedienne, and an attractive act has been supplied by Claron Brothers, comedians and dancers.

IMPERIAL HIPPODROME AND CIRCUS.—Proprietors, Messrs Carter and Bosco; General Manager, Mr Irving Bosco; Assistant-Manager, Mr Geo. Dobler.—Another fine bill is here, and the praise bestowed on Messrs Bosco and Dobler for their capital programmes is in every sense deserved. A leading attraction is provided by the Schaffers, whose wonderful acrobatic feats have created quite a sensation. Mr Alf Berg's weight-lifting is a prominent feature, his remarkable performance being loudly cheered nightly. A splendid exhibition of dancing has been contributed by the Hennessy troupe, and the feats of acrobatism displayed by the Moxon Family are positively startling. The Sloan Family of equestrians continue their eminently satisfactory engagement here, and the act provided Mr C. E. Stelling is decidedly good. The Animated Pictures exhibited are quite a feature, and other items include Casselly, in his pot-pourri act; Funny Burgess, and Princess Annie, the graceful and accomplished comedienne.

BIRKENHEAD.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Pell.—The New Century Company's animated pictures have been transferred from the Royal, and attract large audiences.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr D. J. Clarke.—The Kremo Troupe of acrobats in their Risley act worthily head the company, and give a performance of surprising excellence. The Nelson Newsboys' Quintet are deservedly great favourites, and the Daunton-Shaw Troupe of trick cyclists furnish an attractive turn. Miss Sable Fern, comedienne, is on a welcome return visit. Captain Slingsby, an expert ventriloquist, is cordially received, and Dezmonti and Mora, on the horizontal bar; Mr Fred Land, comedian; Mr Ted Cowan, comedian; Miss Ivy Graham, comedienne; and Mr Harry Glynn's sketch company complete the programme.

BIRMINGHAM.

CARLTON THEATRE, SALTLEY.—Owner and Manager, Mr Arthur Carlton; Resident-Manager, Mr Ben Sydney.—The Sporting Girl, introduced by Messrs Perry and Stanton's company, proves a happy blend of comedy, opera, and drama. The plot contains many amusing situations, and the artistes are most capable. Mr T. Gilbert Perry as Mr Penton Hook of Chicago is a leading spirit in the success, and Miss Maggie Stanton as the music hall artiste, Kitty Fitzroy, "a sporting girl, acts and sings in a piquant manner. Mr Charles Sanders as Jack Garling, and Miss Elvira Stuart as Amy Beddoe gains a meed of success, and Messrs H. Bolton, Marcus Grey, Jas. H. Sterling, and the Misses Marjorie Tennant, Gladys St. Ledger, Jennie Hackett, and Betsy Brownlie win the highest encomiums.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Lessee, Mr Charles Barnard; Manager, Mr Dan Barnard.—The Grip of Iron is once more the attraction here. Mr Fred Powell still lends his aid by appearing in his weird and powerful impersonation of the man monster, Jagon; and Miss Georgie De Lara shines with her accustomed success as Cora. Miss Nelly Navarro plays Sophie Blanchard with much charm. Mr Geo. Denham as the finally exonerated Paul is much admired; Mr Harry Agar-Lyons is successful as the detective; Mr J. Wilton Richards acts well as the infamous Lorentz De Ribas; Miss Hilda Baynton gains sympathy as Marie Guerin; and Mr Charles Conway is popular as "the Smiler."

BRADFORD.

EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Limited.—Charles R. Sweet, the "musical burglar," in his original, clever, and very diverting entertainment has had a fine reception here this week; and Tschernoff's cleverly trained animals are extending their stay, and again delighting the audience; the comedy turn by the Sakers is much enjoyed; and M'Phee and Hill contribute a capital triple horizontal-bar performance. Turns by Charles Adams, comedian; and Little Uno, boy comedian, are very acceptable. The Lukushima Troupe of Japanese equilibrists give a most effective, clever, and original performance; Morris and Morris are very amusing acrobatic grotesques. A new sketch, viz., Lord Harkaway, presented by Mr F. Maxwell and a full company, which includes Mr Roy Cochrane, contains, amongst many exciting incidents, a realistic "Glove Fight to a Finish;" and there are some fine pictures shown by the Bioscope.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr W. E. Berry.—Harry Tate and his company are here again with their amusing skit on the motoring craze, and Clarke and Argyle, pipers and dancers, submit a good turn. J. H. M'Cann's roller-skating and comedy are acceptable items; juggling and conjuring by the Javalans is original in its way and very clever; Charles Bowker, "the singing cobbler," has a musical voice; Mons. Reklaw (assisted by Mdlle. Minetta) on the rolling globe gives an expert performance; Comical Walker, with his amateur acrobats, provides a lot of fun; George Foyle is good in character vocalism; and Permane's educated Siberian bears, in a sensational performance, are a wonderful example of animal training.

BLACKBURN.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr Harry Yorke; Business-Manager, Mr Reginald Yorke.—This week The New Mephisto is paying a farewell visit. Mr Albert Weston appears in a number of characters, and is the life and soul of the piece; Mr Willie H. Vernon gives a clever representation of Dick Pilgrim; Mr Herbert St. John is sufficiently inane as Lord Hummingtop; Mr Clarence Lindon as Captain Meredith and Mr Arthur Randal as Major Bantem are both good. Miss Nellie Burdette as Dolly sings and dances in a delightful manner, and the three widows are played by Miss Dorothy Cecil, Miss Leah Howard, and Miss Lilian Gregory. The Thalian Glee Singers also appear.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr E. H. Page.—This week In the Shadow of Night is being played by Mr James Willard's company, with Mr Hamilton Deane in the principal part.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr F. Macnaghten; Business-Manager, Mr Will Murray; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry Drury.—The bill this week includes "Dida;" the Wiltons, comedy bar performers; Usk, magician; Ada Fawn, burlesque artiste; the Marconis, in their electrical exhibition; Ian Colquhoun, baritone vocalist; the Langdons, song illustrators; Miss Raffin's monkey troupe; and Friscari, hat manipulator.

BLACKPOOL.

PALACE.—General Manager, Mr G. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr Fred Waller.—A strong bill is presented here this week. G. H. Elliott, the chocolate-coloured coon, wins great popularity. The Eight Lancashire Lads, vocalists and dancers, are also well received. Other turns are given by Dolly Harmer, comedienne; Phil Herman, character comedian; George Prince, "the crazy comic;" the Carlyles, Spanish and acrobatic waltz dancers; Herbert La Martine, bâton manipulator; Alice Maple, comedienne; and Zeta Grey and company appear in a sketch.

HIPPODROME.—Lessees, Signor Pepi and Co.—Tennison and Wallis, a couple of excellent comedians, are warmly welcomed here this week. Weiland, the juggler, gives some clever tricks, that are both amazing and amusing. Other contributors are Vands, on the rolling globe; Lily Currie, vocalist; Julian Mack, comedian; La Belle Tosca, in a graceful wire performance; Senorita Eleonora, an expert gymnast; and the Sisters Lytton, duettists.

BOLTON.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Hermann.—Mr Leslie Norman's company is appearing here this week in the musical comedy A Trip to Chinatown. Miss Bertha Cadman makes a sprightly Mrs Guyer, and Miss Daisy Revett is pert as Flirt, Mrs Guyer's maid. Mr Charles Seguin is humorous as Mr Welland Strong, and Mr Jerrold Manville and Mr Leslie Norman are clever as Ben Gay and Rashleigh Gay. Miss Harriet Fawn and Mr Charles Seguin appear in act three in the scene "Tramps in Trampland," and the Three Canadian Belles are seen in their latest success.

GRAND THEATRE, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry Kenyon.—The members of the Bolton Amateur Operatic Society are this week giving their eleventh annual performances in aid of local charities, the Chinese musical comedy San Toy being produced, by the kind permission of Mr George Edwardes. The gorgeous dresses have been supplied by the firm of B. J. Simmons and Co., London, at a cost of £500. The augmented orchestra is under the conductorship of Mr H. F. Pacey. The chorus is an excellent one. Miss Mary Brown in the title-rôle wins hearty plaudits by her charming and clever acting and artistic singing; Miss May Morris as Dudley acts cleverly, and is warmly applauded for her rendering of "Rhoda and her Pagoda;" Miss Annie Brown has a pleasing stage presence and sings sweetly as Poppy; Miss Annie Worsley sings well as Yung Shi; and Miss Florence Dummer as Trixie gracefully dances a pas seul in act two. Mr J. Broughton as the wily Chinaman Li convulses the house by his admirable drollery all the time he is on the stage, and Mr L. H. Johnson is no less humorous as Yen How. Mr J. H. Rhodes acts and sings well as Fo Hop; Mr Geo. Farrant is quaint and dignified as Sing Hi; Mr A. J. Dearden gives a good impersonation of Sir Bingo Preston; Mr G. A. Makinson makes a capital Capt. Bobbie Preston; and Mr N. B. Haughton is an excellent Lieut. Harvey Tucker.

BRIGHTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr H. Cecil Beryl; Assistant-Manager, Mr Harcourt M. Beryl.—Miss Julia Neilson, Mr Fred Terry, and company are here this week with Sunday. Miss Julia Neilson gives a charming representation of Sunday, and Mr Fred Terry achieves great success as Colonel Brinthorpe. Mr J. D. Beveridge as Tom Oxley and Mr Horace Hodges as Lively merit very warm praise for their artistic impersonations. Mr J. Carter-Edwards' Davy and Mr Malcolm Cherry's Arthur Brinthorpe are admirably played. Miss Bella Pateman is a capital Nrs Naresby, and able support is given by Miss Kathleen Doyle, Mr Alfred Kendrick, and Mr Rothbury Evans.

GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr W. F. Crowe.—This theatre reopened on Thursday evening with a performance of the Christmas pantomime Little Red Riding Hood.

AQUARIUM.—Lessee and Manager, Mr H. Bernhardt; Acting-Manager, Mr Henry De Groot.—Vocal and instrumental concerts are sustained here this week by Miss A. E. Over and Mr Douglas Lott, vocalists; Mr Ernest Leggett, solo violin; and the augmented orchestra, under the direction of Mr J. W. Slatter.

ALHAMBRA.—Managing-Director, Mr J. L. Graydon; General Manager, Mr Ernest Lepard.—The following are here this week:—Clarke and Hamilton, America's musical team; James Stewart, the tramp at the piano; Ada Parker, coon artist; Cliff Ryland, comedian, vocalist, and story teller; the Norman and Leonard Trio, in The Itinerant; Akimoto's Royal Deddo Japanese troupe of equilibrists and jugglers; Burnetti, character musician; Sam Redfern, the black philosopher; Violet Mills, comedienne and dancer; Conway and Leland, the merry monopedes; and the Alhambra pictures. On Wednesday a matinée performance of Brother Officers was given by well-known local amateurs in aid of the Sussex County Hospital.

BOOTLE.

ROYAL MUNCASTER THEATRE.—Miss Renee Glendower's company is here this week. Mr Roy Milton gives a manly and earnest rendering of the much-injured Dave Gordon, and Mr C. R. Matthews is excellent as the villainous Fergus Gordon. Miss Stephanie Baring stands out among the others with a powerful reading of Olga Sobinski, and Miss Flora Leslie is a sweet and sympathetic Meg Merrilees. The Three Feros are smart acrobats, and the scene in which they rescue Olga from under the steam hammer is one of the hits of the play. Mr F. Morton Wright as Sergeant M'Dougal and Miss Hilda Young as Mary Jane Jolliboy are the cause of much merriment.

BRISTOL.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr James Macready Chute.—There was an amateur performance here last Saturday evening, the proceeds being for the benefit of the United Kingdom Commercial Travellers' Association.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Ernest Carpenter.—There was also an amateur performance here on Tuesday evening last, this being in aid of the funds of the local Jewish Board of Guardians.

PALACE.—Managing Directors, Messrs Livermore Bros.; Resident Manager, Mr Horace Livermore; Secretary, Mr Welchman.—This week the leading attraction is the amusing sketch Down at Brook Farm by Mr and Mrs Neil Litchfield, comedy artistes. Mrs Litchfield introduces a violin solo; she plays with much taste and produces an excellent tone. The Abadaroffs, described as "prehistoric mountebanks," do a smart acrobatic turn; Brothers Attilla present a fine performance as strong men, prizes being offered to competitors; Miss Maud Stanley is a pleasing comedienne; Carr and Rose have a good comedy act, Their First Quarrel; Miss Grace Merton, described as a "street singer," has a fine soprano voice, of which she avails herself in an artistic and pleasing manner; Devere and Kenwick do a comedy act, and introduce some burlesque pictures on a screen; the Haldyne Duo have a smart and amusing comedy act, The Curate's Dilemma; V. L. Granville is successful in a series of costume impersonations of characters from famous plays; Herbert Cyril, comedian, has some amusing songs; and the performance concludes with a fine series of animated pictures, "Whirling the Worlds." The Thursday matinées continue to be well attended.

EMPIRE.—Proprietor, Mr Thomas Barrasford.—The Manhattan Comedy Four present a smart vocal and comedy turn, the voices harmonising well; Imro Fox is very successful in conjuring and sleight-of-hand feats; John Lloyd, described as the "Original Singing Collier," has an exceptionally good tenor voice, and he sings with much expression; Percy Honri's concertina playing obtains appreciation; the Bennecelli Troupe do a pleasing and excellent turn as novelty gymnasts; Miss Kate Gourlay is a smart coon singer and buck dancer; George Rennie presents a clever ventriloquial act; Harry Leybourne, comedian, obtains appreciation; and some interesting animated pictures conclude the entertainment. There are well-attended matinées every Wednesday, and the show is run on the two-houses-a-night system.

BROUGHTON.

VICTORIA.—Proprietors, the Broughton Theatres Syndicate, Ltd.; Managing-Director and Licensee, Mr James W. Haworth; Manager and Secretary, Mr James M. Hardie, jun.—After witnessing the amusing farce, Margaret's Stratagem, on Monday evening, a large audience was treated to more serious fare in the dramatic fantasy, Sleigh Bells; or, the Voice of Conscience, in which Mr Ellerslie Pyne gave a very clever and impressive portrayal of the character of Mathias. Mr Weedon Ross as Father Walther, Mr F. Erskine as Hans, and Mr E. Langhorne as Christian gave good studies of their various rôles. The ladies, Miss Wentworth as Catherine, Miss S. Rutter as Annette, and Miss R. Regan as Adrienne, gave charming support. Mr L. Barkley as the Judge was excellent.

BURY (LANCS).

OLYMPIA CIRCUS OF VARIETIES.—General Manager, Mr Otto C. Culling.—The bill here includes Maggie Walsh, the singing mill girl; Four Estrellas, acrobats; Hartley Wonders, jumpers; Ormonde Penstone, illusionist; the St. Johns, comedy artistes; the Clayton Twins, in a funny sketch; and Johnny Renson and Rosie Waite, a comedy couple.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs W. H. Broadhead and Sons; Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead.—Harry Taft, whistling comedian, heads the bill; and others who assist are Arthur Hall, mimic; Amstel and Luie, comedians; Mildred Sims, society entertainer; Duncan, juggler and club manipulator; and Oswald, equilibrist.

CARDIFF.

KING'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Frank Bateman; General Manager, Mr Robert Sawin.—Mr John Tully's company in The Octoroon has been playing here this week. The piece is excellently staged and the various characters are sustained by a capital company. Mr Fred G. Kay as the villainous Jacob M'Closky succeeds in giving a good character study. Mr E. Kellen Taylor submits a creditable delineation of George Peyton; Salem Scudder has a smart exponent in Mr Silas Jefferson; and Mr St. Vincent Beechey as Captain Rotts is excellent. Miss Florrie Vennimore scores as Zoe, while Miss Kittie Wood is equally successful as Dora Sunnyside. Comedy is well in evidence, Mr Harry Danby as Pete providing plenty of fun ably assisted by a coloured chorus.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Lea.—The excellent programme given here is provided by the following artists:—Tilly Bebe, with her troupe of twelve performing lions; Morton and Elliott, harmonica players and vocalists; Miss Lily Marney, comedienne; Theo Hardeen, expert handcuff and trunk manipulator; Wilson Hallett, in song and story; Miss Kitty Bell, vocalist and speciality dancer; the Selbinis, in their acrobatic, bicycle, and musical act; Auto and Mobil, comedy motorists; Virto, with his daughter Irene, in his drawing-room musical act; and George W. Leslie and company, in the American play, Chums.

CHELTENHAM.

OPERA HOUSE.—Managering-Directors, Lieut.-Col. Croker-King, Col. Rogers, J.P., and A. J. Shinner.—On Wednesday the general manager (Mr H. Oswald Redford), took his fourth annual benefit, and if largely increased success is any criterion, Mr Redford is still gaining in popularity. Mr Barrie's early success Walker, London, was the fare provided, played by an extra strong cast of distinguished amateurs. Two performances were given, each preceded by the most amusing farce My Turn Next. In the latter piece, Col. Rogers, one of the directors, added to the laurels he had previously gained in the part of Taraxicum Twitters. The performances attracted much attention in the district; and the borough member (Mr J. T. Agg-Gardner) travelled down from town expressly to give his personal support.

CHESTERFIELD.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr Holbery Hardy.—Mr and Mrs F. G. Kimberley's company is appearing here in the sporting drama, Bound to Win. Mr F. G. Kimberley represents the hero, Lyndon; and Miss Nina Blake Adams plays the rôle of the heroine, Marion, being well supported by Mr James Hont as Ned Oakley, Mr Edgar Morgan as Buffet, Mr Horace Custins as Wilkins, Miss Edie Macklin as Winnie Oakley, Mr D. Strickland as Philip Ayre, Mr Fred Tenaur as Blake, and Miss Kathleen Eckhart as Gladys Orme. A special feature of the piece is the introduction of a couple of thoroughbred horses.

CASTLEFORD.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor and Licensee, Mr Chas. Gadsby; Business-Manager, Councillor Hy. Masterman.—A Girl's Cross Roads was performed here on Monday by Mr Douglas Bruce's company. Mr W. E. Griffiths gives an excellent portrayal of John Meadows, a farmer. Mr Will Corrie is very amusing as Toby Turner, and the same remark applies to Miss Gladys Newcombe as Tilly Vane. Jack Livingstone is in the capable hands of Mr George Gaisford. Mr William Fraser Brunner ably depicts the villainous Cuthbert Lumley. Mr John Rogers proves a satisfactory Luke Ramsden. The Barbara Wade of Miss Lilly Hammersley is a well-studied piece of acting, and this clever lady is to be congratulated on the success of her interpretation. Miss Kate Walford gives a vigorous and spirited representation of the scheming and heartless Nellie Meadows. A consistently artistic portrayal of Constance Cornell is submitted by Miss Ethel Bracewell. Dr. Weston has an able exponent in Mr E. Eardley Howard, while the stage-manager, Mr Frederick Carr, is distinctly good as Crofts, a pickpocket.

CLYDEBANK.

NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr Frank Wilson.—These boards are occupied this week by Messrs Garside, Knowles, and Ludlow's company with the drama, The London Fireman. The part of the hero, Hal Curtis, is admirably acted by Mr J. F. Knowles, the villainous Viscount Fleming is well played by Mr Arthur Fleming; Miss Mona Gray makes a charming Ida Curtis; Miss Violet Temple cleverly portrays Countess Fleming. The outstanding feature, however, is the powerful acting of Mr Edward L. Garside as Ratty. The comic relief is safe in the hands of Mr Charles Preece and Miss Nelly Garside.

CONSETT.

NEW THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr Lloyd Clarance.—Mr Lloyd Clarance, the esteemed manager of the above theatre, and his wife had their annual benefit this week, when there was produced a play entitled From the Land of Silence, an account of which appears in another column. On Monday and Tuesday nights the performances were under the presence and patronage of the officers and men of the K and L Companies of the 2nd V.B. Durham Light Infantry, and on Wednesday night the officers and members of the Clarence Lodge, No. 794, of the R.A.O.B., attended in full regalia in order to show the high respect with which Mr Clarance is held by them all. It was a most creditable performance, and is a well-written play. The scenery, which is entirely new, has been painted by Mr John Preston, the resident scenic artist, and reflects great credit upon him.

CORK.

OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr John Horgan.—Miss Bonwin Carlton's company is here in The Plucky Nipper, by Edward Surrey. Miss Bonwin Carlton appears in the title-part, and wins great applause by her portrayal. As Ina Fenwick Miss Lilian Radburn is capital. As Daisy Paget Miss Esther Lamonte is excellent. Mr Edward Surrey as Bill Burgess is satisfactory.

PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Henry Kemble.—Unita and Paul appear in a novel act. With the aid of a trapeze and a large steel ring they perform a number of clever feats. Katie Le Blanche, serio and dancer, is applauded. Baker and Rose are good character comedians, whose song and dialogue win the appreciation of the audience. La Belle Sylvia is altogether pleasing in her coon song and dance. Carl Verdi gives a very good musical act, and plays on a number of wind and string instruments with effect. The Brothers Babusiau, who introduce a staircase performance, are well-trained acrobats. Miss Cissy Cutler possesses a cultivated voice, J. P. Dane is a capital comedian, and J. W. O'Brian contributes some first-class vocalism and dances well.

CREWE.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr Henry Taylor.—Messrs Carson and Granville's company has been paying a visit here with the drama entitled The Heart of a Hero, in which Mr C. E. Johnson shines to advantage as Wilfred Marl. Mr F. W. Goddard acts the part of Jem Resdale in a vigorous and manly fashion. Miss Cissie St. Elmo undertakes the difficult part of Nell Resdale with true histrionic ability. The part of May Ryder is well portrayed by Miss Lily Langley. Miss Ida Mackay is suitably placed as Susie Slack, and the same may be said of Miss Beatrice Hudson as Mrs Ryder.

CROYDON.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Resident General Manager, Mr Eustace H. Jay.—The weekly list of amusements at this popular hall is a good one. Little Clarisse Heney, comedienne and dancer, is received with marks of approval; Percival is a pianist of considerable ability; Rossi Ashton causes a sensation in his novelty song sketching; the Palace pictures are above the average; the Donnells (Kate and James) are hard-working vocalists and dancers; George Turner, comedian, is well received; Dardan and Iris are applauded in their speciality act, toe dancing and comedy; the Three Sisters Ernest, vocalists and dancers, are interesting; Wright and Elton are capital in a humorous act; the Wyffs are great in The Parson's Mishaps in a London Flat; Paul Mill, character comedian, is always a welcome addition to a programme; Lady Mansel and her clever juveniles are entertaining in their speciality, A Concert Rehearsal; Alma Bignell is a smart comedienne; and Albert Wyndham and company are well up to the mark in the dramatic sketch, Prince Arthur; or the Days of King John. The anniversary performance was given on Thursday evening, when the place was crowded. A gigantic bill was submitted with many well-known artists, including the popular comedienne, Miss Marie Lloyd. Lady visitors were presented with artistic satin programmes as souvenirs.

DERBY.

GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor and General Manager, Mr T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr Chas. Denley.—With the exception of Monday night, the theatre is closed this week for rehearsals of the pantomime of Little Red Riding Hood, which will be presented on Boxing Day by Mr Geo. Brydon-Phillips, with Miss Florrie Forde as the Prince. On Monday Mr Chas. Denley, the indefatigable assistant manager, by permission of the proprietor, took a richly deserved benefit. The programme was of an exceedingly varied and entertaining character, and in addition to a large amount of local talent, included Buckstone's famous one-act play, A Rough Diamond, in which the characters were as follows:—Lord Plato, Mr Cecil Ravenswood; Sir William Evergreen, Mr Chas. Denley; Captain Augustus Blenheim, Mr Kenneth Smith; Cousin Joe, Mr H. Lloyd; Lady Plato, Miss Ethel Pagett; and Margery, Miss Florence Trevior. Mr Denley's impersonation of Sir William Evergreen was a thoroughly finished performance. The weather on the occasion was most inclement, but it is satisfactory to know that there was a large and appreciative audience.

PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr T. Allan Edwardes.—The Imperial Russian Troupe of singers and dancers head the bill here this week and are awarded a hearty reception, their dancing being particularly novel and clever. The Bros. Zampah, one-legged jumpers, give a turn deserving of high praise; H. O. Wills, a clever comedian, provokes much merriment; H. K. Bradshaw proves himself an acceptable tenor vocalist; Martin Henderson, a blind musician, is exceedingly clever, and on Monday was accorded an encore. The Woollhafs are amusing patterers and dancers; Annie Laurie, pleasing comedienne and dancer, is well worthy of mention; while the pictures submitted by the Bioscope are also very interesting.

DARLINGTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manageress, Mrs T. W. S. Jennings.—The boards here this week are occupied by the Ediscope animated pictures, which are exceptionally good and much appreciated. In addition there is a capable variety company. The Lancashire Mill-hand (Miss Jessie Harper) is well received; Clown Ohmy gives a good turn assisted by his dog Toby; Le Brun and Irene are good in their juggling act; Loder Lyons gives great satisfaction as a ventriloquist; W. A. Kay is very clever in his miniature entertainment; Mons. Edgar executes some difficult feats on the trapeze; and Walton Bell (mimic), Will Ivor (stilt performer), and Vera Snowdon (coon vocalist and dancer) also appear with success.

CENTRAL HALL.—Ward's Anglo-American variety company opened here on Monday for fourteen days. A much admired turn is given by the New York Choir Girl, who contributed some capital illustrated songs. Miss Sadie proved a good male impersonator; Little Marion, described as the youngest ventriloquist on earth, was successful; and the programme concludes with some fine animated pictures.

DEWSBURY.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Resident-Manager, Mr J. E. Asquith.—Mr T. E. Worth completed here on Saturday evening last a capital week's business with The Rose of the Ring. Mr Worth was the life and soul of comedy with his quaint pranks as Timothy, and Mr J. C. Harvard as Benson gave a sound performance. Mr St. C. Forbes as Captain Vereker was sufficiently powerful, and Miss Grace Chesterfield as Dora Venimore was equal to her trying rôle. Miss Maudie Vincent as Rose Meredith had a taking style, and Mr E. Edwards as Lord Desborough sang well.

HIPPODROME AND VARIETIES.—General Manager, Mr George Weldon.—An excellent turn here is that of Bert Lytton, society comique; Frank Hartley, juvenile juggler, deserves much praise; the Delamere Trio, equilibrists, appear in a sterling balancing act; Lil Gorman, comedienne, has a very taking style; Baby Lloyd is warmly applauded for her efforts; while other turns to be commended are Oakley and James, sketch artistes; Nellie Vann, dancer; Paddy; and the Harriscope.

DONCASTER.

NEW GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr J. W. Chapman.—A good variety entertainment is being given here this week. The Seven Savonas are a very fine combination of instrumentalists, and will long be gratefully remembered. Wirson, equilibrist and hand-balancer, is clever, and Alf Davis, comedian, takes high rank. Marion Francis, burlesque actress, is attractive; Wilton Warton is a clever and expert conjuror; and Capita, the living marionette, is exceedingly popular. Gracie Logan is an accomplished danseuse, and the Six Elliotts, cycling wonders, create a furore. John Peverilli, the Doncaster vocalist, is much applauded.

DOVER.

THEATRE ROYAL.—The Dover Comedy Club (president Sir Henry Irving) gave admirable performances of Cousin Joe, Mouse and Man, and the laughable farce Chiselling, on Monday, in aid of the Holy Trinity Schools. The three plays were excellently staged, and were produced under the direction of Mr F. C. Dew.

DUBLIN.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr J. W. Whitbread; General Manager, Mr Kennedy Miller.—The Shaughraun is being played here this week by Mr Kennedy Miller's company. Mr James O'Brien in the title-rôle meets with the usual success, and Harvey Duff has an able exponent in Mr Isn Ireland. The part of Corry Kinchela is ably played by Mr Albert Sinclair; Miss Annie Hylton makes an effective Clare Ffolliot; the rôle of Father Dolan is in the capable hands of Mr Dane Clarke; and Miss Helene Forrest is particularly good as Arte O'Neal; Mr Robert Faulkiner is capital as Captain Molyneaux, and Miss Monica Kelly is all that can be desired as Moya. Mr James Daly makes an excellent Robert Ffolliot, and Miss Ada Arnott is amusing as Mrs O'Kelly.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr A. S. Figgis.—The principal feature here this week is Jan Rudeny, Hungarian violinist, whose selections are deservedly applauded. The coloured Meister Quartet of vocalists score a success, as do also the Bros. De Wynne, refined athletes. Horace White in his ventriloquial entertainment is well received; Fanny Robina is an engaging burlesque artiste; Johnny Gilmore, a humorous comedian, and Billy Keene and Jessie Adams are acceptable duettists and dancers. Jimmy Shields, one-legged dancer, is as popular as ever; and Lillian Lowe is a pleasing vocalist. Fred M'Arthur is a capital dialect comedian, and the Empire pictures are interesting.

TIVOLI.—General Manager, Mr Charles M. Jones; Secretary, Mr H. A. Murphy.—The talent engaged here this week includes the Three Meers, in their wire-walking act. Jean Seul, "The Indian Mystery," makes a decided hit; Marcus Boyle is a clever character comedian; Ada Whitton, a capital male impersonator; and Tate and Tate are a pair of smart comedy artistes. Arthur Albert is a successful actor-vocalist; the Mczondos are excellent speciality artistes; Hyam Long is an interesting musical comedian; and Max Stirling, illusionist, and the Bioscope pictures are up to date.

DUNDEE.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; General Manager, Mr Sandon Perkins.—The Dundee Light Opera Company produced Dorothy on Monday evening. Mrs W. H. Baker, in the rôle of Dorothy, proved herself a cultured vocalist. Miss Mary Forbes as Lydia Hawthorne also sang sweetly. Miss B. Stewart made a capital Phyllis, and the Misses M. R. M'Lean and A. Emslie, in the parts of Mrs Privett and Lady Betty, lent good support. Mr D. C. Strachan as Geoffrey Wilder was somewhat stiff, but sang very well. Mr Charles A. M'Kenzie and Mr P. Emslie as Harry Sherwood and Sheriff's Officer did very well indeed. Mr H. B. Harley made a capital Squire Bantam, and credit is due to Mr W. H. Baker for his conducting.

PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Will Parker; Secretary and Treasurer, Mr Alf Ross.—Dartigan is giving his "Looping the Loop" sensation. Vulcaris has a really clever trick piano entertainment. Coram again moves the audience to laughter by his ventriloquism. Dan Noble proves himself an artistic comedian, and a smart juggling entertainment is given by Angeline. The Hamiltons supply a capital comedy sketch, and entertaining items are contributed by Hill, Barry, and Lang, Agnes and Arthur Lynch, song illustrators, and Marie Yorke, serio.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Will Percival.—Mr A. W. B. Kingston and company are great favourites here, in Old Edinburgh, the initial production. Mr Kingston again showed brilliant histrionic talent in the character of Burke. Mr Harry Egan as Daft Jamie created roars of laughter, and Miss Dora Hamilton made a good Mary Paterson.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Dobell Lyle.—Aladdin runs merrily on here, and is still attracting a great amount of attention. Much new business has been introduced since the initial production, and everything goes with irresistible swing. Miss Gladys Silvester, the principal boy, is a great favourite. Miss Marion Edwards as the Princess sings "Bluebell" with much vim. Miss Amy Elcock is a very excellent dancer. Mr Stephens as the dame is well to the fore, and Mr Bermingham as the Dougall M'Tootie is exceedingly quaint. Ho-Kie and Po-Kie are first-rate acrobats. Mr Williams as Abanazar, and Mr Mike Johnson as the Emperor work hard for success.

DUMFRIES.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr W. E. Potts.—This week we were favoured for the first three nights by a visit of Mr Robert Ayrton and Adria Hill's company. On Monday evening The Shadow of the Cross was played. Mr Robert Ayrton gave a good portrayal of the King of Mercia; Edgar was in the capable hands of Mr B. Wilson, and Mr Edward Sheedy was very good as Egbert. Miss Flo Leighton and Miss Edith Tempest as Alfred and Rufu, the King's sons, were a decided success; Miss Adria Hill played the double part of the twin sisters, Werebode, a courtesan, and Edelgitha, Edgar's wife, in a most successful manner. Miss Harriet Loydall as Ethelindo, the Queen, was responsible for an interesting impersonation.

EASTBOURNE.

PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr George Hayes.—Mr Percy Standing and company are appearing here in His Excellency the Governor. In an easy and genial manner Mr Percy D. Standing keeps the house in good humour in the title-rôle. Mr Dallas Welford treats the part of John Baverstock in his own humorous way, and Mr C. W. Standing does capable work as Captain Carew. Mr Robert J. Danson is a capital Henry Carlton, and Mr Charles Brandon and Mr A. Fitzmaurice do well all that is necessary as Captain Rivers and Major Kildare. Miss Violet Barton-Astor is a bright and charming Ethel Carlton; Miss Miriam Leigh has all the gaiety necessary as Stella De Gex, and a highly satisfactory performance is contributed by Miss Isabel Grey as Mrs Wentworth Bolingroke.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr Samuel Lloyd.—Very satisfactory business is being done here with a good variety bill. Ben-Hur, wonderfully developed, gives an exhibition of muscle moving and weight lifting; Mr Gus Barra is an original and versatile comedian and musician; Mr H. Hoffman and company have a strong dramatic sketch in The Sorrows of Satan; Vandinoff is an artist who paints in oils with lightning-like rapidity; Mr Henri Bekker, assisted by Miss Maie, is a past-master in the art of palming and conjuring; Rita and Roma contribute a bright turn; Miss Nina Elmo pleases with her ballads; Mr Fred Walker is a good comic singer; and Hippodrome pictures complete the entertainment.

EDINBURGH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Messrs Howard and Wyndham, Limited; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter Hollister.—Jack and the Beanstalk, a special notice of which appears in another column, has made many friends since the date of production, and goes merrily and successfully every evening. There was a great house on Monday, a feature being the presence of many young children in the audience, and it certainly was a pleasure to witness their delighted enjoyment of the numerous good things in this pantomime, which was received from overture to finale with rapturous applause.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr H. E. Moss.—Mr Eugen Marder, the well-known Continental horsebreaker and rider, gave an interesting equestrian display at this house on Monday, assisted by a highly trained horse and a couple of clever dogs. Rider and steed were richly dressed and caparisoned in cloth-of-gold, and when the darkened stage was lit up with various-coloured lights some strikingly novel effects were obtained. The Sarnthaler Troupe of singers and dancers made a welcome appearance and charmed everybody with their finely harmonised ditties and characteristic dancing. Mr George Newburn is quite an adept at mimicking leading comedians, and after a successful series finished up with a very creditable imitation of the popular Mr Harry Lauder. Professor Harcourt gave a first-class exposition of the magician's art, and having achieved a tour de force with multitudinous ribbons, bouquets, and flags, this esteemed performer retired amid enthusiastic applause. Miss Margaret Ashton sang smartly, and the Kokins appeared to advantage in a sketch which included a remarkable display of juggling. Driscoll and Beattie appeared in Major M'Fee, M.P., and the vocal selections of the Sisters Jonghmanns were warmly received, "Blue Bell," in which all three ladies had special opportunities, fairly bringing down the house. Miss Lilian Warren's illustrated songs are as popular as ever with her Edinburgh admirers, Griff and Swan and Bambard being first and last turns respectively.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Eade Montefiore.—At this house Cinderella, which has had some rigorous revising and pulling together since the opening performance, is now running with gratifying smoothness and has been witnessed by nearly sixteen thousand persons during the first seven nights of its career. The members of the company have now got thoroughly settled into their parts, and their spirited efforts are on the whole well received. Miss Millie Engler makes an agreeable appearance as Prince Rupert, and Miss Fanny Wright, who plays Dandini with so much vivacity, is already very popular, and scores nightly in the coon song "Navaho." Miss May Marton as Cinderella gives one of the most charming performances of the evening, and, making the most of her opportunities, carries the audience with her from first to last. A special feature is the beautiful singing of Miss Vera Schlesinger as the Fairy Godmother, who also takes part in duets with Mr Traverner with great success. Little Zola revels in the fun associated with Buttons, and Mr A. G. Spry has already made vast strides in the rôle of Baron De Guile, which has great possibilities. The knockabout fun and gags of Conan and Doyle go well, and the solo singing of Mr George Traverner as the Demon King is quite a treat. Mention should be made of the picturesque dancing of the Six Lancashire Lassies and the Four American Idols, whose performances are applauded to the echo nightly. Mr E. T. De Banzie is giving great satisfaction as musical director, and R. S. Cowley-Polhill officiates ably as acting-manager.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Tom Ellis.—Mr Ellis, like his brother managers, is at all times imbued with the spirit of enterprise, and on Monday a version of the famous Du Maurier drama Trilby was staged here by Mr Roy Jackson and acted by his clever company. Mr Jackson's own appearance as Svengali was picturesque in the extreme, and as a character study it takes high rank. Billie, Taffy, and Sandy were excellent in the hands of Messrs Sandy, Lambton, and Howard; and Mr Victor Vernon was highly amusing as the Rev. T. Bagot. Miss Kittie Douglas gave a delightful rendering of Trilby, and, like the other principal characters, was cordially received.

COOKE'S ROYAL CIRCUS.—Proprietor, Mr John Henry Cooke.—The Christmas attraction here is playing to enormous business, and so large have been the audiences that extra matinée performances have been given. Aqua-Wreck is a fine combination of sensation and amusement, and as such is sure to hold its own for many weeks to come. The preliminary programme on Monday included several new appearances and gave much satisfaction. The veteran M. Ameson introduced the horse Cleveland, an adept in finding hidden articles; and by request Miss Ernestine Rosa Cooke exhibited her skill as an equestrienne. Craig, Rose, and Craig performed some daring gymnastic feats, and the comedy juggling of May and Myles was heartily received. Miss Marie Winsome, an excellent singer, pleased with her male impersonations; and Miss Winnie Scott was warmly applauded for her dancing. Talberto and Douglas appeared in a burlesque jockey act, and also performed the famous kettle trick.

FALKIRK.

GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr Horace W. Ebbutt.—Mr Charles Majilton and company in Round the Clock occupied the boards at this theatre for the first three nights of the week. Mr Charles Majilton fills the part of Gabriel Gadforth with all his accustomed skill, and Mr Herbert Ashmore as Old Gewgaw, Mr Fred Wilson as David Denby, and Mr Jim Bond as Bartle Burke all prove themselves capable comedians. Miss Maddie Majilton is successful as Mdlle. Salprunelle, and Miss Nellie Clare does well as Mrs Gadforth.

GAINSBOROUGH.

KING'S.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr Greaves.—Last week we had Mr Frank Macnaghten's company, in The King's Pardon, for three nights. Mr Chas. Whitlock as Clifford Yorke, Mr Charles Stirling as Noel Blake, and Mr Chas. Leicester as Spence Broughton, the highwayman, gave good renderings of their respective parts. Mr Harry Belford as Major Dobbs and Miss Pollie Denville as Phyllis were amusing, and the rest of the characters were in capable hands. This week we have Buckstone and Cox's company, in The Seal of Silence.

GLASGOW.

METROPOLE, LIMITED.—Managing Director, Mr Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr John Dunbar.—Mr Fred Karno's company is paying a return visit here in that amusing farce His Majesty's Guests, and the laughter is continuous throughout every performance. Mr Dick Kitchen as the eccentric Sergeant Lightning is the prime instigator of the fun, and his business is intensely amusing. Mr Charles F. Howard acts the part of Lord Essem with much dramatic effect, and his singing is excellent. Miss Jessamine Newcombe as Lady Maude is well suited, her handsome presence enabling her to assume the aristocratic manner to perfection. She made a hit in the song "Because I'm in society," and in the clever "Doctors" duo with Mr Dick Kitchin. Mr Wellesley Smith made a dignified Mr Miffin, and ably stage-managed the production. A smart part, but admirably played, was the German doorkeeper of Mr Charles Cardon. Mr Jack Fortescue as Mr Minks, Miss Florence Moore as Miss Manloy, and Miss Mabel Ross as Dolly all ably assisted in the general success. Some clever knockabout fun was contributed by Mr James Ross as Selins, Mr L. Sterling as Harry, and Mr H. Taylor as Banker. The chorus of policemen and burglars sang and danced well, as also did an attractive chorus of young ladies.

LYCEUM.—Proprietor, Mr Rich Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr J. H. Oakden.—Mr Herbert Fuller's company is appearing here this week in A Triple Vengeance. The part of the heroine, Rita Lingham, is touchingly represented by Miss Agnes Collier, while the contrasting character, Clarissa Betinger, is suitably played by Miss Gertrude Mitchell. Mr Deane King gives a manly impersonation of Harry Gilbert, and as the miser Grindstone, Mr Francis Everard presents a study of considerable merit, the acting of Mr H. C. Gibbon in the part of Darkley being also worthy of commendation. The comic lovers, Charlie and Teresa, are portrayed by Mr William Gardener and Miss Edith Leslie, who provide some amusing comedy scenes, enhanced by several songs and dances. Mr Harry Royal gives character to the part of Bill Smith; the Daddy Lingham of Mr T. P. Henderson is likewise good. A smart detective study falls to the credit of Mr Louis Du Cane, and as the boy Reggie, Little Lilly Fuller acts with intelligence.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss's, Limited; Acting-Manager, Mr Arthur Aldin.—The most imposing turn this week is Seeth's lions, which Mr George Thielbur puts through their facings in an astonishing manner; Joko and Koko give a pleasing circus act in a miniature ring; Tom Edwards's ventriloquial act is amusing and clever; Diamond and Beatrice give expressive renderings of instrumental music; Mabel Hind is a lively singer and dancer; the Vasilescu Troupe give wonderful exhibitions of agility on the horizontal bars; Vosper, facial mimic, presents life-like imitations of statesmen and other public men; Charles Cardow, comedian; Alexander, trick cyclist; and Bros. Damm, acrobats, complete an interesting programme.

TIVOLI AND QUEEN'S, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr S. King Alexander; Acting-Managers, Messrs T. J. Colquhoun and Fred R. Ewing.—The special attraction here this week is George Formby, a favourite comedian, who has had a most flattering reception. Jack Horsley, ball puncher, is clever in his line of business, while the singing and dancing of Patty Yole, comedienne, are all that could be desired. Musical Silvo, contributes selections of all the popular songs on his wonderful "tumblers," and the Indian sports and pastimes of Ara, Zebra, and Vora are much appreciated. The other members of the company fully maintain their reputations, and include Gus Hindell, comedian; Mdlle. Yetta, wire walker; Lily Turner, vocalist; the Comos, musical lunatics; Vernando, ventriloquist; Three Sisters Adrienne, burlesque artistes; George Bandon, the white coon; the Fitzroys, society gymnasts; Bendon's Bioscope, in new pictures; and the Brothers Lloyd, in their wire act.

PALACE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs Rich Waldon and Thos. Barrasford; Assistant-Manager, Mr Harry M'Kelvie.—A particularly bright programme is provided here this week. Barney Armstrong, comedian, makes a great hit, his reappearance on the boards being fully appreciated. The Seddons, comedy jugglers, are very amusing. and Keir and Allen, comedians, appear in an acceptable turn. The Elysian Troupe, a company of coloured artists, contribute an agreeable musical entertainment, and Browning and Wally excel in their acrobatic and strong act. A remarkable illusion trick, entitled "Kweery," is given with great success and the Cattaneos, eccentric acrobats, put in some smart work. A series of amusing animated pictures are also shown. The programme is brought to a close by the Six Brothers Luck's pantomime company, with their little melodramatic pantomime The Hermit.

BRITANNIA.—Lessee, Mr Jas. Anderson; Manager, Mr Geo. Saphrini; Assistant Manager, Mr Harry Hemphrey.—Mr Joe Wesley's Scottish Minstrels open the programme here with a very entertaining "ring turn," in which songs predominate, concluding with the usual chorus of plantation melodies. There are several clever performers, and the general verdict is favourable. Red, White, and Blue is the title of the comedy sketch in which Mr Maurice Love's company appear to advantage, while more fun is contributed by Robbins and Crewso, in The Professor and the Deaf Boy. A statue dance by the Big Four is well received, as dancing is always popular at the "Brit." The popular Joe Edmonds in banjo selections is, as usual, heartily applauded, and Musical Miller in a mélange of instrumental selections on various instruments, notably on the Irish harp, pleases many patrons. The outstanding turn is certainly A. J. Gambles, in Scotch comic songs, four or five in number. He is a clever grotesque dancer and patters capitally, and deserves all his success. The Summerstons (Will and Maggie) complete a varied programme.

HARMONIC CONCERTS.—Musical Secretary, Mr Wm. Biggam.—A well-diversified programme is given here, including Tom W. Royal, champion clog dancer; "Count" Whiteford, eccentric Scotch comedian; Eck. Ray's Schoolboys, in their amusing turn; Fred Smart, a good descriptive vocalist; Hubner's Animatograph, with a lot of clever films; Brindall and Cooper, smart comedians and dancers; Letty Linbourne and A. Alexander, vocalists; and the D. Macdonald troupe of dancers.

GOOLE.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr John E. Tomlinson.—A capital variety company is appearing here this week. The Canadian Trio, in the musical absurdity Unripe Fruit, give a clever and highly amusing performance. Mr Dan Rylton, comedian; Mr Fred Gilbert, descriptive vocalist; the Ashlins, duettists and dancers; Alice Adeson, burlesque artiste; Clown Pepino; Miss Marie Lorne, serio; Messrs Layton and Lister, burlesque boxers, all contribute successfully to the programme. A dramatic sketch entitled Cruel Russia, is also included in the programme.

GATESHEAD.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Newcastle and Gateshead Theatres, Limited; General Manager, Mr Sidney Bacon; Resident-Manager, Mr J. Straughan.—The most interesting item in a strong variety bill here is Mdlle. Luba De Sarema, with sports of the Far East, in which a number of animals provide an exceptionally interesting turn. The Four Jumels are responsible for an entertaining musical act. Percy Vere and Edith Royal also submit a good turn of singing and dancing. J. P. Carroll, military tambourinist, is worthy of special mention, as also is Cyril Demane, with his enchanted kettle. Other good turns are provided by Varley and Sinclair, operatic duettists and soloists; Billy Ross and company, in their act, The Hot Member; and Alec Aubrey, gymnast.

GLOUCESTER.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Owners, Messrs C. W. and J. R. Poole; Manager, Mr W. H. Weller.—Miss Grace Hawthorne and company this week are presenting Camille and Sapho. The former was given on Monday, Miss Grace Hawthorne sustaining the part of Camille in an accomplished manner. Armand Duval was admirably played by Mr Cecil Wynne, and Mons. Duval was capitally portrayed by Mr Arthur T. Lennard. Count De Varville had a clever exponent in Mr Harry Hillier; Mr Fred Carroll was adequate as Gaston Rieux; and Mr George Mortimer was good as Gustave. Miss Florence Tench was a charming Nichette, and as Nanine Miss Marion Jay was highly meritorious. Madame Prudence was successfully played by Miss Adelaide Ross, as was Olympe by Miss Rachael Donne.

GREENOCK.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, the Executors of the late Mr Alex. Wright; Managers, Messrs A. B. Wright and J. J. Wright.—Mr E. Hoggan-Armadale's company is here this week with The Sleigh Bells, The Vicar of Wakefield, and Trilby. On Monday evening a performance of The Sleigh Bells was given. Mr Hoggan-Armadale gave a striking and vivid portrayal of the difficult part of Mathias; Mr F. Booth Conway distinguished himself as Mons. Bussey; Mr Fred Emery did well; Mr W. F. Clitherow was a satisfactory Father Hermann; Mr Henry Osman was good as Fritz; and the same may be said of Mr James Fox as Kaspar. The Mesmerist found a capable representative in Mr Chas. Langton; Mr Hartley embodied Dr. Franz with success; the part of the Judge was well played by Mr William Adam; and Mr A. L. Baron made an excellent Jew. Miss Marie Florence made the most of her opportunities as Madame Mathias; Miss Violet Wilson gave a sympathetic rendering of Annette; and Miss C. Evelyn in the part of Lucille was successful.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr H. L. Skivington.—The Royal Zerbinis head the bill here, and are seen in an acceptable musical act entitled In Fairyland. Fred Smart is an agreeable character vocalist; Fred Lloyd and company are seen in a laughable act, The Blind Spinster; the Itrams give an interesting perch and pot-pourri act; the Three Martinettes are amusing comedians; and George and Edwards, patter comedians, are applauded. Hemlot and Sauvion, burlesque conjurors, give an amusing turn, and the Sisters Terry, duettists and mimics, are applauded.

GRIMSBY.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr J. H. Curry; Assistant Manager, Mr Sidney Tolfree.—The popular drama Why Men Love Women has paid its first visit to Grimsby this week. Miss Annie Saker has created a very favourable impression with her impersonation of Violet Livingstone, and, together with Mr Alfred Paumier, who appears as Gerald Fielding, is responsible for the most interesting scenes in the play. Mr S. Herbert Humber makes the most of the character of Serge Stanloff, a scheming Russian. Miss Beatrice Sinclair makes an excellent Muriel Zoluski. The parts of Tommy Fitzherbert and the Maharajah of Bolore are satisfactorily played by Mr W. S. Hardy and Mr Edwin Lever respectively. Amusing comedy scenes are provided by Mr Harwood Roberts and Miss Marie Glynne as Orlando and Matilda Figgins.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr T. Allan Edwardes; General Manager, Mr H. F. Millar; Assistant-Manager, Mr H. H. Watson.—The amusing equestrian burlesque Rejected Remounts, presented by Mr Claude Ginnett, jun., has caused roars of laughter. The antics of the horses introduced proved highly mirth-provoking. A new version of the popular Negro sketch Black Justice has also been included in the programme, in which De Voy, Hurst, and Fredericks have caused much amusement. Fred Curran, a favourite comedian in Grimsby, has pleased the audience with a number of new and entertaining songs. May Moody has displayed considerable skill as a piccolo soloist; smart juggling has been performed by Francisco; Rozel has accomplished some daring aerial gymnastic feats; and other turns have been given by Mark Anthony, mimic and comedian, and Professor Bennett, ventriloquist.

NEW PALACE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr Frank Macnaghten; General Manager, Mr Steuart Cecil.—The well-known coster impersonator, Alec Hurley, has appeared here this week with his piccaninnies in a most entertaining musical sketch. The large audiences at the Palace have been greatly delighted with the performance, the speciality The Lambeth Walk being particularly appreciated. An amusing comedy sketch, Over the Garden Wall, has been produced by the Four Burnells, whilst the Glenroy Troupe have secured unstinted approval for their representations of various styles of dancing. Selbo has performed clever juggling feats with a great variety of novel articles. The Brothers Durant have given a laughable airship burlesque. Pretty pictures have been composed by Wilma with the aid of sand and smoke, whilst an interesting speciality, "From Pavement to Stage," has been contributed by Signor and Madame Prosper Benn. A musical and dancing turn by Edwards and Espinosa completed the programme.

HALIFAX.

GRAND THEATRE.—General Manager, Mr Otto C. Culling; Acting-Manager, Mr Norman Robinson.—A prettily stage and well-costumed sketch is played here by Mr Charles Cunningham's company, and another of the pantomimic and acrobatic order, entitled Nicodemus, is very funny. The slack wire performance of James Jee is very clever; Flo Atkins pleases with her musical performance; Les Rubens, duettists, sing excellently; and Harry Sheldon, vocalist, and Arthur Osmond, comedian, are well appreciated.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr Frank Macnaghten.—An exciting turn here is called "Whirling the Wheel." It is performed by Tom Grave, a daring cyclist. Jimmy Devoy's pony is clever; the Great Northern Troupe of dancers are up to their work; Wilfrid, contortionist, ranks high in his line; the Walonells do a comedy bar act which is amusing; Graham and Harrington in a little episode are distinctly smart; and the Ballingers provide good entertainment.

HARTLEPOOL.

EMPRESS.—Proprietors, Councillor Everton and J. W. Craggs; Manager, Mr Harry Burns.—The Brothers Lang have had a good reception for their knockabout comedy business; the jokes of A. P. Boswell, "the black-face performer," are irresistibly droll and his balancing feats clever; Mike Gray, assisted by a remarkably intelligent terrier, are responsible for some amusing comedy juggling; the Trio Alaskarro troupe of Risley acrobats are neat and expert at their business; A. Aldridge displays talent in the tenor vocalist line; and other turns in the programme which prove entertaining are Flo Cecil, comedienne; Thomas Johnstone, vocalist and mimic; the Redferns, skilful banjoists; and some amusing films.

HARROGATE.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr Smith.—A good all-round variety entertainment has been provided here this week, including Los Granadas, gymnastic eccentrics; and Mdlle. Roseltha, international and coon skipping-rope dancer; and another clever turn was Stylo, the hoop-manipulator. Edward Ind is a successful comedian, and great merriment is caused by Matt Wilkinson and company in their clever sketch, The Registry Office. Henriette, Violet, Beatrice, Harry Morris, Lee and Arden, and Jerry and Joey, and Signor and Madame Loule make up a capital programme.

HASTINGS.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Geo. H. Gaze.—Mr Leigh Lovel and company appeared here on Monday in the farcical romance The Duke of Killicrankie. Mr Herbert J. Bentley, who was cast for the title-rôle, has a good stage presence, and acted the part well; Lady Henrietta was pleasingly impersonated by Miss Octavia Kenmore; the strong-minded Mrs Mulholland had a good exponent in Miss Naomi Neilson; the fortune-hunting Mr Pitt-Welby was whimsically played by Mr Leigh Lovel; able assistance was rendered by Miss M'Aimee Murray as the Countess of Pangbourne and Miss Helen Tytler and Mr H. Douglas Cottell as the caretakers at Crag o' North. The piece was excellently staged under the management of Mr F. Danvers-Yates.

HASTINGS PIER PAVILION.—Pier Master, Mr R. Turner; Entertainment Manager, Mr J. D. Hunter.—A variety entertainment occupies the boards here this week, previous to Mr J. D. Hunter's pantomime Aladdin. A series of illusions and modern magic is exemplified by a clever lady conjuror, Madame Emmeline Nicolo. Mr Barry Sheil, a young elocutionist, gives us some "Voices from the past." Mr Nelson Hardy makes his reappearance here with his skilful impersonations (by means of ventriloquial figures) of popular music hall artistes, and the programme concludes with some novelties in animated photography.

ST. LEONARDS KURSAAL.—Pier Master, Mr Elvey Thomas; Entertainment Manager, Mr Drew Mackintosh.—Under the conductorship of Mr Val Marriott the Winter Orchestra continues to attract good audiences. Various classical pieces and selections are performed in a masterly manner, and the instrumentalists receive great applause. A pleasing addition to the concerts is the contralto singing of Miss Molly Deane, who clearly demonstrates the possession of a remarkably good voice, and her delightful rendering of either French or English songs is equally appreciated.

HASTINGS HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General Manager, Mr Harold Penny.—The programme this week is new and original. Miss Sadie Norman is an attractive comedienne and dancer. A good turn is furnished by Mr Peter Kelly, eccentric comedian. A laughable comedy sketch is introduced by Rano and Mason. The memory exhibited by Datas is marvellous; he is justly named a living encyclopædia. An interesting turn is Miss Bella Bashall, comedienne and dancer. Hadj Abdullah's troupe of Arabs are smart tumblers and acrobats. Mr Gus Dallon, comedian, is well applauded. Lennie and Hast are highly amusing in their fantasy The Heirloom. Some excellent up-to-date pictures are shown on the new Bioscope.

HUDDERSFIELD.

HULL.

GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr John Hart; Resident-Manager, Mr Wynn Miller.—Captain Marshall's charming play, The Duke of Killicrankie, pays its first visit to Hull this week. The Mrs Mulholland of Miss Aida Jenoure reveals many delightful touches. Nothing could be happier than Miss Doris Templeton's Lady Henrietta Addison, which is marked by many pleasant points. Mr Langhorne Burton is an admirable Duke, hitting off the wealthy and impetuous young nobleman very successfully. The Henry Pitt-Welby, M.P., finds a praiseworthy representative in Mr Arthur Grenville. Jerome's Barbara is the curtain-raiser.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Sole Owner, Mr W. Morton; Local Manager, Mr Geo. Morton.—A romantic play, with a strong and striking military interest, The King's Pardon, is the attraction this week; and, despite the fact that the holidays are so near at hand, good business has been done. Mr Chas. A. Leicester makes a most dashing highwayman.

PALACE THEATRE.—Moss' Empires, Limited; Resident-Manager, Mr A. Graham.—A capital crowd are filling the houses this week. Possibly the premier attraction is Mlle. Diane De Fontenoy.

EMPIRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Jno. Sylvester Sage.—The Imperial Sketch company is appearing in The Banker's Crime. Harry Wright unfortunately was unable to appear on Monday through an accident, and Charles Milner successfully deputised for him. Togo is a smart juggler and conjuror, and other turns include Nelly Gannon, Peggy Fayme, and the Eltenoe.

ILKESTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr L. F. A. Rogers; Musical Director, Mr C. Keith Smith.—Mr Edward Neville and his company are this week presenting The Anarchist Terror and The Sorrows of Satan here. Miss Violet Hammersley plays with force and feeling as Columbia Goldstraw, and Mr C. T. E. O'Connor is effective as Lieut. Armstrong. Mr J. Nelson Turner is excellent as Silas Washington, and Mr Gus Bowerman as Ishmael is deserving of high praise. Miss Annie Brunette shows histrionic ability as Marita. Mr Will White as Mickey Doolan, and Miss Lole Esmond as Kitty Malone supply the requisite comic relief, and Mr Edward Neville, in a five-fold rôle, plays with great versatility.

QUEEN'S PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr Joe Richards.—The Starellas, musical eccentrics, head the bill, and are well supported by Frank Archer, quick-change artist; Jennie Hall, serio; Triko, comic juggler; and Joe Wright, basso and violinist.

IPSWICH.

HIPPODROME.—An attractive programme has been provided for the current week at the Woodbridge-road place of entertainment, and included Augustine and Hartley, acrobatic barrel-jumpers, who displayed much agility; Muir and Bartlett, with an amusing sketch called A Clerical Complication; the Sisters Gilbert, clever dancers; Williams and Brown, cross-talk comedians; Tom Carney, Irish comedian; and Beattie Lyndon, G. W. Foster, and Rose Waller, variety artistes.

JARROW.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Hugh Robertson.—Mr J. A. Campbell's company is here with a first-class drama entitled The Sin of Her Childhood. Mr A. Milroy is an admirable Stephen Haysel, and Miss Jennie Hicks is excellent as Maria Haysel. Mr H. Hargreaves scores as the Rev. Alan Grey; Mr J. A. Campbell is quite at home in the character of Captain John Thornton; Mr Fred Elvin gives a life-like rendering of Barney O'Reilly; and Miss Nellie Freeland is good as Eliza Muggins. Miss Mary Fulton as Mary Haysel deserves praise. Eric Dugdale is capably embodied by Little Edith.

KIDDERMINSTER.

TIVOLI.—Proprietors, Messrs Lester Reekie and Howard Stephens.—Kardoc, the handcuff king, is here astounding his audience with his clever tricks. Flo Everette's dogs amuse greatly. Lieut. Harper, ventriloquist; Frank Aylmer, Daisy Turner, and the Two Friscoes also appear, and all do exceedingly well.

KILMARNOCK.

KING'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr A. Hales.—Mr Harding Thomas and a powerful company are presenting East Lynne here this week. Miss Elaine Verner scores a great success as Lady Isabel; Mr Harding Thomas as Francis Levison is excellent; while Mr Erskine Ellis as Archibald Carlyle and Mr Frank Cathcart as Justice Hare both do good work. Little Miss Barker deserves special praise for her lifelike portrayal of the part of Willie Carlyle.

LEEDS.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs Dottridge and Longden; General Manager, Mr C. H. Longden; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Bush.—We are having a visit here of Mr Fred Karno's company with the diverting musical farce, Saturday to Monday. Mr Fred Kitchen is the leading figure, and this popular comedian allows no dull moment from start to finish. Miss Aggie Morris is decidedly clever as the bride; Mr Frank Haylett's Tom Freeman is noticeable for good vocal work; Miss Ada Maskell depicts with success the vagaries of Aunt Skinner; and Miss Gladys White is thoroughly successful in the rôle of Violet Blake. The eccentricities of Jagg's offspring, as enacted by Mr Dick Harcourt and Mr Lepo are most amusing. The Camille Dancing Girls are a notable feature of the cast.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Moss Empires, Limited; Resident-Manager, Mr T. Gerald Morton.—An interesting feature of this week's programme is the exhibition of Hagedorn's Grotto, a transformation scene of wondrous beauty. A fine musical turn by the Jackson Family is much appreciated; Lily Burnand, the clever comedienne, is doing exceedingly well; and another artiste of considerable ability, Arthur Lennard, enjoys great success. Brown and Robinson are vocalists of more than average ability; the Cavallinis score in a mirth-provoking burlesque entertainment; Hugh Stanton's prophetic absurdity "Twenty Years from Now" is capitally presented; a gymnastic turn by the Three Mascotte Sisters elicits considerable applause; and Edie Veno and Lizzie Fletcher, comediennes, are thoroughly successful.

TIVOLI.—Proprietor, Mr Thomas Barrasford; General Managers, Messrs Charles Weldon and Edgar O. Waller.—A novel entertainment is supplied here by Minni Letta's sporting girl, whose racing feats on a moving track are attracting considerable attention. Chas. Steward and company do well in a farcical sketch, The Water Cure; Keen and Waller provide an expert eccentric acrobatic turn; Kitty Glover and company are seen to advantage in a clever comedy farce; Harry Meier again finds favour with well rendered vocal items; Miss Nellie Ganthony, an accomplished actress, vastly pleases her audience in a versatile turn; and Agnes Hanson, comedienne and dancer; Emma and Victor, vocalists; and J. W. Bray, comedian, are successful.

CITY VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr F. W. Wood; General Manager, Mr J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr S. Jones.—The chief turn here is Ando's Happy Little Japs, an expert troupe of acrobats and jugglers. Comedy artistes include such popular entertainers as Spry and Monti, Goggin and Davis, and Frank and Violet Payte. The Lannons, speciality dancers, present an expert turn; Walter Curtis, comedian—an old Leeds favourite—is awarded a big reception; E. W. Selman is also a comedian of merit; and the acrobatic feats of Almond arouse great interest.

LEICESTER.

ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor, Lieutenant-Colonel J. A. Winstanley; Acting-Manager, Mr C. D. Leigh.—Mr Ian Maclaren and company are here this week with the spectacular historical drama A Fatal Crown, which should prove particularly interesting to local playgoers on account of Lady Jane Grey's connection with Bradgate-park, on the confines of Leicester, from which place she departed to assume her short career as Queen. Mr Ian Maclaren is responsible for a clever embodiment of Lord Guilford Dudley, and Miss Augusta Tullock is to be highly complimented on her excellent interpretation of the rôle of the ill-fated Lady Jane Grey. Mr J. M. Rome as the Earl of Northumberland and Mr Ernest Lodge as Herne the Wizard are both good. Mr Henry Howard is capital as Simon Reynard. Mr Johnny Fisher as Issod Clay and Mr M. Miller Wilson as Xit do well. Miss Maud Naderson is suitably placed as Mary Tudor, and Miss Dorothy Mackenzie as Barbara and Miss Kythe Mackenzie as Dorcas Dossitt are also to be singled out for portrayals of merit.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Lieutenant-Colonel J. A. Winstanley; General Manager, Mr John H. Clarke.—Messrs Preston and Doherty's company, under the direction of Sidney C. Cranston and Sidney Dench, holds the boards here this week, and is presenting the realistic drama The Rich and Poor of London. Miss Dora Dench as May Braithwaite plays with conspicuous success; Miss Marie Ramez is good as the adventuress, Ruby Redgrave; Miss Lillie Woods is successful as Auntie Scrimp; and Miss Mollie Hackett as Polly Philpot is capital. Mr Andrew Money gives a good account of himself as Mark Stanley, and the part of Dr. Leonard Morton is in the safe hands of Mr Robert Hall. Mr G. W. Ellis does well as Dan'l Drake. Both Mr Sidney C. Cranston as Gussey Lamb and Mr Sidney Dench as Spider Jack are most successful, and sing several songs to the delight of the audience. Master Bert Dench impersonates a waif with conspicuous merit.

PALACE THEATRE, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Leonard Vidal.—At the head of an excellent programme here this week are Joe Elvin and his clever combination, who are presenting with the greatest success for the first time in Leicester the sporting sketch Over the Sticks, which has the merit of being admirably staged and dressed. As Plodder Pilks Joe Elvin has a part which fits him like the proverbial glove, and he keeps the audience in a continual roar of laughter. Others who also render excellent service are Miss Florence Harcourt as Jessie, Mr Harry Lowe as Arthur Pilks, Miss Amy Ellis as Rebecca, and Mr Henry Gregory as Old Tom Ricketts. A number of racehorses are introduced, and the auxiliaries total one hundred. Miss Winona Winter, who is assisted by the singing comedian Mr William H. Banks, are presenting with success their delightful comedy playlet When I Help Ma Do the Washing. The Trapnell Family give a remarkably clever acrobatic display; Les Burnellys are smart in their original gymnastic novelty act; Werner and Reider, in scenes from the Tyrolean mountains, give a popular turn; Harry Lawson, eccentric comedian, is good. Spot, the enchanting coon, in "The Cake Walk Craze;" Post Mason, the American baritone, in a song scena; and Jennie Belmore, burlesque actress, also give turns that meet with due appreciation.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter Lapworth.—The following artistes constitute the entertaining programme here this week:—Henry Carlton, the popular comedian, as Billy Wilks, supported by his comedy team, in a new military absurdity, Obliging a Lady; the Franko Brothers, midget conjurors; Edith Sylvesto, in her unique speciality act; the Two Jagos, comedy artists, vocalists, and dancers; Steve Roberts, descriptive vocalist; Mart Marvin, the musical curio; Kit Keen, coon artist; and Nellie Elder, comedienne.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—In consequence of the success attending the visit of Mr Walter Jeffs's "New Century Pictures" last week they remained here till Thursday. Miss Kathleen M'Cabe's songs have been greatly appreciated.

LEIGH.

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr J. Dewhurst; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Dewhurst.—Mr Penfold Field's company is appearing here this week with the drama, When Rogues Fall Out. Mr Raymond Thomas is a powerful Stephen Ralston; Mr Gordon M'Leod is capital as Jack Lorrimore; Mr Dalton J. Bosher scores as Bill Jenkins; Mr Harry Tresham is well suited as Sir Henry Lorrimore; Hetty Stanton is ably represented by Miss Rosa Lehmann; Miss Shirley Dalton is natural and sympathetic as Madge Lorrimore; Miss Muriel Deane wins much approval as Dick; Mr Percy Boucher as Billy Faggles is responsible for some genuine comedy; and is greatly assisted by Miss Florrie Hall as Polly Peach.

LINCOLN.

ROYAL.—Sole Manager, Mr Frank King.—Greed of Gold is paying a happy return visit, Mr T. Morton Powell's company being again responsible. Mr Carthage Caldcleugh is a powerful Harry Hood, making up and acting well as the pseudo-mendicant; Mr Charles Coleman is a manly Arthur Errol; Mr Walter Cameron an excellent character actor as Cully Snig; and Mr Tom G. Warry is well suited as Mr Brightson. A rich Irish comedy delineation comes from Mr Harry Creemer, and Mr B. Fox makes a great impression in the part of the dumb man. Miss Daisy Halling is very artistic as Dora; Miss Grace St. John does well as Mrs Maxwell; while Miss Winnie Donovan is a lively Patty, and Miss Florrie Woods is charming as little Cecil.

PALACE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr Sydney Arthur; Assistant-Manager, Mr Brandon Blake.—Chung Ling Soo, the marvellous Chinese magician, is attracting large audiences, and presents a lengthy and extraordinary entertainment of legerdemain, including several new and sensational tricks, one necessitating the introduction of a huge cannon—an imposing property—which he fires deliberately into the auditorium, with startling results. Carne Curre, with banjo, dog, and story; the Athlones, magnificent athletes; Florence Gwynne, in a musical scene; Will Bacchus, actor-vocalist; and Charles Pond, raconteur, also contribute with success.

LIVERPOOL.

LYRIC THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Henry C. Arnold; Directors of Entertainments, Messrs T. Barrasford and F. Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr Fred Coles.—Vesta Victoria, very popular in Liverpool, heads the bill here this week, her amusing and artistic rendering of her songs being loudly applauded. "Hiawatha," by the Two Bees, is well received, the scene being very effective; Steel and Laing are laughable and clever acrobats; J. H. Scotland renders his songs in a finished and artistic manner; M'Cann's performing dogs are watched with interest; T. W. Barrett causes roars of laughter with his songs and patter; Satsuma, the Japanese wonder worker, mystifies everyone; and Jenny Erris is good.

STAR THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr H. Fineberg; Acting-Manager, Mr M. Simmons.—A Woman's Redemption; or, The Love That Lasts, has been the attraction here this week. Mr James Hare's company includes several artistes of ability, and the scenic effects are good. Mr J. Hare was a very capable villain, acting with reserve and marked effect; Miss Irene Clifford as the duped gipsy woman showed great strength; an earnest parson was well portrayed by Mr Herbert M. King; Miss Agatha Halford charmingly represented the farmer's daughter; Mr R. Duncan Bell submitted a fine type of an honest gipsy; Mr Tom Arkinstall as a retired actor was humorous; and Mr Bert Atherton and Miss J. Hallworth created great laughter.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs Carson and Granville; Manager, Mr Fred Granville; Business Manager, Mr F. L. Arthur.—The second and concluding week of the pantomime, Cinderella, has drawn good audiences to this popular theatre.

EMPIRE THEATRE, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr H. E. Moss; Acting-Manager, Mr T. A. Cook.—The programme here this week is diversified and full of good things. Vasco, the mad musician, exhibits wonderful powers with musical instruments, and has a hearty reception; the Gothams present a laughable musical absurdity, Miss Green; and the comedy, For Reform, given by Hugh Stanton and company, is also humorous. Mdlle. Emmy has a pack of clever dogs; and a graceful aerial act is gone through by Alexandra and Bertie. Burg, Haud, and Wise have a smart acrobatic act, "Ye Brown Cow;" the Aurora Troupe of acrobatic cyclists give a capital exhibition of skill; and others in the company are Leona Dare, trapeze artist; Lieut. Travis, ventriloquist; and Johnny Dwyer, comedian.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr Thomas Barrasford.—Harry Ford, a comedian of ability, is here this week, and has been accorded a good reception. Staig's troupe of cyclists provide a clever show on the aerial circle; the Five Parroscoppis are wonderful jugglers; Monks and Wood give a neat musical duologue; an amusing trifle is A Matrimonial Agency, by Hayman and Franklin, American speciality artists; A-Ba-Be poses prettily to represent picture-postcards; and others engaged are Stanley and Vandyke, comedians; Fielding and Hull, vocalists; and Will M'Ivor, tenor.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr F. O'Toole.—Heading the bill here this week is Mr Charles Carte with his good all-round company in A Noble Brother. The one-man band, Bandon!, does a musical turn; Mint and Mart are humorous sketch artists and paper manipulators; the Bradleys provide a smart comic trick cycling act; and Elgar and Gaskell evoke laughter by their musical sketch, The Bobby's Temptation.

NEW PARTHENON.—Proprietor, Mr Edwin W. Smith.—Ernesto, a clever juggler and musical equilibrist, is at the head of the programme, and meets with a cordial reception. Weston and May, a couple of capable comedy artistes, present Married Life; the popular Billy Richardson, of minstrel fame, is still to the fore; Bob Stephenson shows himself to advantage as a comedian and eccentric dancer; the Hannaway Bros. are expert cross-talkers and dancers; and dainty Mollie Doon is a burlesque actress and vocalist of ability.

PADDINGTON PALACE, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr J. Kernan.—Prince Henrick, described as the smallest man in the world, aged nineteen years; height, 34in.; weight, 25lb., is here this week, and is inspected with interest. The Three Sisters Wartana are clever jugglers; the Black Apollo shows himself to be a smart performer on ten different musical instruments; and the remainder of the programme includes Walter Jerome, actor-vocalist; Clare and King, duettists and comedians; Reg. Templeton, character comedian; Chas. Clear, mimic; Lieut. Le-Hurst, ventriloquist; Flo Viller, burlesque actress and vocalist; and Stella May, comedienne and coon artist. On Friday the staff and band took a benefit.

WESTMINSTER.—Proprietor, Mr M. Montgomery.—An interesting programme is being submitted here this week. Mr Charles R. Whittle, versatile comedian, has been given a hearty reception on his welcome return visit; the Violas provide a mystifying exhibition of mental telegraphy; Professor Cardo does some clever sleight-of hand tricks; clever juggling is contributed by Essman; J. H. Fernley is a pantomimist of ability; Hughes and Elliott are agile buck and sand dancers; as a mimic and trick instrumentalist Will Peplow is acceptable; and Millie Wallis sings several pleasant songs.

PARK PALACE.—Director, Mr James Kiernan.—Mr. H. C. Le Fre and a company of clever artistes present the scena A Sham Hero here. Ranji Singa shows himself to be an illusionist with smart resources; Evelyn Taylor is a male impersonator of ability; O'Connor and Traynor are excellent comedians, dancers, and humorous burlesque boxers; Joseph P. Kennedy and company present a laughable item, The Jealous Wife; the Rameses provide several pretty tableaux vivantes; Carlo Borrello is a clever juggler; and Juliet Capron, a singer of sweet songs.

LLANELLY.

ROYALTY THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr John Tully.—Mr John A. Morton's clever company in The Rajah of Ranjapore is here this week. The part of Primrose is this time taken by Miss Nell Ascot, a very clever actress and vocalist. Mr Chas. E. Linney is still the Ernest Travers of the piece, and he does remarkably well. As Horatio Chicks Mr Alvin Savage is very good, and so is Mr Harry Cornwall as Mr Stubbs. Miss Minnie Blackmore looks and acts well as Edith, and Mr Bert Harrow as Thistles is very funny. Miss Marion Walker is good as Eliza, and Mr Gus Hall as Ted Perkins works well. The ladies and the Rajah Troupe of dancers are all very charming and clever.

LONDONDERRY.

OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr W. Payne Seddon.—Mr Eugene C. Stafford's company has played The Private Secretary here this week. As Rev. Robert Spalding Mr Geoffrey Gulse embodied the part very cleverly. Mr Cattermole had a smart impersonator in Mr W. Hargraves. Henry Marsland and Douglas Cattermole were capably impersonated by Mr Vivian Gilbert and Mr Austen Leigh and Mr Wilfrid Compton represented Sydney Gibson capitally. As Miss Ashford Mrs Alfred Davis was very good, and the parts of Eva Webster and Edith Marsland could scarcely have been better filled than they were by Miss Mary Deverell and Miss Dora Grey.

MANCHESTER.

ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—A very good performance of the military drama The Ladder of Life, by the late Charles Rogers, was given here on Monday by a company under the direction of Miss Renee Glendower. Miss Glendower is herself a powerful actress, well placed in the rôle of Mother Flint, a baby farmer, and she is supported by a cast uniformly strong, the most conspicuously successful being Mr F. Morton Wright, Mr C. H. Matthews, Mr Tyrone Power, Mr Roy F. Gascoigne, Mr Roy Milton, Miss Hilda Young, Miss Flora Leslie, Miss Stephanie Baring, and Little Winnie De Lacey. Among the sensations of the piece the Feros, a trio of expert acrobats, are employed to form a human ladder. Good scenery and dresses add to the total effect.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—A reversion to drama distinguishes this week's programme here. The piece presented is Fred Moule's The Life that Kills, and Messrs Moule and Nicholls' company are thoroughly equal to the task imposed on them. Mr Fred Moule's depiction of Kendal Croat, the bookmaker, is one of the outstanding features of interest. As Brenda Croat Miss Cathleen Cavanagh is also conspicuously good. Miss Marie Menzies, Mr E. G. Fare, and Mr M. Maud contribute much to the success, and in a dual-rôle Miss L. Murray is seen to considerable advantage. Others who do well are Mr Wilton Drury, Mr Hall-Menzies, Mr Francis Searel, Mr William Fielding, and Mr George Clarke.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr R. Flanagan; Acting-Manager, Mr M. Potasch.—The attraction here this week is the Moody-Manners opera company, who are giving a répertoire, including Tannhauser. Carmen, Faust, Pagliacci, and Cavalleria Rusticana. Needless to say, the performances are exceedingly successful from a vocal, instrumental, and scenic point of view, a company of no fewer than seventy being employed, including a chorus of thirty-five voices, and a supplementary orchestra of fifteen first-class musicians. Mr Edward Arthur and Miss Enriqueta Crichton share the chief honours in Monday's performance of Tannhauser, excellent singing being contributed also by Miss Grace Nicoll as Venus, Mr Charles Tilbury as the Landgrave, Mr Walter Barrett as Wolfram, and Mr R. Brookes as Walther. Other important members of the company, Mr Charles Carter, Mr T. H. Wood, Miss Telfy Davie, and Miss Nedda Morrison, have their opportunities in the other operas mentioned; and the week's audiences have every reason to be well pleased by the fare provided by the new management of this popular theatre.

HIPPODROME.—Manager Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—The performance here this week of Lieutenant Chard's dogs is highly interesting, the animals being wonderfully well trained. The Stoll Brothers are clever horizontal bar artistes, and much amusement is caused by their eccentric business. The equilibristic speciality act of the Brothers Donar is particularly smart, and Phil Herman's Ladies' Comedy Four, in humorous and pleasing medleys, sing with good effect. Chris Masters, comedian, has some good songs, which he renders in capital style, and H. Tomlinson, vocal comedian, also sings well. Enjoyable items are contributed by Cyclo, trick cyclist; Andrews and Thompson, in an American singing comedy act; Mahatma, in second-sight marvels; Mephisto and Marie, in clever speciality act; and the animated pictures.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—The well-trained Judge's cockatoos are here this week, and meet with well-deserved applause. The Four Royal Welshmen sing agreeably; Vincent gives an exhibition of high jumping and tumbling that is very clever; Victor Newman received much applause for his impersonations of Shakespearian and other characters; and the Pinaros provoke considerable laughter by their funny American comedy act. Texas Hattie is a pleasing young tight-rope performer, and Master George, boy soprano, is another juvenile of merit. There are also contributions by Ray and Les, comedy gymnasts; Norman and Francois, musical sketch artists; Richard Bellony, in a Continental speciality act; and the Franz, who give some racy Irish songs and patter, and do some dancing. A series of animated pictures complete.

TIVOLI.—Managing Director, Mr Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr Arthur B. Wilkes.—A Christmas fantasia by the musical director, Mr Frank J. Smith, entitled "Tivoli Greetings," is excellently rendered here this week by the orchestra. Dandy George and his remarkably clever dog Rosie head the bill, and meet with a good reception. Katie Butler, comedienne, sings her songs in capital style, and is loudly applauded, and some really clever dancing is done by the Figaros in their smart "Ten Minutes on the Continent" act. Wal Pink and company provoke much laughter in their sketch Uncle's Wife; the M'Aubers go through an exceptionally clever and funny performance on the triple bar; and excellent are the contributions of Leo Stormont, actor-vocalist, and Frank Cass, vocal comedian. Pleasing items are also provided by Olive Vane, male impersonator, and Madge Roberts, comedienne.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Collins.—The programme here, as usual, is very strong, the chief attraction being the great Little Tich, one of the quaintest comedians on the boards. His songs, patter, boot-dancing, and his general eccentric business, including his effective smile, won loud and enthusiastic applause. Another well-received turn of a highly meritorious character is that of the Brothers Pantzer, whose performance is marked from beginning to end with a finish which is almost unique. A word of praise should be accorded their page-boy assistant, who is smartly amusing. Continual roars of laughter follow the efforts of the Donaldson Brothers and Ardel and company in their well-known and effective pantomime, A Zoological Comedy, and of the Ginnetts in their mirth-provoking sketch The Rejected Remounts. The charming Laila Selbina is a highly accomplished trick cyclist, and, assisted by the amusing midget Harry, provides a most delightful turn. The Sydney James' Strolling Players are most entertaining, their songs, dances, ventriloquism, part-singing, and other business being deservedly well received. Verno and Voyce appear in their latest success Capital and Labour, and prove very popular; Clarice Letta, vocalist, possesses a good voice; and the Three Sisters Slater are pleasing banjoists, vocalists, and dancers.

GRAND.—Lessees, Messrs Thomas Barrasford and Will Sley; Manager, Mr H. C. Arnold, jun.—M. Gintaro, the wonderful Japanese equilibrist, is here this week, his marvellous feats of balancing and top-spinning being enthusiastically received. Woolford's animal circus provide a capital turn, the revolving table, with attempts of boys from the audience to keep their equilibrium, causing roars of laughter. Achilles exhibits his splendid muscular development, and lifts various heavy weights to demonstrate his great strength; Wal Croft is very amusing in his Scotch songs and patter; Miss Woodruff sings a pleasing song with a good chorus; and Francis and Melii present a comical musical novelty act, entitled Brigands. Jenny Love, international vocalist, and Dan Kennedy, comedian, also contribute to the entertainment, which concludes with a specially good series of pictures. The Neveters, who figure on the programme, did not appear on the occasion of our visit.

PALACE.—Manager and Secretary, Mr P. Watson; Assistant-Manager, Mr J. H. Stringer.—Carl Reinsch, in his high-class sporting act; Alice Simmons, operatic vocalist; Viviana, the dancing girl; and the Palace pictures are to be seen here this week, in addition to a pantomime noticed in another column.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr Will Smithson; Assistant-Manager, Mr Albert J. Lewis.—The Black Vampire is being played here this week. The company is headed by Mr Henry L. Osmond, who cleverly sustains the part of Harry Royce, the detective, supported by Miss Winifred Chalmers, who plays with ability as Mona Drayton. Others prominent are Mr W. Carriden as Armand Dubois, Mr Arthur D. Owens as Henry Dubois, Mr Herbert Woodin as Sammy Dobbs, Mr Dunlop Stewart as Ritzs, Mr A. P. Harold as Chief of Police, Miss Maud Yorke as Mdlle. Latour, Miss Madge Palmer as Estelle, and Little Elsie Videau as Gervaise Dubois.

MIDDLESBROUGH.

EMPIRE.—Managing Director, Mr John Brill; Manager, Mr J. W. Thornborrow.—The Harmony Four are the great attraction here this week. They are an extremely humorous turn, and receive hearty plaudits. The Brothers Doran are clever gymnasts, their antics creating roars of laughter. Russell and Roper, as "The Opera Singer and the Sandwich-Man," are a capital turn, and Miss Belle Davis and her pick chicks are great favourites. Frazer and Mac, in "The Modern School of Acting," are good, and Regal, the impossible juggler, pleases. Frank Seeley sings some amusing songs, and Celeste is a smart wire performer. The Bio completes a good programme.

OXFORD.—Lessee, Mr Wm. Peacock; Manager, Mr Wm. Ainsworth.—The Scottish Meisters, who head the bill here, sing with fine effect; Zarmo is a clever juggler; and the Five Bon-Bons in a sketch, Hot Time for One, please. Wallace Whitney sings good songs, and Master Henri is a young juggler of great promise; Mdlle. Haydee's electric mannikin theatre provides a capital turn; and Beatie Foster, vocalist; Jack Pleasants, comedian; and the Bio complete the programme.

MOTHERWELL.

NEW CENTURY THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Resident Manager, Mr W. Gillespy.—This week we have Mr C. Finch Hatton's When London Sleeps. Mr Tom Ronald is clever and active as David Engleheart; Mr R. Graydon is very good as Signor Bob Jones; and as the Hon. Bertie, who is seeing life, Mr Charles Digby could not be excelled. Mr David Kelway is amusing as Sammy Blyth, and Miss Grace Barington is well appreciated as Hilda Carrode. Mr Vivian is well suited as Mr Furnaby Fuller, and a clever exposition of the part of the heroic Queenie Carruthers is given by Miss Mabel Cluer. The scenic effects are good.

NELSON.

NEW GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs T. G. Croft; Business Manager, George E. Mudd.—The New Grand was crowded to its utmost limits on Tuesday evening, when, by kind permission of Mrs T. G. Croft, Mr George E. Mudd took a well-earned benefit. A mammoth programme had been arranged for the occasion, including contributions from members of Miss Daisy De Roy's pantomime company, which is rehearsing at Nelson, and also from many local artists. Miss Daisy De Roy herself contributed two songs, which were greatly appreciated; whilst Mr A. Wilkinson's animated pictures, "A Trip to the Moon," were heartily enjoyed. To describe all the excellent turns at length would be wearying, but, suffice it to say, all the following rendered yeoman service in their united efforts to make the benefit a "bumper":—Mr Tom Oliver, Jack Radcliffe, Mdlle. Lucretia, Harry Briggs, J. K. Bond, the Sisters Nelson, Jack Bland and Miss P. Lytton, Jack Clarke, Ted Farrar, Rae and Rae, the Barrasford Boys, W. A. Blakey, Tom Smith, Paul Courtney, and Miss Georgie Hall. The proceedings throughout were of a most enjoyable nature, and Mr Mudd must have been highly gratified at the success of the benefit. During the evening Miss Daisy De Roy, on behalf of the "front of the house" staff and the stage staff respectively, presented to Mr Mudd a handsome gold-mounted ebony walking-stick and a beautiful meerschaum pipe as a token of the esteem in which he is held by the staff generally. Mr Mudd suitably acknowledged.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr T. W. Rowe.—The Drama of Life is being enacted here by Messrs Carson and Granville's company. Mr Jerrold Ord portrays with force and earnestness Harry Beech. There is also much to admire in Mr John J. Hooker's impersonation of Walter Beech. Mr Bulwer Pitt gives a grimly humorous embodiment of Jack Lawton and Dave Crane has a vigorous representative in Mr L. Thackeray. Sir Dobson Wilde has an amusing exponent in Mr Owen Remonde, and Lady Wilde is capitally portrayed by Miss M. Inglis. Miss Cissie Bellamy speaks her lines with excellent effect as Sylvia Beech, and acts with sympathy and power. Mr Walter Steele contributes a good performance as Richard Brenton.

NEW EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident-Director, Mr Richard Thornton; General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr E. Leslie Conroy.—Fred Karno's company is here in Early Birds. Rose Archer supplies some clever mimicry of well-known music hall singers; Fiske and M'Donough do some good acting; the Emelia Sisters display proficiency in their musical entertainment, a juvenile member of the party being a finished performer on the violin; and in a somewhat similar line of business the Loro Quartet also distinguish themselves. A roller-skating act of excellence is contributed by the Vicentinas, and Barney Vox entertains greatly as a ventriloquist. Well-developed athletes are the Three Donals, and in their gymnastic act their physical powers are fully demonstrated. Frank Harwood, descriptive vocalist, has a good style and manner, and Chas. Vincent, comedian, creates amusement. The Kales are neat dancers.

GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr E. W. Bacon.—The Crown Trio of vocalists are the success of the week here. The Brothers Laure, a couple of clever acrobats, do a droll and smart turn, which is much appreciated. Andy Burn gives a capital entertainment, including some wonderful dancing. Will Candlish, Black Emperor, is extremely funny, and has a capital musical display. Grey and Welford, smart boxers, are extremely clever in their sketch, "I'll give you duck." The Mackays, in a bright sketch, are well received, as are the Lulaine Darrell Troupe of gymnasts. Other artistes engaged are Lydia Dudley, a smart comedienne, and Fred Casburn.

PAVILION.—Managing-Director, Mr Thos. Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr W. H. Boardman.—Al Lawrence, mimetic comedian, is appearing here this week. His stories are amusing. Messrs Gardner, Griffin, and Gardner appear in an absurdity, entitled The Rat-catcher, in which they introduce solos on various musical instruments. Stella Stanley, comedienne, contributes some pleasing songs; and Sam Mayo is very successful with his nursery rhymes. Lind is again giving his impersonations of lady dancers, his contributions to the programme being much appreciated. Michael Nolan manages to retain all his popularity; a clever entertainment is provided by Miss Fredrica's terriers and Dot, a cake-walk pony, who exhibit unusual intelligence and do credit to their trainer; Messrs Starr and Jerome, are coon vocalists and buck and sand dancers of ability, and are the recipients of recalls; Ida Ross contributes a Tyrolean song; and Heloisa Titcomb, a South American singer, is a pleasing vocalist with a handsome presence and beautiful dresses. The animated pictures still prove a source of much attraction to Pavilion patrons.

NEWPORT.

LYCEUM. — Lessee and Manager, Mr Sidney Cooper.—Mr Frank Bateman's company opened a week's engagement here with At War with Woman. Miss Lizzie Montague sustains the part of Auriel Romanoff very ably, and Mr E. B. Lewis as Alexander Romanoff is capital. Good work is done by Mr Clinton Baddeley as Antolski, Mr Fred Vaughan's General Malakoff, Mr Louie's Lieut. Alexis, Miss Marion Warren's Frida Malakoff, Miss L. Cavanagh's Tolska, and Miss A. Thomas's Katinka. In the last act Mr W. C. Bland and Miss Annie Thomas contribute songs, for which they are deservedly applauded.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Moss Empires, Limited; Managing-Director, Mr O. Stoll.—Mr Geo. Gray and company are producing The Fighting Parson here. Mr L. B. Athol sings a popular song well. Little Nelusco gives a display of conjuring that is decidedly clever; and Charles Bayman, eccentric negro comedian, sings and dances admirably. The Labakans, with their wonderfully-trained dog Folly, are popular; Miss Alice Maydue, a clever actress, shows skill; Harry Champion pours forth his latest ditty with lightning speed; and the Bostons, novelty showmen, do an amusing turn.

NORTHAMPTON.

OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr W. J. Andrews.—Through the kindness of Mr Milton Bode the Northampton Comedy Company on the first three nights of the week played with great success H. J. Byron's comedy Our Boys for the benefit of local charities.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Fred H. Anderson; Acting-Manager, Mr Robert Barton.—The items in this week's programme include the happy effusions of Arthur Gill, the yokel comedian; Harry Walker, patter comedian; the comedy duologue of Mr and Mrs Clifford Bronte, which is very amusing; the Jansons, in an acrobatic turn; Mimi Dare, comedienne and dancer; Sardou, illusionist, assisted by Madame Sardou; Will Farrell, express comedian; Blanche Newman, a dainty comedienne and dancer; and Miss Marie Riviers, ballad and comic vocalist.

NORTH SHIELDS.

THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessee and Manager, Mr Arthur Jefferson; General Manager, Mr Horace Lee; Secretary, Mr Gordon Jefferson.—Mr John H. Tomkinson's Royal Gipsy Choir is located here this week. The Lizzette Troupe of acrobats introduce a clever act, for which they are loudly applauded, and the Musical Keiths also come in for a hearty reception. Mr Fred M'Lean, eccentric comedian, meets with much favour, and Mr Maurice DUDD, tenor vocalist; Miss Ada Lorne, dancer; Miss Elsie Rubina, princess of equipoise; Miss Pattie Burton, vocalist; and other artistes all contribute successfully.

NEW CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Wm. Mould.—The bill here is headed by the De Veres, comedy acrobats, who give a smart performance. Mr Fred Burnaby, vocalist, renders his songs in capital style, and Mr Tom Andrews, eccentric comedian, has made a hit. Miss Marie Roland, comedienne, is well received. Mr John E. West, Scotch comedian, is funny; the Percys, duettists, are very pleasing; Payne's Bio-Photoscope is as popular as ever; and Jimson's comedy animals are loudly applauded.

NORWICH.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr F. W. Fitt; Musical Director, Captain Selby.—Dr. Edmond Taylor with the Mystic Kettle and other wonderful exhibitions is extremely entertaining, and meets with much appreciation. Martin Chapender proves himself a great illusionist and mystifier; the Original Tom White's Arabs, with Pimple, have a cordial reception; Rice, Rose, Davis, and the Half create immense laughter with their sketches; Rose Clyde's comedy company are also amusing in their sketch, I Must Have It; Ralston and Frances are pleasing in a musical nautical scena; Frank Hope is good as a sensational trick cyclist; the Brothers Zenary give a clever acrobatic act entitled "A Meeting at the Club;" Martini and Son take well as American song illustrators; whilst Capt. Selby's band is much appreciated.

NOTTINGHAM.

KING'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr A. W. Bull. — Between the Lights pays yet another visit, and receives a warm welcome on Monday. Mr George Lyttleton, jun., acts commendably as the troubled Gerald Warren. The knavery of Stanley Crofton is shown with full force by Mr Herbert Pearson, and Mr Chas. H. Fenton capably doubles the parts of Oswald Warren and Ben Armley, the latter rôle being especially good. Mr Alfred D. Adams makes a fine figure as Captain Hinton. Miss Hester Sandford gives a pathetic rendering of Violet Warren, and Miss Kate Froude impersonates Madge Armley in a strong and vigorous manner. There is a large element of humour introduced by Miss Florence Barnes (Kitty) and Messrs H. G. Brandon, Weedon Rose, and H. Lockwood.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Hatton Wharton.—Carl Hertz, the marvellous illusionist, assisted by Mdlle. D'Alton, is drawing crowded houses this week, who watch, applaud, and wonder at the mysterious entertainment offered them. Miss Bonnie Goodwin and her clever piccaninnies are adepts in the cake-walk, and they receive a veritable ovation. The Sisters Trentanovi display their dexterity and smartness in a trapeze act. The Barowski Trio introduce amusing oddities in a gymnastic scena. Leonard and François are also seen in some expert acrobatic feats, in which their burlesque bullfight figures largely. The versatility of Ross and Lewis is demonstrated in singing and dancing, and the Passports neatly execute some fancy dancing. Miss Childie Stuart is an excellent comedienne, and Princess Pauline submits a song effectively. The American Bioscope adds to the enjoyment by a series of new films.

OLDHAM.

ROYAL, LIMITED.—Manager, Mr Ernest Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr George Knowles.—An excellent programme is being submitted here. The principal artiste is Harry Freeman, the popular comedian. A remarkable performance of comedy acrobatism is given by the Max Trevally-Harley Troupe; Tom and Marie Motramo are well received in their up-to-date musical comedy act, Do You Reverse? David Poole is heartily appreciated for a clever ventriloquial performance; and Madge Grey, dialect comedienne; Herbert Betts, versatile comedian; Sheila Deans, comedienne; Beatty and Blanche, duettists; and Linton, acrobatic tight-rope artiste, complete an excellent entertainment.

GAIETY, LIMITED.—Manager, Mr E. J. Dexter.—The exceptional programme submitted here this week includes Rappo, Continental equilibrist, ably assisted by Mdlle. Ella; a very amusing burlesque scene, Opera Gone Mad, is ably rendered by the Sevronis; the Two Gems (Flo and Cissie) are encored for their clever duets; Stave, electric comedy artiste, is successful in a novelty entertainment; Charles Paver, popular comedian, is well received; Miss Leah Arden obtains due appreciation for her clever ballad singing; and the Bioscope concludes an excellent entertainment.

OXFORD.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Albany Ward; Acting-Manager, Mr H. G. P. Wells.—Mr Julian Baimbridge's company is here with The Man from ——? Mr W. Tyrer gains considerable favour as the hero, Lieut. Jack Hartley, while Mr J. Gordon Snell gives an adequate portrayal of Sir Richard Templeton. Mr Julian Baimbridge shows histrionic power as the villain, Philip Gordon, and is ably assisted by Mr Henry Kennedy as Anstey Fowler. Mr R. Nelme-Grasswell has a good grip of Dick Ferrett, and Mr J. Leighton-Leigh is excellent as Peter Miggles. Mrs Julian Baimbridge is a sympathetic Mary Templeton; Miss Amy Ryper is convincing as Kate Meadows; Miss Vasti Wynne makes the most of Jenny Perkins; and Miss Cicele Rene is a decided success as Nipper Ferrett.

PAISLEY.

EMPIRE.—Lessee, Mr J. H. Savile; Manager, Mr Delno Fritz.—The management has this week an excellent company appearing, which includes Jack Henri, versatile comedian; Lil Hartley, refined vocalist; E. J. Wilkes, comedian; Charles F. Braidie, Irish character entertainer and expert reel and jig dancer; Joe Conley, eccentric comedian and dancer; Shavo, expert and comedy juggler; and Les Prinellas, in their sketch, A Country Flirtation, included in which appears Joe Gill, a funny comedian. The animated pictures (a complete new series) are applauded.

PERTH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr J. H. Savile; Acting-Manager, Mr Frank Aldridge.—Mr Edward Marris's company is here this week in the sensational domestic drama As Midnight Chimes. Mr Melville Bickford as Luke Dezzard enacts his heavy part with force and daring; Mr Frank E. Petley distinguishes himself as Dave Stannard; as also does Mr Walter Wilby as old Ezra Gamble. Mr Percy Maitland is seen to advantage as the unfortunate Nat Wilson; Mr James Salter is the cause of a very agreeable diversion as Tat Spaving, and is aided considerably by Miss Nita Imeson in a delightful impersonation of Suzette. Miss Iris M. Ward is quite a success as Zamora; Miss Minnie Ethel shows decided ability in the part of Little Davy; and Miss Gertrude Price proves herself quite equal to the trying and onerous rôle of Mary Stannard.

PLYMOUTH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr C. F. Williams; Acting-Manager, Mr Langdon Lee.—There was a feast of fun provided here this week on the occasion of a complimentary benefit to Mr Percy Williams, son of the popular lessee and acting-manager of the Grand Theatre. Artists engaged for the forthcoming pantomime, together with "stars" from the Palace of Varieties, appeared with much success, and during the evening the beneficiaire was the recipient of a handsome testimonial, subscribed for by many townsmen.

GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr C. F. Williams; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy Williams.—Mr T. Morton Powell's company is appearing here this week in a new drama entitled A Woman's Devotion. Mrs Morton Powell as the Parisienne displays considerable power, and Mr Edward Mervyn acquits himself with credit. Miss Maude S. Drewry makes a fascinating heroine, and other parts are well taken by Miss Dot Selby, Miss Alwynne Ermon, Messrs G. Davis, F. R. Robertson, and W. B. Somerville.

PALACE OF VARIETIES. — Directors Messrs Livermore Brothers; Manager, Mr J. Field.—The Hindoo lady Nadji is the principal "star" turn here this week, and her acrobatic and contortionist feats elicit hearty plaudits. Another smart performer is James Bard, who indulges in evolutions on a suspended wire. As a juggler Miss Agnes Krembser is accomplished. The Michalinis are comic equilibrists, whilst the Sisters Pine are versatile comediennes. In the sketch Mischief the Revell Troupe score well, and good vocalism is forthcoming from Sinclair and Parr. Duets and dances by the Leonards and animated photographs complete an enjoyable programme.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr A. Carlton.—The attraction this week is Parson Thorn, a play full of strong points, and very well acted by Mr Ormonde G. Smethurst's company. The company manager himself appears in the title-rôle, playing intelligently and skilfully. Mr Sydney Elton, who impersonates the villain, is a capable actor. Miss Clara Knowles and Miss Jessie Chandler undertake difficult parts with much success.

PORTH.

POOLE'S OPERA HOUSE. — Manager, Mr W. Bynorth.—Mr Henry Hare's company is here in the musical farcical comedy entitled The Girl from Chicago. Mr Buckstone Clair is decidedly good as "Judge" Ananias Hussell, a Yankee lawyer; Billy M'Guffin has a most amusing representative in Mr Edwin Dodds; Mr Douglas Vigors deserves mention as Percy Montmorency; Brother Obadiah Caccles is successfully played by Mr Clarence Ibbotson; Miss Ida Kessanly is a charming Flora Boomer; Mr Henry Hare capably plays the part of General Boomer; Miss Nellie Vivot creates roars of laughter as Lucretia Flatfoot; and Miss Cissie Hilton gives a praiseworthy impersonation of Mrs Sweetlove. The dances contributed by the Daffodils are much appreciated.

PRESTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr Stephen Pritt.—On Monday and Tuesday an entertaining comedy entitled The Bookmaker, written by the popular manager, was presented here for his benefit. Mr Pritt, the author, successfully played the title-part, and the play was accorded a hearty reception.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs Sawyer and Woodruff.—Messrs Craggs are occupying the above theatre in their musical pantomimical absurdity Laughter-Land. The rôle of Professor Sylvanus Wood is humorously filled by Mr Henry B. Lewis; Dick Marlow is ably impersonated by Mr J. Hitchens; Mr Victor T. Raymond plays Archie Trentham exceedingly well; Mr Arthur E. Behan as Squire Topsam is very quaint; Mr Arthur Cragg, Mr James Cragg, Mr Alfred Cragg, Mr Edward Cragg, Mr J. W. Cragg, and Mr Cremorne Cragg (Billy) as the Stewards cause great amusement, and are marvellously clever acrobats; and Miss Amy Hastings as Clarice and Miss Louise Millward as Clothida render efficient aid.

PONTYPOOL.

THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessees, Messrs C. and J. Poole; Resident Manager, Mr J. H. Stephens.—During the past fortnight extensive alterations have been carried out at this popular playhouse. A new stage has been erected. The proscenium has been widened and enlarged, and a new act-drop by Mr Alfred Glendenning, of London, has been fitted. The whole of the interior has been beautified by fine landscape paintings on the walls, and the electric light has been installed throughout.

PORTSMOUTH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr Armstrong Bell.—Mr W. S. Gilbert's pantomime, The Fairy's Dilemma, is being presented here by Mr Arthur Bourchier's company, under the management of Messrs Silvanus Dauncey and M. V. Leveaux, this week. Mr H. Asheton Tonge made a capital Col. Sir Trever Manleverer, and as clown was legitimately funny and amusing. The Rev. Aloysius Parfitt, M.A., was ably represented by Mr Frank Stanmore, his harlequin also deserves mention. Mr Frank Collins's Mr Justice Whortle was another capital piece of work, and he also made an excellent pantaloon. Miss Ada Homer in the part of Lady Angela Wealdstone was good, and the same may be said of Miss Gertrude Hope as Clarissa. The parts of the Demon Alcohol and the Fairy Rosebud were well placed in the hands of Mr C. Herbert Hewetson and Miss Estella Winwood. The mounting was exceedingly good and the scenery first-rate.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr T. E. Agate.—Mr John F. Preston's company, under the direction of Mr F. B. Woulfe, is paying a visit, presenting Lady Godiva to highly pleased audiences. The title-part is attractively played by Miss Grace Lester; that of Lady Aldyth being very pleasingly undertaken by Miss Marcella Hudson. Miss Madge Boulton makes a very amusing Elfrida; Mr F. B. Woulfe well and powerfully impersonates Tom o' Coventry; Mr W. Howard Barlow is effective and impressive as Algar; Mr James Duncan as Leofric is successful, and Mr Dan F. Roe as Robin Shaklebolt is very diverting.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Secretary, Mr W. Pratt.—Atlas and Vulcana head the bill here with their refined classical athletic act, which gains great applause. Harry Leybourne, comedian, had a warm welcome, his songs going well; Terres Brothers, in the acrobatic pot-pourri, "Pastimes on the Promenade," are skilful and sure; Sterling and Cashen, Terpsichorean experts and cake-walk dancers, are highly diverting; and also appearing are Minnie D'Aubyn, soubrette and danseuse; Sidden and Hayward, vaudeville entertainers; Fox and Melville, American song illustrators; and Joe Humphreys, eccentric comedian.

READING.

ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Milton Bode; Acting-Manager, Mr W. E. Barnett; Secretary, Mr Reginald Taylor.—This theatre has been closed this week for pantomime preparations except on Monday evening, when a successful complimentary benefit was given to Mr W. E. Barnett, the popular and courteous business-manager of the theatre. A very attractive programme was submitted and the bénéficiaire was rewarded with a "bumping" house. The programme included Messrs George Grossmith and Arthur Law's delightful operetta Uncle Samuel, in which Mr G. E. Rayment, Miss Mary Anderson, Mrs Butler, and Mr Percy Waugh appeared; musical items by members of Mr F. J. Little's Sinbad the Sailor company; songs by Mr Ben Lawes, the well-known comedian, and Mr W. H. Moore; a ventriloquial performance by Besonl; a duologue by Mrs Milton Bode and Mr Reginald Taylor, and a host of local talent. At the conclusion of the performance Mr Barnett expressed his thanks to the audience, and also to Mr Bode for the use of the theatre and the artistes who had given their services. Mr Carl Von Benyon assisted Mr R. Taylor in the stage-management.

ROCHDALE.

CIRCUS AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs Smith and Lee; Business-Manager, Mr S. L. Lee.—A crowded house on Monday enjoyed an excellent programme. Bob Hartley, the startler, deserves his title for his novel and amusing turn; Dagmar and Clown, on the horizontal bar, submit a clever and laughable exhibition of bar performing; and the Four Skandias, Swedish gymnasts, arouse enthusiasm with their wonderful feats of strength and agility. Miss Doris Dene, quaint comedienne; Herbert Maden, vocal comedian; the Forrest Sketch company, Two Weltons, expert dancers; and the Electrograph add to the list.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Thomas Hargreaves; Acting-Manager, Mr Frank Hargreaves.—A capital programme is submitted here. Jumbo's Ostoroons sing and dance with skill and effect; Gerald Mount, mimic, gives a refined and acceptable turn; Alfred Leslie sings some good songs in capital style; Clarke's American Banjo Duo arouse enthusiasm by their manipulation of banjos; Aga, the suspended maiden, mystifies the audience completely; and the Bros. Harlem, speciality artistes; and the Empire Bioscope, with the latest animated pictures, complete the bill-of-fare.

ROTHERHAM.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr W. Manning.—Mr Herbert Fuller's company is here this week with Fiends of London. Miss Agnes Collier is pleasing as Laura Christie, and Mr Francis Everard scores as Captain Crawley. They are ably supported by the rest of the company.

SHEFFIELD.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr John Hart; General Manager and Treasurer, Mr J. E. B. Beaumont.—The late Wilson Barrett's fine play The Never-Never Land was again acted here on Monday by a powerful company under the direction of Mr John Hart.

EMPIRE PALACE.—General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr A. W. Young.—The company here includes Nellie Wallace, the clever low comedienne and dancer; Florrie Gallimore, a great and deserved Sheffield favourite; Tom Maxwell and Virginia Francis, speciality artistes and dancers; Arthur Melrose, whistling expert; the Three Olracs, acrobats; the Tourbillon Troupe of acrobatic cyclists; Ella Redford, comedienne; Austin and Cowan, vocal entertainers; Cole et Lorse, comedians; and the popular and mirth-provoking comic vocalist Mr Tom Leamore, in new songs and old favourite impersonations.

SMETHWICK.

ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr C. Barnard; Manager, Mr E. Hewitson.—Mr Arthur Rose's company is paying a return visit here in the domestic drama The Follies of Youth. This play has been entirely revised and is scarcely recognisable. Being of a military nature, it is bright and cheerful, and there is no lack of humour, while a number of specialities add to its attractiveness. The company presenting the drama is excellent all round. Miss Violet Macaree as the chief figure, Gwendoline, stands out prominently for notice, and she holds, by her excellent acting, the attention of the audience throughout. Mr Arthur Rose as the companion villain, Ralph Murdock, is a capable supporter. Miss Laura A. Pardy is well placed as Dorothy Dornton, and makes the most of her opportunities. Mr Walter Bently as Captain Ronald Druce, plays a difficult rôle with ability. Miss Bertha Hanbury, a clever child actress, as Little Ruth captures the hearts of the audience with her well-spoken lines. Mr David Beattie as Nat Thistle, and Mr Bert Wallace as Matthew Merryweather create much merriment, and receive able support at the hands of Miss Ena Russel as Kitty Hawthorne, a sprightly and vivacious maid. The business management is in the capable hands of Mr P. George Beresford.

SALFORD.

PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr Harold Goulden.—Miss Blanche St. Albans and Mr J. Leicester Jackson's company opened here this week, in Her One Great Sin. A talented rendering of the character of Grace Warhurst is given by Miss Blanche St. Albans. The parts of Reuben Warhurst and Arnold Thornhill are capably sustained by Mr Sam Arthur and Mr J. L. Jackson. Mr F. Hodson is very funny as Jerry Jumble, and with Miss Nelly Lambert as Nancy keeps the audience in excellent humour. Little Gracie has a clever exponent in Miss Maudie Lambert. Mr Harold B. Ford is a capital Jack Hundle. The parts of Dan and Bet Hundle are in the capable hands of Mr Charles E. Lambert and Miss Louie Walton. Miss Phyllis Damian as Charlie gives a clever portrayal. Adequate support is given by the other members of the company, and the piece is well staged.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Director, Mr Thomas Barrasford; Licensee, Mr James M. Hardie; Secretary and Manager, Mr C. Shayler.—The Canadian cyclist Banker makes a sensational descent of a steep incline here and turns a somersault over a horizontal bar with his cycle. B. Troba is a phenomenal juggler; and a smart equilibrist exhibition is given by Alphonso Sylvano. Lowell and Lowell, eccentric comedians and acrobats; Nellie and Nora, clever society musical entertainers; Dale and Vale, comedians and dancers; Algie and Reggie, comic eccentric musicians; and Nina Elmer, comedienne, are all well received.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy B. Broadhead; Resident-Manager, Mr J. B. Taylor.—This week's bill here is headed by the Three Romas, gladiatorial marvels, who give a good performance. Cordite, a lady lassoo-thrower, rope-spinner, and lariat manipulator; George White's Night Arabs, in song and story; Little Dando, eccentric and humorous comedian; Mabel Kessler, cornet soloist; the Sisters Desmond, character duettists; Evelyn Carmen, contralto vocalists; Hoppit, Tony, and Terry, in a circus comedy act; Dan Thomas, tenor vocalist; Emmie White, refined comedienne and dancer; Kessanley's dogs; and Reg. Bromlo, boy vocalist, also do successful turns.

SCARBOROUGH.

PEOPLE'S PALACE AND AQUARIUM.—Managing Director, Mr Wm. Morgan; Secretary and Manager, Mr Walter Kitchingman.—The entertainment here still consists chiefly of variety business. Amongst those appearing are Professor Dickinson and Miss Johnson, ornamental swimmers in silver tank; Gilbert Serony, comedian; Oakdene, ventriloquist; Miss Irene Herbert, contralto vocalist; Gus Balsiger, trick instrumentalist; Mozzetto, boy juggler; Vasco, burlesque conjuror; and a capital series of pictures. "Whirling the Worlds" on the Bioscope completes a capital programme.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Quinton Gibson.—Here we have appearing with much success the Vyponds (Fred and Maud), who give a capital turn; Sidney Conke, descriptive vocalist; Rider Davis, actor vocalist; France and Francis, acrobatic comedians; Eva Ward, comedienne; T. C. Smith, sporting comedian; and Alf Shaw, comedian. One of the novelties is a football kicking competition, the competitors endeavouring to put the ball through a square hole in a board on the stage. "A Father's Vengeance," in a series of films, is shown on the Hippograph.

SHEERNESS.

COLISEUM.—Sole Proprietor, Mr T. C. Dorling; Manager, Mr Chas. Melvin.—Excellent programmes still continue the rule here. Mr Chas. Bignell, comedian, heads this week's bill, and is capitally received. Miss Dot Robins and company, in the sketch The Necklace of Death, are eminently successful. A capital performance by Mdlle. Devens, transformation club juggler, is much admired; the Eckersleys, in the musical farce A Simple Country Maid, are very amusing, and a similar compliment is also due to Sleath and Aldis, musical sketch artistes. Other meritorious items include Mr William Kingsley, hand-bell expert; Harry Lynx, comedian; Miss Gracie Drew, burlesque actress; and Miss Helena Slater, soprano.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr P. Raymond.—A capital bill here includes Frank Purcell's combination in the farcical sketch The Cyclist, which creates roars of laughter. Amongst other prominent turns are Miss Bella Bright, comedienne and dancer; Mr Will Munday, comedian and reciter; H. J. Harcourt, comedian; Miss Pattie Power, comedienne; Fred Wynford, eccentric comedian; and Miss Fanny Newnes and company, in the comedy sketch Retaliation. The genial proprietor generously announces a benefit performance on behalf of an aged widow whose only son, her sole means of support, had recently died.

SOUTHPORT.

OPERA HOUSE, WINTER GARDENS.—General Manager, Mr Alfred Hemming.—Sherlock Holmes was presented here on Monday for the first time to a fairly large audience, by Mr Charles Frohman's company. Mr H. A. Saintsbury portrayed the clever detective with telling effect, and was well supported by Mr L. Leyton as Dr. Watson, Mr W. F. Stirling as Professor Moirarity, and the Misses Vera Longden and Clarice Doncaster in the parts of Alice Faulkner and Mrs Faulkner respectively.

HIPPODROME, WINTER GARDENS.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs Murray King and Clark; General Manager, Mr A. Cuthbert.—An attractive programme is furnished here this week. The principal turn is supplied by Daines's Circus. Other items include Babette, equestrian; Rozella, high trapeze act; the Musical Gale; Prince Kuroki, juggler; Great Scott, acrobat and balancer; Allesora, silver ring performance; and Alber and Amber, clowns.

ST. HELENS.

HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr A. V. Carnell.—Foremost we have here this week Houdini, aptly described as the handcuff king of the world, who executes many marvels in his special line, causing considerable consternation at every performance. He is well supported by Mr James Brady, eccentric vocal joker; Mayon and Marle, comedy duologue artists; Onda and Leon, neat and clever bar performers; Len Lever, coffee-coloured coon; Brothers Esdale, refined comedians; and Mr Welsker's Bioscope, showing the latest picture, "Whirling the Worlds; or, the Invasion of the Sun."

STOCKPORT.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr Wm. Revill.—The familiar drama It's Never Too Late to Mend has been presented here by Mr John Wainwright and company to appreciative audiences, the popular actor appearing in his old character of Tom Robinson with marked success. As George Fielding Mr Alfred E. Calver acts effectively; whilst the Rev. Francis Eden has a capable representative in Mr Hornby Warburton. Mr Harold Webb fills the part of Mr Meadows with ability; and Mr Henry Lee is clever and amusing as Peter Crawley. Mr Fred Owen is very pleasing as Jackey. Miss Kitty Carew is charming as Susan Merton; and Miss Millie Wilton acts with sympathetic effect as Josephs, the waif.

STOURBRIDGE.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Manageress, Miss Maude Lynton.—We are this week receiving a return visit from Messrs Charles Draycott and H. B. Peppin's company with The Stolen Birthright. A capital interpretation was given on Monday. Mr Charles Draycott as Count Marco achieved success; Mr Henry Monti's Stephano was highly creditable; and Mr Robert Watson played in a manly, convincing manner as Andrea. Miss Lilian Watson Loyde as Miranda acted in a pleasing and refined manner.

SOUTH SHIELDS.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs J. and F. Coulson.—Miss Maud May and company, supported by Mr Stephen T. Ewart, are submitting a clever interpretation of A White Passion Flower. Miss May, in the part of Freda Harling, stood out prominently, her handsome presence and histrionic ability being the chief features in her success. Mr S. T. Ewart admirably suited the character of Paul Cary; Mr W. Turnbull worked hard as Cyril Greaves; and Messrs N. C. Anthony and Harold Quack rendered a good account of themselves in the parts of Father Rowland Clarke and Major Teveral. The Mrs Vane Lacey of Miss Marion Marshall was also praiseworthy.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE. — Proprietor, Mr Richard Thornton; General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr Geo. F. Thompson.—A great deal of interest is being aroused here by Ahrensmeyer, the cowboy hyptonist. His versatile entertainment calls forth laughter and amazement. G. W. Hunter tells funny stories; Amber Austa submits a coon song and dance with freshness and chic; Wisper is a juggler with droll talk and still droller antics; Geo. Bohee is an old standard banjoist and vocalist; the Three Victorias are charming dancers; and Master Warren Doyle is a good clog dancer. Will Haines, vocal comedian, and Beattie Bloom, comedienne, also contribute.

TIVOLI.—Proprietors and Managers, Councillor J. K. Hall and Mr Jos. Sweeney.—Excellent houses are appreciating the Hebrew delineator Gus Harris, the principal turn for this week. The Sisters Russell are exponents of low comedy; Hetty Devine is an attractive soprano; and a novelty singing competition is a strong feature. Little Auguste, a decidedly smart dancer, is loudly applauded. Rich and Laurel, Flemine, and Sisters Ely are also appearing.

SPENNYMOOR.

CAMBRIDGE THEATRE. — Lessee, Mr Harding Thomas; Resident-Manager, Mr Herbert Vere.—A good reception was accorded Miss Olga André, Travis Green, and Arthur Hinton's company, in When a Man Hates. Mr Arthur Hinton's realistic rendering of Pietro Danelly savoured greatly of villainy. Miss Leila Zillwood's portrayal of Olga Gwynne is powerful and pathetic. Miss Marion Forester ably portrays Letty, and Miss Marie E. Robertson greatly enhances the comedy by her sprightly rendering of Dolly Dimple. Mr Mark Wynton is characteristic as Lawrence Hastings, and Mr A. Beresford is all that can be desired as Detective Smart. Mr Tom Taylor is very humorous as Peter Pimple, and as Paul Mr Travis Green scores heavily.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr J. Batty; Manager, Mr W. Batty.—The week's bill includes Astley's Circus of performing ponies, &c.; Ted Waite, comic; Ernest Montifiore and Co. in a pathetic sketch, The Little Colonel; Primavesi, a smart juggler; the Three Seabornes, acrobats, in their speciality, "The Human Pillar;" Bert Holmes, vocalist; Fred Clifford, baritone; and new films by Payne's Bioscope.

SUNDERLAND.

ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Chas. E. Machin; Business-Manager, Mr Percival Craig.—The 10 30 Down Express is here this week. Mr H. T. Wood gives an excellent portrayal of Jack O'Malley. Mr Scott Leighton acquits himself admirably as James Inderwick. The comedy parts are ably sustained by Miss Kate Kilpack and Mr Horace Stanley. Miss E. M. Walton as Letitia, Mr Fred C. Roper as Seth Coombes, and Mr Harry Day as Huntley Mason all act ably.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Managing-Directors, Messrs Livermore Bros.; Acting-Manager, Mr George V. Wybrow; Treasurer, Mr Alfred Browne.—The programme here for this week is a very attractive one. The Carcassi Duo appear in a musical specialty, and the Excelsior Glee Singers; Harry Anderson, a favourite singing comedian; Winnie Derson, comedienne; the Three Sisters Hayden; Charles Faning, comedian; Mr Frank Gerald and company, in sketch Nothing to Nurse; and the Wilsons all provide capital entertainments.

SUTTON-IN-ASHFIELD.

NEW KING'S THEATRE. — Proprietors, Sutton Theatre Syndicate; Managing Director, Captain Clayton.—Mr T. E. Worth's No. 1 company, in The Rose of the Ring, are playing here this week, and are attracting good houses each evening. Miss Maudie Vincent as Rose Meredith gives a spirited interpretation of the title-part; Mr T. E. Worth is eminently fitted for that of the Circus Clown; and Miss Nellie Stuart as Lavinda Lovejoy is humorous. Captain Vereker has a very able exponent in Mr E. St. Clair Forbes; and Mr E. Edwards as Lord Desborough gains much appreciation.

SWANSEA.

NEW STAR.—Lessee and Manager, Mr T. Morton Powell; Acting-Manager, Mr William Coutts.—Mr Shirley's melodrama The Lightning's Flash is here on a week's visit, and is played by Mr Leslie Vyner's company.

NEW EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Albert Mitchell. — A good programme has been arranged here for the week as follows:—Richard List's performing and wrestling bears; the Howards (Ralph and Nellie), capital cornettists; the American Bioscope, with a series of very interesting pictures; Miss Nellie Coleman, an amusing and clever lady comedian; the Sisters Devona, a charming pair, in their electrical lyre aerial act; Charles Gardiner, a capital eccentric comedian; Phillips and Terry, in a clever little sketch, Revolt of Man; or, a Hundred Years Hence; Dome, the original comedy clay modeller; and the Lumars, in their novel acrobatic act, aided by electricity.

PALACE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr T. W. Grantham.—The engagements at this house include Dinah Morris, in "A Lost Coon," assisted by Miss Bessie Morris, dancer; Smiler Lee, comedian; Ada Kingsley, burlesque artiste; the Blind Collier, instrumentalist; the Palace Pictures; Leighton and Mona, pianists; Harry Calvo, vocalist; and the Conway Comedy Duo, in the laughable playlet, Joining the Company.

SWINDON.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Responsible Manager, Mr Alfred Manners; Musical Director, Mr Fred H. Lucas.—For the week preceding Christmas the management has secured a strong attraction in a return visit of The Christian. The play was staged by Mr Wentworth Croke's company, under the business direction of Mr Frank Brandon. Chief interest was centred in the admirable embodiment of John Storm by that popular actor, Mr Hilliard

Father Lamplugh. Mr Jackson Wilcox was well suited to the part of Mr Drake, and Mr Charles B. Bedells was most effective as Lord Robert Ure, the small part of Mrs Callender being safely entrusted to Miss Clara Nicholls.

FOUR highly creditable and dainty performances of a pretty little musical piece entitled O Nana San, book by Walter Forder, music by Geoffrey Hart, have been given by the Swindon Operatic Society, in the Mechanics' Institute, Swindon. Each performance was thoroughly enjoyed by a large audience, encores being numerous, and local charities should greatly benefit by the efforts of the talented amateurs. The piece was capitally staged, and the orchestra and chorus, under the bâton of Mr W. Salter, rendered valuable assistance.

WAKEFIELD.

ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Sherwood and Co.—Miss Winifred Maude's company opened here on Monday in The Sins of a City. Mr Horace Herbert gives an able impersonation as Sandy M'Donald; Mr J. W. Baxter is successful in the dual rôle of Joe Woodleigh and Jasper Woodleigh; Mr Ivan Gore does well as Donald M'Ivor; and Mr Victor Du Cane is an excellent Isaac Leir. Mr Leslie Beaufort acts well as Mr Blackwater, K.C.; Miss Winifred Maude plays with taste and ability as Seaweed; Miss Alice Granville is good as Mrs Miggs; and Miss Marie Lyons appears with success as Lesbia. Miss Jenny Hackett is well placed as Midge, a servant.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Wakefield Hippodrome, Limited; Manager, Mr D. G. Mooney.—The Waldrons head the bill this week, and contribute an amusing comedy turn which wins applause. The Festos, musical acrobats, meet with appreciation; Miss Lily Lassah, coon songstress, dances in excellent style; Mons. Souplessi, contortionist, performs some clever feats; Fred Terry, comedian, is well received; Major Moss and Son, vocal scenic artistes, sing well; and Thelma is a graceful dancer.

WALTHAMSTOW.

PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr G. Adney Payne; Manager, Mr Arthur J. Barclay; Acting-Manager, Mr Geo. F. Slatter.—An interesting programme is presented here this week, and the audiences are at once put into good humour by a delightful rendering of the overture to Rossini's Italiana Algieri, by the orchestra under the direction of Mr H. Petersen. Miss Ethel May is a pleasing singer and a brisk dancer; the Venola Brothers, comedy gymnasts, do some clever work; Mr Bert Brantford, an amusing comedian, sings his songs to a running accompaniment of laughter; the Avrignys perform surprising feats of jugglery smartly. One of the most popular items of the evening is Professor Thornbury, who distinguishes himself greatly in his dual capacity as lightning artist and ventriloquist. Blake and Granby manage to extract a large amount of fun from their duologue, An American Millionaire, in which a lady mistakes a comic broker's-man for an expected man of dollars. Both artistes play with plenty of "go." The fine, resonant voice of Mr W. H. Downs, the coloured Australian ballad vocalist, is heard to great advantage in a couple of songs. Rex Fox, whose stage wire act is rightly described as "daring," stands on the wire on one foot, and balances a tall, lighted lamp on the toes of the other, at the same time playing the mandolin. Loud and prolonged applause greet the performer when he finally descends to the stage. The concluding attraction of the programme is Mr W. Selkirk's juvenile spectacle The Handy Man, performed by a hundred children. The evolutions of the youngsters tells its tale of expert drilling, while the precision with which they go through their work reflects great credit on their individual and collective cleverness. The uniforms are pretty, and the whole production most pleasing.

KING'S THEATRE.—Probably as a solemn preparation for the frivolities of the forthcoming pantomime, we have here a careful production of Uncle Tom's Cabin. Mr Watson Hulme makes the most of his opportunities as the rascally Simon Legree. Mr Herbert Fox is an unctuous Uncle Tom. Miss M. Marshall looks well and plays with much spirit and pathos as Eliza. Topsy has a lively representative in Miss Amy Rogerson. The other parts are all carefully played, and the piece is most creditably put on the stage.

WARRINGTON.

ROYAL COURT.—Proprietors, Messrs W. Johnson and J. Potter; General Manager, Mr J. Potter.—Fred Karno's troupe of comedians is here again this week with the popular farce His Majesty's Guests. Mr Harry Roxbury as Sergeant Lightning proves a worthy successor to Mr Fred Kitchen, and has rare scope for displaying his versatility.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs W. Johnson and J. Potter; General Manager, Mr J. Potter; Director of Amusements, Mr F. Willmot.—Another capital programme is here this week, and Lava, who heads the bill, is a really clever equilibrist. Other excellent turns are Will Percival, clog dancer; the Ashers, sketch artists; Cullen and Carthy, comedians; Four Arizonas, acrobats; Shawlene, tramp whistler; and the Royal Bioscope.

WEDNESBURY.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr Harry Battersby; Acting-Manager, Mr W. J. Cranston.—Mr Joe Hastings, the champion jumper, in a series of marvellous leaping feats, is proving a big attraction here:—The up-to-date ventriloquist, Milne, gives an interesting performance; Miss Millie Legrand, the pretty soubrette and dancer, is warmly applauded; Mr Charles Bradford, character comedian, does excellent work; the man monkey, Cambo, in his musical mimicking act, creates roars of laughter; Brenda Leslie, in American song illustrations, is well worthy of special mention; Gibbons' Bio-Tableaux are very good; the Radium Girls present a good entertainment; and Mr Fred Ward, laughable comedian, is highly commendable.

WEST BROMWICH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr P. Moore.—The Beautiful Fiend is the title of this week's play at this theatre. It is admirably presented by Messrs Beaudyn and Livesey's company. The piece all through is full of incident and excitement, and the staging is all that can be desired. Mr Montague Beaudyn in the rôle of Ivan Paulovitch is exceptionally clever; Miss Sidney Crowe gives a fine representation of the character of Wanda Lubinoff, the beautiful fiend; and Mr Herbert Skardon does well as Count Fedor Karatoff.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.

GRAND.—General Manager (for Mrs Weldon Watts), Mr Sidney Bacon; Resident Manager, Mr Fred Conneaux.—The World, as presented by Mr John L. Asche's company, is all that could be desired both in regard to acting and scenic effects. Mr Stuart Lomath gives a powerfully realistic impersonation of Sir Clement Huntingford, and Harry Huntingford has a capital representative in Mr Francis Hawley. The rôle of Moss Jewel is ably discharged by Mr Bernard J. Llell. Mr Jackson Hayes makes the most of his part as Martin Bashford. Langley, Dr Hawkins and Dr. Wyndham are in the able hands of Mr Adam Alexander, Mr Valentine J. Cooke, and Mr T. Brown Elliott, and the short, but important part of Owen, is well played by Mr Edward Beecham. Miss Beatrice Fay as Mary Blyth elicits the sympathy of her audience. Ned is played in pleasing manner by Miss Maud Scott, and Miss Octavia Noel discharges the rôle of Mabel with fine dramatic effect.

PALACE.—Director-General, Mr Frank Macnaghten.—The entertainment of the Dandies embraces some bright and sparkling songs and quartets, which are rendered in a style that wins considerable applause. Brady and Johnson score in a comedy sketch; Jennie Reeve, serio, is well received; Tom Parker, comedian, is amusing in his songs; Gilroy and Gross, are favourably received in a dancing turn; and Read and Write, comedy duettists and top boot dancers, complete the list.

WIGAN.

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Company; Managing-Director, Mr John Worswick.—Mr E. Hill-Mitchelson and company have presented this week the romantic modern play Revenge. Mr Hill-Mitchelson in the rôle of Prince Orloff is very effective, and Mr Wellesley Draper as Captain Vanessa plays the part ably. Mr Theo Balfour as the King and Mr Arthur M'Cullock as Count Mussant also give intelligent representations of their respective characters. Miss Alice Barber as Cora Brook and Miss Violet Carlyle as the Queen act with feeling and expression, and Miss Frances White as Draga Vanessa gives an intensely emotional and passionate rendering of an interesting part.

GRAND THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Company; Managing-Director, Mr J. Worswick.—Charles Matthews gives an exceedingly clever jumping exhibition, and the Sisters Macarte are responsible for a novel and particularly smart performance upon the wire. Florence Lambeth, vocalist; the Robertsons, in a comedy sketch, A Pair of Lunatics; and Harry Barker, comedian, also give popular turns. The remainder of a good programme is filled by the Wagmars, lightning acrobats; the Sisters Bartholomew, duettists and dancers; Nelson and Thomas, in an absurdity; and Fred Horsfall, a mimic with a double voice. Charlene and Charlene give a drawing room entertainment, in which the former shows considerable skill as a juggler, and Professor M'Cann plays several excellent selections upon the English concertina.

EMPIRE MUSIC HALL.—Manager, Mr W. Birchall.—Sivane and Fieldon, in a comedy sketch, and Warner and Wilson, also in comedy, are well received at the Empire this week. Miss Irene Santley, vocalist, is paying a return visit, and Mr Harry Manchester, comedian and eccentric dancer, is also popular. France and Francis, knockabout comedians; Miss Brenton, descriptive vocalist; and Fred Burton, comedian, win much applause.

WOLVERHAMPTON.

GRAND THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Mr E. H. Bull and Mr Milton Bode; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy Percival.—Monday night was set apart for the third annual benefit of the genial and popular manager, Mr Percival, and a crowded and enthusiastic house bore testimony to his popularity. The entertainment was of a varied character, and included Dibdin's The Waterman, in which Mr Percival appeared as Tom Tug and Mr Arthur Sedgley as Bundle. The latter was seen to great advantage, but Mr Percival was unable to do himself justice in consequence of a severe cold. Other parts were well filled by Miss Maggie Phillips, Miss Agnes Beaufoy, and Mr A. W. Bentley. Another great attraction was the appearance of Madame Dews, whose rendering of Cowen's "Promise of Life" was one of the best features of the entertainment. Amongst other contributors to an excellent programme were Mr Harry Lawton, Mr Ted Eccleston, and the Elysian Pierrots; while Dolly, Agnes, and Maud, vocalists; Marco, a boy conjuror; and the Four Watsons, from the Empire Palace, Wolverhampton; and Miss Elsie Perrin, Mits Florence Burns, and Mr Will Letters from the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, also appeared. Some interesting presentations to Mr Percival were reserved for a private function on Thursday.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr Chas. Barnard; General Manager, Mr W. H. Lennon.—This is the only place of amusement open here all the week. The engagements include Radford and Valentine, very clever jugglers; Marco, a boy conjuror; the Two Romers, vocalists; Maisie Pelham, dancer and comedienne; the Watson Family, musical entertainers; Kid Johnstone, ball puncher; the Du Gros Trio, gymnasts; and Dolly, Agnes, and Maud, vocalists and cardboard box makers. A capital show is also given by Ruffel's Imperial Bioscope.

WORCESTER.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr Arthur Carlton; Manager, Mr Louis Karpe; Assistant Manager, Mr Le Warde.—A costume drama of the Georgian period entitled A Bid for Fortune occupies the stage this week, Messrs Campbell and Fulton's company giving a capital representation. Miss Olive Fulton submits a natural and graceful rendering of Agnes Netherby. Miss Mary Ainslie is very good as Barbara Templemore; Miss Jenny Bostock plays well as the widow, Nicholls; and the child's part, Eric, is capitally embodied by little Miss Edmonds, whose singing is admirable. Other notable characters are efficiently impersonated by Mr C. Brereton Borer (Sir Philip Templemore), Mr Oswald Douglas Kent Hickett), Mr Herbert Clifton (Sir Michael Netherby), Mr Dick Thomas (Cobb Cuttle), Mr J. Lea Hair (Nat Goadberry), and Mr Arthur Trail (Matthew Mullard).

WORTHING.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—A variety entertainment is the attraction here again this week. Turle and Turle give a clever turn on the aerial double trapeze. Queenie Till, who possesses an excellent voice and fine presence, delights the audience. Arthur Stacey proves himself to be an excellent comedian and highly capable dancer. The Three Bolleros are highly successful in their great comedy triple bar act. The Ashwells are clever female impersonators. Johnnie Worman causes roars of laughter with his quaint humour. The Rozaire Troupe deserve special commendation for a really astounding acrobatic display. Rollo and Rando, gymnastic comedians; Jim, the original fisherman musician; and the Walturdaw animated pictures also aid in a really excellent show.

WREXHAM.

EMPIRE MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr J. J. Scott; Manager, Mr Herbert Nicholls.—This week the following artistes have appeared here:—The Schallers, in their comedy act, Billy's Blunders; the Valmores, in A Restaurant Up to Date; the Incemores, comedy artistes; Miss Dolly Vince, comedienne; Speeks and Thorne, comedians and dancers; and Stratton Hill, quaint comedian.

YORK.

EMPIRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr Sidney Brooke.—The following excellent company is appearing here:—Mabel Comely, the Olympian Quartet, Martin Conway, J. A. Cassels, Mons. Slippere, Miss Omega, Fred Roden, the Lyons Trio, and the Onatis Troupe.

FESTIVAL CONCERT HALL.—Maskelyne and Cooke's entertainment, headed by David Devant, is the attraction here.

NOTICE.—Our Correspondents are requested to note that Next Week their Reports must reach this Office AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE. Plots of Pantomimes must be kept short.

WE regret to record the death of Mr James Cazaly, which took place on the 14th inst. The deceased was a useful member in the profession. He afforded Madame Katti Lanner much aid in the National Training School for Dancing; and the production of ballets, &c., by the pupils in the provinces, America, and the Continent, brought him to the front. He appeared in succession at Her Majesty's and the Carl Rosa Opera at Drury-lane, under Sir Augustus Harris and Mr Chatterton, and at the Lyceum under Sir Henry Irving. He "made" several amusing and characteristic parts in conjunction with the late John Ridley in the Empire ballets. Latterly he took to the "desk," and his loss, at the age of forty-eight, will be much felt by numerous friends. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon at Abney-park Cemetery.

FAMOUS SCENIC ARTISTS.

MR. W. B. SPONG.

Mr W. B. Spong says that the request for a sketch of his professional career has sent his mind travelling over the memories of the past, and he confesses to finding some difficulty in selecting among the incidents of a life that has seen so many changes, such phases of it as would be of interest to our readers in the condensed form in which it must necessarily appear. He started at a time when the theatre and all that appertains to it was so different from those of the present day that he is tempted to tell the young generation of what he saw, heard, and knew, when a limelight was a luxury, a stage cloth but rarely used, and when flats run on in grooves to join, or not to join, in the middle. A typical theatre of the period that first unfolded its mysteries of the unknown world of "Behind the Scenes" to his curious eyes was Sadler's Wells, shortly after Greenwood and Phelps had relinquished its management.

He says: "Those that saw the last act of Trelawney of the Wells depicted with such marvellous fidelity by Mr Walter Hann can realise how it looked, solemn and sombre, with Cathedral-like effects of grey mist pierced by a shaft of light coming slanting across from a stray sunbeam that had found its way through some chink or half-covered, dust-begrimed window. A 'tee piece' flickering in front of an empty orchestra, wing ladders at the side, a thunder sheet, a miserable little rickety table patched in its legs for the stage-manager and prompter's use. It was all there, that background with its make-believe removed. The human comedy, sometimes tragedy, was there also, but it was not to concern me. I was taken there one chill October day by my father to be introduced to my future master, C. J. James, to learn the art of scene-painting. The name of Charles Stanfield James is now forgotten by the many, but at that time he was first amongst the coming men of an age when giants of scenic art lived. William Beverley was in his zenith, the elder Telbin, whose influence is still so strongly felt at the present day, Grieve, Danson, Gates, and Brew's names were household words, whilst Hawes Craven, whose fame was to overshadow them all, was working away in Dublin with probably but little thought of his proud position as acknowledged head of the profession in the future. During my pupilship it was my good fortune to meet most of the celebrities of the day connected with the theatrical world, Phelps, Andrew Halliday, Westland Marston, Arthur Sketchley, Kean—but there, the list is almost endless.

"When my apprenticeship was completed a situation was found for me as second painter at the Theatre Royal, Bristol, where I was welcomed by one that became my greatest friend through life, and who at that time held the post there of principal painter. I refer to George Gordon, that excellent artist, whose untimely death some two years ago in Australia caused many besides myself to grieve. Shortly after my arrival Mr Chute commenced building the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, and on its completion Gordon was shifted there and I was left in charge of the old theatre to produce the pantomime. Unfortunately Bristol was not ripe for two theatres, so the old was closed and I returned to join Mr Beverley's staff at Drury-lane for the season. Then I was engaged by Fred Younge, the pioneer of travelling companies in England. He had the Tom Robertson plays, and being the only company on the road made much money and social recognition. I was sent two or three weeks in advance and painted the scenery afresh in each town, he providing the artist and the local manager the materials. Presently it was found advisable to carry a small quantity of scenery for the smaller towns where his stay was limited to a week or less, and that, I believe, was the start of the present system, now carried to such perfection by Mr George Edwardes and others that there is little difference between the provincial and the London productions.

"This engagement gave me an opportunity to see my own country from north to south and east to west, and fostered that taste for travel that has since taken me to the four quarters of the globe. After two years, having visited all the principal cities in the kingdom, I resigned, and returned to Mr Beverley, but my stay with him this time was but a short one, as I was offered the position of scenic artist at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle, and by his advice accepted it. It would tire your patience to tell of the different country theatres I worked for, so I will come to the next important step in my career, viz, my engagement by D'Oyly Carte to produce the scenery for Giroflé Girofla at the Opera Comique, followed by The Broken Branch. Shortly after Selina Dolaro opened the Royalty with La Perichole, for which I did the scenery, and also for Trial by Jury, which formed the commencement of the celebrated Gilbert and Sullivan series. An act drop painted for the Metropolitan Music Hall brought my work under the notice of a Portuguese manager, and gave me the opportunity of a visit to Lisbon.

"The next four years were spent at Manchester painting for the Royal and the Prince's Theatres, then back to London, where in connection with my partners, William Perkins and E. Banks, I worked for nearly every theatre in the West of London at different times. A great change was now to come in my life. My health having become impaired by hard and incessant work, a long rest and a residence in a warm climate became a necessity, and it so happened that my old friend Robert Brough was on the look out for an artist to join him in Australia, and so it came that for eleven years England saw me no more. I engaged for twelve months, and the twelve months spread themselves into seven years, spent amongst the most congenial surroundings that it was ever the good luck of a scene-painter to know. During the last four years of my stay at the Antipodes I became my own manager, taking a company through the two islands of New Zealand, and running a season at the Criterion, Sydney, principally with Shakespearian productions, in which my daughter, Hilda Spong, gained such great commendation that I felt Australia was too limited a field for her, and decided to return to London, where the scope was greater. Her appearance at Drury-lane in The Duchess of Coolgardie, and her subsequent successful career belongs to another history.

"The scenic work I have done since my home-coming is too recent to need recapitulation, but a few concluding words on my efforts in the kindred art of picture painting may, perhaps, be permissible.

"In 1881 I exhibited in the Royal Academy a water colour drawing of a Spanish cathedral, which, being well hung, secured a purchaser, and encouraged me to fresh efforts, and succeeding years generally found a modest contribution from my brush honoured with a place on its walls; frequently, also at the Institute of Water-Colour Painters. In Australia I found so good a market that no necessity arose to send to Europe. I was elected there a member of the council of both the Melbourne and Sydney Art Societies. In the latter colony I acted as one of the judges for the Government to award the art scholarships. The New South Wales Government did me the honour of purchasing one of my pictures for its National Gallery. Since my return, out of five pictures exhibited at the Royal Academy it has been my good fortune to have had three hung on the line."

AMUSEMENTS IN PITTSBURGH.

PITTSBURGH, PA., DEC. 12.—Mother Goose enjoyed an equally large patronage during the second week of her visit at the Nixon as in the preceding one. The pantomime, which is a complete copy in every respect of the production given at Drury-lane, London, pleases for its clever jokes, gorgeous scenery, pretty girls, and beautiful ballets, and affords Pittsburghers an opportunity of seeing how things are done on the other side of the herring pond.

GEORGE BROADHURST'S latest farce-comedy entitled A Fool and His Money, which was presented by the Harry Davis stock company at the Aboin last week, does not differ much from the author's former creations, The Wrong Mr Wright, Why Smith Left Home, &c. The dialogue is witty and bright; the plot, which describes the doings of a disinherited millionaire's son and his faithful friend, an artist who cannot find customers for his pictures, clever; and the dénouement satisfactory. The millionaire's son, Percy Merrill, was ably portrayed by Mr William Courtenay, while Miss Jane Kennark was, as usual, equal to the occasion in her rôle of Eleanor Ashton. Mr Wilson Melrose's Sandy M'Pherson was a clever bit of character acting. Esmeralda, the slavey, received excellent treatment at Miss Emma Dunn's hands.

THE attraction at the Gayety was Hall Caine's The Eternal City. Mr Edward J. Morgan, a rising young actor, made a very favourable impression as David Rossi, and was ably seconded by Miss Janet Waldorf as Donna Roma Volonna. Miss Waldorf had come all the way from Bombay to fulfil her engagement here, and her reception was all the greater for the reason that she is a Pittsburgh girl.

THE popular Theodore Kremer production, The Fatal Wedding, occupied the boards of the Bijou, and was done ample justice to by a company organised by Messrs Sullivan, Harris, and Woods. A special feature of the performance was the introduction of Miss Gertrude Haynes and her celestial choir in act four.

IN this connection an incident that occurred during the production of the above-mentioned melodrama will bear repetition. It seems that a disagreement arose between Miss Gertrude Haynes and the Union stage hands about the shifting of the scenery. As no arrangement could be come to and time was pressing, the lady in question lost her patience and ordered her chorus girls to put a shoulder to the "uprights." In a moment the work that it took trained men to do was done by these tender hands. The curtain went up "to time," and the audience had no idea that the girls who did the singing had accomplished a task requiring both strength and agility.

"HAPPY HOOLIGAN," the musical comedy presented at the Duquesne, was suggested to Frank Dumont by Fred Opper's clever caricatures in the illustrated comic weeklies, and is decidedly funny. Mr George D. Melville played in the title-rôle, to everybody's delight. Among the many clever songs which abound in the play may be mentioned "Military Life in Georgia," performed by the Electric Comedy Four, while "All for You," rendered by Blanche Stella and chorus, was much enjoyed. Another special feature was the much-talked-of "Radium" ballet, which is all the rage of Paris now.

THE Empire was occupied by Gotthold's gigantic novelty show vaudeville company, containing some clever numbers. Fuji-Ko and company presented a romantic Japanese playlet entitled Yu-Me-Mo-Yo (the design of a dream), founded on the Japanese superstition that the spirits of dead soldiers visit their homes once a year at midnight and disappear at dawn, when the "honourable bugle calls them home." The Rappo Sisters, from the Imperial Opera House at Irkontsk, Siberia, gave a very interesting exhibition of Russian, Siberian, and Cossack dancing.

RICE AND BARTON'S company, in A Night at Manhattan Beach, which appeared at Harry Williams's Academy, enjoyed a good run throughout the week.

ROBERT HILLIARD headed the bill at the Grand Opera House with his one-act play No. 973, a scene in the life of an ex-convict. The rest of the programme was of a good average quality.

AMUSEMENTS AT GIBRALTAR.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

THE new distribution of the Navy, which gives Gibraltar as the headquarters of the Atlantic Fleet, has been received with great rejoicing here. The Empire Theatre, which specially caters for the Navy, has hitherto counted upon but two or three visits annually from the Channel Fleet and one from the Mediterranean. Now our second most important fleet is to be based on Gibraltar, and all the repairs are to be carried out in the Gibraltar dockyard. As the Under-Secretary of State for the Admiralty said in the House some eighteen months ago when asking for a vote for a theatre at Malta, "it is of enormous importance that the men should be provided with some rational amusement when ashore." The Empire Theatre at Gibraltar holds 1,500 people, and if sufficient variety and as good répertoire companies come out as during the first year it was opened it should do capital business. A good energetic manager is required who will push the business, and no doubt one will be shortly found. A great Gibraltar favourite is now appearing at the Salford Hippodrome, in a scene from Dante—the fascinating Ana Lopetigue, supported by the baritone, Blanchart; the scenery arranged by the manager, Mr Taylor—which makes a most effective "turn."

The King is to visit Gibraltar in the early spring to open a new dock, when a specially arranged "variety show" from home will be provided, and it is hoped that popular artiste Miss Isa Bowman may again be persuaded to visit the "Rock." The climate is lovely at this time of year, and artistes are only too glad to get away from the cold and fogs of home to the sunny shore of the Mediterranean.

A NEW one-act play, Aurora's Captive, by Mr Tom Gallon, was duly copyrighted at the Ladbroke Hall on Dec. 13.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, Dec. 22.—The first performance of this long-anticipated work was, outwardly at least, a great and unqualified success. Whether this success will continue remains to be proved, and is, in my opinion, extremely improbable. Disregarding the bitterness of many of the German critics, who feel a slight to their countrymen in the fact of a foreign composer having been entrusted with a so essentially German theme, the impartial hearer must admit that—to make use of a homely adage—there has been much cry about little wool. The Emperor's keen personal interest in the opera, and the magnificent mise en scène, the like of which has seldom been witnessed, even at the Royal Opera, cannot make the music anything more than a mediocre production, and the opera under less brilliant conditions would make but very little impression. With a few melodious exceptions, such as, for instance, a song of Elsbeth's in the second act, the music falls into one of two extremes; it is either trivial or the orchestration is overwhelmingly noisy, while the most casual listener is constantly reminded of Leoncavallo's Bajazzi, many passages being almost identical. Other numbers are distinct imitations of Wagner; notably the sword motif is unquestionably present. The book is drawn from Willibald Alexis's well-known novel, which was translated into Italian for the benefit of the composer when he began his stupendous work ten years ago. Signor Leoncavallo has altered the original to suit himself, and that is not a fault, but the theme is—in any form—not particularly interesting. In the fifteenth century—at which period the action passes—there were two towns where Berlin now stands, Berlin and Poelln, the citizens of which were not mutually amicable. The hero of the opera is Henning Moller, the son of a zeeder who had done much for the sister towns, and had once saved the life of Rathenow, the burgomeister of Berlin. The corporation of Coelln-Berlin had bound themselves for these services to pay Henning the sum of 20,000 groschen; but the debt had never been paid, and the people of Berlin look upon this as contempt of their rights. They take up Henning's cause on every possible occasion, and during the carnival festivities of the opening act we see Rathenow in trouble. The people show him a document demanding payment of the long-standing debt. The burgomeister tears it in two, but declares the money shall be paid if needs be out of his own pocket. The mob, however, are excited, and did not Henning come to the rescue by cleverly drawing their attention another way and thus enabling Rathenow to escape, it would have gone hard with the burgomeister. The Elector is in the crowd incognito and admires Henning's pluck and ready wit. In the second act we see Rathenow oppressed by the weight of the debt he has taken upon himself. Henning, who loves the burgomeister's daughter Elsbeth, comes to visit him, finds him in prayer, and conceals himself behind a curtain. Here the young man hears sorry news—that the betrothal of Elsbeth with Melchior Stumm (son of a civic magnate of Coelln) is about to take place with much ceremony. Rathenow is anxious for the marriage, believing it will help to unite the sister-towns. When Henning is left alone with Elsbeth he tells her of his love, and after some hesitation the girl declares she loves him too. Circumstances appear to turn in Henning's favour after a time, and at the fête which should witness Elsbeth's betrothal to Melchior a series of events lead up to a demonstration between the citizens of Coelln and Berlin. Henning proposes formally for Elsbeth's hand, but Rathenow declares he shall not wed his daughter ere the Roland statue shall descends from its pedestal. While he speaks, however, the Elector with his army is before the gates of Berlin, and Henning, who perceives the advantage of Hohenzollern rule, opens the gates, with the citizens' consent. The Sovereign himself wishes to join the lovers' hands, but Henning has been fatally wounded in the fray (this is an entirely different ending from the novel), and Elsbeth falls in agony across his dead body. The cast was a very fine one, Fräulein Destinn carrying off the chief laurels. The scenery and costumes were new, and highly effective. Signor Leoncavallo was called and recalled before the curtain, finally appearing hand-in-hand with Dr. Muck, to whose excellent conducting so much of the evening's success was due.

AN interesting three-act play Die Stillen Stuben, by Sven Lange, is being given successfully at the Neues, with an all-round excellent cast. The motif is not new; we have seen it in Shaw's Candida, in a lighter vein in Sardou's Cyprienne, in a more tragic form in Ibsen's Frau vom Meere. But the first two acts particularly are very finely and skilfully conceived, the characters being most lifelike, so that the piece fascinates more than many others that can claim greater originality. The following is the plot: Helga Theysen is a married woman of four-and-twenty, whose husband—a schoolmaster—is of a reserved and apparently cold nature. She loves and respects her husband, but feels chilled by his want of reciprocity, and gradually comes very near to loving someone else. The other man—a lawyer named Carsten—is young and in possession of more powers of attraction than Theysen. Helga knows he loves her, and the knowledge is not displeasing to her. The more she thinks of her husband's coldness the more she pities herself, and ends by longing to taste all the sweets of love's passion. It is not in reality love to Carsten that is filling her heart, though she fancies it is, but ungratified love for her husband, and when the lawyer confesses his passion for her Helga makes a clean breast of it to Theysen. Her husband is something of a philosopher; he will not stand in the way of his wife's happiness, and is prepared with stoical calmness to renounce his claims in favour of the more fortunate man. Something in his face, however, tells Helga the truth, and she learns that her husband loves her as deeply, as passionately as she desires; he has only been too shy to show his feelings, and so all ends well. The part of the play relating to these events is very well written, but in the third act there is a good deal about Helga's parents that is superfluous, and the piece would gain by cutting. A very cordial reception was accorded to it, and Frau Eysoldt's acting in the rôle of Helga was the best thing she has done for some time, not even excepting the masterly renderings of Salome and Elektra.

A CAPITAL performance of Meyerbeer's Prophet was given at the Theatre des Westens on Friday. The title-rôle was sung by Herr Rothmühl, whose voice is still very fine.

HERR KAINZ, the famous tragedian, formerly of Berlin, and now a member of the Imperial Burg Theatre company, will give a season at the Berliner early in the coming year.

CAMBRIDGE NEW THEATRE.

The annual dinner of the large staff employed at the Cambridge New Theatre took place at Ye Olde Castel Hotel on Monday evening. The managing-director, Mr W. B. REDFERN, J.P., D.L., presided over a company numbering upwards of fifty, which included Messrs W. F. Taylor, A. G. Swannell, H. Hall, and H. Slater, secretaries; L. Mansfield, stage carpenter; A. G. Turner and Edwards, box-office; A. Hastead, manager of the refreshment department; W. Andrews-Baxter, R. Dent, P. R. S. Piggott, Williams, and Talbot, St. Catherine's College.

The loyal toasts, given from the chair, having been honoured,

Mr. W. F. TAYLOR proposed "Prosperity to the New Theatre, Cambridge." He commented upon the admirable manner in which the staff had carried out their duties, and said that much as he respected Mr Redfern and appreciated the work he did in the interests of the drama in Cambridge, he felt—and Mr Redfern must feel too—that a great deal of the success which had been achieved was due to the splendid way in which they backed up the efforts of the managing-director.

Mr W. B. REDFERN, in reply, tendered thanks to Mr Taylor for the kind way in which he had proposed the toast, and to the staff and visitors for the magnificent way in which they had received it. Not only did he thank the staff for the way they had received the toast, but for their loyal support during the past twelve months. He was, as Mr Taylor had said, not only proud of the "house," but of the staff. They stuck to him most loyally. During the past twelve months they had gone through a most trying ordeal. They had had difficulties to contend with in the way of powerful companies with an enormous amount of scenery, and they had gone through with every one of the performances without a hitch. That excellent state of things was due entirely to the staff. They had had large audiences on those occasions, and the staff in the front of the house had done their work as admirably as the staff on the stage. Mr Taylor had kindly alluded to the possibility of his coming forward again as a public servant outside the theatre. Well, he thought he had served his time. He had served his apprenticeship and his time fully as a public servant, and was always pleased to find that his friends were asking him to go back to public life, as, perhaps, it showed he did not disgrace the position he had held. There was one little incident which occurred early in his public career, during the time he held the highest office the Borough had to bestow, and at the commencement of the theatrical work in Cambridge. Before the present theatre was built, and during the time he was Mayor, some of his friends dared him to appear upon the stage and to play a part. They said that as Mayor of the Borough he could not do such a thing. He replied that he did not see why he could not be an actor as well as a mayor. He was proud of belonging to the theatrical profession, and appeared as Richelieu upon two or three occasions. His straitlaced friends who thought the Mayor ought not to appear on the stage in character were very much surprised, but he was happy to say he got through it without any trouble from those who at that time, when the theatre was scarcely established in the town, did not approve of the drama. They had had recently a very depressing time throughout the country in the way of theatrical success. He knew that in some of the very large towns—Manchester for one—they had been playing to very much smaller sums of money per night than at Cambridge. As little as £15 had been taken, when the expenses of the house would probably be £40 to £50, let alone what the touring manager would have to find for his share. That showed that the depression had affected the theatrical world. In Cambridge, he was happy to say, they had not suffered to the extent of some of the provincial towns. He was looking forward to a revival of trade, and he believed if the pessimists would die out and let the people with brighter hopes come to the front, they would do very much better business. He was strongly of opinion that a great deal of the depression was caused by what he might call "financial funk." People had become frightened, and debarred themselves of luxuries, and the greatest of all, the theatre. There was one thing from which the country had suffered. Latterly there had been a wonderful importation of the alien. The alien had come in shoals from Russia and from all parts, and was taking away the trade of the British working man. He was sure that presently there must be such an influx of Germans, Russians, and so on, that the present staff at the theatre would be ousted, and that he would have a foreign staff at work. He was sure he would have a Russian who could not speak a word of English taking the place of Mr Mansfield, a German financier taking the place of Mr Hall, and probably an Italian itinerant musician taking the place of Mr Briggs. That was really what was happening throughout the country. The foreigner came in and took work at very much less than the British labourer worked for, and the result was that the British workman was ousted. That was one of the reasons of the depression, and he hoped strongly that all parties in Parliament—he was not speaking politics—would see the necessity of stopping this immigration of the foreigner. The British working man would then have his rights again, and the pit and the gallery of theatres would once more be full. There was one little bright spot in this town. He was told there were four or five rather important building operations about to be commenced, and they would find some work for the bricklayer and labourer generally. Looking at it from a selfish point of view, the theatre would be one of the first to benefit by it. He had had great difficulty in securing proper companies for the Cambridge Theatre. He still had some important gaps in his date book, which he had had to fill at short notice. It was a matter of very great anxiety, but he hoped that with the help of some friendly managers in London he would be able to fill up next term with as good companies as in the previous terms. He sincerely thanked the staff for the gallant way in which at every moment they had helped him through his difficulties. They all knew how smoothly their house ran. He rarely had to find fault, and when such a rare occurrence happened he turned on his "bulldog," Mr Hall. His brother directors had spoken most kindly of the way the staff had worked. Mr Clark and Mr Swannell had expressed their delight at the kind of performances they had had, and the way in which the staff carried out their duties. He had to express their regret for not being present. Mr Clark was away from home, and Mr Swannell had sent his son to represent him, and, therefore, he needed no apology.

Mr A. G. SWANNELL proposed "The Staff."

Mr MANSFIELD returned thanks for the stage staff, and said they were all pleased to work under a managing-director whom they knew to be the best that could be found in the world.

Mr HALL replied on behalf of the staff in the front of the house.

Mr JACKSON gave "The Visitors," coupling with the toast the names of Messrs Taylor, Swannell, Piggott, and Baxter, for whom Mr W. F. TAYLOR replied.

The concluding toast was "The Committee," coupled with the names of Messrs Turner, Hastead, and Mansfield.

"CAILLETTE, JESTER."

A New and Original Play, in One Act,
by Miss Edith Halford-Thompson.
Produced for the First Time at the Theatre Royal, Exeter, on Friday Dec 16.

François I. ..... Mr HENRY CROCKER
Caillette ..... Mr WILLIAM E. ASHCROFT
Triboulet ..... Mr MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
Attendant ..... Mr CHRIS WALKER
Diane De Poitiers..... Miss E. HALFORD-THOMPSON

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Exeter was fittingly chosen for the production of Caillette, Jester, a new and original play, by Miss Edith Halford Thompson, the members of whose family have been so long associated with the city. The plot is based upon the love of a jester for a lady of high degree, at the Court of François I., of France, and the character of Caillette is legendary rather than historical—little or nothing is known of him, for in the Court journals of the time he is seldom mentioned, and then only in such a vague manner that but serves to draw still closer the veil of mystery which surrounds his name. Caillette, the Court fool, is so only in name, in mind and soul he is a poet, in beauty of face and grace of form he rivals the King himself, yet withal he is a man, for in his veins there runs the fiery blood of the Bourbons, and deep in his soul there dwells a smouldering fire ever ready to leap into flame. Such is the being who by a cruel fate is doomed to accept the honours and degradations of a Court fool. He is the supposed son of old Caillette, the hideous and deformed Court Jester. By order of the King's cousin, Charles De Bourbon, Grand Constable of France, he is suddenly removed from the kitchens of the palace, where he had spent his childhood among the baser servants of the court, and is, at his request, placed in the household of Monsieur De St. Vallier, and educated in companionship with his beautiful daughter, Diane. Together these two fair children grow to man and woman's estate, when suddenly there comes a change. Old Caillette dies and the King with deep design, but what, to all who know him, seems but a cruel whim, commands that Caillette takes up the office and the title left vacant by his reputed father. Caillette's entreaties, Diane's tears, are all in vain, even the protests of Monsieur De St. Vallier, to whom Caillette is almost as a son, are of no avail. "Le Roi commandait; il fallait obéir." Caillette has been but a few weeks in his new office, when Diane is betrothed to the old and deformed Count De Breze, and the play opens on the eve of the marriage, when a great banquet is being held in her honour. Outshone by the brilliance of his rival, Triboulet is in temporary disgrace, for Caillette has this night surpassed himself. With aching heart and frenzied brain he has striven to hide the tumult of his misery under a flow of wit that calls forth the surprise and admiration of all but Triboulet, who listens in an outer hall to the plaudits bestowed upon his hated rival. Later in the evening Caillette learns from Triboulet, who, in the office of Purveyor of Pleasure to the King, is acquainted with all the King's secret affairs, the knowledge that François has sent De Brézé to the Spanish frontier on a fool's errand, and that the honour of the fair and innocent Diane is at stake. Crossing the hall in the darkness, to the passage leading to Diane's chambers, François is suddenly confronted by Caillette with a drawn sword. François first laughs, then threatens to call the guard and have Caillette arrested, Caillette retorts he will do neither, "for it would look but ill for the whole court to know the meaning of De Brézé's sudden departure." Stung to fury, the King calls to Caillette to stand aside, or he will run him through. Caillette bids the King defend himself, as he will pass that threshold only over Caillette's dead body. François, with a mocking laugh, declines to cross swords with the Court fool. Flinging his fool's cap at the King's feet and breaking his wooden sword, the symbol of his office, across his knee, Caillette cries that he is a jester no longer, but De Bourbon only. Then from the King's own lips he learns the secret of his birth—the reason for his cruel bondage. He is no son of old Caillette—but the base-born son of Charles De Bourbon, idol of the people, and yet traitor to France. They fight and Caillette falls. His last thoughts are for Diane, his dying breath a prayer to heaven to save the soul of the sweet child-bride, for whom, on the altar of his silent unconfessed love, he now lays down his shattered life.

The piece had been excellently rehearsed, and went without a hitch of any sort. The staging and effects were exceedingly good, the play proving from first to last eminently successful. In Caillette, Jester, Miss Halford-Thompson affords evidence of being a dramatist of great promise, her subject has been treated with dramatic power and lacks nothing in interest throughout. Miss Halford Thompson herself gave a tasteful and finished rendering of Diane De Poitiers, and at the fall of the curtain was presented with three handsome bouquets. Mr William E. Ashcroft is to be congratulated on his impersonation of Callette, his conception, though full of tragic intensity being characterised by true artistic restraint. Mr Henry Crocker did well as François I., while Mr Michael Sherbrooke ably portrayed Triboulet.

THE LONDON DIRECTORY.

One of the annual events which precedes the Christmas season is the publication of the Post Office London Directory. The hundred and sixth issue covers the whole of the County of London, and thus for the first time includes those areas which have been previously looked upon as beyond the scope of the Directory itself. The complete volume contains in its two divisions 4,600 pages (exclusive of advertisements), but by the use of a finer paper, and the resetting of a portion of the County Suburbs section, the bulk of the combined directories in one volume is not greatly in excess of the London Directory alone in its usual form. This publication has gradually expanded from a volume of very moderate size in 1800 to its present massive proportions. It has grown with the growth of London, and every year this wonderful book of reference becomes more indispensable to the inhabitants of the metropolis, and those who have business transactions with them. By the system adopted, corrections are able to be made in some of the divisions down to a few days preceding publication. For instance, the Earl of Hardwick, who died Nov. 29, no longer appears as Under Secretary for India, and the Earl of Essex, whose election as representative for East Marylebone on the London County Council in succession to Mr C. Bridgeman took place on Dec. 5, is included in the list of members of the Council given in the City and municipal division.

A POPULAR THEATRICAL PROPRIETOR.

MR. HARRIS FINEBERG.

The subject of this sketch was born in the profession, if the fact of his ancestor being connected with the stage at the time of his birth be allowed as evidence of that statement. When "Harris," as he is familiarly called, first saw the light of day in the early sixties, the old Colosseum Theatre, in Paradise-street, Liverpool, was directly opposite to the paternal home. Then, there was no reason to believe that the new arrival would, nearly forty years later, become the sole proprietor of the popular Star Theatre, which is but a stone's throw distant from his place of birth.

At the period mentioned his father, the late Isaac Fineberg, in conjunction with David Lazarus and William Ambrose, conducted the Star, that and Day's, of Birmingham being then regarded as the principal variety theatres out of London. In fact, any artist engaged at either of the two mentioned places considered it to be a great stepping-stone towards success. Many of the old Liverpool playgoers will recall the pleasant times they spent in the old "Star" a quarter of a century or more ago. For a long period that music hall was far and away above other places of its character. And it had a very small beginning. Starting some sixty years ago as a public house with a singing licence, it was about forty years back reconstructed and brought up to date, the rear portion of the building being considerably enlarged, and a gallery and boxes added. Here, with the well-known Dan Saunders as manager, splendid business was done by Messrs Fineberg, Lazarus, and Ambrose, for nearly a generation, all the great artistes of the kingdom being among the bookings. Included in these may be mentioned George Leybourne, Jenny Hill; Ashcroft, "the solid man;" Sisters Leamar, Frank Coyne, Jolly Nash, Charles Godfrey, Bessie Bonehill, Bessie Bellwood, Dan Leno, Original Two Macs, the M'Connell Family, &c. About ten years ago the original proprietors disposed of the place to a limited liability company, who ran it for a short time with but poor result. The appearance of the great music hall trusts, which to-day own all the principal leading variety artistes, gradually told upon the position of the "Star," and the place, which was formerly regarded as a gold-mine, fell upon evil days.

Mr Harris Fineberg, having completed his education at the Liverpool Institute—a school from which many men now occupying good positions have emanated—naturally drifted into his father's profession, and became connected with a theatrical agency, which he afterwards conducted for some years. Eventually he made a bold plunge, and entered managerial life, taking the New Muncaster Theatre, Bootle, under his control. Whilst there he decided to try his luck with the Star, whose good fortune was rapidly on the decline. A few months of the variety business convinced him that it was useless to fight against the big syndicates which were then rapidly absorbing all the first-class talent, and accordingly he decided to adopt good melodrama at popular prices. Many friends expressed their doubts as to the wisdom of the change, but Mr Fineberg seemed absolutely convinced that the step he had taken was the right one. The present day result is evidence of the correctness of his view. After a few months' uncertainty, the tide gradually turned, and for five years the Star, now known as the Home of Melodrama, has enjoyed a success that may well be envied. Cosy, prettily upholstered in crimson, well conducted, with a bright orchestra, and at popular prices, the little place in Williamson-square has drawn to it many hundreds of persons who are regular weekly visitors. Summer and winter alike the patronage of the "Star" is great, no vacation being observed, and nearly every week the capacity of the house is taxed to its utmost. From time to time Mr Fineberg puts on the finest of melodramas, when it is common to find the theatre filled almost by means of the early doors. Only last week, when The Female Swindler was being performed, several regular habitués, who were refused admission owing to the packed condition of the house, asked "why Mr Fineberg could not have the walls made of indiarubber." For the coming year he has accepted several important contracts, among these being a new drama, to be presented at an early date, that has been specially written by a Liverpool author, and which deals with a local episode that has never been dramatised before.

In social life Mr Fineberg is extremely popular. He is a past master of the Liverpool Dramatic Lodge, 1,609, and has hosts of friends both inside and outside the craft. Last November he sought municipal honours, and fought Sandhills Ward in the Conservative interest, against great odds. The locality is a hot-bed of Liberalism and Irish Nationalism; nevertheless Mr Fineberg made a gallant and honest fight, and, though defeated, he maintained the figures of previous Tory candidates. Non-success to a man of indomitable spirit like Mr Fineberg merely acts as an incentive to go on, and he will again be found in the political arena when opportunity serves. The theatrical profession of Liverpool sorely needs a representative in high places, and to occupy such a trust it would be difficult to find a stronger or more determined men than the popular "Harris."

A fairly reliable test of a man's true character is to be found in the manner in which he treats his servants. This test applied to Mr Fineberg reflects credit upon him. All his employees work under the best possible conditions. Their wages are as high as any paid in the profession, and old hands who were connected with the Star when the present proprietor was very young are retained. Mr Bayman, the conductor of the orchestra, who is one of Mr Fineberg's most esteemed employees, has served the theatre faithfully for twenty-four years; Mr Simmons, the acting-manager, and his deputy, Mr W. M'Taggart, have been with Mr Fineberg for a long period, and even the old carpenter who, in the forgotten past, arranged the stage machinery for the famous Lulu is still on the pension list. It is a delicate matter to allude to a living man's philanthropy, but the private kindnesses done by Mr Fineberg are known only to a select few in the city. Even now he is arranging with the Liverpool Food and Betterment Association, which feeds thousands of ragged children each week, to supply meals to large numbers of poor men during the present industrial distress. Besides the valuable Star Mr Fineberg is concerned with other theatrical enterprises, all of which have enjoyed a fair measure of success. This record would not be complete unless reference was made to Mrs Fineberg. That charming lady who presides at the ville, which is situated on the banks of the Mersey, at Birkdale, near Southport, is frequently seen in her motor car. Mrs Fineberg, like her husband, evinces a deep interest in charitable movements, and is always ready to lend every assistance to a good cause.

MR. HARRIS FINEBERG.

THE ROYALTY THEATRE CASE.

In the Court of Chancery, on the 16th inst., before Mr Justice Farwell, was heard the action Theatres, Limited, v. Stevens and others. In November, 1895, the defendant Miss Kate Santley, who was then the lessee, sublet the Royalty Theatre to the plaintiffs for a term of years expiring in 1905, and in February, 1896, she granted a further underlease for a term ending in 1926. In February, 1896, the plaintiffs mortgaged the theatre for the respective residues of the two underleases to the defendant George Stevens, for £3,000 at 6 per cent. interest. In 1897 the plaintiffs were in financial difficulties, and Miss Santley re-entered and took possession of the premises, claiming to be entitled by forfeiture to determine the underlease of November, 1895. In September, 1897, the defendant Stevens brought an action against Miss Santley claiming to be relieved as mortgagee upon terms against the forfeiture of the said underlease. On Nov. 26, 1897, the defendant Stevens obtained a foreclosure order nisi in an action against Theatres, Limited. On Feb. 23, 1898, Mr Adolf Drucker, who was then a member of Parliament and a man of means, took an assignment from the defendant Stevens, under the latter's power of sale, of his mortgage on the premises for the sum of £2,785, and was subsequently substituted for Stevens as plaintiff in the action for relief against Miss Santley. In December, 1898, this action was compromised upon terms for the surrender of the underleases and the granting of a new lease, the management of the theatre and the division of the profits to be made between Miss Santley and Mr Drucker; and this arrangement was carried out by various deeds. Mr Adolf Drucker was adjudicated a bankrupt in August, 1901, and the defendant Basden is his trustee. In March, 1902, the defendant Basden agreed to sell all Mr Drucker's interest in the premises to Miss Santley for £2,500, and the premises were assigned, by direction of Miss Santley, to the defendant Lockhart M. H. Kennedy. The plaintiffs alleged that Miss Santley had been acting in collusion with Mr Drucker in order to deprive them of their property, and that the defendant Stevens had sold for an undervalue. They claimed that the various agreements and indentures involved should be set aside and an account rendered.

Mr Gore-Browne and Mr George Wallace appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr Upjohn, K.C., and Mr A. B. Terrell for Miss Santley and Kennedy; Mr Jenkins, K.C., Mr Lowe, K.C., and Mr Ward Coldridge for Stevens; and Mr H. E. Wright for the trustee in bankruptcy.

After hearing the evidence and the speeches of counsel, Mr Justice Farwell said that the plaintiffs' claim was an unreasonable one. Drucker had purchased with full knowledge and assent of the company, and there was no collusion between Drucker and Miss Santley. The former had bought a doubtful property which he wished to utilise to the best advantage, and he naturally came to terms with Miss Santley. All this time the company made no sign, and in 1902 it went into liquidation. It was not now open to the company after all these years to come forward and ask that everything be set aside. Then it was said that Stevens sold at an undervalue. The evidence showed that that was not the case. The action entirely failed, and must be dismissed with costs.

MR. HERBERT WARING.

In the Court of Bankruptcy, on Tuesday, before Mr Registrar Linklater, an application for discharge was made by Mr Herbert Waring Rutty, known as Herbert Waring, of O.d Bond-street, who was adjudged bankrupt on Oct. 13 last. The liabilities were estimated at £2,725 6s. 1d., and the assets at £15 17s. 8d. The bankrupt had stated that in July, 1901, he formed and registered a public company named Play (Limited) with the object of producing a piece entitled A Man of His Word, in which he was engaged to take the principal part. The bankrupt entered into an agreement with Mrs Lillie De Bathe, the petitioning creditor, for a tenancy of the Imperial Theatre, Westminster, at a weekly rent of £160, and on July 24, 1901, he assigned the agreement to Play (Limited). The play was produced at the Imperial Theatre in August, 1901, but proved a failure, and was withdrawn after a run of five weeks. In November, 1901, the bankrupt was sued by the petitioning creditor for rent of the Imperial Theatre. The action was successfully defended by the bankrupt in the court of first instance, but the petitioning creditor was successful on appeal. The bankrupt attributed his insolvency to the judgment obtained against him in that action, and to the excess of his household and personal expenditure, which was about £1,500 a-year, over his income, which amounted to about £1,000.

The Official Receiver reported that he had received since the bankruptcy sums amounting to £43 6s. 8d. out of the bankrupt's earnings, and that the bankrupt was willing to set aside during the ensuing two years a portion of his earnings for the benefit of the creditors.

The bankrupt consented to judgment for the full amount of his debts, to be satisfied by his paying to the Official Receiver one quarter of any salary received by the bankrupt during the next two years, such quarter to be increased to one-third part if the bankrupt obtained an engagement of three months or longer at a salary of £40 a-week or more, and the Registrar granted the discharge upon the terms proposed.

AT Clerkenwell Police-court, on Saturday, Mr Lealie Hughes applied to the magistrate on behalf of the proprietors of the Camden Theatre, for the customary consent to engage twenty children for the pantomime. It was stated that they were to perform in a flying ballet. Mr D'Eyncourt—Are these children regularly doing this sort of thing? Inspector Dyball—No, sir. This is the first time they have been engaged. They are all attending the Camden-street elementary school. All the children were present in court, accompanied by their mothers. Mr D'Eyncourt said the little girls appeared healthy enough, and he had no objection to giving his consent.

To the customary situations in provincial melodrama, with its carpentered scenes, we find a complete contrast in The Sledge-Hammer—a drama which the late Mr Wilson Barrett adapted from the Flemish some eight years since. It is a piece that has sharply defined contrasts of character, and the elemental passions of love, hate, and revenge are brought into relief by natural means and with the powerful touch of an experienced playwright. More than all, the piece is human; the characters are not mere puppets, but are in sympathy with their environment; and there is an absence of that crudity in the comic situations which so often makes the judicious grieve. The piece grips the attention from the first, and the story is told in a succession of scenes that never fail to be vivid and interesting. The plot runs as follows:—Mathew Derrick, an old farmer and master blacksmith, has married twice, and the fruit of his second union is Everard, a young man of refined tastes, who is greatly disliked by the two sons of the first marriage, Jacob and Simon, hulking, brutal fellows. Mrs Derrick number two accepted Mathew for mercenary reasons, really loving John Merlo, a veterinary surgeon. When the action of the play opens Mathew is seriously ill and not expected to live. The love of Everard for Rose Maywell, the adopted daughter of Mathew, excites the jealousy of Jacob and Simon, and the disputes which follow agitate the old blacksmith so much that he dies in a fit.

The second act takes place in the house, now the property of the widow. She announces to the family assembled her intended union with Merlo, to which Jacob and Simon seemingly assent, Everard only objecting. The two brothers, who have been moved by the savage reproaches of the late Derrick's brother Cornelius to murder the widow, resolve to act upon his suggestions. Jacob procures a knife belonging to Everard, and enters his step-mother's bedroom and stabs her, he and Simon then making their escape. Everard appears, raises an alarm, and is immediately accused of the crime and arrested. In act three the inquest takes place, and chiefly on Jacob's evidence Everard is sent for trial for murder, refusing a false alibi, offered by his distracted sweetheart. In the last act, however, Rose succeeds in proving her lover's innocence. By coquetting with the twin brothers, she sets one against the other. They fight with hammers, and after a conflict which excites audiences to the highest pitch Simon is slain, the survivor being forced to make a confession by the timely appearance of Everard, who has contrived to escape from his place of incarceration. Rose and Everard are thus reunited, and all ends happily.

The representation of the attractive piece is in the hands of Messrs Alfred Northway and W. V. Garrod. The former appears as Everard Derrick, and the latter plays Jacob Derrick, the villain. Mr Northway has a bright, earnest style, and his expressive gesture play adds much to the interest of the scene at the inquest. In the more active discharge of his duties—in the scene of the murder especially—he strikes the note of chivalry and high resolve in a way that makes him an immense favourite. Mr Garrod's villain, with his rough animalism, his grim ferocity, and his determination, is most interesting. His rugged-looking features, his sinister glances, and his scornful contempt of his weaker companion are all means to an end, and that is to convince the audience in front of him that Jacob is a bold, unscrupulous villain, without a scintilla of remorse or repentance. Mr Garrod does not handle the part with kid gloves, and there is every evidence that the actor makes a deep impression. Mr Charles Herberte's Mathew Derrick is a capital study of bucolic age; and there is much to praise in Mr Charles Halling's Simon Derrick, the lesser villain, who suffers from conscience. The fight is a genuinely realistic struggle, and both Mr Garrod and Mr Halling exhibit a ferocity in their attacks on each other that is at times absolutely appalling. The humour of the piece is supplied principally by Mr Frank Dallas, who resumes his original part of Sammy Shaws, 14 D, a rural constable. Sammy is not among the bravest, but he has a deep respect for the majesty of the law. His remarks are invariably accompanied by laughter. One of the most amusing colloquies in the piece is that between Sammy and Tom Walker, the foreman blacksmith and the friend of the hero. Tom in the person of Mr Frank Litchfield has an excellent command of the vernacular of the Ridings, and may be said to bowl over the "force" by regular Yorkers. He is vastly amusing is Mr Litchfield, and great credit is due to him for so ably filling the breach suddenly caused by the absence of the gentleman originally engaged to play the part. Mr Laurence Konrad is an effective John Merlo; Mr Leo St. Clair is well placed as Dr. Clarke; and Mr Walter Vincent is satisfactory as Ezra Walker, a benevolent gaoler. Miss Bertha Kingston is an attractive and sympathetic heroine, and her coquetting with the rough, uncouth Jacob stamps her as an actress of considerable ability. Rose determines that dovelike simplicity and maidenly reserve shall be temporarily sacrificed for the man she loves, and she carries out her scheme of inveiglement with rare spirit and tact. The scene, indeed, is excellently played. Miss Fanny Thorne, who as Martha Derrick disappears early from the scene, makes the distressful scene of Martha's murder sufficiently harrowing; and the unblushing verbosity—clack is, perhaps, the better word—of Catherine Hennis enables Miss Ivy Ellaline Thorne to give us many amusing moments. The play is mounted excellently, the Forge scene being quite admirable and worthy of the practical Mr William Bailey, who never fails to do his utmost for the pieces that are put on at the popular Church-street house. The Sledge-Hammer is going on tour, and there should be success for a drama so interesting and so well played.

ON Tuesday and Wednesday evenings this week Planquette's romantic comic opera, in three acts, entitled Rip Van Winkle, was performed by the North London Operatic Society at the Opera House, Crouch-end, under the surpervision of Mr Lynn Royd.

AT Clerkenwell Police-court on Tuesday Mr Oswald Brand applied to Mr Bros for licence to employ about twenty little girls at the Grand Theatre in connection with the forthcoming pantomime, Babes in the Wood. Mr Bros asked whether the police were satisfied with the arrangements made for the children at the theatre. Sub-divisional Inspector Coles said everything was satisfactory. Mr Oswald Brand said a separate room was provided at the theatre for the children, they were provided with refreshments, and were under the direct charge of two matrons. Mr Bros asked if the children were healthy. A chorus of mothers replied in the affirmative. Mr Bros gave the necessary permission for the children to perform.

PROVINCIAL PANTOMIMES.

"JACK AND THE BEANSTALK" AT EDINBURGH.

Messrs Howard and Wyndham's pantomime Jack and the Beanstalk was presented in sumptuous style at the Theatre Royal for the first time on Thursday evening, the 15th inst., to an audience that crowded the building in every part. The performance was received with continuous applause, and proved an undoubted success. For an initial representation it went with remarkable smoothness, and with repeated encores played for nearly four and a half hours. Of course, some compression will be necessary, and with so much that is good to deal with it will be somewhat of a problem to know where to begin. However, Mr F. W. Wyndham secured an artistic triumph from the very first; the traditions of pantomime associated with the honoured name of Wyndham were worthily upheld, and everyone present was charmed with the elegance, freshness, and wholesome humour of the entertainment. The libretto by Mr William Wade tells the story intelligently and effectively, and is crowded with smart local and semi-political allusions, the principal comedians having been well cared for. The scenery, always a notable attraction here, is again a leading feature, and is deserving of our warmest praise, while the dresses, all of which show fanciful design and a marvellous display of colour, are indeed lovely. The music is melodious, and at the same time catchy, and many popular airs were quickly caught up and chorussed with ardour on the opening night. In the spirited overture, the fine incidental music, and in the accompaniments Mr Geo. Burnley secured an excellent rendering from the large and well-balanced orchestra he so ably controls. The curtain rises on The Village of Tweedle-dee, a scene replete with light and colour, where the lads and lasses are gaily disporting themselves in honour of the local cattle show, at which it is expected Dame Trot's cow, Wilhelmina, will carry off first prize The Giant Blunderbore has been oppressing the country with taxation, and when the villagers hope to defy him Snap and Snorum, his emissaries, appear and threaten to evict all who fail to pay. The pair, who are also scheming the ruin of Jack, the Dame's son, who is in love with Phœbe, the village beauty, intend to seize the girl and carry her off to the Giant's Castle. The cow, Wilhelmina, proves a comical animal. Other characters, Ronald M'Pherson, the Dame's cousin, and Captain Gottem, an aeronaut, arrive in an air-ship, and after lively encounters all round, a sprightly concerted number closes the scene. The next, The Entrance to the Cattle Show, affords the principals opportunity for more amusing business, and a plot for the disqualification of Dame Trot's cow advances. Later on, Jack is persuaded to sell the animal to Snap for thirty pounds, the buyer artfully substituting a bag of beans for the gold. Following this we are introduced to the Widow's Cottage, where, after that lady has descanted learnedly on Fiscal matters, and a pre-eminently graceful dance been given by the Eight Tiller Girls, the coming of Jack is anxiously waited. When he does come, however, the expected gold is found to be only beans, which his angry mother throws out of the door. Seeing he has been tricked, Jack vows vengeance against Snap and Snorum, who, it seems, have already got away with Phœbe and Margery, another village maiden, by the new beanstalk, which is rapidly growing up to the skies. Jack thanks the fairies for their aid, and rushes off to climb the magic tree in pursuit of his sweetheart and her friend. At the top we reach Cloudland, where Jack meets Luna, and receives a golden axe to help him in his coming encounter with the Giant. Ronald, Gottem, and the Dame appear in an air-ship, and are afterwards overwhelmed in a terrific rain storm worked by photographic agency, the various effects of which are greeted with loud applause. This leads to scene five, the Home of the Stars, a fanciful arrangement by Mr R. C. Oldham, who is also responsible for the four preceding scenes, all admirable examples of the scene painter's art. At first, when pervaded with soft tones of colour, some very enchanting effects are produced, and afterwards, illuminated by a flood of quivering light, it presented a scene of surpassing loveliness. Here companies of superbly apparelled figures assemble, and, marching in stately measure, fill the stage in ever increasing numbers, forming in the end a pageant of dazzling grandeur. The second part of the pantomime opens in the Giant's Kitchen, where Blunderbore himself appears with his comical cooks, who have to mount ladders in setting the table. Snap and Snorum bring in their fair prisoners, who greatly delight the Giant, while Jack appearing soon bravely defies the monster. Ronald, Gottem, and the Dame make a ludicrous entrance down the chimney, and much good business and various specialities bring this capital scene to a close. In the seventh, A Ravine in Giantland, we witness the escape of Jack and his friends; and when Blunderbore follows, our hero, using his trusty axe with effect at the Base of the Beanstalk, cuts down the tree, and the long-dreaded ogre is killed. Later on, in A Quiet Corner, a pictorial chef d'œuvre from the brush of Mr T. E. Ryan, the Giant's pocket-book reveals the fact that Jack is the rightful heir to the estates of Tweedledee, so, all his troubles over, he resolves to marry Phœbe. This event leads the characters to The Battlements of Jack's Palace, a striking design by Mr T. F. Dunn, where a review of the soldiers of all nations takes place, a choral processional spectacle that forms a bright and effective conclusion to the evening's entertainment. The culminating glories of this splendid tableau caused immense cheering, and calls for Mr F. W. Wyndham, who duly appeared; Mr John J. Lloyd, the stage-manager; Mr F. F. Dunn, scenic artist; and Mr George Burnley, musical director, also sharing in the ovation. The Beanstalk would be nothing without Jack, and the most fetching and bewitching exponent of the rôle has been found in Miss Lily Harold, whose perfect figure, rose-sweet face, and fascinating manner make her the beau ideal of a principal boy. In all scenes she was grace personified, and her singing of "The rain came pitter patter down" was as charming as it was artistic. "Blue Bell" had a true note of pathos, and "Under a Panama Hat," with the Tiller Girls assisting, was a huge success. Like all the house we were quite in love with Miss Daisy Le Hay, who was a bonnie Phœbe, and moved like a shaft of light through the scenes of the story. This young actress possesses unusual talent as a comedienne, and when we saw her as Nan, in A Country Girl, recently, we were astonished and delighted with her performance. Miss Violet Englefield was radiant with brightness and vivacity as Major Hortitoff, the Giant's Major Domo, and had some good songs, "If I had a girl as nice as you" going splendidly. Miss Lillian Grahame made an attractive appearance as Margery, the village coquette, and Miss Cecilia Wilman as Queen of the Stars secured a big reception for her song "Navaho," which was finely sung. The Tiller Troupe of dancers provided quite a carnival of grace to delight all lovers of the mazy art, and their successive appearances imparted a fairy brightness and lightness to the entertainment, and reflected the highest credit on their famous trainer. Of course, the comedians are the chief motive power of a good pantomime, and the latest Royal fun-feast can boast of a lively and hard-working trio. Mr Malcolm Scott, who plays the Dame, is the quintessence of quaintness and originality, and made an instantaneous hit. Rejoicing in a real comic personality and a simple but irrepressible style, which will be remembered by pantomime patrons for many a long day, Mr Scott's Dame Trot was a humorous revelation, and assuredly no more amusing patter, both in conception and delivery, has been heard here for some time. Not only as actor and singer, but as dancer Mr Scott shone, his Terpsichorean vagaries after his song, "You never know your luck," causing the heartiest laughter and applause. Another comedian who exerted a strong personal appeal was that experienced and versatile actor Mr Ambrose Manning, whose Captain Gottem was a memorable creation in drollery and tomfoolery. He kept the house constantly amused by his "Johnnified" jests and jocularities, and his catch-remark, "Not at all," promises to become one of the phrases of the season. The Ronald M'Pherson of Mr J. T. Macmillan was "the real Mackay," the genuine article, racy of the soil. His "braid Scots" was music in the ears of pit and gallery, and his typically Doric brand of humour pleased all parts of the house. His song, "Stop your tickling," was cleverly rendered. Mr Harry Lupino, the celebrated animal impersonator, caused shouts of laughter by his realistic antics as the cow Wilhelmina, and afterwards, assisted by his clever young son, filled in a capital scene when they appeared and frisked about nimbly as a couple of poodles. Master Lupino here also scored as the young Squire, his song and dance, delightfully backed by the Tiller girls, receiving a triple encore. Snap and Snorum were cleverly played by Mr Arthur Ricketts and Mr Arthur Dandoe, and Smiler and Smirk, the cooks, had droll representatives in Messrs Griffin and Marks, whose knockabout acrobatic turn was particularly good, securing lavish applause. The giant Blunderbore himself was a tremendous piece of work in the clever hands of Mr Geo. Lake Grange, who presented a figure a dozen feet high, and soon made himself popular with old and young. The pantomime went well all through under the energetic and unflagging supervision of Mr John J. Lloyd, the properties being by Mr George Sutherland, the electric light effects by Messrs James Whitehead and D. Torrance, the machinery and mechanical effects by Mr W. J. M'Dougall, and the costumes by Alias, Harrison, and Co., Limited, Elkan Brothers, and Mrs Smyth. In front of the house the comfort of visitors was well looked after by Mr Walter Hollister, who filled his accustomed post with all the courtesy and business thoroughness which have made him officially indispensable and personally one of the most popular of acting-managers.

"THE BABES IN THE WOOD" AT BIRMINGHAM.

Mr Tom B. Davis's first Birmingham pantomime, entitled The Babes in the Wood, was produced at the Theatre Royal on Monday. Imprimis, it may be said that Birmingham has been brought up on pantomime, from the "good old-fashioned" annual of our fathers, to the time when, in 1872, Macdermott first planted the banner of the music halls on the historic boards of the old Theatre Royal; and so on, down to the present time. Therefore, Mr Davis may all the more congratulate himself in that he has at once gained the favourable verdict of an audience which is notoriously critical by nature and wise by experience. Indeed, so favourable was this verdict that it appeared that the "house" was predisposed to that end, for the artists could do no wrong, and the mounting gave the most obvious satisfaction, Mr Davis at the conclusion having to respond in person, and with a speech to the laudatory and vociferous comments of the house. Of course, with a new working staff, working on a new plane, one naturally expects a hitch or two, but here there were none, so well had the "producer," Mr J. Paul Callan, marshalled his forces and resources; but that the humour of the situations will need to be strengthened is not to be doubted. In this direction Mr Bert Gilbert works like a true artiste, and to him the hit of the pantomime may be fairly ascribed. His catch phrase, "How did I get this medal?" will become the by-word of the streets, and his songs, "All the girls are loverly-overly," with its clever "business," and "Rip Van Winkle," are already familiar in the mouths of our urchins. Mr Gilbert is by no means a ferocious baron, his impersonation warranting smiles from folk of all ages. Miss Lily Iris is our principal boy, Robin Hood, and being a new claimant for Birmingham favours, was the cynosure of all eyes. Fair and slight of height, her sprightly movements attracted attention, whatsoever direction they took, while her pretty renderings of "Little Yo-San," "Blue Bell," and "My English Maid" were hall-marked with real ability and success. Miss Gladys Ward stamped the part of Marion with a comely appearance, and every other qualification that a pantomime heroine need possess, her songs, "The Sweetest Girl in Dixie" in particular, being delivered with much sweetness of expression. The "Babes" are very important characters as played by Miss Maidie Andrews as Cissie, and Miss Phyllis Dare as Charley, and are already the pets of the pantomime. Their nurse, the "weak woman," Flossie Woffle, was represented by Mr J. F. M'Ardle with all the fripperies and humours of a clever pantomime dame, and his encounters with Mr Bert Gilbert's Baron were richly enjoyed. The two robbers, Hangdog and Quiver, engage the talents of Messrs Henry Wright and Daley Cooper respectively, and Towser, the faithful canine attendant to the Babes, was mimicked by Mr Fred Farren with remarkable fidelity. One of the successes indubitably was the Toy Soldier, played by Mr Fred Walton, whose every entree in this quaint and smart impersonation brought him a round of applause. The Eight of Hearts (Mr Hartley Milburn's clever troupe) participate successfully, and Miss Mabel Lait is distinguishable for her clear delivery as Will Scarlet; Miss Dollie Neville as Allan-a-Dale, Miss Alice Davies as Little John, Miss Monica Sayer as Dorothy, Miss Louis Mavis as Dorcas, Miss Mildred Clair as Phyllis, Miss Nina Glyn as Winifred, and Miss Jeannie Christoe as Margaret making palpable hits. Miss Connie Loxton acted well as the Household Fairy, who spirits the Babes to the realms of Toy Country, and this brings us to the scenic appointments, which richly suffice. Scene One, Nottingham Market-place, is a picture calculated to prepossess an audience at once, presenting as it did on Saturday last a vision of varied and delicious colour, together with a moving "coruscation of beauty and talent." This bore the mark of prodigal display, refined with perfect harmony. Here the characters live their lives, for the nonce, and we are at once brought into touch with the Babes, their uncle (the sometime bold but always humorous Baron Blobber), the Nurse, Maid Marion, and Robin Hood, with a numerous and gorgeous crowd, and events shape themselves speedily. Now enters Maid Marion, with her little charges, the Babes. Marion has an appointment, so we learn from the Babes, with "a pretty gentleman with a bow and arrow," who proves to be none other than Robin Hood. They are joined by the nurse, who has come into "a little bit of property," whereon the mercenary disposition of the Baron is exposed instanter. He proceeds to woo the nurse, who receives his welcome attentions after the manner of all good pantomime dames, till rival suitors in the guise of the Duke of Poopendyke and Lord Fitzgig arrive. These are the robbers in disguise, nevertheless the Baron has the mortification of seeing le grande dame carried away in triumph under his very nose. He has, however, the satisfaction of ordering the arrest of Robin Hood, who aspires to his daughter Marion's hand. Robin escapes, and we are taken Towards Home, which is the title of the second scene, and which, albeit only a front cloth, is quite as creditable in its way as the preceding set. Here the Babes, attended by the faithful and diverting Towser, indulge the audience with harmony, their efforts resolving in a prettily rendered duet, "Oob," with dance. The Baron, failing his designs on Nurse's property, is now intent on the "slaughter of the innocents," meaning the Babes, one of whom, Cissie, already complains of a pain in her "tummy," the result of eating sweets, which the Baron, knowing them to contain arsenic, had paid for. Scene three discloses the Archery Tournament, another resplendent set, and next, the Nursery, paves the way to the Town of Toyland, a quaint idea, quaintly carried out. In this the Toy Soldier plays an effective part in the marshalling of the toys, which comprise a truly wonderful and gigantic collection, and cannot fail to delight children of all growths. In this scene the clever and popular octet take part again, winning applause of a most lavish kind for their smart and elegant dancing; and this animated picture marks the conclusion of the first act of the pantomime. Part two discloses The Baron's Shop, the Baron, it may be presumed, having "gone into trade" to repair his shattered fortunes, with Hangdog and Quiver (the Two Robbers) as his assistants. However, there is more fun than trade in the establishment, and the fate of the Babes becomes imminent, the Robbers undertaking to destroy them at "trade union" terms, with "five per cent. taken off for cash." The Fringe of the Wood shows the chase for the Babes, and later, in The Heart of the Forest, the search party effect a rescue. A diverting Restaurant scene follows, in which Mr Bert Gilbert introduces his version of the "Magic Kettle" with much mirth-provoking results, and the Toy Soldier is also and again in good evidence. Scene the fifth, and last, takes us to Robin Hood's Palace, where Robin Hood is wedded to Maid Marion, and a most brilliant finale is reached, coincident with the rising into view of a replica of a wedding cake of the most enormous dimensions and tasteful design. The "book" has engaged the united efforts of Messrs A. M. Thompson (Dangle) and Robert Courtneige, who have provided the cast with excellent opportunities; and the lyrics by Mr Chas. H. Taylor, and the music by Mr Herbert E. Haines made a pleasant impression. Mr Guy Jones, the resident musical director, has contributed and selected additional numbers, and his quota towards the success of the pantomime cannot be overestimated, while the members of the orchestra at his command, which numbers twenty-eight executants, acquitted themselves admirably. The scenery, which is magnificent and most artistic, is the work of Messrs T. Holmes, R. C. M'Cleery, E. H. Ryan, Philip Howden, and Stafford Hall. The lovely and tasteful costumes, which have been specially designed for this production by Wilhelm, are by Mons. Llandolf, of Paris, and Morris Angel and Sons, London. The chorus excited the utmost admiration with their well-drilled and buoyant motions, while the singing was admirable. Here every face was animate with expression, and, of a truth, Mr Davis's young ladies feel a pleasure and an interest in their work. The smart "Jack-in-the-box" dance by Mr Fred Farren in the capital of Toyland must not pass unrecognised, and on last Saturday's performance alone, and the reception thereof, to say nothing of the many improvements which have since appeared, Mr Davis is warranted in writing down his first Birmingham pantomime a truly popular success.

"LITTLE BO-PEEP" AT MANCHESTER.

Monday's event at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, was the production of Little Bo-Peep by Mr J. Gar Kiddie. The story is told in more or less orthodox fashion by Mr George Burton, whose argument includes the time-honoured Demon scene for an opening, in which the Demon Wolf decides that Bo-Peep shall be his quarry. The events of the pantomime are centred in the happy village of Hay-down-Derry, a very effective set, in which all the principal actors are introduced. We have the Baron Hardup (Mr E. H. Bertram) whose designs, of course, are inimical to the interest of those whom the good fairy Moonbeam has already decided to assist; we have also his flunkeys, Weary William and Tired Thomas (Messrs J. Myers and H. Selby), a pair of comic fellows who have much mischief to do, and who do it in the well-known humorous style of pantomime villains. Then comes Granny Brown (Mr J. W. Groves), who keeps a school apparently for the purpose of proving how funny she can be behind the desk; and in addition to our old friends Johnnie Stout and Jimmy Green (Messrs J. Blarney and Will Kennard), who keep up the reputation of innumerable forerunners so named, something like a novelty is seen in the person of one Tommy Long, a baby 6ft. high, whose development through various stages from babyhood to a sophisticated manhood is phenomenally quick and entertaining. Mr J. Gar Kiddie's proportions and comic gifts fit him admirably for this part, and he carries out the idea with due regard to the especial peculiarities of childhood and youth, very much to the amusement of the audience. Miss Lizzie Payne is Bo Peep, and the least that can be said of her is that she is pretty, graceful, and can trip a measure in charming style. She has the further interest of being accompanied by real sheep, who get lost apparently in the search for real herbage among the delusive scenery. Boy Blue is, of course, bonnie and gallant in the person of Miss Flo Warner, who has the vivacious and emphatic style associated with all successful principal boys. The subsidiary rôles of the Lord De Rhino and Margery Daw are neatly rendered by Miss Grace Compton and Miss Bessie Frank. Midway, in a silver glade of Fairydom, the excellent business of this fine combination of entertainers is brought to a pause by the interpolation of some remarkable specialities, namely, the Solon Trio in a statuary act following a ballet of living White China, the Milstead Quartet in coon song and dance, and the Hammersley Ballet Troupe of lady dancers. Subsequently, one of the most pleasing sets of the whole production is seen, that of the fairy glen in which the Wolf appears to Bo-Peep. This scene is notable also as that of Bo-Peep's song of "The Sweep," the chorus of which is sung by four men dressed as chimney-sweepers. The harmonisation of this chorus is out of the ordinary, and the song was deservedly encored on Monday night. Other songs of a catchy and popular nature are introduced throughout the story, which ends with the discomfiture of the Baron and his myrmidons and the elevation of Bo-peep and Boy Blue to a state of happiness. The supernatural influences of the Wolf and the Fairy are vested in Mr W. H. Gatty and Miss Nora Beverley. The pantomime concludes with a grand transformation scene followed by a harlequinade. The scenery has been designed and painted by Mr J. Greenhalgh. All concerned may be complimented on a most amusing production, which is sure to be successful on the road.

"DICK WHITTINGTON" AT MANCHESTER.

Mr Edward Marris's pantomime of Dick Whittington at the Grand Junction Theatre has been written by Messrs Stanley Rogers, Harry Lowther, and Edward Marris, and it embraces the whole time-honoured story of the poor London apprentice, from a fanciful pre-convention of spirits in the belfry of Bow Church to the triumphant installation of Whittington as Lord Mayor of London. The comprehensive and elaborate nature of the book is worthily illustrated by a series of eleven brilliant scenes, including an effective mechanical change from a flowery Old Cheapside to the inside of Fitzwarren's Shop, and another from the Deck of the Saucy Sally to the Wreck. Highgate Hill, the Garden of the Emperor's Palace, and the Grand Guildhall are also magnificent displays of scenic art. That the company engaged to interpret and embellish the book should be excellent also is the least one could expect upon such preparations, and there is certainly no room for anything but satisfaction on this score. Miss Joey Preston is a model Dick Whittington, and Miss Mena Eckerman makes a delightful Alice. Mr Fred Acton's Alderman Fitzwarren is emphatically good, and as Idle Jack Mr Harry Russell contributes a considerable amount of fun. This part is supplemented by two subsidiary ones of junior apprentices, which are comically filled by the well-known music hall artistes, Messrs Rezene and Robini. Polly Perkins also is in evidence, in the person of Miss Florence Allen, while Miss Hulo Hodgson fills the rôle of Betsy, the cook, Miss Topsy Holden is seen as Miladi Loo, the Emperor's second intended; Mr Ben Rowe figures successfully as the Emperor; and Miss Fanny Williams has a suitable part as Flirtina, the Emperor's daughter. The supernatural parts are satisfactorily played by Miss Agnes Clarges as the Spirit of the Bells; Mr Will Kashma as Thomas, the Cat; and Mr Lennox Chandler as King Rat. A remarkable feature of this enjoyable pantomime is the inclusion of quite a large number of specialities, first and foremost being that of Rezene and Robini, in their screaming trapeze act. The Sisters Roma also introduce their club juggling performance, in a sketch American Swells at Practice; other items being Madame Roma's twelve lady aerial wrestlers (a novelty); the Brothers Kashma, expert equilibrists; Miss Georgina Nicol, child mimic; the Marion Quartet of acrobatic dancers; and Mr Ben Rowe and Miss Topsy Holden in a cake-walk act. There can be no doubt that this will prove one of the most successful pantomimes on the road.

"BABES IN THE WOOD" AT MANCHESTER.

On Monday took place the production of The Babes in the Wood by the Six Brothers Luck at the Manchester Palace of Varieties. This being a music hall run on the two houses a-night system, the pantomime has been designed to cover one hour and a-half of the time allotted for each performance nightly. The book has been written by Mr Charles Willmott, and includes the story of Robin Hood, or at least so much of the story as is necessary to bring that heroic outlaw in touch with the rescue of the babes, and to involve his subsequent pardon by King Richard I. for pantomime purposes. Maid Marian is here as daughter of the wicked and impecunious uncle, to whom the babes are left by their father's will. Miss Mabel Thorne plays Robin in the approved heroic style, and the Maid Marian of Miss Hylda Dugdale is really pretty and charming. Mr Oscar Luck figures as the uncle—Baron Bunkum by name—and his satellites are two terrible, but by no means invincible, villains called Hackensmasher and Madriley, impersonated by Mr Fred Luck and Mr Chas. Dillon. Before realising that his fortune lies in the removal of the babes, the Baron has an inclination to woo the village schoolmistress, Miss Tabitha, a lady whose eccentricities are set forth by Mr Herbert Rule; and an amusing courtship goes on between these two at intervals. The Babes, however, are not the helpless babes of sentimental pantomime. They are a well-grown pair, who, on occasions, are quite able to take care of themselves. Messrs Ernest and Philip Luck make capital out of their opportunities as this interesting couple. Incidentally Mr Adolf Luck makes his appearance as a Tramp, with a cornet, and Mr Henry Luck is seen as Richard I. Also we have a charming Dolly Dimple, who is made important as an incidental mover in affairs by the very clever way in which Miss Ray Hartley establishes herself in the good graces of the audience as a coon song and dance artiste. This lady's coon dancing in particular is well worth seeing. The five scenes through which this excellent company push forward the story of the Babes and Robin Hood are distinguished by a picturesque amplitude of staging especially remarkable in three of them, namely, The Village Green, Robin's Roost, and the final one of the Rose Garden. Nothing more effective than these could be desired for the most elaborate of productions. The harmless, necessary fight between Hackensmasher and Madriley takes place in Robin's Roost, the while the babes indifferently play at "hop-scotch." In the last scene one of the most resplendent of floral ballets is put on, comprising lilies, roses, forget-me-nots, laburnums, pansies, fuchsias, and carnations; and from a spectacular point of view the parade and grouping of the various flowers could hardly be surpassed for sheer beauty. By way of speciality, the Four Milano Girls introduce a Parisian dance in this scene, which includes also the happy consummation of the story. The pantomime remains at least a month, and seems likely to prove highly successful.

PRESENTATION TO H. B. BEAUMONT.

An interesting gathering took place at the Gaiety Theatre, Oldham, on Saturday evening, the 10th inst., on the occasion of the departure of Mr H. B. Beaumont, who has filled the conductor's chair for the long period of seventeen years. Mr Beaumont, although he leaves the house with which he has so long been honourably associated, does not sever his connection with Oldham, for he has been appointed conductor of the Theatre Royal orchestra in succession to the late Mr A. Langstaffe. It was to mark the sense of their appreciation and esteem that the staff assembled on the stage after the performance, where, displayed on a table, were a handsome illuminated address and elaborate smoker's cabinet.

Mr E. J. DEXTER, the general manager, presided, and in the course of a well-chosen speech paid a tribute to the ability and capability of Mr Beaumont. He was leaving them that night, but they trusted that he would have health and strength, and that he would be spared for many years to enjoy his well-merited success. It afforded him extreme pleasure to hand to Mr Beaumont the tributes on the table before them as a mark of the affection subsisting between the recipient and those with whom he had been associated.

Mr BEAUMONT, taken unawares, was visibly confused. He jocularly reminded those present that public speaking was not one of his strong points; he preferred the "front." None the less, he heartily appreciated the recognition which had been paid to him, and it was not without regret that he was leaving.

The following is a copy of the address:—

The Gaiety Theatre, Oldham.
Dec. 10, 1904.

TO H. B. BEAUMONT, ESQ.

We, the undersigned members of Orchestra and Staff, desire to present to you a little token of our esteem and regard on the occasion of your vacating the duties of conductor, after a long and valuable service of some seventeen years. As an artist your exceptional abilities have placed you on one of the highest pedestals of the profession, and we all feel proud of our association with you. Your genial and kindly disposition has been the means of creating friendships which we are happy to say time has cemented, and in taking leave of you, it is with the regret that is always experienced at the parting from a dear friend. We hope you will be spared for many years to enjoy your well-merited promotion, and we unite in asking you to accept our little tribute with every good wish.

(Signed)

E. J. DEXTER, General Manager.
GEO. STRINGER, Stage Manager.

Orchestra: W. CHEETHAM, J. F. RHODES, H. MAKIN, E. WARD, L. BARLOW, HAMLET LEES, Jr., F. BULL, J. W. RADCLIFFE, T. HAWKINS, T. DONELLAN, J. HAMER.

On taking his seat at the Theatre Royal on the succeeding Monday night Mr Beaumont was most cordially welcomed by the habitués at both performances.

THESPIDS CRICKET CLUB.

A general meeting of the members of the Thespids Cricket Club was held on Monday afternoon in the Council Chamber of the Actors' Association, King-street, Covent-garden. Mr C. Aubrey Smith (captain) presided, and there were also present Messrs H. Nye Chart (secretary), Charles Fulton (treasurer), B. Egerton, A. S. Homewood, Talbot Homewood, P. F. Knox, Ernest Cameron, and Sydenham Dixon.

Mr C. FULTON made a statement regarding the financial condition of the club. The receipts for the year 1902 were £110 13s. 6d., and the expenditure amounted to £98 8s. 3d. The receipts for 1903 were £72 3s., and the expenses came to £60 15s. 6d. The receipts for the present year, however, showed a sorry tale, they were only £70 7s. 9d., against an expenditure of £77 16d. 7d., leaving a deficit of £7 8s. 10. Excluding the balance in hand and a sum of £3 15s., received for subscriptions due last year, the actual receipts only amounted to £52 17s., the cricketer members paying £24 odd, and the balance being made up by donations from people interested in the game. This, however, could not be depended upon as a source of revenue in the future.

Mr NYE CHART read the minutes of a committee meeting held at the Green Room Club on Sept. 14, at which gathering certain recommendations to the general meeting of members were agreed to. The first was that the Thespids become a wandering club, and that the Grange cricket ground be given up.

The CHAIRMAN pointed out that by adopting this recommendation they would save £42 per annum, this sum including the rent of the ground and the ground man's salary. The expenses would by this means be reduced to £35 a-year.

On the motion of Mr A. S. HOMEWOOD, seconded by Mr KNOX, the recommendation was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN said that the next recommendation was that the committee be empowered to elect lay members. He was sorry that the members of the profession had not shown themselves sufficient sportsmen to run a cricket club without outside aid. For some of the matches—particularly the Sunday ones—it had been found impossible to get teams entirely composed of actors. He did not think that the inclusion of lay members would injure the club in the least, but he would suggest that the number be strictly limited. Some discussion followed, Mr A. S. HOMEWOOD being opposed to the recommendation, and Mr EGERTON suggesting that lay members should only be permitted to play in the Sunday matches.

Eventually Mr S. DIXON proposed that lay men be elegible for membership, but that the number elected be restricted to fifteen.

Mr KNOX seconded the proposition, which was carried with one dissentient (Mr A. S. Homewood). It was then agreed that before electing a member the nomination be sent by post to the members of the committee for approval, that the annual subscription remain as at present, and that the vice-captains be abolished. The offer of a cricket pitch near the Combe and Malden railway station for Sunday cricket was also discussed.

The next business was the election of officers for the years 1905. It was resolved that Sir Henry Irving be asked to remain president. The vice-presidents were re-elected, and it was agreed that Mr Arthur Bourchier be asked to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr Wilson Barrett. Mr C. Aubrey Smith was re-elected captain, Mr Charles Fulton treasurer, and Mr H. Nye Chart secretary. Six vacancies on the committee were also filled up.

Mr NYE CHART reported that up to that date twenty matches (ten Sunday and ten week-day) for next season had been booked, and the meeting then closed with a vote of thanks to Mr Charles Cruikshanks (secretary of the Actors' Association) for the use of the Council Chamber.

AT SHAKESPEARE'S SHRINE.

London: ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.

As we are reminded in the preface to this volume, several poetical anthologies in praise of Shakespeare have already appeared, but Mr Chas. F. Forshaw, the editor, claims that the publication under notice is, "though far from complete, the most exhaustive work of its kind yet produced." It contains a representative selection of poetic tributes from all ages down to the present, and yet, according to Mr Forshaw, "it would be a comparatively easy task to compile a dozen similar volumes, and then only have touched the fringe of the mantle which clothes the memory of the greatest poet the world has ever known—the divine, the gentle, the immortal Shakespeare." Mr A. Brodie Fraser in a "Foreword" has something to say on the value of literary criticism or judgment. He has rarely found two critics agree in the value of any book, and he takes it that literary judgment is determined, not by fixed laws, but by the mental condition of the critic when he passes the work under his review. But he points out, "This volume shows clearly this fact, that while men of genius have passed what, on the very face of it, has been rash and unsound judgment on Shakespeare, the poets, in their moments of inspiration, have paid such tribute to the Master as is to-day universally accepted as at once sincere and sound."

The volume also includes the extremely interesting lecture on "Plays partly written by Shakespeare," delivered at a meeting of the London Shakespeare Society last April by Mr Richard Garnett. The list of authors quoted who have "paid tribute at Shakespeare's Shrine" contains many well-known names, as well as a goodly number of unknown, or comparatively unknown, writers. The actors may be said to be represented by David Garrick, from whose verses three extracts are given, the first of which is as follows:

That demigod!
Who Avon's flowery margin trod,
While sportive Fancy round him flew;
When Nature led him by the hand,
Instructed him in all she knew,
And gave him absolute command.

Lord Byron on one occasion wrote, "Shakespeare and Milton have had this rise, and they will have this decline," a statement which is hardly consistent with the lines he wrote on the reopening after destruction by fire of the National Theatre:—

Say—shall his new, nor less aspiring pile,
Rear'd where once rose the mightiest in our isle,
Know the same favour which the former knew,
A shrine for Shakespeare—worthy him and you?
Yes—it shall be—the magic of that name
Defies the scythe of Time, the torch of flame;
On the same spot still consecrates the scene,
And bids the drama be where she hath been;
This fabric's birth attests the potent spell—
Indulge our honest pride and say, How well!

"A NOBLE REVENGE."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Will you allow me to correct your correspondent in his notice of my little play, A Noble Revenge, produced at the "Archer" benefit at the Theatre Royal, Croydon, on the 10th inst? He says, "The two characters were sustained, &c." Will you allow me to point out that there are three characters, and that the part omitted in your notice was sustained by Mr Stanley Bedwell? I shall be pleased if you will make this announcement in justice to Mr Bedwell, as he most readily came forward, at some inconvenience to himself, to assist the good cause.

Yours faithfully, ALBERT WARD.

Count Leo Tolstoy is not noted for cheerful studies of human nature in his novels; and loathsome animalism is associated with heartless cruelty, low cunning, and sordid greed in The Power of Darkness, which was produced at the Royalty Theatre on Monday afternoon. Power of a kind there is, of course, in the play, but it is the power that depresses not elevates. The degradation of the characters is more than human, and the picture drawn of the peasantry of his native Russia by the distinguished socialist is gruesome and horrible in the extreme. They live a mean and debased life, without ideals, without religion, without morality—do these Slav peasants, and one is tempted to ask "What hope is there for a country in which the lower classes exist under such pitiful conditions?" Patriotism must be dead; the love of liberty extinguished; the sanctity of family life ignored. It is so, at any rate, in the above piece, which has been translated by Louise and Aylmer Maude. The Power of Darkness opens in the hut of Peter, who, according to the standard of comfort obtaining in the village, is in fairly good circumstances, keeping a servant one Nikita, who repays the confidence reposed in him by becoming the lover of Anisya, Peter's wife. He is quite a peasant Lothario is Peter, for he has also designs upon Akoulina, his master's daughter by a former marriage, and is likewise carrying out an intrigue with Marina, an orphan girl. Affection has nothing to do with any of these affaires, and we soon discover the motive of Nikita's liaison with Anisya, when his wretched mother, who knows all about it and quite approves of it, comes upon the scene. If Peter were out of the way the guilty pair could marry; and Matryona (the old hag) is quite prepared to assist the culpable wife by providing the poison necessary for the disposal of the inconvenient husband. The accomplishment of the deed is quite easy, and Peter speedily shuffles off this mortal coil. The widow Anisya soon marries her paramour Nikita; but that degraded wretch does not allow the union to interfere in any way with his intrigue with Akoulina, who has a child by him. This is a highly inconvenient accident, and to save scandal and expense Anisya and Matryona suggest that the infant should be put out of the way. Nikita kills it and buries it in the cellar—afterwards, in a fit of remorse, he describes how he sat on it, and smothered it, and heard its little bones crunch. One result is that Anisya becomes more than ever hateful to him, so does Akoulina, and his thoughts return, when not too dazed with vodka, to Marina, now fairly well married and moderately content. At length, overcome by remorse, he makes a full confession of his crime and his treachery at the wedding of Akoulina, who, strange to say, has found a husband. The scene of the greatest anguish is in the fourth act, where Nan, the daughter of Peter and Anisya, hears the wailing of the dying infant, followed by the strange sound of digging in the cellar beneath her bed, and vaguely suspects the horrible truth.

But perhaps we have told sufficient of the horrors of the piece. It is a pleasanter task to turn to the acting The part of Nikita was handled with a wonderfully sure touch by Mr Lyall Swete, whose keenness of perception, high intelligence, and cultured elocution always serve him so well in his invariably excellent work. His study of the part was clear and distinct. There were no blurred lines. The most tedious person in the play is Akim, the father of Nikita, an ancient and virtuous peasant without memory. Mr H. R. Hignett played the old man with discretion and tact; and a very fine study of the old labourer, Mitritch, was presented by Mr O. B. Clarence. It is Miss Dolores Desmond's fate apparently to play wicked old women on the stage, and she certainly did not fail to invest the part of Matryona with all the evil attributes of an avaricious and cruel hag. Miss Eily Malyon was responsible for a capable embodiment of the impious Akoulina; Miss Italia Conti, who took the part in consequence of the indisposition of Miss May Harvey, attacked the difficulties of the rôle of Anisya with considerable success, making an excellent impression; Miss Dorothy Minto as Nan was expressive and plaintive; and Miss Callista Marvin gave colour and life to the character of Marina. Miss Marie Maurice, Miss Bertha Van Raalte, and Mr Reginald Walter also distinguished themselves.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Dec. 19,
the Melodrama, by C. Watson Mill, entitled
"A WRECKER OF MEN."

There is plenty to amuse and to interest in the melodrama entitled A Wrecker of Men, which is being played at the Dalston Theatre this week. Mr C. Watson Mill sustains a leading part, that of Jim Murley, known as "the slogger," who is also a burglar. In one way or the other Jim has a good deal to do, but he is one of those personages who, in a rough-and-ready way, is always interesting, and as he is closely mixed up with the story he is indispensable to the representation. Represented by Mr Watson Mill, a good all-round actor, he meets with a thoroughly hearty reception. Mr George Harvey impressively acts the part of Railton, the silent servant. Two quaintly played rôles are those of Mr Charles Yorke as Pharosophus, an Egyptian wanderer, and Mr Alfred Maurice as Guise Strange, a nameless man. Mr Mac J. Cumming gives a typical character sketch of a swell as the Hon. Reggie Verrincourt. A remarkable character to present is that of Karnaphus—a somewhat active mummy—who thirsts for present-day revenge for wrongs done in ages past. This part, strange as it is, is most creditably sustained by Mr Henry Rutland, who appears in the first act as Ezekiel Isaacs. Mr Gibson Brooke as Eric Melville, whose life is wrecked, acts with a good deal of effect; Mr Henry Elton as Detective-Inspector Bramsmere is typical of a smart class of officer; Miss Victoria May proves herself a capable actress as Doris Melville; and Miss Kitty Melville is amusing as Slopper, a nondescript. Risca Mallinson, "a woman with a past," finds a very capable representative in Miss Rosalind Tate, who acts with care.

MR W. H. ARMSTRONG, the well-known solicitor, is in practice at 1, Renfrew-road, Lambeth, where he has been for many years, and is also to be found at his new office at 80, Rochester-row, Westminster.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MRS. W. AUBREY.

MRS W. AUBREY, whose full name is Mrs W. Aubrey Chandler, first appeared on the stage rather late in life. She was in great request in amateur clubs—the Halbrake, the Norwood Anomalies, the Strolling Players, the Kensington, &c. She made her first tour in a fit-up with Lawrence Smythe. She played the Nurse, Emilia, Player Queen, Jessica, Audrey, Nurse, in Called Back, Joyce and Suzanne, in East Lynne. She had two tours with Rebecca Deering, playing Nurse Margot, in Woman's Vengeance; Cornelia Carlyle, in East Lynne; and Madame Prudence, in Camille. While her husband was playing in a stock season at the Theatre Royal, Margate, Miss Thorne invited her to The Towers. The Nurse was mentioned, Miss Thorne gave her the cues, which were taken up without hesitation. An engagement was offered her for the part of Pert, in London Assurance, &c. Miss Thorne expressed herself well satisfied with Pert, and cast Mrs Aubrey for a long comedy old woman's part in Haddon Chambers's farcical comedy, One of Them. Soon afterwards she was specially engaged for Mrs Blogg, in Miss Constance Abbott's tour, with The Wages of Sin. She was specially engaged for the same part in Miss Inez Howard's tour, also as Miss Dove, in Man to Man, and the Widow Melnotte, in The Lady of Lyons, with various companies. She then toured with a company of her own in farcical comedy. After a short interval she experimented in Shakespearian productions, and, though she gained experience, the pecuniary results were disastrous. Subsequently she had to be content with engagements at the music halls, being five months with one sketch company, three months with another, and in London and the provinces, in eccentric characters, &c. Mrs Aubrey played Mrs Hatzell for five weeks in John Francis Lamb's Scotch tour. She left him and joined her husband and niece, Miss Jessie Chandler, at the Leith Theatre, for stock season. She is unfortunate in having had only two London engagements at the Novelty Theatre, playing various parts in farce and drama, and a small part in In Chancery with Mr Edward Terry at the Olympic Theatre, while he was awaiting the completion of his own theatre. Owing to domestic trouble and bereavements Mrs Aubrey has not acted for three years, but she has not lost her love of acting.

MR HARRY HILLER.

MR HARRY HILLER entered the profession a little over nine years ago, and, always being eager for work, he has sought engagements as much as possible in répertoire and stock companies, thoroughly realising the value of a frequent change of part to a young actor anxious to gain a thorough knowledge and experience in his work. Up to the present he has played over 150 parts. In September, 1895, after two or three engagements in minor companies, Mr Hiller joined Mr Thomas Sidney's comedy répertoire company, and remained with him over the Christmas, playing Tom Lyons, in On 'Change; Walter Wynford, Queen's Evidence; Captain M'Manus, Betsy; Mr Horton, Dr. Bill; Captain Rattlefish, Imprudence; and many other parts. This was followed by a spring tour in Proof, as the Duke D'Aubeterre, and understudying and occasionally playing Pierre Lorance. On its termination he returned to Mr Sidney for Ralph Ormerod, in The Arabian Nights. Then came an engagement with Mr Otho Stuart in his tour of For the Crown (in which piece Mr Hiller played five different parts at various times) extending to June, 1897, with a break at the Christmas for a short season—again with Mr Sidney—for Horace Bream, in Sweet Lavender, and a repetition of old parts. He returned again to him in the August, and played Jefferson Tomkins, in Niobe; Batty Todd, The Middleman; and old parts. Then, after two or three odd engagements, once more with Mr Sidney, for Harry Winters, in Tom, Dick, and Harry, and various other parts, new and old. He was then engaged by Messrs Pease and Nettlefold for their production of For the King, playing Dr. Grey, and understudying and sometimes playing the heavy part, Colonel Wenlock. He then joined Mr Ernest Abbott in The Mariners of England, remaining with him ten months, and playing the exacting double of Admiral Talbot and Captain Hardy. This was followed by Dick Lovell, in Miss Eva Dare's production and tour of Oh! Miss! Then a short tour as Captain Macdonnel, in The English Rose. He was then engaged for a tour as Lord George Twyford, in Mr Max O'Rell's company in On the Continong. Autumn, 1901, found him with Mr Norman V. Norman for heavies, playing among others, Lord Dellans, in Nell Gwyn, and Beauscant, Lady of Lyons. Leaving him, he joined Miss Lilian Herries' répertoire company for Jos. Sedley, Becky Sharp; Lord Dangars, The Profligate, &c. He was then engaged by Miss Violet Ellicott for her production of The Power of the Eye, and in addition to creating the lead, Dick Lester, in that piece played Ray Trafford, Under the Gaslight, and Robert Ffolliott, The Shaughraun. He was then engaged by Mr Henry Dundas for Harold Vincent, in The Price of Peace. Then followed a short summer suburban tour as Dick Lorrimore, in A Lion's Heart, returning to Mr Dundas in the autumn for Basil Gillespie, in Hearts are Trumps. Spring, 1903, he was engaged by Miss Yvonne Orchardson to play General Sergius Troubetzkoi, in her production of A Broken Barrier, and subsequently went on tour in that part, and as her stage-manager. Since then he has been out to South Africa on business of a private nature, but has managed to fulfil a few odd engagements there just to keep from getting rusty. He is now looking forward to an early reappearance in England.

MR. GORDON BAILEY.

MR GORDON BAILEY'S first engagement was in a stock season in Birmingham, in 1894. Then followed a year with Mr Hermann Vezin on tour, Mr Bailey playing many small parts in Shakespeare and old English comedy. He then joined Mrs Bandmann-Palmer, and for another year played more small parts in Shakespeare, old English comedy, and East Lynne. Then followed six months with Mrs Walter Bentley, playing juvenile lead in a number of plays which that lady then toured, among them being The Indian Mutiny, Jane Shore, Lady of Lyons, &c. He then joined Mrs Bandmann-Palmer for Charles Surface, tours as Julian Belford, with Mr Henry C. Arnold's Prodigal Daughter company, Then another tour with Mr Vezin, in which Mr Bailey played Cassio, Bassanio, Laertes, &c., and understudied Mr Vezin. He was the Hamo Goring in Miss Florence Warden's production of The Guinea Pigs at Kennington, and it was while playing in this that Mr Eade Montifiore engaged him for a sixteen weeks' tour for Armand Duval, to support Miss Lucy Wilson as Camille. Then followed many special engagements, including Colonel Percy Kirk, in A Sheep in Wolf's Clothing, Shylock, and in a matinée given by Mr Henry J. Leigh of A Midsummer Night's Dream at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Mr Bailey played Egeus. He then played Archibald Carlyle for a tour with Mr J. Pitt Hardacre's company. Then came more Shakespeare and old English comedy with Mr William Haviland, Mr Bailey playing Claudio, Laertes, Bassanio, Cassio, Tybalt, &c. Another engagement under Mr Mollison's management followed. This was at the Lyceum in For Auld Lang Syne During the run Mr W. L. Abingdon left in order to play elsewhere, and Mr Bailey undertook his part, Captain Carey. He was then engaged by Messrs Lewis Waller and William Mollison to play in The Three Musketeers and Lord Scroop, in Henry V., at the Lyceum. Then came a long tour in Australia, Mr Bailey playing Sir Roger Fairfax, in Sweet Nell of Old Drury and many other parts, including Correze, in Moths, the Vere being his wife, Miss Lucy Wilson. Mr Bailey and Miss Lucy Wilson then went to America with Mr Chas. Warner, Mr Bailey playing Lantier, in Drink; next appearing as Dunstan Renshaw, in The Profligate, and Cayley Drummle, in The Second Mrs Tanqueray, on tour.

MR. WILLIE ATOM.

Like many another in the profession, Mr Willie Atom was not originally intended to follow a theatrical career, and for some years worked as a clerk. Finding the confinement bad for his health, he sought a more congenial occupation, one which had always had a certain amount of attraction for him; he was also a decided success as an amateur actor He first wrote to Mr George Edwardes, giving him full particulars as to his size, &c., and acting on his instructions he saw one of Mr Edwardes' principal managers. He will never forget going on to what appeared to him to be a large stage to sing (there were many others there for the same purpose), and his astonishment and mortification when he found that he could hardly hear his own voice in such a big space. He felt very much disheartened. However, he was told that if he learnt to sing and dance his diminutive size would be of considerable advantage, provided he had the ability. He did as directed, and then tried for five months to get an engagement, at last obtaining a minor part in a pantomime. Since then Mr Atom has never regretted his change of occupation, and his theatrical career, though not long, has been very successful. The part in which he thinks he has scored most was the creation of the Eton boy (age eleven years), Bertie Daredevil, in a drama by Mr James Willard, produced under the name of The Crimson Horseshoe at the Crown Theatre, Peckham, in June last year (the title has since been changed to A Woman's Pluck). Mr Atom played Humpty Dumpty in Alice through the Looking Glass at the New Theatre, but being practically encased in paper maché he found it impossible to do anything with the part, it being difficult even to speak from the case. In the part of Bertie, above referred to, what with his make-up and the boyish figure he possesses, the audience were never quite certain whether he was really a boy or a man (Mr Atom is twenty-nine years of age). "My boyish appearance" he says, "is responsible for many amusing incidents of which I will give a couple of instances. One night during a suburban tour in which I was playing Bertie, after the performance, I received a message from the resident manager requesting my presence in the circle bar, when dressed. On arrival, he asked me to have a drink, and I, not thinking, ordered a Scotch-and-soda, much to the astonishment of several gentlemen who would not believe that I was other than a boy. The Scotch-and-soda convinced them, and settled the argument between themselves and the manager. The other incident to which I will refer took place outside the stage door of the Strand Theatre. I was waiting to see a gentleman, and walking up and down smoking a cigar, when I was accosted by two remarkably tall policemen (who were regarding me as a terrible example of the depravity of the rising generation), with the remark from one, 'You'll be sick if you smoke that;' from the other, 'You deserve a good thrashing;' and they seemed disappointed that I showed no signs of fright. It was with some difficulty that I refrained from laughing outright, but instead I told them very seriously that had they been only ordinary people I should not have been so surprised at their mistake, but such an error to be made by two vast intellectual beings like themselves was altogether beyond my comprehension. They then apologised, and we parted very good friends." Mr Atom has played parts varying in age from a boy of eleven to an old gentleman of sixty odd with grey hair and side whiskers, and he has found the sound musical education he received when young of great use to him, it having enabled him to write more than one of his own songs. Of all parts he prefers that of a precocious boy, and being absolutely perfectly proportioned for his height, 4ft. 4in., he can look the part as few others can. His latest engagement was to play Xit, in A Fatal Crown, under the management of Mr Ian Maclaren.

MR. WILLIE ATOM.

Bassanio, Horatio, and many more juvenile leading parts. Geoffrey Tempest was his next part. This was with the No. 1 Sorrows of Satan company from the Shaftesbury Theatre. After all this serious work came a change with Mr John Leopold's No. 1 Frivolity company, of which Mr Bailey was the stage-manager, and he also played a light comedy part. But he was not to be parted from classic work for long, as Mr William Mollison engaged him for Rosf, in the Manchester production of Macbeth. A tour with The Two Little Vagabonds, as Captain Darville, came next. Then more Shakespeare with Messrs Morell and Moullot's company, with Mr Hermann Vezin heading the company. During this season Mr Bailey played the Ghost, in Hamlet; Antonio, in The Merchant of Venice, &c. Next followed two

"THE ACTORS' BENEVOLENT FUND."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I have only just seen the discussion in The Era with regard to the Actors' Benevolent Fund. I think that taxing free admissions, charging from 1s. to 2s. 6d. for autographs, and charging 10 per cent. on gross receipts of the many performances given by actors for other charities all excellent ideas; but the compulsory taxing of an actor strikes me as most arbitrary. Many actors may have only fifteen or twenty weeks' work in a whole year. Is it fair to take a night's salary in that case? I agree with Mr Maude that the charity dinner is degrading; but I do not see why the London managers should not give an extra performance of a popular play running at their theatres, and hand over two-thirds of the entire receipts to the fund, the remaining third to pay dressers, scene shifters, attendants, musicians, and lighting, and the small extra advertisements. This arrangement would not interfere with the weekly salary, and would not be felt in consequence. The only other alternative is to tax the gross receipts of every theatre, as in France; but, of course, the managers and syndicates would not agree to this compulsory tax, although they are willing to tax the actors and actresses.

Yours faithfully, SYBIL CARLISLE.
The Admirable Crichton Company.
Philadelphia, Dec. 7.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I have read with considerable interest the somewhat lengthy correspondence which has appeared in your columns re "The Actors' Benevolent Fund and How to Help It," and I have come to the conclusion that the scheme suggested by Mr Cecil Raleigh, and supported by Mr W. Lestocq, is the most commendable, and would lead, if carried out, to the happiest results. Other writers have, no doubt, given the matter their most earnest consideration, but they all fail in propounding a practical method which would, if tried, I venture to think, prove as successful as well-wishers could desire.

Mr Lestocq, speaking of Mr Cecil Raleigh's proposition, says there are great difficulties in concreting such a scheme. Well, there may be, but what of that? Great difficulties have existed in connection with many things associated with our calling and those great difficulties have been overcome, and you may rely upon it they are not insuperable in this instance.

Roughly, I suggest a plan for consideration. Presuming that managers and artists are agreed that an annual matinée should be given on a fixed day throughout the kingdom—and I have never heard anyone object—then the course is clear. The Actors' Association has the organizing ability, and the temporary employment of a requisite staff would be a trifling detail.

On a given day, say, for the sake of illustration, the first Friday in September in every year, every company performing throughout the kingdom should produce a matinée of their evening bill, the artists give their services, the manager loan his theatre, and the author forego his fees, and after deduction of working expenses—i.e. advertisements, money and ticket-takers, stage hands, orchestra, &c., the balance, together with the programme of the day, to be sent by the acting-manager of the company to the secretary of the Actors' Association.

The money received to be paid into a separate banking account.

The name of every person who renders services on the actors' matinée day—i.e. the author, the local manager, the local and travelling acting-manager, the artistes, &c.—to be registered; for this reason, every subscriber for the year to the A.B.F. has a right to recommend cases for the consideration of the committee. In the event of being unfortunately obliged to appeal to that committee on his or her own behalf, he or she needs no recommendation. Being a subscriber, he or she practically, by his or her application, recommends himself or herself. Every person assisting on the actors' matinée day whose name appears on the programme would rank as a subscriber. The necessity for such a register is obvious. The money and ticket-takers, stage hands, and orchestra should not be asked to give their services, inasmuch as they would not be eligible for relief from the funds. A council of three of the most prominent members of our calling (to be elected for the purpose at the annual general meeting of the A.A. by the votes of those present whose subscriptions to the A.A. for the current year be paid) to decide how and in what proportion the fund raised by the actors' matinées should be distributed between the Actors' Benevolent Fund and the Actors' Orphanage Fund; an actuary of eminence to assist as financial adviser to such council. The Actors' Association to receive from such funds the repayment of the expenses of promotion, administration, and distribution. I think both the charities should be included, because the actor or actress giving his or her services might well say, "I prefer to work for the Actors' Orphanage Fund." Now, if both the charities were considered by the council of three that ground of objective argument would be removed. I am well aware there would be others.

At the meeting of the council of the Actors' Association held yesterday, I received an authorisation to send this letter to you, and apologising for troubling you at such length.

I am, Sir, yours faithfully,
CHAS. CRUIKSHANKS,
Secretary of the Actors' Association and Member of the Committee of the Actors' Benevolent Fund.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Kindly allow me a little space to reply to Mr Thomas P. Ashby's letter in your last issue. What does he mean by "broken-down actors"? Is he referring to human beings? If so, I think he might substitute a more human and sensible epithet. Are we in his and the clergy's eyes on a par with cattle? I've frequently heard of a broken-down cab-horse

For the last twenty years I've many a time and oft indirectly obliged the clergy by assisting at their entertainments, to gain funds for their church. I've taken journeys and spent time and money in the cause of charity to benefit the clergy and the parish they belong to. Result, a lot of stage-struck damsels and pale-faced young men who would faint at the idea of a Theatre Royal, but think in their own tin-pot way they are Ellen Terrys and Henry Irvings while strutting their hour upon the stage of the village schoolroom. Half these entertainments are arranged for vanity's sake, not charity. I don't think we require the help of the clergy, as, poor souls! many of them find it a struggle to help themselves.

Yours faithfully, C. P. AMALIA.
The Baltic, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, Dec. 19.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I am surprised at the unchristian tone of your correspondent Mr Thomas P. Ashby's letter. He assumes that Miss Matthison appeals to the clergy to help the Actors' Benevolent Fund, and states that they have enough poor to help, and enough sins to answer for. The latter statement I do not doubt, although I fail to see the relevancy of it. As to the risks in entering the theatrical profession—where is the profession or calling without them? "The race is not always to the swift nor the battle to the strong," and some must fall by the way. It is a law of Nature, and for those who fall we must remember that the greatest of all virtues is—Charity.

Yours faithfully, GEORGE LAMBTON.
Pavilion Theatre, Edinburgh, Dec. 22, 1904.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

SIR SQUIRE BANCROFT, with his usual modesty and taste, objected to Dr. Maddick's kind proposal to make a bronze medallion of Sir Squire part of the proscenium decoration at the new La Scala Theatre, Sir Squire suggesting that room should be found for the proposed medallion in the foyer of the house. The objection was a fortunate one, if we may judge from the medallions which have been placed on the walls of one of the corridors. The well-known features of Sir Squire and Lady Bancroft have not been faithfully reproduced; and their "counterfeit-presentments" certainly do not do them justice.

MR BRANDON THOMAS, who has just recovered from a severe attack of influenza, and is not playing in Charley's Aunt at the Comedy Theatre, has decided to strengthen the cast of the play considerably. Several characters have already been reallotted, and other alterations are pending.

MADAME PATTI had an enthusiastic reception at St. Petersburg on Wednesday evening, when she sang in the Salle de la Noblesse there in aid of the sick and suffering soldiers. Bouquets and wreaths filled the stage, and on Madame Patti's entrance the whole audience rose, cheering and waving handkerchiefs. At the conclusion of her third song, Arditi's melodious "Il Bacio," Madame Patti was called into the salon at the back of the Imperial box, where she was received by the Empress Marie. The two ladies fell into each other's arms and "had a good cry." The tickets fetched very high prices, and 25 rouble seats were easily sold for 250 roubles.

MME PATTI sang three songs, "L'Air des Bijoux," "Voi Che Sapete," and the above-mentioned "Il Bacio." Each was received with immense applause, and at the conclusion of the third selection Count Grabbe, aide-de-camp to the Grand Duke Vladimir, presented the vocalist with a crown of gold on a blue velvet cushion, the gift of the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess Vladimir. Then came deputations from the Imperial theatres, with crowns of laurel, bouquets, and wreaths. In the evening a large supper-party was given in honour of Mme. Patti at the Vladimir Palace, on the banks of the Neva.

MISS ROSINA BRANDRAM, in consequence of a breakdown in her health, has, we are sorry to hear, been obliged to relinquish her part in Veronique at the Apollo Theatre.

MR JAMES WELCH, whose appearance at Drury-lane is so eagerly anticipated, is a Liverpool man, and celebrated his thirty-ninth birthday last month. He is brother-in-law to Mr Richard Le Gallienne, the well-known writer. Mr Welch made his London début at the Globe Theatre, under Mr Wilson Barrett's management, in 1887. The first comic line with which he made a hit on the stage was in the character of a pastrycook—in his very early days—when he succeeded in getting a laugh with these words: "That there is a pie, mum, is that there pie!"

MR HENRY CRISP, the blind actor, has been granted a pension of £5 by a society on behalf of the blind. The matter came about through an old schoolfellow of Mr Cyril Maude at the Charterhouse seeing the letter in The Era relating to Mr Crisp's sad condition, and at once interesting himself in the case.

PLAYGOING during the fog on Wednesday and Thursday was carried on under difficulties. Those who came in carriages were generally late, and only made their way to the entrances by the aid of volunteer torch-bearers and linkmen carrying boxes containing tallow candles. After the performances on Wednesday there was a great want of cabs, and people were seen in great distress, not knowing whether to walk home or go to a hotel for the night.

AN interesting meeting at the opening of the new La Scala Theatre on Monday was that between Miss Florence St. John and Mr W. S. Gilbert. Miss St. John looked more bright and attractive than ever, and Mr Gilbert, hale and hearty, was the very ideal of an English country gentleman.

THE late Mr William Rignold was fond of telling an amusing anecdote in reference to his violin playing. On one occasion when he was acting at the Gaiety Theatre, in The Cherry Inn, just after the King's (then the Prince of Wales) recovery from a dangerous illness, the late Dion Boucicault asked Rignold to give the audience "God save the Prince of Wales." At the first notes of the well-known air the house rose and continued cheering vociferously till the player ceased. After the outburst was over the late Herr Lutz came up to the actor and said: "Rignold, do you know why they applauded your playing?" "No," was the answer. "Well," said Lutz grimly, "It was because they made such a noise that they couldn't hear it."

SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM and MISS MARY MOORE appeared for the first time in New York in Mrs Gorringe's Necklace, at the New Lyceum Theatre, on the 7th inst., the first three weeks of their engagement having been devoted to David Garrick. Owing to the London success of the first-mentioned play, there had been many pleasant expectations regarding it, and these were abundantly realised. The piece proved very interesting and amusing, and it was exceedingly well acted. A numerous and brilliant assemblage showed the warmest appreciation of Sir Charles Wyndham's finished and natural portrayal of the self-sacrificing Captain Mowbray and of Miss Mary Moore's clever impersonation of the shallow and loquacious Mrs Gorringe. Mr Alfred Bishop's Colonel Jardin was a delightful embodiment of a fussy, irresolute, and self-opinionated old gentleman. Miss Vane Featherston's Mrs Jardin was an admirable representation of a conventional and hypocritical hostess. Mr Charles Quartermaine was earnest and convincing as the weak-minded David Cairn, and Mr T. W. Rawson played Jernigan, the detective, in a lifelike manner. Frequent laughter and applause showed that the play and the players had made a big hit.

MISS GERALDINE ULMAR has lost a blue enamel brooch with a bar of music "Forget me not, forget me not," written underneath, surrounded by diamonds. We trust that the accomplished actress and vocalist will have it returned to her at the Avenue Theatre.

IN connection with the production of The White Cat at Drury-lane by Mr Arthur Collins, it is interesting to be reminded that Miss Ellen Terry when about the age of nine played the part of the Fairy Golden Star in Charles Kean's pantomime on the same subject at the Princess's. This was on Boxing Day in 1857. In the following year, 1858, she was seen as the Genius of the Jewels, in The King of the Castle. Of her appearances in these pantomimes, with which at Christmas time Charles Kean found it necessary to supplement his elaborate performances, we can only imagine that she was a very fascinating little fairy, and it seems equally certain that when she was called upon to appear in two lengthy entertainments on the same night she must often have been a very tired little fairy.

MR H. BEERBOHM TREE has, with the sanction of His Majesty the King, been enrolled an Honorary Associate of the Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in England in recognition of his valuable services in connection with the entertainment in July last at His Majesty's Theatre in aid of the funds of the British Ophthalmic Hospital at Jerusalem belonging to the Order.

THE annual meeting of the Gaiety Theatre Company, Limited, was held on the stage of the Gaiety Theatre on Monday last. Mr George Edwardes presided, and in moving the adoption of the report referred at the outset to the death of Mr Walter Pallant. Mr Wilfred B. Purefoy had taken the vacant seat on the board. The delay in calling the meeting was, he explained, owing to the fact that they had waited in the hope that the question between themselves and the London County Council would have been settled. Then they could have reported the result to the meeting. The question with the L.C.C. as to the amount the latter should pay towards the cost of the theatre was quite a friendly one. The balance-sheet and report spoke for themselves. Their liabilities were simply £75,000, and their assets were £118,000. He did not think the company had ever been in a stronger position. They had been doing very well lately, The Orchid was doing well, and the interim dividend would be paid next month. The report was adopted unanimously, and Mr George Edwardes was re-elected a director.

KALGOORLIE, the leading goldfield of Western Australia, has been providing a number of theatrical incidents of late. By this week's mail we are informed of yet another. On Nov. 17 Mr Graham Goldsburgh appeared before the Kalgoorlie magistrates to answer the charge of having opened His Excellency's Theatre without legal authority and in defiance of the Local Board of Health. He pleaded guilty, and was fined £20, with £11 3s. 5d. costs, in default two months' imprisonment. "His Excellency's" is a rather novel, if not unique, title for a theatre, but it is perfectly appropriate in a British colony. There the representative of the King is styled "His Excellency the Governor"—the title, by the way, of one of Captain Marshall's entertaining plays.

MR O. E. LENNON, who has left Mr Arthur Roberts's company at the Palace to play in pantomime at the Alexandra Theatre, Sheffield, is one of the few really good animal actors, going straight to nature for his cat and dog character studies, and combining great agility with rare humour. This year, however, he is playing the part of Washy, the Chinese servant, in Aladdin. Mr Lennon has been on the stage for sixteen years, having devoted the last ten or eleven to playing Mr Edmund Payne's and Mr Huntley Wright's parts on tour. He can carpenter, paint, and use a workman's tools cleverly. He goes in for chess and cricket, and is an expert swimmer, cyclist, and runner.

MR LENNON has many good stories to tell of his varied experiences behind the footlights. The first is against himself, and it shows both his good intentions and the limited amount of his knowledge at the beginning of his career. Seeing an advertisement for a man to play the Spider in The Silver King, young Lennon wrote to the manager offering his services. Of course, he had heard of the popular melodrama; but having no idea of the character of Captain Skinner, he explained that he had just made a success as a cat in pantomime, and felt "perfectly sure he could act a spider to everybody's satisfaction." It is needless to add that he did not "settle" with The Silver King manager. Apropos of cats at Christmas, Mr Lennon has a vivid recollection of introducing a most realistic and painful—from his own point of view—piece of acting into Dick Whittington, at the old Adelphi, some years ago. One of the comedians had to carry a tub of hot water on to the stage. The property man, determined that there should be plenty of steam, heated it to boiling point. The comedian, believing it to be only comfortably warm, purposely tipped half-a-pint over the cat as he ran past. The children in the audience shrieked with laughter, and when the poor puss, severely scalded, executed a frenzied dance round the stage, all the grown-up people joined in. Mr Lennon was the only person who could not see the joke.

THIS clever and versatile actor won the Royal Humane Society's medal a few years ago for gallantly saving the life of a drowning lady. He was acting in Ireland, and, walking by the sea one morning, he perceived a bather, out of her depth, evidently struggling in great distress. There was no time to be lost, one attempt to rescue the unfortunate lady having already failed; so Mr Lennon stripped off his coat and dashed into the water. He knew that it was useless to go too close, for she would be certain to clutch him in her desperation, so he stretched his left arm towards her, and the grip with which it was seized told him of the wisdom of his action. He managed to get ashore, swimming with his right arm, and was rewarded, some time afterwards, with the decoration for bravery of which he is so justly proud.

MR FRED EASTMAN, who is to play a prominent part in The White Cat, is a comedian of many years' experience, and is able to tell more than the usual number of amusing yarns of his one-town-five-parts-a-night days. On one occasion he acted, on sharing terms, in a country booth. His duties were to act, dance, and paint the scenery, and his "receipts" at the end of the first performance amounted to 10½. His partner, however, generously threw in a couple of hot potatoes.

MRS G. H. GILBERT, the veteran actress, who died suddenly at an hotel in Chicago on the 2nd inst., was interred in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, four days later. The funeral service was held at the Bloomingdale Reformed Church, in New York City, in the presence of 3,000 people, every theatrical company in the city being represented. Sir Charles Wyndham and Messrs Daniel Frohman, Nat C. Goodwin, Clyde Fitch, John Drew, and Francis Wilson were among the pall-bearers. Miss Annie Russell, for many years a close friend of Mrs Gilbert, and the members of the company that had been appearing in the play Granny with Mrs Gilbert were in attendance. The Rev. Dr. Stinson, pastor of the church, conducted the service.

MR FREDK. MOUILLOT'S A Runaway Girl will commence a fresh tour on Boxing Day at the Grand Theatre, Boscombe. To emphasise the occasion, several numbers of a novel description have been interpolated, and the piece embellished with elaborate new dresses and scenery, the latter from the studio of Mr R. Egerton. Prominent in a strong cast are Messrs Henry Latimer, Archie Croft, Clifton Yates, and Howard Cridland; Misses Marie Shields, Kate Vivian, Amy Edmonds, and Ethel Netherton, who has sustained the title-rôle for over two years. Mr Gordon Stamford is the musical director; Mr Hugh Fleming, manager; Mr Postlewaite, acting-manager; and Mr F. Leslie Moreton, the general manager of the company.

MISS EDNA MAY, after a three months' run in The Schoolgirl, at Daly's Theatre, New York, moved to the Herald-square Theatre. On Boxing night Miss May will, owing to other arrangements having been made, return to Daly's, New York, and continue the run of the piece until May, so that it will be impossible for Mr Frohman to produce La Poupée with her in the cast in America. In the middle of May, Miss Edna May and the entire Schoolgirl company will be seen in London for a limited period.

MR CHARLES J. CAMERON, who has just made his first attempt at the legitimate, playing Corporal Saxton, in The Breed of the Treshams, with Mr Martin Harvey, will be the Dame in Mr Mouillot's pantomime at Southampton this Christmas, playing the same part as he appeared in at the Theatre Royal, Exeter, last year. Mr Cameron will rejoin Mr Martin Harvey for his spring tour, having been re-engaged to play Viscount Dorsington, in The Breed of the Treshams.

MR CHARLES FROHMAN'S plan of presenting a popular entertainer as a "curtain-raiser," instead of the usual one-act play, has met with considerable success. Last Saturday Mr Frank Lincoln, at the Criterion Theatre, gave his humorous monologue before their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, who came early especially to hear him. On Tuesday he was also honoured by the presence of their Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Fife.

MISS JULIA NEILSON AND MR FRED TERRY have settled on Thursday, Jan. 5, for the production of The Scarlet Pimpernel, by Orczy Barstow, at the New Theatre.

MADAME FRANCESCA JANAUSCHEK, who died recently at a private hospital on Long Island, U.S.A., was a Bohemian by birth, having been born in Prague in 1830. In 1867 she went to the United States, first performing in German, but after a thorough study of the English language, she appeared in such characters as Deborah, Mary Stuart, Queen Elizabeth, Lady Macbeth, Meg Merrilees, and Bianca. One of her latest and best-remembered impersonations was that of Mother Mandelbaum, in The Great Diamond Robbery. Madame Janauschek was stricken with paralysis four years ago. At a benefit performance given in her behalf at Wallack's Theatre in 1901, the sum of $5 000 was realised. Last year she was compelled to part with her costumes and jewels, and other valued possessions, and since then she had been cared for by the officers of the Actors' Fund, and in their plot Madame Janauschek was buried on Dec. 2 in Evergreen Cemetery.

MR J. BANNISTER HOWARD has taken over the entire rights of The Darling of the Gods and The Eternal City, with productions, from Mr Tree. Mr Howard's Darling of the Gods company will open at Chatham on Monday, and The Belle of New York will commence its tour at Manchester on the same day. Besides these Mr Howard is sending out La Poupée, Florodora, and The Eternal City this spring.

THE Scenic Artists' Association are anxious to obtain for their Exhibition at Grafton Galleries, Bond-street, April 10 to April 15, 1905, specimens of the works of Absolom, Bolena, Beverley, Bough, Chambers, Cox, Cooper, Calcott, Gates, Grieve, Hunt, Leitch, Loutherbourge, Marinave, Mulready, Marshall, Nasmith, Roberts, Clarkson Stanfield, W. Telbin, and other deceased scene painters, and the secretary, Mr H. Lawrence Harris, is inviting owners to communicate with him at 5, Robert-street, Adelphi, W.C. Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema, R.A., who was recently elected an honorary member of the Scenic Artists' Association, has kindly promised to lend his model and sketches for Coriolanus to the exhibition, and with Sir E. J. Poynter, P.R.A., and Mr E. A. Abbey, R.A., will form the hanging committee.

MR MATHESON LANG has entered into a short engagement with Mr F. R. Benson to play a round of leading parts in the company which Mr Benson is sending out to the West Indies. The répertoire being sent out is a large one. Mr Lang's parts will include Hamlet, Petruchio, David Garrick, Paolo (Paolo and Francesca), Joseph Surface, Shylock, Richard III., &c. Mr Lang is an old Bensonian. He was for about four years a member of Mr Benson's company, playing in that time a great number of parts, finally arriving at the seconds and juveniles. About two years ago he toured through the States with Mrs Langtry, playing leading juvenile parts with her, and has just concluded a long engagement as leading man with Miss Ellen Terry—an engagement lasting through part of her London season and three tours in the provinces—playing Benedick, in Much Ado About Nothing; Bassanio, in The Merchant of Venice; the Baron Gego, in The Mistress of the Robes; and the part of Geert, in Miss Terry's production of The Good Hope, Hejermann's powerful play, adapted from the Dutch by Christopher St. John, which lately aroused so much interest. The trip to the West Indies will last about fourteen weeks in all, commencing in Kingston, Jamaica, early in January. The company will be back in England again early in April.

"HER FORBIDDEN MARRIAGE" terminated its most successful tour at the Court Theatre, Wigan, on Dec. 12. Messrs Melville are at present making elaborate preparations for its production at the Standard Theatre on Boxing Day. Mr Clarence Hague, who was originally engaged for the heavy leading part of Charles Devereux, has been re-engaged for this occasion. The cast will also include Mr Albert Ward and Miss Emily Hughes in the leading parts of George Madison and the Lady Superior.

IN aid of the great charitable movement for the feeding of poor Liverpool school children, which has been conducted by the Food and Betterment Association for some years, Mr Fred Granville allowed on Wednesday the free use of the Queen's Theatre, Liverpool, for a matinée. In addition the officials of this popular place offered their services gratuitously. There was a good audience, and the result of the performance of the pantomime Cinderella will mean that a substantial sum will be handed over. The arrangements of the matinés were in the hands of Mr F. L. Arthur, the business-manager, and the programme was added to by services rendered by many of the principal artistes engaged at the local music halls.

MISS BEATRICE FERRAR, who recently returned from a holiday abroad, has been engaged by Mrs Langtry to play in her forthcoming production of Mrs Dering's Divorce, at Terry's Theatre early in January.—Mr Cecil Brooking, who, after two tours as Professor Tofield in Joseph Entangled, has been playing Tito in Pagliacci at the Savoy, has to leave on Dec. 31 to rehearse for the Prince of Verona in Romeo and Juliet at Manchester.

THE latest instalment of the Australian theatrical reminiscences of "Autolycus" is chiefly concerned with Lady Don, the actress who married the actor-baronet, Sir William Don. In the early 'sixties Sir William and Lady Don visited Australia, and became very popular in Melbourne and Sydney, but their Antipodean tour came to a tragic termination in Hobart, the capital of Tasmania, with the sudden death of Sir William. After two years of widowhood in England, Lady Don revisited Australia, and experienced a most cordial welcome. "Autolycus" narrates a pathetic incident in connection with her reappearance. She was singing "Ever of thee" to a crowded audience in the Melbourne Haymarket Theatre—the scene of her former triumphs—when, by an electric flash of memory, she was reminded that when she last sang that ballad on that stage her husband was standing close by. Her voice quivered, her articulation broke, she covered her face with her hands, and rushed off the stage sobbing.

WHAT Autolycus describes as "a strange and awesome silence" filled the thronged theatre until the manager, Mr William Hoskins (Sir Henry Irving's first tutor at Sadler's Wells, and the man who procured his first engagement for our leading actor of to-day) advanced to the footlights and explained the affecting circumstances. Having recovered control of her nerves and feelings, Lady Don returned and completed the song amid a tumult of sympathetic applause. Autolycus awards high praise to Lady Don's all-round ability and versatility, specially mentioning her Josephine, in The Child of the Regiment, her Lady Audley, her Nan (Good for Nothing), and her Ali Baba, in the pantomime of The Forty Thieves.

AT the Royalty Theatre this Christmas for four weeks from Boxing Night will be given Beaumont and Fletcher's travesty The Knight of the Burning Pestle, recently performed by the Mermaid Society at the same house. Mrs Theodore Wright will appear once more as the citizen's wife and Mr James Hearn will play the part of the grocer's apprentice. Every afternoon for four weeks also will be presented the children's fairy play, Snowdrop and the Seven Little Men, adapted from Grimm's fairy story by Mr Philip Carr, with music composed by Mr Charles W. Smith. The principal parts in the piece, which, it will be remembered, was given at the Court Theatre last year, will be sustained by Mr Thomas Holding, Miss Irene Rooke, and Miss Grace Arundale. It will be preceded by an adaptation by Mrs Hugh Bell of Grimm's fairy story, Rumpelstiltzkin.

MR OTHO STUART is anxious to correct a statement which has been recently made by one or two of the papers to the effect that The Taming of the Shrew will be given at His Majesty's next April by his company from the Adelphi. There is absolutely no truth in the report, which may have originated in the fact that Mr Stuart has given permission for Mr Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton to appear in some of their original parts with Mr Tree.

MISS MARIE GEORGE, who is playing at the Lane this year, is of German descent, and was brought up in New York. On entering the profession she changed her name from Georg to George, and played her first part in The Lady Slavey. Her first successes in London were in The Casino Girl and The Belle of Bohemia. She has also tried her luck on the music hall stage.

MR RICHARD MANSFIELD, during his recent engagement in Boston, U.S.A., made a fine revival of Richard III., following the model of his representation of that tragedy at the Globe Theatre, when he had the counsel of several competent authorities. Mr Mansfield is making Richard III. and The Merchant of Venice the leading features of his répertoire for this season. It is seven years since he last appeared in either of these plays.

MISS STELLA GASTELLE, whose performances in La Poupee and Arnorelle are so well known, has sent a particularly pretty form of Christmas greeting this year to her many friends and admirers. It is a set of six of her best photographs on a screen mount of deep red.

AT the Theatre Royal, Stratford, this week Mr George Kirk's company, in Judy, has been proving a strong attraction. Mr George Kirk plays Grip, the three-fingered detective, with a subdued force and finesse which is most effective, his utterances always carrying conviction. Mr Richard Ferris enacts the rascally Duburg on well-defined lines, and Mr William Vane does exceedingly well as Sterling. Mr Will Casey is amusing as Jim, and Mr Fred May contributes an excellent sketch of Giddles. Miss Mary Neil exhibits versatility in her delineation of Alice and Polly, astonishing the audience by her celerity in "changing." Miss Violet Langley well portrays the malevolent nature of Blake, and Miss Annie Mitchell makes a smart and vivacious Becky. Much interest centres round Miss Florrie Groves's performance as Judy, and the clever young actress is as successful as ever in the part. Minor characters are in competent hands, and the piece is very appropriately staged.

MESSRS BENNETT AND BENNETT, the proprietors of the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham-junction, announce that on Boxing afternoon they will produce their ninth annual children's Christmas fairy pantomime entitled Dick Whittington. Mr Humphrey E. Brammall's company includes Miss Lily Shaw, Miss Ruby Verdi, Mr Austin Rudd, Mr Ben Albert, Mr Will Johnstone, Mr G. W. Hurst, Miss Gwennie Harcourt, Mr Alf Hales, Les Four Papillons, Messrs Condon and Preston, the New York Comedy Four, Miss Bessie Evans, Mr Harry Gifford, and Miss Dorothy Grasdorff.

MISS STELLA BERRETON'S pupil, Miss Maude Lacy, made a most successful first appearance as Lady Hamilton, in Mr H. F. Wiber Wood's play of Lady Hamilton; or, The Last Signal, produced at the Grand Theatre for a matinée on the 22nd ult., winning golden opinions from Press and public. So finished a performance is seldom given by so young an artist, and Mrs Douglass is to be highly congratulated on the result of her able instruction.

AT the Theatre Royal, Middlesbrough, Dick Whittington is to be produced by Mr J. F. Elliston. Miss Ethel Newman will appear in the title-rôle, and will be supported by the Misses Dare, Lytton, Percy, Reed, May Russel, and Nellie Shannon; Messrs Tom Foy, the Yorkshire lad, Will Musgrove, Bert Byrne, and Fred Mulvey.

THE Hine Prize for composition at the Royal Academy of Music has been awarded to Marjorie Slaughter. The adjudicators were Mr Julian Marshall and Miss Ethel M. Boyce. The Westmorland Scholarship for male vocalists has been awarded to Emile D'Otsly, Philip Simmons being very highly commended. The examiners were Messrs Walter Mackway, Arthur Thompson, and Madame Larkcom. The Potter Exhibition for female pianists has been awarded to Margaret Bennett, Gladys Law being highly commended. The examiners were Messrs S. Blakiston, A. E. Izard, C. F. Pollard, C. F. Reddie, and Oscar Beringer (chairman). The Bonamy Dobree Prize for violoncellists has been awarded to Gwendoline Griffiths. The adjudicators were Messrs Alfred Earnshaw, B. Patterson Parker, and J. Edwd. Hambleton (chairman).

WE regret to record the death of Mrs David Collins, professionally known as Miss Florence Gray, at one time a well-known actress in London. The deceased had been an invalid and sufferer for some years. She was engaged for four seasons at the old Marylebone Theatre (now the West London) when under Messrs Carl and West's management. She also appeared at various times at the Globe, the Olympic, and Imperial Theatres, and fulfilled engagements with Mr Walter Reynolds' and Mr Robert Arthur's companies.

MR ROBERT BROUGH and MR HERBERT FLEMMING have entered into partnership in theatrical enterprises in Australia. Their first comedy company will leave early in March, and its repertory will include The Walls of Jericho, Beauty and the Barge, Quality Street, and Little Mary.

FIFTY boys and girls who are to appear on the stage of Drury-lane Theatre on Boxing Night were in attendance at Bow-street Police-court on Thursday, to obtain the necessary licences, which were readily granted.

MR F. R. BENSON'S company, on its West Indian tour, will visit in succession Kingston, Jamaica, where it will open on Jan. 14; Port of Spain, Trinidad; Bridgetown, Barbadoes, and Georgetown, Demerara, returning to Kingston on March 17, and being back in England in April.

MR RICHARD FIELDING, who was lately playing in The Chevalier at the Garrick, is now enacting Captain Bob Fletcher in Fourchette and Co., and the Colonel in Charley's Aunt, in the place of Mr Brandon Thomas, who is indisposed.

THE friends of Miss Nellie Fletcher, daughter of the late Edward Fletcher, who was for many years lessee and manager of the Theatre Royal, Cardiff, will be sorry to hear that she is lying seriously ill with rheumatic fever at 41, Barcombe-avenue, Streatham-hill.

NO one who witnessed Mr Austin Melford's highly amusing creation of the Professor, in Ladyland, at the Avenue on Monday night, could have realised that he took up the part at four days' notice, and that, in fact, he was appearing as the Silver King at the Shakespeare, Clapham, during the course of these scant rehearsals.

MADAME SARAH BERNHARDT, who is touring through Europe, has been allowed to appear at Constantinople in Frou-Frou, Sapho and La Dame aux Camélias, but the Turkish Censorship has declined to permit La Tosca, Phèdre, or L'Aiglon. All plays in which kings or princes are represented are forbidden in Turkey; but in L'Aiglon, in which Madame Bernhardt impersonates a male rôle, the Turkish officials discover a direct breach of the laws of the Koran, and decline most emphatically to discuss the question. At an afternoon tea-party given by M. Pierre Loti on board the French guardship Le Vautour, Madame Bernhardt said, "My relations with the Sultan cannot be described as 'excellent.' I believe he hates me. Coquelin aîné is the only dramatic artist who finds grace in his eyes."

MR GEORGE EDWARDES'S Duchess of Dantzic company will open at the King's Theatre, Glasgow, on the 26th inst., and will remain there for a month, followed by a month at the Lyceum Theatre, Edinburgh, with all the "big cities" to follow. Miss Amy Aygarde is the Sans-Gêne and Mr Matthew Brodie the Napoleon. Mr J. B. Gordon stage-manages.

MR SAM FREDERICKS, the manager of the Theatre Royal, Stratford, was unostentatiously married on Wednesday at Christchurch, Wanstead, to Miss Marion Herring, second daughter of Mr and Mrs E. Herring, of Chigwell. Only near relatives and a few intimate friends were invited to the ceremony, although the popularity of the bridegroom in the district had attracted a goodly sprinkling of sightseers. The fair bride was given away by her father, and the bridegroom was accompanied by his brother, Mr Fred Fredericks, straight from the throes of pantomime producing, who acted as best man. The wedding déjeuner was held at the Abercorn Rooms, Great Eastern Hotel, and a party numbering about twenty-five, including Mrs Ellis Fredericks, proprietress of the Stratford Theatre, sister of the bridegroom; Mr and Mrs A. E. Abrahams, sister and brother-in-law of the bridegroom; Mr Walter Fredericks; the parents, three sisters, and brother of the bride; Mr Bert Ashton, Mr A. Clinch, and Mr T. Anderson sat down at the floral-bedecked tables fully prepared to banish all thoughts of the fog and inclemency prevailing without, and give themselves entirely to festivity and gaiety. After a recherché repast had been done justice to, "The health and happiness of the bride and bridegroom" was enthusiastically drunk, followed by other toasts, speeches being felicitously made by Mr A. E. Abrahams, Mr Bert Ashton, Mr A. Clinch, Mr Fred Fredericks, and Mr Herring, a few concluding happy words being spoken by the bridegroom. Subsequently the guests betook themselves to the Shrubbery, Wanstead, the residence of Mrs Ellis Fredericks, where they were regaled by the charming hostess until the "wee sma' hours." The happy couple were the recipients of numerous costly and useful presents.

IN the Court of King's Bench, on the 16th inst., before Mr Justice Wills and a special jury, Mr John Pitt Hardacre and Mrs F. M. Gumley sued Messrs F. W. Purcell, H. Armitage, and Miss Haidee Wright, for an injunction, damages, and penalties for an alleged infringement of the plaintiffs' sole right of the representation of a play called East Lynne, "Bullock version." The defendants denied that the plaintiffs possessed the right of representation claimed, and also that they had played any play in which the plaintiffs had a right, and pleaded that for the play performed by them they had acquired rights from the late Mr. Wilson Barrett. Evidence having been heard at length on the 16th inst., and on Monday last, the further hearing of the case was adjourned till Jan. 11.

MISS MARGARET ASHTON, whose health has considerably improved after the complete rest and change of air she recently enjoyed at Folkestone, has resumed her provincial tour in Scotland, and is everywhere meeting with unqualified success. She has this week been singing to a crowded house in Edinburgh; and the sustained applause that greets the popular American soprano clearly shows that her fine voice has lost none of its old strength and brilliancy.

MISS ALICE HOLLANDER on Saturday last successfully took up the rôle of Aurora, in Sergeant Brue, at the Strand Theatre, which had been vacated by Miss Madge Lessing. The newcomer, who is well known on the concert platform, quickly sang herself into favour, her rendering of "Never mind the weather," a new number in Liza Lehmann's happiest vein, being much appreciated. Another new number, a prison trio entitled "Put me in my little cell," also met with much applause.

MRS FRANK HARVEY, after a long rest, will reopen at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, August Bank Holiday, 1905, playing her original parts in a repertory of five plays a-week. This company was founded by the late Mdlle. Beatrice in 1870. It is believed to be the oldest touring company now on tour, and was carried on for over twenty years by the late Frank Harvey. It will now be conducted by Dallas Welford and T. A. Braidon, who will tour this company all the year round.

CINEMATOGRAPHIC effects are not easily reproduced with stage properties. The Cinématograph presents with decidedly realistic effect a train coming from a distance towards the audience until it seems about to thunder over the footlights into the auditorium. During the recent revival of London after Dark in Sydney an attempt was made to reproduce this thrilling effect in the well-known sensation scene on the Underground Railway. Instead of the train rushing across the stage, as usual, it was run down from the back towards the footlights, but the innovation did not yield results equal to anticipation. In short it was generally voted a failure. When stage hands can travel as fast as the Cinématograph machine the "thrill" may be secured.

THE German company will give on Boxing night a special performance at the Great Queen-street Theatre of Alt Heidelberg, the original of the play which had such a long and successful run at the St. James's Theatre with Mr George Alexander as Karl Heinrich. This rôle will be played in German by Mr Heinz Pabst, and the part of Kathie will be rendered by Fräulein Rosie Grawz, who made such a hit in Das Thal des Lebens. After Boxing night the theatre will be closed until Jan. 2.

MISS IDA MOLESWORTH AND MR MARK BLOW will open on Boxing Day with Under Two Flags at Lincoln. They will produce two new plays this spring—At Cripple Creek, a play of Western American mining life, which has been a great success in America, being toured by three companies over there, and has a very fine plant of American printing, and In the King's Name, a romantic costume play by the late Charles Rogers, author of The Ladder of Life. Both plays will be seen at the leading suburban and provincial theatres this spring. The same company will enact all three plays, and in most of the towns visited the bill will be changed during the week.

MR HUGH METCALFE, who has relinquished his engagement with Messrs Moule and Nicholls as lead in The Life that Kills, is the son of Metcalf, the composer and musician, who wrote the famous old hunting song "Do you ken John Peel."

"LADY MADCAP."

Musical Play, by Paul Rubens and N. Newnham Davis; Music by Paul Rubens; Lyrics by Paul Rubens and Percy Greenbank; Produced at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, on Saturday, Dec 17.

Count de St. Hubert	Mr MAURICE FARKOA
Bill Stratford	Mr AUBREY FITZGERALD
Posh Jenkins.....	Mr FRED EMNEY
Colonel Layton.....	Mr LEEDHAM BANTOCK
Major Blatherswaite	Mr DENNIS EADIE
Captain Harrington	Mr J. EDWARD FRASER
Lieut. Somerset	Mr SPENCER TREVOR
Lord Framlingham	Mr HERBERT SPARLING
Corporal Ham	Mr GEORGE CARROLL
Palmer	Mr R. ST. GEORGE
Old Huntsman	Mr RICHARD KAVANAGH
Trooper Smith	Mr G. P. HUNTLEY
Gwenny Holden	Miss DELIA MASON
Susan	Miss EVA SANDFORD
Mrs Layton	Miss BLANCHE MASSEY
Lady Betty Clarridge....	Miss ADRIENNE AUGARDE

Why is it that a musical play must always have the progress of its story arrested in the second act, in order to allow of the interpolation of a "sing-song"? Is it a remnant of the times when no librettist was found capable of holding the attention of the audience during the whole evening, so that he had to be "helped out with a variety entertainment? The adherence to conventional rule was peculiarly unnecessary in the case of Lady Madcap, which was produced at the Prince of Wales's Theatre on Saturday night last, for Messrs Paul Rubens and N. Newham Davis have produced a book which is intelligible, coherent, and amusing throughout. The principal character is one Brown, a young millionaire, who, in response to certain suggestions, has enlisted as a trooper in a hussar regiment, in order to "rough it." Brown has a quaint individuality. Without being excessively intelligent, he is sufficiently shrewd; but his judgment of his fellow-men is obscured by his abundant good-nature. For instance, he cannot believe that Bill Stratford, a member of the "swell mob," who has endeavoured to cheat him at cards at Ostend, is anything but honest; indeed, Brown has serious intentions of paying Stratford a gambling debt of £1,000. Lady Betty Clarridge, the "madcap" daughter of Lord Framlingham, has been struck by the prowess of the supposed trooper on the cricket-field; and, in order to meet him again, has invited the whole regiment to lunch at Lord Framlingham's castle. He is enraged at Lady Betty's prank, and confines her to her room, where she escapes by a ladder, gets both her father and his trusty chief domestic out of the way by means of delusive telegrams, and dresses up Brown as the butler. She then proceeds to exchange identities with her maid, Susan, Lady Betty's friend, Gwenny Holden, impersonating her ladyship. Bill Stratford arrives on the scene in answer to an advertisement for a millionaire husband, which Lady Betty has inserted in the papers, and audaciously presents himself as Brown. With all this masquerading, fun and frolic are abundantly evolved. Brown creates much astonishment by his free-and-easy manners as the butler; and, in that capacity, is taken into the confidence of Stratford, who wants the butler to "stand in" with him in a sharping swindle. Eventually, Brown proposes to Lady Betty in the character of Susan and is accepted; and Stratford's roguery being exposed, he is thrust out by the servants, Lord Framlingham having returned home in time to learn of his daughter's engagement to the real millionaire.

The piece, which plays till half-past eleven, might well be shortened by the omission of some of the songs in the second act, which is at present overloaded with musical numbers. There are certain items, however, which must necessarily be retained—amongst them being a comic duet for Stratford and his henchman, Posh Jenkins, with a refrain "Good morning, if you please;" a neat little semi-spoken song for Susan called "Nerves," the lines of which are very smart; a capital chanson for the inevitable Frenchman, the Count De St. Hubert "I love you in velvet," most tactfully "worded" and composed; a droll ditty about Moses when the light went out, the effect of which is much assisted by a pretty bit of stage-management, the chorus coming on with candles which they blow out simultaneously on the concluding chord; and a clever song and dance for Susan. "The Missis." A song for St. Hubert, recounting an amorous adventure with much whispering and mystery, might be sacrificed without damage to the piece. There are the usual accompaniments of pretty dresses, for the designs of which Mr Percy Anderson is responsible, and of brightly imagined details which have been well carried out under the excellent stage-direction of Mr J. A. E Malone and the presiding eye of Mr Willie Warde; and there are two lovely "sets," a rose-embowered exterior by Mr Hawes Craven, and a pillared hall cleverly carried out by Mr J. Harker in a scheme of orange and gold.

A most bewitching Lady Betty Clarridge is Miss Adrienne Augarde, whose winning ways and roguish refinement prove absolutely irresistible. Miss Augarde makes all her points quite naturally, and without any apparent effort; and a great charm of her acting is it freshness and unconsciousness. With all her freedoms, Lady Betty is always the daughter of Lord Framlingham. Miss Augarde has not been over supplied with musical opportunities, but she renders her "little dog" ditty in the second act so daintily that she ensures for it an encore. Miss Blanche Massey as Mrs Layton has little to do, but does it so nicely that she can be imagined holding her own in more important comedy work. Miss Eva Sandford as Susan gets every ounce of meaning out of her songs, dances delightfully, and acts with just the required amount of emphasis and animation; and Miss Delia Mason as the gentle, modest Gwenny Holden gives a charming picture of a type of English girl which is steadily becoming extinct. Mr G. P. Huntley as Trooper Smith elaborates the author's character-sketch with an ease and originality which are invaluable. His performance is a genuine piece of comedy acting, and the artistic tone is maintained amidst all temptations to farce, a remarkable sense of reality being created by the apparent spontaneousness of Mr Huntley's embodiment. Another creation of decidedly superior quality is Mr Aubrey Fitzgerald's Bill Stratford. Mr Fitzgerald not only has an agreeable singing voice, but uses it with great judgment, and his impersonation of the modern Macaire is decidedly effective and amusing. Mr Fred Emney's always-diverting methods are well employed in the realisation of the Jacques Strop of the pair, Posh Jenkins; and Mr Leedham Bantock's sleek, fat, sleepy Colonel is in that able artist's best style. A performance which must not go unpraised is Mr George Carrol's Corporal Ham, played with exactly the seriousness necessary to develop the humour of the situations. The officers of the East Anglian Hussars are competently represented by Messrs Dennis Eadie, J. Edward Fraser, and Spencer Trevor; and the irascible Lord Framlingham has an energetic exponent in Mr Herbert Sparling. Mr Maurice Farkoa has so many admirers, and his peculiar style is so famous, that we need only mention that he is in his very best form in Lady Madcap, and has opportunities equal, if not superior, to any in previous pieces in which he has appeared. Messrs Paul Rubens and N. Newnham Davis may be congratulated upon the result of their collaboration, which is likely to prove extremely popular.

AT Marlborough-street Police-court on Wednesday Mr Richard Maynard, manager of the Royalty Theatre, applied to Mr Denman, for licences to permit twenty-eight children to perform in the matinées of Snowdrop, which is to be produced this afternoon. Sub-divisional inspector M'Kay having informed the magistrate that the children were in good health the licences were granted for twenty-seven of them, one being under age.

THE NEW "LA SCALA."

Our elaborate descriptive account last week of the new La Scala Theatre on the site of the Old Prince of Wales's, in Charlotte-street, Tottenham-court-road, renders it needless for us to repeat our information. To the non-architectural eye, the main points in the interior of the new building are:—The simplicity of the proscenium "frame," which is a plane of creamy-white, only relieved by the gilded figure of St. George at the top of the arch; the absence of side-boxes, with the exception of four, which are contained in large porch-like erections at either side of the house; the small amount of ornament and the superior artistic merit of what is employed, notably the gilded wrought iron work in front of the boxes; the staircases with gilded rails leading from the balcony to the stalls; and the use throughout the house of marble and creamy-coloured stone. The whiteness of these reflects the electric illumination powerfully, and will give the new La Scala one of the best lighted auditoriums in London.

The formal opening of the house took place on Monday afternoon. From three o'clock onwards guests continued to arrive, amongst those who accepted invitations being Sir Squire Bancroft, Mr W. S. Gilbert, Mr Harry Nicholls, Miss Florence St. John, Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Miss Lily Hanbury, Miss Kitty Loftus, Mr Martin Harvey, Mr F. Dicksee, R.A., Miss Constance Collier, Mr Herman Vezin, Mr John Hare, Mr Tito Mattei, Mrs George Alexander, Mr Herbert Waring, Mr Wilfred Bendall, Miss Lena Ashwell, Mr and Mrs Weedon Grossmith, Mr and Mrs Forbes Robertson, Sir Algernon West, Miss Olga Nethersole, and Mr and Mrs Lionel Monckton.

The National Anthem was sung at 4·30, and the curtain was raised, disclosing Lady Bancroft, who said:—Dr. Distin Maddick has long determined that I should be the first to tread these boards. It is a matter of sentiment to him, and, as a matter of sentiment, I am sure you will all think it appropriate that I should do so, for on this very ground stood the dear old Prince of Wales's Theatre. When I had the honour to unlock the door to-day to welcome you to this beautiful house, it was, believe me, with feelings of very deep emotion. My thoughts went back through a long vista of years, and I remember the opening night of the dear little theatre over which I used to preside. I saw myself, as it were, a few minutes before the doors opened on the inaugural night nervously busy in a private box, perched on a small ladder, nailing up the last lace curtain. It was a simple little theatre, although lofty hopes were centred in it, and, being young, I was not afraid. Lucky for me it was that I possessed so much courage, for until the last moment my friends warned me that the West-end folk would never come so far out of their way. Time told a different tale. Indeed an old apple-woman, who used in former days to stand outside the theatre, waited, and waited, and waited until the performance was over, and when the audience had quite departed, and the last carriage turned the corner, she gave vent to her feelings in these words: "Well, if these be your haristocrats, give me your roughs. I've only took fourpence, got a 'orrid cold, and all for nothing." The old lady disappeared and was never seen again.

But, seriously, it must ever be a proud thought both for me and my husband that we numbered as members of our company in that little theatre which once stood here such dear friends, some, alas! now dead, as Mr John Hare, Miss Ellen Terry, Mr and Mrs Kendal, Mrs John Wood, Miss Carlotta Addison, the original Bells, in School, Mr George Honey, Mr John Clayton, Mr Arthur Cecil, Mr Forbes Robertson, and many distinguished servants of the public. To-day I have compared the modest little house with the grandeur of this beautiful building, but just as very humble parents have often given to the world a genius, so from the ashes of that tiny theatre has risen this noble building. I warmly congratulate Dr. Maddick, and I also cordially congratulate his architect, Mr Frank Verity, upon the splendid result of what has been all along, I know, a labour of love. What the aim and scheme of this theatre is to be I do not yet know, but, were it mine, I should work very hard to make it a national theatre, where a play of Shakespeare should be acted at least once a week. That, I think, would be a worthy memorial and a fitting tribute to the memory of the world's greatest dramatist. I heartily compliment Dr. Maddick on the kindly regard he has shown for the dear old theatre, and with all my heart I wish this new one the success and honour which were so freely bestowed upon its predecessor.

At the conclusion, in answer to repeated demands, Lady Bancroft led on Dr. Maddick, who was warmly applauded. Afternoon tea was then served on the stage.

THE Copyright Bill recently passed by the American House of Representatives gives the author or the proprietor of a book published in a foreign language, belonging to a nation extending similar privileges to the United States, the right of copyright in an English translation or dramatisation made within twelve months after the first publication of the book in the foreign country. The Bill has yet to pass the Senate.

AT the usual weekly meeting of the council of the Actors' Association, held last Tuesday, the applications of eighteen ladies and gentlemen for membership were before the meeting, and their records having proved satisfactory they will be elected in January next. The honorary solicitors reported progress in several matters. The report of the Finance and General Purposes Committee was received. It was agreed, in view of the Christmas holidays, that the offices should be closed on Boxing Day and the next meeting of the Council be held on Tuesday, Jan. 3, 1905, at 2·30 p.m.

DEATH OF MR. WILLIAM RIGNOLD.

Mr William Rignold passed away peacefully in his sleep early on Thursday morning at his residence, Blaxland House, Hornsey. He had been ailing for some time, but his relatives and friends did not suspect that the end was so near. Mr William Rignold was born at Leicester on Dec. 18, 1836, but the traditions of his family settle around Birmingham. In the old church of King's Norton there lie generations of Rignolds. Here is buried Mrs Rignold, the mother of the deceased and of Mr George Rignold and Miss Susan Rignold.

Mr Rignold's career extended over more than half a century, for he made his début at the mature age of four. His mother was "starring" at the Redditch Theatre during the vacation at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, and little William danced a sailor's hornpipe. During his boyhood Mr Rignold constantly appeared on the stage as a dancer and in pantomime, and when at Newcastle, in 1846, Miss Charlotte Cushman was seen in her famous character of Meg Merrilies, Mr Rignold, then ten years of age, represented Franco. But music was selected for the lad's career, and he took lessons on the violin from Mr Coppin. In 1850 Mr Rignold became a member of the orchestra at the Theatre Royal, Hull, and in 1855 he was repetiteur at the New Theatre, Sheffield, then under the management of Mr Char. Dillon. A year later he happened to be sent to Limerick by Henry Webb to lead the band in Rob Roy, Sir Wm. Don playing the Bailie. The "heavy gentleman" lost the train, and Mr Rignold acted Rashleigh and led the orchestra as well, without the subterfuge being noticed by the large audience. The performance was such a success that all his friends persuaded him to take to the stage, so he left his much-loved violin, and in 1857 opened at the Amphitheatre, Liverpool, under Mr Copeland, as "general utility." At the end of three years he had played the entire round of "heavy business." He had the good fortune, in many of Mr Webster's parts, to please Celeste, who offered to get him an opening in London. During the ten years between 1860 and 1870 he was leading the hard, but useful, life of a provincial actor, mostly in stock companies. In 1860 Mr Rignold was engaged at the Bath and Bristol Theatres Royal in various capacities, culminating in "entire lead." In 1865 he transferred his services to the Theatre Royal, Dublin, and appeared there as leading actor during four seasons.

THE LATE MR. WILLIAM RIGNOLD.

On Feb. 15, 1869, Mr William Rignold made his début on the London stage at the Princess's Theatre as Count De Fersen in Palgrave Simpson's Marie Antoinette. Mr Rignold afterwards appeared at most of the leading London theatres and in many notable productions. When Drink was produced at the Princess's Theatre Mr Rignold was the Gouget, and his performance was so excellent that it won a special word of praise from M. Francesque Sarcey when the eminent French critic came over to see the English version of L'Assommoir. An even more remarkable success was the actor's impersonation of Jacques, in The Two Orphans. In the original production, in revival after revival, on tour and in town, Mr Rignold played this part thousands of times. When the late Sir Augustus Harris started the series of melodramas that made his management an unique and interesting chapter in the history of the Stage, Mr Wm. Rignold was one of his company, playing Clement Huntingford, in The World. A tour in America in 1881-2 was his next noteworthy experience, where, under the management of Mr Imre Kiralfy, he appeared as Michael Strogoff, the Courtier of the Czar, in the leading cities of the United States.

A promising engagement with Madame Ristori on his return to England, to support the great tragedienne in Macbeth at Drury-lane, was cut short in a most unpleasant way. Mr Rignold, in the ardour of a stage fight, was actually stabbed, and was confined to his room for a considerable time. He assisted in Charles Reade's production of Rachel the Reaper at the Adelphi in 1883. He supported Miss Mary Anderson on tour, and at the Lyceum during 1884, playing Leucippe to her Galatea. In a dramatic version of Adam Bede he played the hero, and also a violin solo, during 1885 and 1886. He appeared in A Run of Luck at Drury-lane; in Held by the Enemy at the Princess's; and in Joseph's Sweetheart at the Vaudeville. The last English production of note in which Mr Rignold took part was Nowadays, in which he played Mr Barrett's part, John Saxton. The character of the bluff Yorkshireman was popular with Mr Rignold, and also with the public. He sailed for Australia in January, 1880, where he toured for two years with Nowadays.

Mr Rignold became totally blind in 1902, and in September of that year Mr Edward Ledger started in The Era a testimonial to the unfortunate actor, Sir Henry Irving heading the list with the sum of £21. Mr Rignold bore his terrible affliction with admirable resignation and cheerfulness, though it was a sad sight to see the one-time representative of so many bold and manly characters reduced to the slow and cautious movements of the blind.

A benefit performance in aid of Mr Rignold took place at the Lyric Theatre on the afternoon of Dec. 5, 1902, when a large number of well-known artistes appeared. The net proceeds amounted to £575, and The Era subscription list reached a total of £912, so that the veteran actor, deprived of his means of livelihood by the terrible affliction of loss of sight, was able to end his days in peace and comfort. The funeral will probably take place on Tuesday next.

THE PLAYS OF DUMAS THE ELDER.

For the drama of state intrigue we opine that Alexandre Dumas the elder has always been facile princeps, and it is only a few years since London playgoers showed a great interest in one of his most romantic stories, which was adapted by all sorts and conditions of playwrights. The present generation, we are afraid, is profoundly indifferent to the interesting Frenchman; but to those who wish to learn something of the nature and excellence of his stage work we commend them to Mr Harry A. Spurr, who knows more about the subject than any man living. In his latest book, "Stories from the plays of Alexandre Dumas," he has chosen three of the most notable of his fifty or sixty dramatic productions, viz., Henri III and His Court, Antony, and Mdlle. De Belle-Isle. In explanation of the scope of his work Mr Spurr in his preface says:—

"If we had told these stories in condensed form (the method adopted in at least one famous precedent) they would have been spoilt for our purposes. We have therefore contented ourselves with translating the dialogue of the plays practically as it stands, filling in the backgrounds in narrative form, and so supplying as best we could the missing movements, gestures, and expressions of the actors, the scenery, and all the other stage effects. In any case this could not be done so as adequately to compensate the reader; but the present form may convey to him some idea of how the plays would appear when acted. We were led to adopt this mode of reproduction because Dumas's dialogue omits little that needs to be explained, and contains little or nothing that needs to be omitted, for almost every word is necessary to the action and to the effects designed by the playwright. The three French plays here told in English narrative were carefully chosen, Henri Trois, because it was typical of its author's 'historical romance' plays, Antony, because it was the first and best of his 'social dramas,' and Mdlle. De Belle-Isle, because it was, perhaps, the first great comedy-drama."

Dumas himself has given a full account of the origin of Henri III. and His Court in his "Mémoires." At the time of writing it he was twenty-five, and held the position of a clerk in the bureau of the Duc D'Orléans. One day while searching for some copying paper in another of the rooms he happened to glance at an open volume of Anquetil's "History of France," lying on a desk, and his eye fell upon a passage telling of a cruel jest played upon the Duchesse of Guise by her husband. One day the Duke—who was profoundly jealous of the friendship of St. Mégrin for the Duchesse—entered his wife's room and threatening her with death by dagger forced her to swallow what she believed to be a deadly potion. After keeping her in horrible suspense for an hour, the Duke told her that the cup had contained nothing more poisonous than jelly-broth. "This strange incident," says Mr Spurr, "excited Dumas's curiosity, and he wished to read more on the subject. He found in the 'Mémoires De l'Estoile' an account of St. Mégrin's assassination by the Duc De Guise, and a similar incident relating to the murder of Bussy D'Amboise (which he used again to such excellent purpose in La Dame De Monsoreau.)"

Henri III. and His Court was conceived with originality and developed with skill. As a play it was in bright contrast to the long, dreary classic tragedy, written in stilted rhetoric with passion set forth in alexandrines, lifeless, and unconvincing. Realism and romance were here in contradistinction to pedantry and classicism; and the drama brought the author instant fame. Antony created an even greater furore than Henri Trois, for its daring and its passion. During the next fifteen years Dumas was best known to France as the author of Antony. It was the problem play of the period. The hero is a foundling, the mystery of whose birth debars him from a place in society to which his talents entitle him. Thus cast out, this modern Ishmael takes a terrible revenge. The play, except for the two denouements, is taken from the author's own life. Mademoiselle De Belle-Isle still remains, and is likely to remain, in the répertoire of the Comédie Française. It has been "adapted" for English audiences as The Silver Key. The story is founded on a true incident of the reign of Louis XV.

The work is illustrated with an excellent portrait, by Fabre, dated 1847, which has never been reproduced in England; and the vignette, representing the final scene in "Antony," is from an old drawing of the period. The publisher of the volume, which is well got up, is J. R. Tutin, of Cottingham, near Hull, and the price is 2s. 6d. nett.

"LITTLE BLACK SAMBO" AND "LITTLE WHITE BARBARA."

A Musical Medley, in Two Acts, Adapted from the Two Popular Dumpy Books by Rutland Barrington, and Composed by Wilfrid Bendall and Frederick Rosse, with Extra Numbers by Milton Wellings, Mary Watson, Jeanne and Ian Malcolm.
Produced at the Garrick Theatre on Wednesday Afternoon, Dec. 21.

Little Black Sambo	Miss NELLIE BOWMAN
Pompey	Mr FRANK LAWTON
Plantagenet	Mr WEBB DARLEIGH
Black Jumbo.....	Mr EDWARD RIGBY
Doctor Funnyman	Mr LEONARD CALVERT
Jake.....	Mr FRANK LACEY
Shere Khan	Mr JOHN CROOKE
Shere Khant	Mr FRED NERRI
Khant Shere	Mr D. IMBERT
Shere Shant	Master THOMAS LIPTON
Bruin	Mr A. B. ALLEN
P.C. White	Mr D. STEWART
Liza	Miss MADGE TITHERADGE
Little White Barbara	Miss IRIS HAWKINS
Mammy Mumbo	Miss KATE BISHOP
Aunt Dosy	Miss LENA HALIDAY
Aunt Posy	Miss CAROLINE EWELL
Topsy	Miss IDA VALLI
Ching-a-Ling.....	Miss PAT COLLINGE

The Dumpy Books are a "great institution" in the nursery, and the juveniles who go to see the new musical medley at the Garrick Theatre will recognise here and there in the story extracts from those quaint and favourite tales. The theme, which is very slight, deals with the indisposition of one Little White Barbara, for whom a certain Doctor Funnyman prescribes unlimited amusement. This supplies excuse for a sort of "darkie" variety entertainment, most of which is given outside Black Jumbo's cabin at the edge of a certain jungle. An incident introduced is the artful dodgery of Sambo, who, attacked by four tigers, persuades each of them that he is the finest animal in the jungle, and makes them all so jealous that they take to fighting with one another around a tree. The piece ends with the doctor's recommendation to the audience to come and see the "show" as a cure for all complaints.

The chief contributor to what is practically a variety entertainment is Mr Frank Lawton, whose marvellous whistling and extraordinary bone playing create immense enthusiasm. He also sings an "Echo" song with delicate expressiveness. Mr Lawton is a pillar of strength in the piece. Miss Nellie Bowman as Little Black Sambo acts, sings, and dances with admirable animation, energy, and spirit, and keeps matters moving merrily all the time that she is upon the stage. Her liveliness is very exhilarating, and she does her work with a quick confidence that carries the audience with her entirely. Mr Webb Darleigh is an imposing and stately Plantagenet, and Mr Edward Rigby gives a characteristic and comic impersonation of Black Jumbo, Mr Leonard Calvert being entirely efficient as Dr. Funnyman, and Mr Frank Lacey being bright and merry as Jake. Miss Madge Titheradge is delightfully spontaneous and artlessly impulsive as 'Liza, and dances with a vast amount of activity and abandon; and Miss Iris Hawkins is a pretty and dainty Little White Barbara. Miss Kate Bishop is broadly comic as Mammy Mumbo, and the two Aunts are ably impersonated by Miss Lena Halliday and Miss Caroline Ewell, Miss Ida Valli acting and singing capitally as Topsy. Messrs Bendall and Frederick Rosse's music is tuneful and spirited, and is scored and harmonised in musicianly style. All the songs and choruses go well, and many are deservedly encored. Mr Frederick Farren has arranged the dances ably, and Mr W. Harford's scenery is quite up to the mark. The "medley" is preceded by an old-fashioned episode, in one act, by Tom Gallon played for the first time, and entitled

"LADY JANE'S CHRISTMAS-PARTY."

Sir James Brandon	Mr CHARLES GOODHART
Charlie.....	Master HUGH WAKEFIELD
Nathaniel Doffey	Mr WEBB DARLEIGH
Jacob Flatters	Mr EDWARD RIGBY
Toby.....	By HIMSELF
Mrs Doffey	Miss KATE BISHOP
Jane	Miss NELLIE BOWMAN

This little piece has an appropriate "Christmasy" spirit, and is pleasantly written. Charlie, the son of Sir James Brandon, is left at Miss Cropper's select establishment for the sons of gentlemen on the evening of Christmas Day, awaiting the arrival of his father, who is to take him home. He fraternises in the kitchen with a servant of the "Marchioness" type, called Jane. Their conversation is interrupted by the arrival of a party of "Punch and Judy" people, including an acrobat, a clown, and the acrobat's wife. They are very hungry; and Charlie and Jane supply them with food. Eventually Sir James comes to take his son away, is induced to engage Jane as a domestic at the "Hall," and gives the "Punch and Judy" people two guineas to redeem their show, which is in pawn. The piece was played very competently, Miss Nellie Bowman enacting Jane with delicacy, taste, and naturalness; and Master Hugh Wakefield showing refinement and intelligence as Charlie. Mr Webb Darleigh was effective as the acrobat, Mr Edward Rigby was grimly droll as Jacob Flatters, and Miss Kate Bishop was excellent as Mrs Doffey.

MR. W. S. GILBERT ON THE BENCH.

Mr W. S. Gilbert presided over the Bench of Magistrates at Edgware on Wednesday and heard a summons against a Hendon tradesman for disorderly conduct. The police stated that some boys were dancing to a tune on a tin whistle outside the defendant's shop, and when asked to move away the defendant shouted for them to go on to his premises, and that this was a free country. Of the four witnesses for the defence, one said it was a lady singing, another said it was a banjo, another that it was a violin, mandolin, and a lady. The defendant said if an Italian with an organ came up there would be a crowd.

Mr Gilbert—Good gracious, we have got an organ and an Italian dragged in now. I wonder what next.

The solicitor for the defence said he should call it music.

Mr Gilbert—By all means you can if you like.

To the constable who made the report the defendant said, "If I didn't have respect for the cloth you'd have to go through it."

Solicitor (to witness)—That was to indicate respect for the cloth?—Yes.

Mr Gilbert—Did he evince it by telling the cloth to go to a certain place.

Solicitor—I expect so.

Mr Gilbert—I only wanted to know.

The same defendant was summoned for betting on three separate days. "You are pretty well acquainted with the procedure of this court, and know how to go on," Mr Gilbert said, when the defendant commenced a short speech. "I will not hear you, and if you are not quiet you will go out of court."

For each day the defendant was fined £5 and costs.

On Monday, Dec. 19, the Comedy by Brandon Thomas, in Three Acts, entitled "CHARLEY'S AUNT."

The return visit of this laughable piece has been received here this week by good houses. Mr Guy Lane as Stephen Spettigue created much amusement by the solicitor's infatuation for the monied aunt; Mr Lumsden Hare is a dashing Colonel Sir Francis Chesney. Mr Arthur Soames as Jack Cheney is a capable exponent of the part, being ably supported by Mr Wylie A. Thompson as Charley Wykeham. Mr Geo. Desmond in the part of Lord Fancourt Babberley shows ability and cleverness in his acting. Mrs Lewis Oswald as Donna Lucia is bright and engaging; Miss Marion Fitzgerald makes a charming Ela Delahay; and Miss Violet Cooper does good work as Amy Spettigue, and Miss Francis Ruthbridge is a winsome Kitty Verdun.

MUSIC HALL BENEVOLENT FUND.

A general meeting in furtherance of the objects of this Fund was held at the Trocadero on Thursday afternoon. Mr Joseph Lyons (the president) occupied the chair, and those present included Messrs Richard Warner, Frank Allen, Hugh Astley, C. Beecham, Frank Weeks, J. Harrison, Tom Pacey, Douglas Stuart, H. De Frece, Arthur Combes, E. Granville, J. O'Gorman, M. De Frece, J. De Frece, Fortune, and others.

The Chairman said he was sorry to see such a small attendance. In the first place he might tell them that he had not inquired into the working of the Fund in regard to the distribution of its monies to those in need of assistance. He had seen no report, and had interviewed neither the auditors nor the trustees, but he promised that at the earliest opportunity he would meet those gentlemen, and ascertain whether the Fund had, in his opinion, been properly administered, and whether the expenses incurred in the administration of its affairs had been small or large. It became more difficult every year to obtain for the Fund contributions from the general public, and it was therefore necessary that the profession should support it to a reasonable extent, so that there would be no longer any necessity to go round with the hat. The money paid in salaries to members of the variety profession amounted to hundreds of thousands of pounds yearly, and whereas engineers, architects, and members of the legal and other professions had their own charities, the variety profession did not seem to attach the same importance to the support of a benevolent society, which would help in case of need. He thought that some practical scheme might be evolved which would place the Fund upon a sound financial basis. Many proposals had been brought forward. One was that a percentage of the salaries of artistes should be collected by the managers of music halls. The various schemes had been discussed upon their merits, and he confessed that he was at a disadvantage, as he was not the proprietor or manager of a place of entertainment, but he felt convinced that if they did not reorganise the Fund upon a business basis it would within the next two or three years dwindle to nothing; therefore it became necessary to arrive at some practicable solution of the difficulty. They should endeavour to agree to a plan which would be satisfactory both to the artistes and the proprietors of the various places of entertainment. A scheme had been proposed by Mr Richard Warner, and he would call upon that gentleman to address the meeting.

Mr Warner said:—Mr Chairman and Gentlemen,—Having given much consideration to a scheme for providing a permanent income for the Music Hall Benevolent Fuud, and being much impressed with the words which our president made in his appeal that charity should come from the richer portion of the profession to benefit the poorer, I beg to lay before you a proposal which I shall submit in the shape of a resolution. I felt justified in coming to that conclusion when I saw the magnificent effort one of the managers of not one of the largest music halls in London had made for the Fund, he having collected nearly £50 in the year. I feel quite assured if this matter was thoroughly taken in hand by the managers, proprietors, and directors that it would result in a very large sum of money being collected. There have been various plans suggested, such as charging a penny in the pound on each pound the artiste earned. Of course, if this could be done the Fund would need no further revenue from any other source, but it seems to me that the difficulties one would have to meet in this case are too great to make it a practical scheme—at all events at present, as people refuse to be absolutely compelled to give to charity. The question of giving matinées by proprietors is not always practical, as there are many halls in London which are not adapted for matinées. The proposal to allot one night's salary of the artiste to the Benevolent Fund would meet with much opposition on various grounds, which are too lengthy to state. I will now read you the resolution I propose. It is:—Firstly, that proprietors, managers, and directors should be requested urgently to instruct their managers to do the best in his power, and on each treasury day place a collecting-box before the artiste, at the same time giving him a small book, writing his name in the book, and receipting the sum placed in the box. As soon as the artiste can show the receipt of one guinea in that book it shall entitle him to be a member of the Music Hall Benevolent Fund, and make him eligible to vote for any man on the committee. If the sum reaches two guineas, he shall have the power to recommend any case to the committee for consideration; and also he himself shall be entitled, if deserving, to receive benefits. I need hardly point out that it has the advantage that you are giving a consideration for receiving something, and it places the donor in the position of being a kind of patron. The pennies and shillings can be easily spared, and the signatures of the various managers will form a receipt. We can see at the end of the year which manager has been most energetic, and irrespective of the prize that is given this year by our generous chairman, two prizes should be awarded to the second and third successful manager. I myself am willing to give this year the second prize. This probably will act as a little extra incentive to the managers, and I now ask the chairman to be good enough to put my resolution before the meeting.

The Chairman said he was sure that some such scheme as this was worth trying. All artistes receiving a salary of £5 might pay at the rate of a halfpenny in the £1, and in time these contributions would become a matter of custom.

Mr Hugh Astley objected to make artistes pay by compulsion. He did not regard a contribution given under compulsion in the light of charity at all, and it would be placing on the shoulders of proprietors and managers an unpleasant duty. He should like to give the artistes another chance, though he confessed it seemed rather hopeless. He suggested that the artistes' agents should urge the claims of the Fund when the contracts were signed.

Mr O'Gorman was of opinion that artistes would object to the scheme proposed by Mr Warner.

Mr Jack Harrison proposed that a day should be set apart once a year for a collection to be made at the halls throughout the country. The commercial travellers had adopted this plan and obtained an enormous sum of money. He should himself be pleased to give a guinea when a day was fixed.

Mr O'Gorman seconded the proposal.

The Chairman—I think it is a very practical suggestion.

Mr Warner—Yes, it is a very fine suggestion in theory. We have tried a collect on at Christmas time, and what was the result? Surely, if one manager can collect £50 we ought to raise £700 or £800 from the halls throughout the country.

Mr H. De Frece—I doubt whether the managers would take the trouble to put the boxes before the artistes.

The Chairman said that a politely worded circular might be addressed to the managers asking them to do their utmost for the Fund, and he was sure they would have one of the biggest collections ever known.

Mr Frank Allen said his instructions to managers at Moss's Empires were to hand the collecting-boxes to artistes and to use their utmost endeavours to get them to contribute.

Mr O'Gorman called attention to the fact that there were at the present time many calls upon artistes, and he thought that an appeal once a-year would be sufficient.

The Chairman put to the meeting the proposal made by Mr Warner, and it was lost, five voting for it and seven against. Mr Harrison's proposition was then put and carried unanimously.

Mr Warner then submitted a second proposal, which affected the proprietors of music halls. He said there were over fifty music halls in London. Of course, all the fifty halls could not give a gala performance for the Music Hall Benevolent Fund each year, therefore his proposal was to limit it to twelve music halls, which should be selected, each year, and a gala performance given in the evening—that was, where a matinée was not practicable. Extra charges should be made suitable to the locality of the hall, and a programme be provided, for which the artistes should be required to give their services. The proceeds of such gala performance could be divided between the proprietors and the Music Hall Benevolent Fund, or in some cases, as the circumstances permitted, one-third could go to the Music Hall Fund and two-thirds to the proprietors, or in cases where it warranted double charges one half to each.

Mr Tom Pacey seconded the motion, which was carried.

A sub-committee was then formed to carry out the proposals which had been passed.

The meeting then closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

THE BEDFORD.

The week before the Christmas carnival is not one that is noted for good business, and King Fog having most unmistakably asserted his power during the week, places of entertainment generally have suffered. The Bedford, where Mr B. P. Lucas is the genial managing director, is fortunate, however, in having a clientèle of its own, and, all things considered, attendances have been very fair. The sketch is an excellent condensed drama by Brien M'Cullough, who knows the tastes of the Bedfordians to a nicety, and supplies all the necessary sensation and humour in Beneath Big Ben, a piece in which the life of the masses in our great city is set forth in a number of telling scenes. There is a convincing picture of the Thames Embankment, with the great clock tower of the title in the distance. Tragedy and farce jostle each other in the production, which affords the company all the requisite chances for impressive acting. Mr M'Cullough, a great favourite with Camden-town audiences, is seen to very great advantage in a part which exactly suits his individuality of style, and he scores all along the line. There is much to be said in favour of Mr Will Driscoll, a comedian who has no cause to complain of the reception accorded to a couple of songs, entitled "Where is that dicky bird?" and "What is my greatest wish?" There is a happy sense of the obvious in both compositions, and the comic method of the vocalist touches the risible faculties of his hearers, who have installed him a favourite. Mr Sid Bandon, another of the younger brigade of comic singers, "gets home" with a really interesting number, "Sez I to myself, sez I"—a philosophical title surely, and one that lends itself to unlimited opportunities, Mr Bandon's light-hearted style is very acceptable. Sentimental vocalism has a most acceptable exponent in Miss Ivy Dawn, and though this prepossessing young lady chooses such a well-worn number as "The Holy City," the applause that becomes so enthusiastic at its conclusion quite justifies her selection. Miss Gladys Mavius makes coon songs a speciality, and her numbers have invariably a swinging refrain, which appeals to the tuneful melodists seated in every part of the house. Miss Mavius is also an excellent dancer. Performances of skill are always popular, and the feats of Mr Charles Ulrick, whose wonderful barrel-twirling shows a command of pedal dexterity that is really astounding, bring down the house. Mr Ulrick makes light of difficulties, which are piled one upon the other, and he thoroughly deserves the enthusiastic reception so generously accorded him. The Sisters Petram fill out a most interesting interlude with their clever marionette and miniature circus; Onda and Artell are exceedingly smart gymnasts, whose feats are characterised by grace and skill; and Miss Lal Atlee's contributions to the bill are applauded. Animated pictures are always a popular feature of entertainments at the Bedford, and the films presented by the Imperial Bioscope are always watched with much intentness by the Camden-town folk. Mr A. Moss also occupies a place in the bill. The small orchestra is ably directed by Mr Frank Thomas. Mr A. F. Lovesy, the manager, is both courteous and assiduous.

DUCHESS, BALHAM.

The strength and variety of the bill at the Duchess, Balham, have been sufficient to counteract the influence of the dull week before the holidays, and the elegant auditorium has presented a well-filled appearance at each performance. Mr H. Cambridge Newman, the new manager, has brought the benefit of an extensive experience in the fulfilment of his duties, and during the short period he has been at his post has already won the esteem of all. Mr Bransby Williams, who occupies a leading position in the programme, long since won fame in the rising suburb, and his welcome on Monday night was quite equal to his renown. In his popular impersonations from the works of Charles Dickens the gifted young actor chose three such entirely different characters as Wilkins Micawber, from David Copperfield; the old clerk, Bob Cratchett, from The Christmas Carol; and the despicable Uriah Heap, also from David Copperfield, the last-named portrait being an especially fine study, the cleverness of which was warmly recognised by the audience. Another interesting turn in Mr Walter Gibbons's alluring programme is the Imperial Boys' Orchestra, a troupe of youthful instrumentalists who have had the honour of appearing before the King and Queen. The combined band give a splendid rendering of a descriptive piece, "A Voyage in a Troopship;" one of the boys executes a clever sword dance; another sings an amusing laughing song; and a couple of the well-trained and smart youngsters are heard with pleasure in a finely rendered cornet duet, the concluding item of the combination being an admirable rendering of one of Sousa's popular marches. The boys and their conductor are loudly applauded at the conclusion for their most enjoyable performance. That amusing comedy pianist, Will H. Fox ("Paddywhisk"), shows how easily it is for a skilful pianist to play "Hiawatha" blindfolded and with the keys covered; and he also contrives to pick out the melody of "Bluebell" with his nasal organ. Besides other clever trick playing Mr Fox proves himself an expert pianist, and his running accompaniment of humorous remarks largely helps along the success of a turn which long since won the entire approbation of music hall habitués. Miss Lily Langtry, whose untiring vivacity and evident enthusiasm for her work are in pleasing contrast to the lackadaisical style adopted by so many comediennes, amuses her audiences greatly with her description of a Bank Holiday on Hampstead Heath; and her recital of the various adventures to a party of trippers in a cheap excursion train also creates hilarity, the lively and clever little lady being loudly applauded at the conclusion of her turn. Boyd and Gilfain submit a varied and entertaining little interlude of vocalism and humour, the lady of the duo contributing a smart dialect song, telling of her experiences as a barmaid in different countries; the versatile couple also scoring heavily in their mock melodrama and operatic selection. Continuous laughter is evoked by the quaint soldier impersonation of Mr J. W. Rickaby, a really funny comedian; and the farcical absurdity, Jail Birds, given by Fred Karno's celebrated troupe of pantomimists and acrobats, excites the wildest hilarity, the eccentric behaviour of the amorous curate, and the ludicrous antics indulged in by the convicts at Portland being especially mirth-provoking. The programme also includes Ida Brophy, soubrette; and the New York Nippers, in their novel and amusing act, Bedtime. Mr T. A. Hannavy controls an excellent orchestra.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

(SPECIAL TO THE ERA.)

The members of the St. James's Theatre staff have each received a turkey and a bottle of whisky from Mr George Alexander. The theatre was closed on Wednesday evening, to reopen on Monday. The seasonable presents were distributed after the performance.

The staff at the Coliseum have been called upon to make unprecedented exertions. So exhausting and continuous have their efforts been that some of the men have dropped asleep at their task. An application has been made to some of the principal daymen at several West-end houses for help.

Mr C. Bennett, who was employed at His Majesty's Theatre as a scene-shifter, met with a serious accident on Saturday last. He was helping to "set" when he fell from a high rostrum to the stage, some 18ft., becoming entirely unconscious.

Mr W. Mather, who was formerly master carpenter at the Gaiety Theatre, is fixing the tableau curtains for Messrs Waring at the Lyceum Music Hall. At this house the work has been proceeding day and night.

It is said there is a stage dayman in a Glasgow theatre who, on being asked to bring a long "tumbler" to the paint-room, took in a large glass!

Mr Hinton, a son of Mr John Hinton, the master carpenter at the Theatre Royal, Drury-lane, committed suicide on Monday night at his home in Clapham. No reason is known for the fatal act, except that he had recently been in ill health.

Notices and reports of meetings, &c., are invited from the various societies with which stage employees are connected.

At the Clerkenwell Police-court on the 16th inst., Charles William Howell, of John-street-road, Clerkenwell, appeared in answer to an adjourned summons for "unlawfully applying a false trade description," viz., the word Melba, to a sound-producing disc machine. Mr Sinclair was counsel for the prosecution, and Mr R. Colam for the defence. This was a prosecution under the Merchandise Marks Act by the Gramophone and Typewriter Company, Limited, and Madame Melba. The Company and Madame Melba have an agreement under which the lady sings into the gramophone exclusively, she having a royalty on the sale of the Melba records. It was complained that the defendant had placed on the market a talking machine "sound box" bearing the name of Melba. For the defence it was argued that it could not be said that Madame Melba was carrying on a business, and that her name was a "trade description." No one would think that a "Melba" sound-box was the production of Madame Melba. The name was used as one might use the word "Nightingale." Mr D'Eyncourt found against the defendant, being of opinion that the sound-box and the record were so connected in the mind of the purchaser that the defendants might obtain advantage at the expense of the prosecutors. Mr Colam said he should appeal or take a case. Mr D'Eyncourt imposed a fine of £20, with 10 guineas costs, and directed that the defendant's sound-boxes should be deposited with the court pending appeal, and that no further "Melba" sound-boxes should be produced meanwhile.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

In Memoriam.

Albano.—In loving memory of Lilian Albano, who died Dec. 21, 1903.

God called her home, it was His will,
But in our hearts she liveth still,
Her memory is as dear to-day
As in the hour she passed away.

Never forgotten by her father, mother, and sisters.

Burton.—In loving memory of Bertha Burton, actress, who passed away Christmas Day, 1903.

Crockett.—In loving memory of my dear mother, Mrs Sarah Crockett, who passed away Dec. 23 1901. Gone but not forgotten. Mrs Rule.

Pettitt.—In loving memory of Henry Pettitt, who died Dec. 24, 1893, at the Chestnuts, Goldhawk-road, Hammersmith. Greatly missed and deeply mourned by his widow and three children.

Robson.—In loving memory of Mat Robson, who died Dec. 22, 1899.

Snow.—In loving memory of Ted Snow, who died Christmas Day, 1903, aged seventy-six years. Not forgotten by his loving widow and children.

Toy.—Dec. 24, 1899, at Haldon View, Exeter, Agnes, widow of the late James Toy, solicitor, of Exeter, and dearly loved mother of Beatrice Toy. Never forgotten. R.I.P.

Volp.—In loving memory of my dear sister Sophia, who died Dec. 20, 1902.—Tina Volp.

Walton.—In tender memory of our darling son, Leslie Cyril, the only child of Maude and Walter Walton (of Walton and Lester), who died Christmas Day, 1903. Never to be forgotten by his mamma and dada. Those tiny feet, on the golden street, will never go astray.

For Sympathy.

Johnson.—Mr and Mrs Will Johnson beg to thank numerous friends for their kind letters of sympathy on the loss of their infant daughter.

The Grand Theatre, Swansea, has passed into the hands of Messrs E. Oswald Brooks and J. W. Woodbridge, who have taken it on lease from Mr Fredk. Moullot. Mr Brooks will personally manage the theatre as resident partner, at the same time conducting his many touring companies from the same address. A magnificent list of bookings is shown, commencing on Boxing Day with the Moody-Manners opera company for a three weeks' season.

Mr Alfred Martin has again been engaged by Mr Edward Compton for the advance management of the Compton Comedy company, which opens at Leamington on Boxing Day. This will be Mr Martin's second engagement with the Compton company.—Mr and Mrs T. Edward Ward will resume tour on Boxing Day at the Grand Theatre, Luton, with their new and successful venture Her Fatal Past, by Nita Rae.

Mr Ardene Linden has been re-engaged by Mr Humphrey E. Brammall for the rôle of Eliza, the cook, in Dick Whittington, at the Avenue Theatre, Sunderland.—Mr C. J. M'Carthy concluded fifteen years' engagement as acting-manager for Mr W. W. Kelly on Saturday last, and has been appointed by Mr Fred Karno as acting-manager of his Saturday to Monday company.

J. H. Tomkinson's Royal Gipsy company gave, on Sunday last, a sacred concert at the Miners' Theatre, Ashington, for the Relief Fund for the Newbiggin disaster, when the sum of £60 was handed over to the fund, being the full amount taken at the doors.

The rights of The New Housemaid have reverted to the author, Charles Windermere.—Miss Violet M. Harley has been re-engaged by Mr Percy Hutchison for Christmas for the part of Angela in A Country Mouse.—Mr Richard Vane, after concluding sixteen months' tour as Philip Christian in The Manxman, is spending Christmas in Scotland prior to recommencing work at the beginning of the year.

"Slaves of Passion," which was produced at the Elephant and Castle Theatre last July and which had such a successful preliminary tour in the autumn, starts on its spring tour, Feb. 27, at the Theatre Royal, Aldershot, under the personal direction of Mr Vivian Grantham.

The statutory meeting of the Variety Theatres Consolidated, Limited, will be held at the Freemason's Tavern, on Thursday afternoon next, at half-past two o'clock.

Mr Mike S. Whallen has married Miss Frances M'Nulty, of the Sisters M'Nulty, a popular duo. The happy bridegroom is appearing as the Captain, in Robinson Crusoe, at the Grand Theatre, Leeds.

THE GERMAN THEATRE.

On Thursday, the 15th inst.,
at the Great Queen-street Theatre,
the Comedy, in Three Acts, by Schoenthan, entitled
"DIE GOLDENE SPINNE."

The above play, which was performed on the 15th inst. at the Great Queen-street Theatre, is an amusing comedy. It is most surprising that it should not have been performed in English yet, but we have no doubt that this will be done ere long.

The scene of act one is a sitting-room at Haenfling's, a lovable old man with boundless optimism and kind-heartedness, but a very limited banking-account. Gustav Kolmar, a young doctor, occupies two of the rooms; knowing that Haenfling is far better at drawing than at domestic finance he often helps him secretly by supplying additions in many departments were a shortage would otherwise occur. Haenfling is far too great a dreamer to notice whence the help comes, merely taking it for another proof of his theory that "all men are honest and kind and deserving of all the happiness that is showered upon everybody in this faultlessly beautiful world." Enter Heinrich Klingenberg; he is a cheerful youth, supposed to be able to make designs for wall-papers for his father's manufacturing business; the work is, however, really done by Jenny Haenfling, a delightfully bright and highly talented young lady, whom he is secretly engaged to. He and Kolmar discuss the latter's latest patent, an electric muscle-massage apparatus. Heinrich suggests Haspe, a poor but honest barber, as an experimental subject. He leaves, and Francisca Haenfling comes in and gives vent to her surprise at the frequent anonymous gifts of which her father is the recipient. Kolmar accidentally betrays himself, and unguardedly confesses his sincere love for Francisca. The latter heartily reciprocates his affection, and greatly cheers her father by acquainting him with her engagement with Kolmar; the latter has found particular favour with Haenfling, because his means too are scanty, and because he too is far from being a materialist. Käthe now announces Woerlitz, Haenfling's brother-in-law, and an old grumbler and hypochondriac; he is furious upon perceiving that the engagement and Jenny's imminent arrival upset their customary card party. Haenfling asks for his overcoat, to go to meet Jenny; he discovers that it is not his overcoat at all, but one which he has apparently taken by mistake at the Café. Woerlitz remarks that the overcoat corresponds exactly with one about which there are particulars in all the papers and police reports, the owner attaching special importance to its recovery on account of a golden spider which was in one of the pockets, wrapped up in a piece of poetry. The poetry is there, but the spider is missing. Woerlitz foreshadows the imprisonment of Haenfling should the police find the overcoat without the golden spider in the latter's possession. After talking the matter over with Kolmar, they agree that the true explanation might indeed sound suspicious. Kolmar suggests sending the coat with an anonymous letter to the real owner of the overcoat, and offers to call on him at the time that the parcel and letter arrive, to see if he seems inclined to accept the true story of the exchange of garments. This course is decided upon, and the act ends merrily with Jenny's arrival.

The scene of act two is laid in Klingenberg's private office. He and Mannsfeld, a private detective, are discovered discussing various methods of recovering the lost brooch. Klingenberg confides to Mannsfeld that he distrusts his son Heinrich in trifling matters, without connecting him for a moment with the loss of the gold spider, and he tells him how he has entrapped his son into various small misstatements. Mannsfeld suggests a detective; Klingenberg, always sceptical and distrustful, suggests two, one to watch his son and the other to watch the first detective. Hermine enters. Klingenberg tells her of his nocturnal excursions into dubious haunts, especially of one low tavern where he has rubbed shoulders with a fine specimen of depravity, whose services he has enlisted in the search for the gold spider. Heinrich now comes in, followed by Jenny, who is calling on Klingenberg in search of a post as artistic designer in the factory. Jenny and Heinrich, although secretly engaged, pretend at first that they are strangers; later in the scene that they detest each other. As throughout the whole play, the dialogue in this scene is delightfully crisp and bright. Jenny obtains the post, in spite of Heinrich's assumed energetic opposition. Exit Klingenberg. Left alone, Jenny and Keinrich "make up for lost time," but resume their "animosity" on Klingenberg's re-entry. Klingenberg tells Jenny that she will work at a desk in Heinrich's office or at an easel in his studio. Both pretend to be disgusted, but embrace furiously while Klingenberg turns away for a moment to soliloquise upon the attractiveness of Jenny's appearance. Meyer enters, announcing Dr. Kolmar as a stranger desirous of an interview. Kolmar enters, but discovers, to his utter dismay that the overcoat and letter have not arrived yet. In order to fill up the time he embarks upon an absurdly comical conversation regarding his finances, eliciting the most sarcastic replies from Klingenberg. At last Meyer comes in with the overcoat and letter, explaining that the maid "bolted" after delivering the parcel. Klingenberg, distrustful, gives him the parcel to open, Meyer obeys, and displays the missing overcoat; but were is the golden spider? Klingenberg accuses Meyer of taking it, and reads the letter, while Kolmer can hardly conceal his anxiety. Klingenberg laughs sarcastically; he doesn't believe the account in the letter. He announces his intention of communicating at once with the police. Kolmar rushes off in great consternation. Haspe enters, he is the pseudo-villain whom Klingenberg "discovered" on one of his "slumming" and detective excursions, as related to Hermine, and for whose supper he had paid, when he asked him to assist in recovering the gold spider. Other amusing incidents follow, and the rest of the piece is of a diverting character.

The comedy was acted with admirable abandon, and in a wholly natural and artistic manner. The chief honours in the acting were carried off by Herr Leyrer, who appeared to great advantage. Herr Wieburger showed decided talent, and Herr Stock, one of the most versatile and gifted members of this fine company, did well. Herr Behrend excelled in a grotesque part, and Fräulein Grawz made a charming ingénue.

Mr H. H. Barrington, who was engaged to play the part of Tom Walker, in The Sledge Hammer, met with an accident, and was unable to appear on Monday at the West London Theatre. He has now recovered, and is quite fit for work again.

The International Copyright Bureau, Limited, have removed their offices to 34, Norfolk-street, and have been appointed sole agents for Great Britain and the Colonies of Messrs Felix Bloch Erben (proprietor, Adolf Silwinski), the leading dramatic and musical intermediaries and publishers in Germany. The firm is in a position to offer English plays and musical works and translations or synopses of many of the best French, German, Austrian, Dutch, Italian, Russian, Spanish, Belgian, and Scandinavian dramatic and musical works, many synopses of which have already appeared in our pages.

Advertisers and Subscribers who are moving about, and who have their Copy of "The Era" sent direct from this Office, 49, Wellington-street, Strand, are requested to forward the Addresses for their Papers not later than the Tuesday in each Week.

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

NEW YORK, DEC. 14.—Miss Annie Russell began an engagement at the Garrick Theatre on the 5th inst., appearing in a new play, entitled Brother Jacques, a comedy in four acts, by Henry Bernstein and Pierre Veber, produced recently in Pittsburg and then described. It is a study of feminine nature, with a picture of contemporary French society for a background. A capricious young woman makes the belated discovery that she is wedded to a profligate fool, who has married her under parental compulsion. She counsels him to return to his former way of living, obtains a divorce from him, and reverts to a worthy lover, Jacques Jouvenin, who has long adored her. The fate of the play seemed to be in doubt during the first and second acts, but the climax of the third act was a delightful comedy scene, which showed Miss Russell to greater advantage than anything in which she had appeared for a long time; and as she received invaluable assistance from Mr Joseph Wheelock, jun., at this point, the result was that the verdict on the whole was distinctly favourable. At the close of this scene the applause was spontaneous and hearty, and it gave Miss Russell new spirit and confidence, helping the performance considerably. Miss Russell played the heroine, Geneviève, with her usual daintiness and charm of manner. Mr Wheelock was capital as Jean, the young son of the Marquis De Chantalard, the latter rôle being well sustained by Mr Grant Stewart. Mr Oswald Yorke as Jacques Jouvenin and Mrs Charles Walcot as the stern aunt, Madame Morange, did exceedingly well.

"JUDITH OF BETHULIA," a tragedy in blank verse, by the distinguished American poet, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, was performed for the first time in New York at Daly's Theatre on the 5th inst., with Miss Nance O'Neil in the title-rôle. In Boston last October the play drew crowded houses, and Miss O'Neil scored an unmistakeable success. In New York her performance has been made the subject of a good deal of analytical criticism, not wholly unfavourable by any means. Mr Charles Dalton appeared as Holofernes. The play may be described as an elaboration of Mr Aldrich's poem of "Judith," which is founded upon the story of the siege of Bethulia as told in the Apochrypha. In the opening scene the fact is conveyed that the Assyrians at the gates have sent word that in five days' time the beleagured city must surrender. The populace is starving, and, to add to the horror of the situation, plague has broken out, and it is discovered that the enemy has poisened a well, the only available water supply. Judith, inspired by a vision, decides to seek out Holofernes, and, amid the mourning of her people, goes forth to the enemy's camp. Holofernes is attracted by her beauty, and eventually falls a prey to his susceptibility. Judith wins the friendship of the monarch's slave, and from him obtains a herb with which to drug the monarch's drink. She has been attracted by the manly beauty of Holofernes, and for a moment she wavers; but, sinking to her knees, she utters a fervent prayer for strength to carry her resolve. Then, with a sudden cry, "Each sinew turns to steel; this is for thee, O Israel, my people," she rises, passes from view, and returns a moment later bearing a blood-stained weapon, having slain the Assyrian with his own falchion. Then she returns to her own people. The finding of the body causes a panic, and the Assyrians flee from the camp on the very night that the doomed city is ready to surrender.

MR JAMES K. HACKETT is maintaining his popularity as an actor of romantic rôles and an expert swordsman at the Lyric Theatre in a new play entitled The Fortunes of the King, written for him by Mrs C. A. Doremus and Mr L. Westeville. It deals with the adventures of King Charles II., some of which are historical and some imaginary, after his defeat at Worcester in 1651, following the course of his flight through England on the way to France. Miss Jane Lane, who was mainly instrumental in saving the King's life, is the heroine of the drama, figuring in an interesting and pretty but fabulous love story. The King drags her out of a brook into which she has fallen, and she in turn saves his life, and they become enamoured of each other. The final tableau shows Charles in the act of embarking for France, his sweetheart accompanying him. Miss Charlotte Walker is charming as Jane Lane, and shares the chief honours with Mr Hackett. Mr William Courtleigh gives an excellent representation of Captain Mark Davereaux, one of the followers of Cromwell.

The Lew Fields Theatre, in West Forty-second-street, was opened on the 5th inst., with a musical play entitled It Happened in Nordland as the initial attraction. This theatre is the property of Mr. Oscar Hammerstein, and is leased by the firm of Hamlin, Mitchell, and Fields. Mr Hamlin died on the eve of the opening. The new playhouse is cosy, thoroughly fireproof, and handsomely appointed. It Happened in Nordland is by Glen M'Donough and Victor Herbert. To the mythical kingdom named in the title is sent an American Ambassadress, Katherine Peepfogle (Miss Marie Cahill), who finds her long-lost brother there, the latter being none other than Mr Lew Fields who, in a wonderfully juvenile make-up, impersonates a German youth, who has difficulties with the English language. The company include Miss May Robson, Miss Bessie Clayton, and Messrs Harry Davenport, Joseph Herbert, Harry Fisher, Joseph Carroll, and Julius Steger. Mr Herbert's music, the comicalities of Messrs Fields and Fisher, and the gorgeously costumed and well trained chorus combine to make the piece a very attractive entertainment.

MR ROBERT B. MANTELL gave a fine embodiment of Gloster in a revival of Richard III., at the Princess's Theatre last week, this being his first appearance on Broadway for a number of years. Mr Mantell is a sterling actor, and his excellent delivery of Shakespeare's lines evoked frequent expressions of approval. Miss Marie Booth Russell, who appeared as Lady Anne, has an imposing stage presence, and her interpretation was highly satisfactory.

MR THEODORE KREMER has written a melodrama entitled The Great Automobile Mystery, and it is being played this week at the New Star Theatre. One of the characters is an Englishman named Lord Cecil Brocklehurst. The play has all the effects and hair-raising climaxes that characterise the works of this author.

MR CHARLES FROHMAN, in announcing his plans for the next few months, says that this is a very prosperous season, and that satisfactory reports have reached him from all parts of the country. He will produce A Wife Without a Smile at the Criterion Theatre on the 26th inst., with Mr Frank Worthing and Miss Margaret Illington in the leading rôles. This will be followed by the appearance, under Mr Frohman's management, of Mr Francis Wilson in a new play by Clyde Fitch, called Cousin Billy. The Empire Theatre will have Miss Maude Adams, in a revival of The Little Minister, as the Christmas attraction. During her engagement at the Empire Miss Adams will be seen in a Shakespearian play as well as in 'Op o' My Thumb. When the long run of Mrs Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch ends at the Savoy Theatre Mr Frohman will produce a new farcical play by Augustus Thomas. Three new pieces that will be launched during the season are a farce called The Mountain Climbers, a comedy entitled The Blind Passenger, and a drama named Friquet. Mr Sam Bernard will continue in The Girl from Kay's, until the spring, when he will appear in a musical play by Sydney Rosenfeld. Miss Hattie Williams will "star" in a musical version of the successful farce, Jane. Mr William Gillette and Mr William Collier are booked for London next year. Mr Richard Harding Davis is writing a new play for the latter to be called The War Correspondent.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).
Chapter I.
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III.
Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V.

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer, by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as "the Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright," is dedicated to Mr A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman, July 31st, 1901

Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr Albert A. Strong's new work entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his text-book on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases, what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee, July 28th, 1901

SONGS FOR PANTOMIMES.
Published by
JOSEPH WILLIAMS, Limited.

* "CURATE AND THE MAIDEN,"
Written by F. C. Smale. Music by G. H. Stone.
(Very Original and Humorous.)
REFRAIN:—
And she looked so neat on her little oak seat,
So though the curate when
He carefully blessed her, with all the rest,
And the little maid sighed "Amen,"
* "IN DE CORNFIELDS,"
A Coon Ballad, by Ernest Newton.
† "WHY?"
(Valse Song), by Felix Desgranges.
Latest Parisian Success!
English Version by Clifton Bingham.
† "JOHNNIE BOY"
(Character Ballad), by Mary Ropes and Lionel Elliott.
* "GIVE ME ONE THOUGHT"
(a Pure, Simple Haunting Strain),
Written by Arthur Anderson. Music by John Neat.
Give me one thought whene'er the way seems lonely,
When dark clouds gather, gather round the sun,
What time you need one true companion only,
Contented I to be that one.
‡ "HANDS ACROSS THE SEA"
(a Song of Greater England),
by Byron Webber and Florian Pascal.
* "LAZULI,"
by Gunby Hadath and Pierre Duchênes.
A Beautiful Sentimental Ballad,
† "PICCANINNY'S WALK"

† "DANCING"
(Character Song, Valse Refrain).
By Adrian Ross and Florian Pascal.
REFRAIN
Oh, heigh oh! for thus and thus we go,
An ankle revealing half way to the ceiling,
And so, and so, and so!
Oh, heigh ho! for thus and thus we go,
With Johnnies and Tommies, and breaches of promise,
And so, and so, and so!
